By defeating the top ranked team in the conference while ill, UMass should feel good about their chances to repeat as A–10 champs.

UMass has two weeks to rest up and prepare for the A–10 Championships which take place Oct. 31 at Belmont Plateau in Philadelphia.

■ volleyball

continued from page 10

be on their way to a weekend split.

However, Xavier, with five different players collecting double-doubles in kills, had other ideas. The visitors beat the Minutewomen in three straight sets ([15–12, 15–12, 15–5) to win the match 3–1. Hogancamp (22 kills, 26 digs) and Meyers (17 kills, seven digs, and five blocks) continued their solid play, but Xavier simply proved to be too much.

"Anytime you have five different players contribute that much you're bound to win. Xavier is just a very deep and talented team," Kenny said. "Beth Osterday was just amazing; she's just such a force out there."

Osterday had 18 kills and a match-high 27 digs for Xavier.

The loss to Xavier dropped the Minutewomen to 8–11 overall and 5–5 in the A–10.

When asked what she believes might be preventing her team from putting together some win streaks Kenny replied:

"I don't think consistency is really a problem; everyone is putting forth their best effort every game. The problem is that offensively we seem to be focused too much on Jill and Kari. We have to spread that offense out or teams will just keep concentrating on Jill and Kari."

"Look at Xavier and what they did Saturday [referring to the five players who had double-doubles], they spread their offense out. If we could even have four players putting out that kind of production, I think we would be fine."

UMass will have a chance to try this tonight, as they face- off against arch–rival UConn at 7 p.m. in a non–conference showdown at the Curry Hicks Cage.

Men's tennis opens A-10's; Rhode Island to visit UM

By Matthew Frascella
Collegian Staff

As the fall portion of the season winds down, the Massachusetts men's tennis team finds itself confronting its first Atlantic 10 opponent.

After a string of tough non–conference matches, UMass (3– 2) returns home to take on the University of Rhode Island. Head coach Judy Dixon knows that her matches in the A–10 are of vital importance.

"Every A–10 foe is important," she said. "We have never lost to Rhode Island. It [the match] means everything to us because at the end of the year our seedings are based on head–to–head records."

After struggling lately, the match is of particular importance to the Minutemen, who look to get back on track against the 6–2 Rams. URI notched one of its wins against the University of Vermont, a team which UMass also defeated, and fell to the University of Connecticut by a score of 6–1.

The Massachusetts team had a similar experience against UConn, dropping the match by the same score. The team now looks to the Connecticut match as a source of inspiration.

"It may have been the best thing that could have happened to us," Dixon said. "I think it will make us hungry. After the match they wanted to leave, but I made them listen to UConn celebrate."

With the loss to the Huskies still fresh in their minds, the team traveled back to Connecticut to participate in an individual tournament this weekend. The New England Championships provided the team with the opportunity to play competitive matches that did not count in team standings.

As the tournament wore on, it was clear that the frustrations of the UConn match were behind the team, but that the lessons it taught the team were still present.

Todd Cheney lost to the eventual winner of the tournament in the A flight. Fabian Rabanal and Bo Navarro advanced to the semifinals of the competition's B flight, with Rabanal falling to the eventual winner of that grouping. Navarro, playing up a bracket, lost a hard–fought three set match.

In flight C bracket, Josh Bainton advanced to the semifinals before bowing out.

"I am really pleased with the team, particularly after bouncing back from the UConn match," Dixon said. "We beat UConn players head to head in this tournament."

The team is still uncertain about the health of its number four seed, Parsa Samii. Samii, who suffered a sprained ankle in the Connecticut loss, is listed as day to day by Dixon. That makes the URI contest all the more important.

"My guys have to come out fired up," Dixon said. "We have to reestablish ourselves as a team with grit and intensity. That has to be done at this match. We have to go out every match and fire it up."

The men's tennis team will get its chance to return to its previous form this afternoon at 2:30 with a key home conference match against the Rams on the Upper Boyden courts.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts men's tennis team will open up its Atlantic 10 schedule this afternoon when it hosts Rhode Island at 2:30 p.m.

INSURANCE SALES

Earn $35,000+ in your 1st year as a personal lines account exec. If you have the drive and ambition to succeed, are well organized and have exceptional interpersonal skills, start your career in homeowner/auto insurance sales. We will train the right individual to sell our highly competitive insurance products and provide you with unlimited qualified leads. Candidate must be willing to work evening. We offer a competitive base + commission and complete benefits package. Send resume to W.D. Grinnell, Webber and Grinnell Insurance Agency, P.O. Box 538, Northampton, MA

WEBBER & GRINNELL INSURANCE

"Reason №2 why you should take my GRE course."

You'll score more...

2 Our students improve an average of 212 points. And they significantly out-score students who took that other course.

Call 1-800-2REVIEW or visit us at www.review.com

Courses held on the UMASS campus! Smith, Mt. Holyoke, and WNEC as well.

THE PRINCETON REVIEW

PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD

JOIN THE BEST

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club

THE Area's Most Complete Club
90 Gatehouse Rd. off Rt. 9.
2 miles East of Town Center

256-6446

Welcome back... NOW GO AWAY!

Travel accessories and backpacks sold here! European railpasses and international student ID cards issued on the spot!

Council Travel
CIEE: Council on International Educational Exchange
44 Main St., Amherst
(413) 256-1261
www.counciltravel.com

amc

Hampshire 6 · 584-7550
Hampshire Mall

RUSH HOUR (PG-13)
Today · Thurs at (3:30 @ 5) 7:50 @ 10

URBAN LEGEND (R)
Today · Thurs at (3:30 @ 5) 7:50 @ 10

ROWN (R)
Today · Wed at 8:00

NIGHT AT THE ROXBURY (PG-13)
Today · Thurs at (1:00 @ 3) 5:10 @ 8:40

ANTZ (PG)
Today · Thurs (3:50 @ 5) 7:40 @ 8:30

BRIDE of CHUCKY (R)
Today · Thurs (1:40 @ 5) 7:50 @ 9:20

THERE'S SOMETHING ABOUT MARY (R)
Today · Wed at (3:20 @ 7:50)

Special Engagement on Posters or Groupons $3.50 (Tue)-Mtn) Show Daily

Mt. Farms 6 · 584-9153
Mt. Farms Mall

WHAT DREAMS MAY COME (PG-13)
Today · Thurs at (3:30 @ 5) 7:50 @ 9:20

HOLY MAN (PG)
Today · Thurs at (5:20 @ 5) 7:50 @ 10

PRACTICAL MAGIC (R)
Today · Thurs at (3:40 @ 5) 7:50 @ 8:30

BELOVED (R)
Today · Thurs at (4:00 @ 5) 7:50 @ 7:30

Across
1 Ever wonder how the paper is made?
4 Who writes the articles?
5 Who makes the ads...and who sells them?
7 And more importantly,
10 Who chooses the Quote of the day?
12 The answers to your questions
13 Can all be found at

Down
2 The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
3 Open House
6 Tuesday October 27th
8 4:00 to 7:00 p.m.
9 In the basement of the Campus Center.
11 Don't miss it!

Israel at 50
lecture series
3:30pm in the Hillel House Conference Room
Wednesday, October 21
"Women in Israel"
Speaker: Eeta Prince-Gibson,

Shear Bliss
HOLISTIC DAY SPA
479 West st. Amherst
• organic colors & perms
• body waxing & sugaring
• facials, pedi, & manicures
$5.00 off w/ Ad!
253-2322

Hey! Need A Job !?
Why not be a Bartender !?
• Only professional school in Western MA
• Hands-on training in real bars/clubs/serving
• National certification in alcohol awareness
• Lifetime refresher • ID Card • Resume
• Special U-Mass student discount
• Conveniently located on West Springfield

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

AUTO FOR SALE

83 Volvo Wgn Green, 4 speed, AC, 131K miles. $1500 or B/O. 256-2384.

94 Honda Passport 2x4, 80K miles. Excellent condition. $7950. 367-9813.

Honda Excel '88 $875, good town car, 130K miles. 665-7232.

96 Integra SE Loaded. 2 Phat. No reasonable offer refused. 546-3401.

1988 Jeep Wrangler 6 cyl, 5 speed, 3 tops, CD Player $3900/BO. 323-6802.

91 Ford Taurus Excellent condition. 120,000 miles. $3500. 586-3970.

CARS $100-$500
Police Impounds.
Hondas, Chevys, Jeeps, & Sport Utilities.
MUST SELL!
1-800-522-2730 x4554

WANTED: Toyotas, Novas, Prizms, Sentras. Any condition. Cash paid everyday 1-800-649-4795.

AUTO PARTS

Hard Top for Jeep Wrangler. Black with defrost and wiper. $800. 549-0013.

COMPUTERS

486 Computer
Win '95 on disk, mouse, keyboard.
No monitor, $75.
33.6 modem (internal), $50
549-5642 Sean

Macintosh Printer
Color StyleWriter 1500
$100 or B/O.
Call Tony @ 549-5514.

486 Computer
Great For Student Works Good $100.
Color VGA $50.
(413)584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Earn $100
Exercise Science Immobilization Study Needs You.
Call Steve 549-3877

EMPLOYMENT

INSURANCE SALES

Earn $35,000+ in your 1st year as a personal lines account exec. If you have the drive and ambition to succeed, are well organized and have exceptional interpersonal skills, start your career in homeowner/auto insurance sales. We will train the right individual to sell our highly competitive insurance products and provide you with unlimited qualified leads. Candidate must be willing to work evening. We offer a competitive base + commission and complete benefits package. Send resume to W.D. Grinnell, Webber and Grinnell Insurance Agency, P.O. Box 58, Northampton, MA

WEBBER & GRINNELL INSURANCE

CHILDREN'S HEALTH RESEARCH
Abt Associates is recruiting Research Interviewers to participate on a Federally sponsored national survey of the immunization status of children. Interested applicants should be able to work a minimum of 20 hours per week evenings including 1 weekend shift. The position requires good communication skills and some computer experience. Hourly wages start at $6.25/hour, $6.88/hour weekends, with regular merit increases. Health and Dental Insurance is available. For further information, or to arrange a personal interview contact: 1-800-792-4514 Abt Associates is an equal opportunity employer

VarsityBooks.com seeks student managers to direct on-campus operations for rapidly growing e-commerce business. This paid part-time position is ideal for innovative, highly motivated, exceptionally bright, go-getters who want to prove experience isn't everything. Call 202-256-6048 for more info.

 NOW HIRING ***
Students needed to work Homecoming Weekend, October 23 and 24.
Those interested, come directly to The Alumni Office Memorial Hall, Today!

Artists, Illustrators, Cartoonists Start up Multimedia Company needs Illustrators for part-time work. Also, there are opportunities for cartoonists to publish their own work. Shanon Fynan 413-323-4578.

PT Office Cleaner
12-15 flexible hours.
North Amherst Location.
Call Hampshire Educational Collaborative
549-9288

Waitress Part-Time
Make $400 & work 2 or 3 nights.
Flexible hours.
Dancers For Upscale Gentleman's Club
No experience necessary.
Unlimited $$$ Potential
Bikini, Topless, or Nude!
Call 413-536-0502

Teaching Subs Preschool Center, Route 63, Leverett $6.40 per hour. Call Susan 548-9674.

Drivers Wanted
Pays $9 to $15 per hour
Inside help wanted too.
Flexible hours
Call Dominos
256-8911

Delivery person and kitchen help wanted. Apply at D.P. Dough. Downtown Amherst.

The Magma Group is looking for student organizations and motivated student reps to assist with promotions on campus. This is an easy way to earn great money while working flexible hours. For more info please call (617)783-9700, ext 22.

EMPLOYMENT

Teaching Assistants/Instructional Aides
Amherst (Elana Aitken, Coordinator)
Innovative alternative learning environments for students with learning disabilities and behavioral issues.
Training provided.
Excellent opportunity for those considering careers in education.
Send a letter and resume ASAP to:
Jone Messmer #58
Hampshire Educational Collaborative
30 Industrial Drive East
Northampton, MA 01060
AA/EOE/ADA

Kitchen Line Cooks Part-time, flexible schedules. Starting at $7.00/hr., depending on experience. 2 or 3, 5 or 6 hour shifts per week. Apply in person. The Pub Restaurant, 15 East Pleasant St.

SAVONS Earn holiday cash. No door to door required. Flexible. 1-800-408-0085.

ABSOLUTE SPRING BREAK..."TAKE 2"
2 FREE TRIPS ON ONLY 15 SALES and Earn $$$$ Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida, Padre! Lowest prices! Free Meals, Parties & Drinks. Limited Offer 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplash-tours.com

Lights and Sound: Rave to Dorm Party. Your DJ's or ours. Call BARR Productions (413)737-8561.
Take Over Dur Lease 2 bedrooms. On bus line. Call 549-5318.

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Free delivery. 253-9742.

Large Dorm Fridge $50. Sean 549-5642.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

It's your 21st. Now it's all over for the floor. May the Creator give you safe travels and a lot of women. The North Village Nomad.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Cindy- Only 4 days until your 21st birthday! Love, Us

HEALTH & BEAUTY

We're here to pump... YOU UP! Creatine Monohydrate, Creatine Surge, DHEA, Whey Protein and more from Fitness Workshop delivered right to your door. 1-877-FIT-WORK. www.fitnessworkshop.com

INSTRUCTION

CARDIO KICKBOXING
Amherst Athletic Club.
Train with the pros! 256-0080.

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING CDURSE
50% student discount.
Near campus.
Classes filling soon.
Space is limited, call...
1-800-U-CAN-MIX.

LOST & FOUND

Gold Wedding Band "BJS 6-3-72" Contact Amherst Police.

Small, rare book- "Sappho Sonnets" by Mary Robinson. Lost in Bartlett 61 around 9/22. VERY PRECIOUS TO ME. Reward. 545-4304.

MUSICAL EQUIP

Drum Set 5 piece black TAMA Rockstar with Basic HARDWARE + cymbals. $450. 247-5248.

MUSICAL INSTRUCTION

Piano Lessons
Experienced Berklee Grad has Fall openings. On bus line. Classics, Contemporary, Improvisational. Very versatile. Cheryl 549-8580.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Responsible housemate to share large house in Greenfield. $285, utilities included. 508-943-1447 or 413-773-8586

SERVICES

Know Your Rights Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find Out! Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst Area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

STEREO & CD EQUIP

STERED EQUIPMENT
Large selection, from basic to audiophile. Used/Reconditioned/Warranteed. Great prices. Buy-Sell-Trade. 253-5312.

TO SUBLET

3 bedroom apt for sublet. $875 per month, all utilities included. On bus route. Cliffside Apt. For more info call (413)665-0052.

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK 99!
Cancun * Nassau * Jamaica * Mazatlan * Acapulco * Bahamas Cruise * Florida * South Padre
Travel Free and make lots of Cash!
Top reps are offered full-time staff jobs.
Lowest Price Guaranteed.
Call now for details!
www.classtravel.com
800-838-6411
930 Comm Ave South
On BU's West Campus

SPRING BREAK '99
Largest selection of Spring Break Destinations, including Cruises!
Foam Parties, Drink Specials, and Club Admissions.
Group Discounts.
Epicurean Tours
1-800-231-4-FUN

Do you ever wonder if there is a perfect job waiting out there for you?

Would you like to find it?

Check out The Classifieds today and find it!

The Classifieds...

Makes You Smile!

Five College Community

TUESDAY, OCT. 20

Colloquium — Helen Moffett, a Five College Women's Studies research associate, will give a colloquium entitled "Bulldozers With Breasts and Other Magical Phenomena in the Post-Apartheid Novels of Zakes Mda." The colloquium begins at 7:30 p.m. in the Dickinson House Living Room of the Five College Women's Studies Research Center at Mount Holyoke College.

Community — There will be a drop-in information session on eating disorders from 4-5:30 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services. For more information, call 577-5181.

Meeting— There will be an Animal Rights Coalition meeting at 7 p.m. in the Student Union room 306.

Meeting— Best Buddies, an organization to enhance the lives of people with mental retardation, will be having its first mandatory organizational meeting at 6 p.m. in the Student Union Colonial Lounge. All are welcome. For more information, contact Erin at 253-4264.

Meeting — The Distinguished Visitor's Program will hold a general meeting in the Duke's Room in the Student Union at 7 p.m. All are welcome to attend.

Meeting— There will be a general meeting for the Index Yearbook at 6:30 p.m. in the Student Union Index Office. For more information, contact Yvonne at 546-6667.

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will have a meeting at 7 p.m. in the Student Union Colonial Lounge.

Workshop — There will be a contraception and safer sex workshop at 7 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 21

Lecture — A lecture entitled "Incomplete: A Double- Edged Sword" will be held from 12-1:30 p.m. in Campus Center room 803.

Lecture — A lecture entitled "All Power to the People: The Black Panther Party and Beyond" will be held in the Campus Center at 7 p.m. Check information desk for room number.

Meeting — Amnesty International will have a death penalty discussion at 7 p.m. In Campus Center room 903.

Speech — Daniel Sicken, a plowshares activist demonstrating against nuclear weapons, will speak at 7 p.m. in the Johnson Chapel as Amherst College.

Workshop — There will be a contraception and safer sex workshop at 7 p.m. in University Health Services room 302.

NOTICES

Community — Official Mail-In Voter Registration Forms are available at the Registrar's Office and Commuter Services in the Student Union. Voting is on November 3.

Community — The Fall '98 final examination schedule is available in the Registrar's Office in 213 Whitmore. The schedule may be accessed on the World Wide Web.

Exhibit — Equal Partners is now being shown at the Smith College Museum of Art until December 13. This exhibit showcases the work of 15 American firms founded by female/male partners.

Exhibit — An exhibit entitled From the Book of Triptych is being shown at the New Africa House until Thursday. Paintings representing a marriage of African and Western aesthetics are included.

Workshop — A workshop for women survivors of childhood sexual abuse will take place on November 7. The workshop will include writing, drawing, and movement. In the evening, participants are also invited to perform dances, music, and monologues about healing from abuse. For more information and to sign up, call 586-7390.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Next time, try US first.

New Store Not like a mall... Closer.

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 20, 1998

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Africans in America "Revolution"		Time Turner-Nutbash			Making-Living	Sports Heroes	Religion
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	JAG (In Stereo)		"The Girl Next Door" (1998, Drama) Tracey Gold, Sharon Gless			News		Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	JAG (In Stereo)		"The Girl Next Door" (1998, Drama) Tracey Gold, Sharon Gless			News		Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Home Imp.	Hughleys	Spin City	Sports Night	NYPD Blue "Top Gum"	News		Nightline
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny II.	Friends	Buffy the Vampire Slayer		Felicity "Boggled" (In Stereo)	News		Friends		Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Mad Abt. You	Jesse (R)	Just Shoot Me	Will & Grace	Dateline (In Stereo)	News		Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Married...With	Roma Imp.	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Moesha	Clueless	Mercy Point "Last Resort"	News	Newsradio	Newsradio	LAPD
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Herd Copy	Mad Abt. You	Jesse (R)	Just Shoot Me	Will & Grace	Dateline (In Stereo)	News		Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Frasier	World Series: Game 3 – Indians or Yankees at Braves or Padres					News		Friends
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Mad Abt. You	Jesse (R)	Just Shoot Me	Will & Grace	Dateline (In Stereo)	News		Tonight Show
WGBY	6	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Africans in America "Revolution"			Africans in America "Revolution" (R)		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	26	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Roma Imp.	Hughleys	Spin City	Sports Night	NYPD Blue "Top Gum"	News		Nightline
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	Moesha	Clueless	Mercy Point "Last Resort"		Mad Abt. You	Mad Abt. You	Frasier	Cheers
WTBS	49	Mama's Family	Mama's Family	Roseanne	Roseanne	"Straight Talk" (1992, Comedy) Dolly Parton, James Woods.				"The Shaggy Dog" (1959, Comedy) Fred MacMurray.
AAE	61	Northern Exposure		Law & Order "Consultation"		Biography: Ann-Margret		American Justice (R)		"Inspector Morse-Sins"		Law & Order "Homesick"
CNN	23	Worldview	Moneyline	Newshour		Crossfire		World Today			Late Edition		Moneyline
COM	30	Bill Bellamy	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)		Sein's Money		"Innerspace" (1987, Science Fiction) Dennis Quaid.		Viva Variety	Pulp-Vi	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	60	New Houss	Fix-It-Line	Gimme Shelts		Wild Discovery		New Detectives Case Studies		FBI Files "Death in Alaska"		Justice Files (R)
ESPN	63	Up Close	Sportscenter		Superbouts		Billiards		Fitness America Pageant (R)		Dallas Cowboys Cheerleaders		Sportscenter
LIFE	62	Ellen	Ellen	Party of Five	"Not Guilty"	Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		Any Day Now (In Stereo)		Oh Baby	Maggie	New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	69	(5:30) Jams Countdown		Fanatic		Beavis-Butt	Eye Spy Video Say What?	Total Request Live (In Stereo)		Real World	Biorhythm	Out (In Stereo)	Loveline
NICK	64	Figure It Out	Secret of Alex	Doug		Rugrats	Thornberrys	Skeeter	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Happy Days	Laverne	I Love Lucy
SCIFI	66	Quantum Leap		Sightings	Star Trek "Catspaw"				"Houss" (1986, Horror) William Katt, George Wendt.			Sightings	Star Trek
TLC	28	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours "Animal ER" (R)		Trauma: Life in the ER		Rush Hour (R)		On the Streets (R)		Trauma: Life in the ER (R)
TNT	65	Babylon 5 "Eyes" (In Stereo)		ER "The Secret Sharer"		"Snipes" (1981, Comedy) Bill Murray, Harold Ramis.				"Kelly's Heroes" (1970, Comedy) Clint Eastwood.
USA	59	Hercules: Legendary Journ.		Xena: Warrior Princess		Walker, Texas Ranger		"Heart and Souls" (1993, Comedy) Robert Downey Jr.				New York Undercover
HBO	43	"Seems Like Old Times" (1980, Comedy) Goldie Hawn. "PG"				"The Man Who Knew Too Little" (1997)		John Leguizamo's Freak (R) (In Stereo)					"Shot Through"
MAX	44	"The Crucible" (1996, Drama) Daniel Day-Lewis. "PG-13"				"Wisdom" (1986, Drama) Emilio Estevez. (In Stereo) "R"					"The Assignment" (1997, Suspense) Aidan Quinn. "R"
SHOW	53	"Larger Than Life" (1996, Comedy) Bill Murray. "PG"				"Jerry Maguire" (1996, Comedy-Drama) Tom Cruise. (In Stereo) "R"					Red Shoe		"Walking and Talking" (1996) "R"

HSCN 4 Housing Services Cable Network

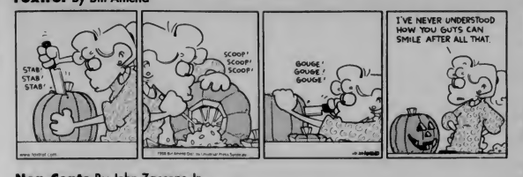
2	HSCN Bulletin Board	10	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	18	UVC-TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	21	Gavel to Gavel
7	PBS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
8	HSCN Movie Ch.	23	Simulcrace
9	UPN/20 Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
11	Weather Channel	25	CTN
12	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
14	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
15	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
16	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
17	International	31	Comedy Central
18	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
19	WB/New Haven	33	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Robotman By Jim Meddick

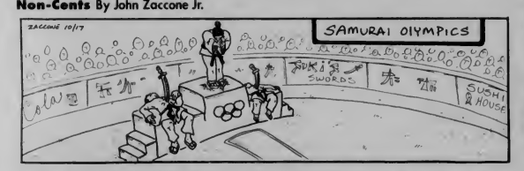
Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams



Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Liberty Meadows By Frank Cho



Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Cathy By Cathy Guisewite

Non-Cents By John Zaccone Jr.

Fiendish Foglios By Brian D. Moses

Horoscopes

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — Take care today that you do not act without thinking. Focus on what money makes you do, and learn from both the good and the bad.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You may feel as though someone is in your way, but it is your own stubbornness which is your greatest obstacle today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — Stability is the key today. You can accomplish a great deal by simply moving ahead at your own steady pace.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You may find yourself longing for things that are familiar at this time. For now, novelty is not for you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — Concentrate on domestic issues today. You'll have every reason to "lay down the law" come nightfall, but be more laid back until then.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — Some may think you are in a "rut" of some kind. The fact is that you like where you are and what you are doing — at least for now.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — You are in no mood for routine today. You want things to be bright, lively, and new for the time being. Later, you'll let things calm down.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — Someone you run into today is likely to inspire feelings that are unfamiliar to you. Explore them to the fullest while you can.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You may have trouble deciding if it is you or a Cancer native who made a recent decision which determined the outcome of a current project.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You will not be able to escape interaction and involvement with a Gemini today. Make the best of an uncomfortable situation.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — You are not likely to be full of great ideas today, but one is likely to inspire others to do things in a new and exciting way.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Unreliability threatens to tear apart a partnership. It is time for you to be direct and firm. Insist on a real commitment.

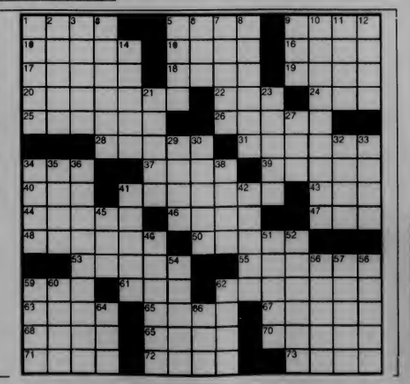
Quote of the Day

"Why go out for burgers when you have steak at home?"

–Doug
"A Night at the Roxbury"

Close to Home By John McPherson

Mr Sinclair's woodshop class was slowly starting to catch on to his weekly "field trip" scam.



ACROSS
1 — David
5 Frightful
9 Short distance
13 Seize power from 15 "Clan of the Cave Bear" heroine
16 Singer Guthrie
17 Stair part
18 Luau wreaths
19 Flaps
20 Structure
22 "Wanted" inits.
24 — King Cole
25 Part of a century
26 Good buys
28 Seashore
31 Bar orders
34 Evergreen
37 Coasted
39 Met offering
40 Colorado Indian
41 Certain gathering
43 Split
44 Jack (in cards)
46 Write on metal
47 Distress call
48 Digestive fluid
50 Use a rink
53 Jeer
55 Lassos
59 "Quiet!"
61 Conceit
62 Find the size of
63 Work in a restaurant
65 Sarge's pooch
67 Extend a subscription
68 St. crossers
69 Thailand's neighbor
70 Dress style
71 Brew (coffee)
72 They have hops
73 Blemish

DOWN
1 Healed
2 Out of the way
3 "Soul" or "rap" follower
4 Manufactured in advance
5 Windstorm
6 Deli bread
7 Greek epic
8 Like trick-or-treaters
9 Took a chair
10 Bank transactions
11 Napoleon's place of exile
12 Put up (a notice)
14 Lion group
21 Dessit's partner
23 Composer Copland
27 Racetrack circuit
29 Puzzler's need
30 Suggestions
32 The Kingston —
33 Foolish ones
34 Hearty laughs
35 Famous volcano
36 Richer
38 Actor Van Dyke
41 Musical show
42 Chicago airport
45 By way of
49 Luanda's locale
51 Coronet
52 Studio stands
54 Add up
56 Long blouse
57 Stadium
58 Underground conduit
59 Type of meet
60 Own
62 Plant found on rocks
64 "For shame!"
66 Foot part

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

G	R	U	B		D	I	S	C	S		K	E	R	F
R	U	N	E		U	N	C	L	E		O	V	A	L
A	M	I	D		B	R	I	A	R		R	E	N	O
N	O	T	E		B	O	O	M	E	R	A	N	G	S
D	R	Y	C	L	E	A	N	E	R	S		A	N	T	E	S
	K	I	D	D		Z	I	P
A	N	G	E	L		M	E	A	T		U	S	E
L	E	A	D		A	S	H	E	N		L	I	S	A	K
I	D	S		M	A	I	L		A	D	A	G	E
		E	A	R		P	E	T	E
S	T	A	B	S		G	L	I	M	A	T	E	S
W	I	D	E	S	P	R	E	A	D		L	O	R	E
E	M	U		L	U	R	E		U	R	B	A	N
P	E	E	L		O	S	T	E	R		S	A	S	S
T	R	U	E		W	E	L	D	S		T	H	E	E

© 1998 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Kielbasa Grinder
Chicken Burrito
DINNER
Pineapple Ham Steak
Chicken Breat with Rice Stuffing
Eggplant Cutlet
Grilled Cheese Sandwich

Worcester
LUNCH
Chicken Burrito
Stir Fry Pasta & Veggies
Ziti/Tomato Sauce
Bean Burrito
DINNER
Quarter Pound Burger
Chicken Parm
Harvest Burger
Pastabilities

Hampshire
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Chicken Burrito
DINNER
Quarter Pound Burger
Chicken Breasts with Rice Stuffing

Berkshire
LUNCH
Chicken Burrito
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Chef's Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Bean Burrito
DINNER
Hot & Scicy Chicken Wings
Quarter Pound Burger
Harvest Burger
Pastabilities

Night Editor — Erin Murphy
Photo Technician — Danielle Gilard
Copy Editor — Laura Forster
Production Supervisor — Angie Annese
Production Staff — Keren Charles, Coren Figliolini

SPORTS

UMass rallies to beat Flyers 2–1

Lecot, Kurowski propel Minutewomen over UD

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

DAYTON, Ohio — Whenever the Massachusetts women's soccer team has needed a big goal this season, more often than not it has turned to one of three places.

The scoring load has been carried primarily by Sophie Lecot, Emma Kurowski and Kara Green throughout this campaign, and Sunday afternoon proved to be no different.

Trailing 1-0 with 20 minutes to play, the Minutewomen got goals from Kurowski and Lecot in a span of 68 seconds to come away with a thrilling 2-1 victory over Dayton at Baujan Field.

"This win was huge. It was very critical because we need all of the wins that we can get at this point," said Lecot, who's team-high 11th goal of the year proved to be the game-winner.

UMass (7-9, 4-3 in the Atlantic 10) appeared to be down for the count as the second half entered its final 20 minutes. Only minutes before Kurowski scored the tying goal, sophomore Molly McGrew went down with what appeared to be a serious knee injury. Time was running out quickly for the Minutewomen.

However, a soccer game can change very quickly, and on Sunday it did. In that span of 68 seconds the Minutewomen were transformed from the battered sparring partner to the heavyweight prize fighter.

"We got a major effort out of every one of our players today," UMass women's soccer coach Jim Rudy said. "I felt that we outplayed them [Dayton], and overall I was very impressed with the way that we played."

Sophomore defender Anna Morozuk got the tying goal started off of a free kick, blasting a ball into the box from the right flank. From there it was deflected by Tarah Tokarchik to a waiting Kurowski, who deposited a shot into the back of the net to even the game.

"Coach just took us aside and told us that we had to get fired up," Kurowski said. "It [the injury to Molly] was something that he wanted to use to our advantage by playing more aggressive, I guess it worked."

However, UMass had one final trick up its sleeve before all was said and done.

Lecot used her speed and strength to single-handedly get the game-winning goal. She out-hustled Dayton keeper Amy Kemmer to a loose ball, knocked the pill out of her opponent's grasp, and slid a shot into the left corner of the net.

And just like that it was a whole new ballgame.

The final 18 minutes, however, were not without its close calls. Dayton had several chances to even the game and ended up hitting the post on a header in the final minute. This day belonged to the Minutewomen, who came away with a clutch victory to keep their post-season hopes alive.

"This was probably our biggest win of the season," Kurowski said. "If we don't win there's a big question as to whether or not we are even going to make the tournament. Basically we have to win the rest of our games, but this one especially was really important."

UMass will now have the rest of the week to prepare for La Salle, who will come into Totman Field on Friday afternoon at 3:30 p.m. Fordham will close out the home schedule for the Minutewomen Sunday on Senior Day at Totman Field. The Maroon and White will honor their two seniors, co-captains Lecot and Amanda Thompson.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

UMass junior forward Emma Kurowski helped keep her squad's post-season chances alive when she tallied the game-tying goal in a 2-1 win over Dayton on Sunday.

Home stretch begins, UM still in the hunt

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

DAYTON, Ohio — With the clock at Baujan Field approaching 25 minutes remaining in regulation, an entire season was slowly slipping through the cracks for the Massachusetts women's soccer team.

Sure, the Minutewomen were playing their hearts out in a torrential downpour on the University of Dayton campus, but they trailed the host Flyers 1-0, heading into crunch time. UMass had once again put itself in a position that it was slowly becoming accustomed to: it had dug another hole too big to climb out of.

Then another all too familiar theme came to the forefront.

In her effort to win a race to a loose ball, UMass sophomore defender Molly McGrew landed awkwardly on her right knee, and fell to the ground screaming in obvious pain.

"Molly was out there having the game of her career," UMass women's soccer coach Jim Rudy said. "That was a courageous ball to go after, and I just asked the team to pick it up for her because she just laid it on the line for the team. And that's exactly what they did."

For a moment one had to wonder if the Mechanicsburg, Penn. native had just become the third Minutewoman to tear her anterior cruciate ligament. If it was any other day, that might have been the unfortunate circumstance.

But there was something special about Sunday that may have just turned the tides on the UMass season.

The end result of McGrew's injury turned out to be nothing more than a bad bruise, and her teammates were able to use that stoppage in play to regroup and catch their breath.

Then, a little over four minutes after McGrew's incident, junior Emma Kurowski netted the tying goal on a loose ball in the box.

UMass wasn't done yet though, as senior co-captain Sophie Lecot came through with the game-winner a little over a minute later to give the Minutewomen a well- deserved 2-1 win over the Atlantic 10 co-leader.

"Coach just took us aside and told us that we had to get fired up," Kurowski said. "It [the injury] was something that he wanted to use to our advantage by playing more aggressive. I guess it worked."

It sure did.

The win over Dayton salvaged a weekend split for the Minutewomen, and has them right back in the thick of the hunt for an Atlantic 10 tournament berth with two weekends to play in the season.

Dayton, George Washington and Xavier all appear to be locks for the tournament which will be held at Baujan Field on November 6-8. UMass will host Fordham and La Salle this weekend before traveling to Duquesne and St. Bonaventure the following weekend.

Together, those four teams have a record of 8-17-3 in the conference, and all appear to have a poor shot of making the A-10 tourney. But in a year where anything has and is bound to happen in the conference, you never know what might unfold over the next few weeks.

"Certainly winning today [against Dayton] made things a little easier, but we're still in the same boat," Rudy said. "All it is is a matter of confidence, and I think that this win might have been the shot in the arm that we needed. I know that we can win every game down the stretch, but we are going to have to be focused."

"This was probably our biggest win of the season. If we don't win there's a big question as to whether or not we are even going to make the tournament. Basically we have to win the rest of our games, but this one especially was really important," Kurowski said.

As a final motivational tool, Rudy and his team huddled together moments after the final horn, savoring the moment and posing one last task on his team for the next two weeks.

"I just asked them to remember what it's like to smell this grass and feel it," he said. "We want to come back here and make sure that we see this grass again."

A dedicated fan and his chronicles across the U.S.

Michael Kobylanski

I lost count of exactly how many people gave me a funny reaction when I told them of the legendary excursion that I planned for last weekend.

With the UMass women's soccer team scheduled to play a pair of games in Ohio, and the hockey team set to open its 1998-99 slate in East Lansing, Mich. against Michigan State, I knew that a trip like this would be too good to pass up.

In fact, it would probably be a once in a lifetime opportunity.

So I conned Associate A into making this 2,500 mile journey with me (After all, I needed someone over 21 to rent the car).

I'm sure most of you are sitting there thinking this kid is a total joker for DRIVING to Ohio and Michigan, and I'll agree with you on that one. But we'll get into that more later.

All in all, however, I can now say that this four day trip was well worth it. Honestly, this is what it's all about, although some points weren't too outstanding, broken down.

Transportation: We left UMass Thursday night expecting to make it to Cincinnati sometime Friday morning. Eventually, after driving through the wasteland of New Jersey, seeing more of rural Pennsylvania than I ever bargained for, and realizing that Ohio is a lot bigger than it seems, we reached our first destination after about a 15 hour drive.

In comparison, our peers from both of those sports teams enjoyed comfortable flights, and while we were still driving well into early yesterday morning, they were fast asleep back in Amherst.

Oh, and did I forget to mention the four hour drive to Michigan State, and then back to Dayton? Well, you get the picture.

Moral — This is not what it's all about.

Accommodations: Friday night was definitely a positive. I give mad props to the Quality Inn in Cincy or Norwood, whatever town it was.

Moral — This is what it's all about.

Saturday night was a much different story. Looking for roaches and who knows what else at the Econo Lodge in South Dayton was not what I was planning on. And the fact that we had people knocking on the door at four in the morning was also tremendous.

All I know is that if you look up sketchy in the dictionary, you're going to find a picture of the Econo Lodge in South Dayton. It was awful.

Moral — This is not what it's all about.

Venues: When I walked into Munn Arena in East Lansing, it was almost as if I had entered a sacred shrine. For a building that has witnessed 219 consecutive sellouts, it was an event in itself just taking in the atmosphere.

However, it also made me think about our first-class facility and what the Mullins Center might be like if we packed it every game like they do at Michigan St. I'm sure it would be quite a sight.

Moral — This is what it's all about.

Weather: I guess we got spoiled Friday night at Corcoran Field. It was a beautiful night in Cincinnati, a perfect one for watching a soccer game. Munn Arena was indoors and comfortable, even though it got tough to see with the fog on the ice.

Moral — This is what it's all about.

The weather in Dayton, well in all of Ohio for that matter, on Sunday was atrocious. Everyone was getting soaked during the soccer game thanks to the steady downpour at Baujan Field. But, according to the Dayton Media Relations contact, a permanent black cloud may hang over the field. Every time he told us a story, there was rain or snow involved in it in some way, shape, or form.

Moral — This is not what it's all about.

Game Results: Let's just say that it would have been a very unpleasant 15 hour ride home from Dayton if the Minutewomen didn't rally from a 1-0 deficit with 20 minutes to play to beat the Flyers.

For a team that has suffered through such adverse conditions all season, Sunday's game was another that they deserved to win, and this time they saw their hard work pay off.

Moral — This is what it's all about

However, I can not forget the two gut-wrenching losses that Associate A and I saw the two days before. The 3-2 overtime loss by the soccer team to Xavier was a bitter pill to swallow along with the 3-1 loss by the hockey team to No. 4 Michigan State.

Final Thoughts: I recommend any type of wild excursion like this to anyone who has the guts to go through with it. Some parts may seem like a pain in the — well, you know, but I can now look back and say it was well worth it.

Michael Kobylanski is a Collegian columnist.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Although Nathan Sell's (left) short-handed goal in season opener against Michigan State on Saturday night was a bright spot on the weekend trip, Sophie Lecot (right) made the long journey west well worth it when she tallied the game-winner in the 2-1 win over Dayton.

UM spikers lose 2; Ohio teams win pair

By James Murphy
Collegian Staff

After playing 11 of the last 13 matches on the road, the Massachusetts volleyball team was looking to gain some ground in both its conference and overall standing with the next five home matches.

This past weekend UMass faced off against Dayton and Xavier to begin that homestand, but unfortunately things did not go as planned. On Friday, the Minutewomen were downed 3-1 by the Dayton Flyers and on Saturday they fell to the Xavier Musketeers by the same score.

Friday, UMass immediately found themselves in a hole after losing the first two sets, 15-0 and 15-11.

"We definitely did not get off to the start we had hoped for, but we took the third set 15-9 and did our best to hang in there," UMass volleyball coach Bonnie Kenny said.

"Jill [Meyers] and Kari [Hogancamp] were outstanding again, but unfortunately we just couldn't recover from that first set. That was a pretty rough start."

As Coach Kenny stated, Jill Meyers and Kari Hogancamp did have solid matches again, tallying 16 kills each, with Hogancamp completing her 12th double-double of the season in adding 15 digs. However, their stellar play was not enough as the Minutewomen fell to Dayton.

On Saturday, UMass returned to the Curry Hicks Cage hoping to redeem themselves against A-10 rival Xavier. After taking the first set 15-10, the Minutewomen seemed to

Turn to VOLLEYBALL, page 7

UMass wins A-10; beats St. Joe's 3–0

By Aaron Saykin
Collegian Staff

The average coach would usually be a bit worried if his/her highly-touted team opened the season with a 1–3 mark. Then again, Massachusetts field hockey skipper Patty Shea is not exactly the average coach.

After leading the Minutewomen to the 1997 Atlantic 10 Tournament title in only her rookie campaign, Shea made a quick impression in the collegiate field hockey world.

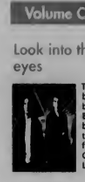
Just one year into her job, Shea knew that the aggressive opening half of the 1998 schedule would be a true test for her team. A test whose results [regardless of wins or losses] would pay tremendous dividends during conference play.

After a slow start, UMass has responded by winning nine of its last 11 games, including Sunday's 3-0 win over host St. Joseph's. The victory improved Shea's squad to 10-5 overall, and 4-0 in the A-10, clinching the regular season title for the Minutewomen, as well as the No. 1 seed in the conference tournament.

Senior midfielder Kate Putnam began the UMass scoring surge off a penalty corner opportunity with 12:44 remaining in the first half, and freshman back Anke Bruemmer continued the success by notching her third goal in two days with 11:20 left in the game.

Putnam capped the final Minutewoman tally to put the game out of reach for the Hawks, who fell to 6–7 overall, 2– 1 in the A–10 with the loss. Seniors Erica Johnston, Laura Phelan, and Vicky Browne, and sophomore Patty Robinson each added an assist.

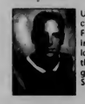
A combined UMass goaltending effort from Zowie Tucker [six saves] and Michelle Crooks [five saves] resulted in the fourth Minutewoman shutout in the past five games.



St. Joseph's netminder Vanessa Cardinale played well in defeat, turning away 10 shots for the host Hawks.

Minutewomen Notes: After sweeping through Philadelphia last weekend with conference–clinching victories over Temple and St. Joseph's, Shea's squad looks to end Atlantic 10 play with a perfect 5–0 record when it travels to Rhode Island on Thursday. As the top seed in the conference tournament, UMass will meet the lowest seeded A–10 school in the four–team field. The fifth and last place regular season finishers will not qualify for the conference championships.

Hoping to repeat an A–10 post–season victory and an automatic bid to the national tournament, the Minutewomen will begin the conference playoffs on Saturday, Nov. 7. They will also renew their annual rivalry with Connecticut this Saturday, when they play host to a Husky squad which edged them 1–0 last season.



The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CIV Issue 31 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Wednesday, October 21, 1998

Look into their eyes

This mesmerized bunch of guys has been hailed as Britain's best live band. Check out this and a blast from the past Phil Collins (Arts & Living, page 6).

Fowler's fair play keeps it close

UMass men's soccer goalie Todd Fowler has been impressive all year long, even though the team has struggled overall (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Police seeking suspect infected with AIDS

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Police in Sweden searched yesterday for an 40-year-old American suspected of picking up women at Stockholm nightspots and having unprotected sex even though he knew he was infected with the AIDS virus.

Authorities also were trying to locate 190 women listed in the man's address book.

The search was the top story on national radio news and in afternoon newspapers, prompting about 100 women to call authorities, said Ulla Andersson, an assistant in the investigation.

The Stockholm District Court identified the suspect as James Patric Kimball, 40.

A statement from the court said he is originally from California, but did not give the city. Andersson said he had been in Sweden since 1992.

"This is a lethal man on the loose in society," prosecutor Jan Frykman said on Swedish TV.

"To spread a deadly sickness in this way shows a murderer's instinct."

A Stockholm court yesterday ordered him taken into custody on suspicion of rape and assault.

NATION

Lawyers say smokers should know risks

MIAMI (AP) — Tobacco companies cannot be held liable for making people sick because anyone who reaches for a cigarette knows full well the risks of smoking, an industry lawyer argued yesterday at the first class-action lawsuit by smokers ever to go to trial.

"There's no question that smoking involves risk," Robert Heim said in opening statements. "But of all the consumer products that have been manufactured and sold in these United States over the course of the last century, none have had risks that have been better understood and better appreciated by consumers than the health risks of smoking. None."

The nation's five biggest cigarette companies and three industry trade groups are being sued for $200 billion in a class-action brought on behalf of 500,000 sick Florida smokers.

Heim, who is defending Philip Morris inc., noted that concerns about smoking were raised by an English king as far back as 1604. Cigarettes were called "coffin nails" in this country about 100 years ago, he said.

In the 1950s and '60s, hundreds of articles were published in national magazines "that talked about the health risks of smoking, that talked about nicotine, that talked about the fact that it can be hard to quit once you start smoking," Heim said.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 52 LOW: 36	HIGH: 46 LOW: 32	HIGH: 50 LOW: 30

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 6
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 10

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Campus festivities slated for weekend

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Annual Homecoming Weekend will take place on campus this weekend and will feature entertainment and festivities honoring alumni and the campus.

As an outgrowth of 1996's kick-off of Campaign UMass, this weekend-long event, incorporating Homecoming and UMass Festival, will feature a number of activities including the re-naming of the School of Management to the Eugene M. Isenberg School of Management. The event will take place on Friday at 9 a.m. at the School of Management.

Also featured for the first time on campus will be UMass alumnus Jack Canfield, co-author of the best-selling "Chicken Soup for the Soul" series. He will be speaking to UMass and the local community this Friday from 2–3 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. Canfield will also be signing books at the University Campus Store on Thursday from 3–5 p.m.

Other big events included as a part of the Homecoming Weekend are the UMass Homecoming '98 parade, UMass Homecoming Park and a Mystery Dinner Theater.

The Homecoming parade will start on Saturday at 11 a.m. at the Robsham Visitors Center and will feature group organizations and Registered Student Organizations (RSO) on floats and marching through the streets of Amherst.

The procession, led by the UMass Minutemen Marching Band, will follow North Pleasant Street, through downtown Amherst, and return to Warren P. McGuirk Alumni Stadium. Featured on a float will be Chancellor David K. Scott and the UMass Alumni Association President Bob Goodhue, as well as various RSOs on campus.

Featured for the first time at the McGuirk Stadium, will be the UMass Homecoming Park on Saturday at 10 a.m. Food, activities, and entertainment will be presented to the community including music by WHMP 99.5 FM, as well as clowns, magicians, face painting and more.

Also featured for Saturday is the Mystery Dinner Theater, with a mystery performance by "The Comical Mystery Tour" group in the Campus Center at 7 p.m.

Susan Mattei, Director of Alumni Relations, is very excited about the weekend's activities.

"We're excited because there's so much going on this weekend," Mattei said. "It's something the whole UMass community, faculty, staff, students and alumni will be interested in attending."

Clinton-bashing may result in prosecution

By Susanne M. Schafer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON (AP) — Military leaders are reminding troops they must avoid "insulting, rude or disdainful" comments about President Clinton, and that even repeating jokes about the commander-in-chief and Monica Lewinsky could subject them to prosecution under military law.

The warnings, both official and unofficial, came in response to a spate of newspaper columns and letters to the editor in recent weeks written by military officers with harsh criticisms of Clinton's conduct.

Responding to a brief report that some Marines were circulating an e-mail petition for Clinton's impeachment, the service's No. 2 general dis-

Turn to TROOPS, page 3

TRACY COHEN / COLLEGIAN

The Bikemeister

Noah Gordon, a senior English major, works at the Bike Co-op, a non-profit, student run bike shop.

Deregulation of utility companies causes controversy

By Stacey Shackford
Collegian Staff

Opponents of the Electric Utility Industry Restructuring law passed last November said it was wasting consumer's money but voters will have the opportunity to repeal the law through referendum Question four on the Nov. 3 ballot.

Mary Lampert, of Massachusetts Citizens for Safe Energy, engaged State Senator Stan Rosenberg (D-Hampshire, Franklin District) in a heated debate over the issue at Amherst College last Tuesday.

"You have paid once for their [the utility companies] stupid decisions in some of the highest rates in the United States," Lampert said, addressing the crowd of Amherst residents. "Somehow it is fair to pay for it again?"

Lampert was referring to the "stranded costs" policy, one of the many controversial issues surrounding the new deregulation bill.

Calling the policy a "bailout," she is angry that utility companies are being allowed to charge customers for 100 percent of costs incurred for "new construction, remodeling and replacement of worn-out equipment," as well as "lost opportunities," or past bad investments.

Rosenberg does not believe the policy is a bailout because consumers have to assume these costs anyway, as stipulated in the state constitution.

He believes the new law will decrease the amount consumers have to pay by encouraging companies to sell some power plants.

The revenues from such transactions will be subtracted from the total cost charged to customers. "When people say you will have to pay the stranded cost, it is substantially smaller than you would pay if you repeal this law," Rosenberg said. "It's a fact."

Other contentions with the bill include nuclear power plant subsidies, inadequate energy efficiency and conservation and misleading rate cuts and competition building strategies.

Rosenberg said that under the new law many polluting power plants will shut down because they will no longer be viable.

He said they would be replaced by new plants built with the best possible technology, and would leave more room in the market for alternative energy sources.

Lampert argued that the bill subsidizes the ongoing operations of costly and dangerous nuclear power plants and fails to require old and dirty power plants to meet the same cleaner emission standards required of new plants.

She also contested the definition of incinerators as "trash- to-energy" plants which are labeled "renewable" and are eligible for subsidies.

Opponents of the bill note that the 15 percent rate cuts stipulated by law are only guaranteed for six years, after which time they are placed under review by the new state Department of Telecommunications and Energy (DTE).

They also argue that claims of increased competition are unfounded.

Opponents of the bill said this is because there are no new suppliers that have been added to the market since the law was implemented in March.

Advocates of the deregulation law ask if it is fair to measure the success of a law less than one year after its implementation.

Turn to INDUSTRY, page 3

STACY COHEN / COLLEGIAN

Row row row your boat...

An unsinkable, jet powered rescue boat from Trade-Winds was on display near the Campus Center.

Deaths from Texas flooding growing daily

By Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

VICTORIA, Texas — Perched on the roof of his home while the Guadalupe River swirled menacingly around him, Larry Crisp stepped without hesitation into a nylon rope basket dangling from a helicopter.

"I was thinking, There sure is a lot of water,'" he said. "They put the basket down, I just got in."

Crisp was among scores of trapped residents rescued by helicopters and boats yesterday as rain-swollen waterways spilled across southeastern Texas, carrying off homes, cattle and lives in the coffee-brown floodwaters.

The bodies of a 6-year-old boy, a 37-year-old man and a 10-year-old who had been swept away by the floodwaters were found yesterday. That brought to 18 the death toll in Texas since weekend storms swamped 60 counties, or nearly one-fourth of the state. A 7-year-old boy remains missing.

Up to 5,000 cattle, many without brands to identify them, were roaming free because of washed-away pens and fences near San Antonio.

But much of the misery was flowing downstream yesterday. Nearly 2 feet of rain around San Antonio sent torrents of water toward farm towns and cities along the Guadalupe and other rivers.

STACY COHEN | COLLEGIAN

It's a dog's life

Kara Aubuchon rests her dogs with her good friend Blanca.

Senator charged with stealing thousands

By Russ Bynum
Associated Press

ATLANTA — State Sen. Ralph David Abernathy III was indicted yesterday on charges that he stole more than $13,000 from the state by filing bogus expense forms as a legislator.

The indictment alleges that Abernathy, son of the late civil rights leader Ralph David Abernathy, cashed 10 checks he received from the state after falsifying forms for reimbursement of legislative expenses.

He is also charged with forging the names of three aides on the falsified documents and with attempting to influence a witness by offering one of those aides money to back up his claims of innocence.

Abernathy faces a total of 35 counts, including theft, forgery and violating his oath of office. Each count carries a maximum sentence of five to 15 years in prison.

Abernathy, 39, was disqualified from running for re-election this year because his qualifying check to the Democratic Party bounced.

In January, he was reprimanded by his Senate colleagues after U.S. Customs officers caught him with marijuana at the Atlanta airport. Abernathy, who was returning from a trip to Jamaica, was fined $500 but was not charged with a crime.

Abernathy's father became head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference after the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. was slain in 1968. The elder Abernathy died in 1990.

The senator, who was not arrested, didn't immediately return a phone call seeking comment on the charges.

But one of his allies, state Rep. Tyrone Brooks, said the indictment was politically motivated. The indictment comes just two weeks before Attorney General Thurbert Baker, who announced the charges today, is up for election in a strongly contested race. "I just consider this procedure today... very ugly, very nasty, low-down politics and overkill," Brooks said.

Baker, a Democrat who had served in the Legislature with Abernathy, denied any political motivations behind the indictment.

Marijuana club shutdown

By Jordan Lite
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — One of the largest medical marijuana clubs in California has been shut down in a dispute with the federal government over distribution of a substance some patients say eases their pain.

The 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals on Monday denied a request by the Oakland Cannabis Buyers' Cooperative to remain open while it appeals a ruling finding the club in contempt of court for continuing to distribute marijuana.

The club, which claims 2,200 patients as members, was one of six in Northern California sued by the Justice Department for violating the federal law against distribution of marijuana. Of the six, only clubs in Ukiah and Fairfax remain open, along with a handful of others around the state.

"It's going to be devastating," said Dave Fratello, whose group, Americans for Medical Rights, sponsored the 1996 California proposition legalizing marijuana use for medical reasons and is pushing hard for similar measures in other states this year.

"Many people don't know where to go and other people are going to get ripped off," he said. "In a lot of cases we're talking about people who are dying. If they don't have easy access, they may not have any access at all."

Proposition 215 allows patients and their caregivers to possess and grow marijuana without prosecution under California law, if recommended by a doctor to relieve the pain from AIDS or cancer treatment, glaucoma or other conditions.

The initiative had no effect on federal laws against distribution.

Nearly 50 medical marijuana suppliers were in operation in California last year, Fratello said. A Los Angeles club is now the only sizable one still open — the rest have been shut down, he said.

About 12,000 people in California have received doctor recommendations saying they would benefit from marijuana, Fratello said.

Conditions still poor in So. Africa

By Pat Reber
Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — South Africa's first door-to-door census showed how far the country must travel to overcome the legacy of apartheid, President Nelson Mandela said yesterday.

More than half the country's 40.58 million people don't have running water in their homes, one-quarter earn as little as $88 a month, and most of the poor are non-whites, the report said. The results "show a society in which the lines between rich and poor were, with little qualification, the historical lines of a racially divided society," Mandela said at the census release in the capital, Pretoria.

The figures ended decades of guessing about South Africa's population and represented another step in the transformation from white-minority rule to democracy, which began with all-race elections in 1994.

During apartheid, white officials too scared to survey black townships flew over in helicopters and estimated the population. Door-to-door surveys in the rest of the country were conducted in English and Afrikaans, which is spoken by descendants of Dutch settlers, but not in any African languages.

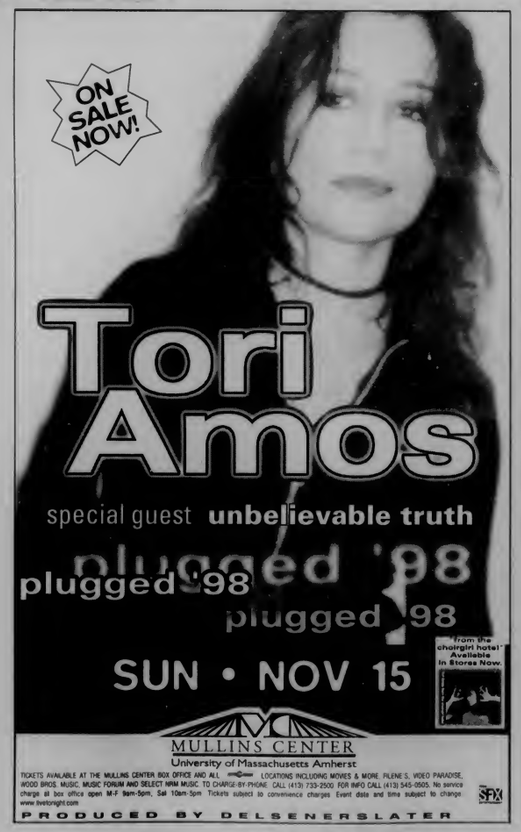
The new census was conducted in 1996 in all 11 of South Africa's official languages. More than 80,000 interviewers spent three weeks counting home-dwellers, squatters and the homeless.

The census data will be used in government planning that includes new housing, telephone hook-ups, water and electricity for the vastly underprivileged non-white majority.

Providing the most authoritative figures on unemployment to date, the survey showed that 33.9 percent of adults 15 to 65 years old were out of work. The government's recent estimate was about 22 percent.

The ethnic breakdown was not much different from previous estimates: 77 percent of the population was black, 11 percent was white, 9 percent was mixed-race and 3 percent was Indian or Asian. The country's dominant language was still Zulu, with 23 percent of the population using it as their mother tongue. Next most common was Mandela's native tongue, Xhosa, with 18 percent.

NEW AEROBICS NEW
CARDIO-KICKBOXING • YOGA
* Classes Daily
* Certified Instructors
* Suspended Wood Floor
* Area's Largest Room
www.amherstathletic.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
460 West Street
South Amherst, 256-0080



NEWS IS HIRING!

Do you want to get that internship? Do you want to get an edge on other graduates? Then you've got to get down here!

Writing for the Collegian is the best experience you will ever get for free.

Opportunity is knocking right now so don't miss it. News is hiring reporters to cover various beats and new writers are always welcome.

Take advantage of these openings now. Come down to the Collegian in the afternoon and ask Jill Carroll, news editor, about covering a beat or just start by writing a story or two.

COMING SOON
Casino Night
BLACKJACK TABLES
ROULETTE TABLE
WHEEL OF FORTUNE
ADMISSION $5.00
FRIDAY
OCTOBER 23, 1998
Campus Center Auditorium
7:00 PM - 1:00 AM
THIS FRIDAY
UMass Vote!
WELCOME HOME UMASS ALUMNI
Half of the proceeds from this event are going to the American Red Cross to aid the victims of Hurricane Georges.
The Office of Alana Affairs would like to recognize the following organizations for their support: Alumni Affairs, Campus Center Bluewall, Campus Center Hotel, and the UMass Daily Collegian.

■ troops

continued from page 1

patched an electronic directive of his own:

"You must emphatically discourage any such actions," Gen. Terrence Dake wrote all Marine generals earlier this month. "It is unethical for individuals who wear the uniform of a Marine to engage in public dialogue on political and legal matters such as impeachment."

The general noted that Article 88 of the military's Uniform Code of Military Justice prohibits such conduct. "We are not politicians. We are not a corps of lawyers. We are warriors, nothing more, nothing less," said the memo.

This week, a Marine Corps major denounced Clinton in a column published by the independent newspaper "Navy Times," while an Army colonel criticized the president in a letter to the editor in a similar publication.

"One should call an adulterous liar exactly what he is — a criminal," wrote Maj. Shane Sellers, a 20-year Marine veteran. Army Col. John R. Baer lambasted Clinton in a letter published Oct. 12 in the Army Times, also an independent paper, and urged the commander-in-chief to stop issuing signed letters of appreciation to officers when they retire.

In the Air Force, an article explaining the rules has gotten wide e-mail circulation, officials said. It was initially printed in a base newspaper at F.E. Warren Air Force Base in Wyoming.

"With the release of Independent Prosecutor Kenneth Starr's report... Americans are involved in a great debate over what it means for the country. Because of President Clinton's role as commander in chief of the military, however, Air Force members aren't allowed to discuss the president in the same manner as civilians," said the article, written by Capt. Brian Bengs of the base's staff judge advocate's office.

Bengs wrote that Article 88 "expressly prohibits any commissioned officer from using 'contemptuous words' against the president." Also, "repeating jokes about the president could make a military member subject to prosecution, depending upon the joke," the article stated.

The base's military justice chief was quoted as saying military law "defines contemptuous language fairly broadly ... (and) it includes language which is insulting, rude or disdainful." An officer using such language faces a maximum penalty of dismissal, confinement for one year and forfeiture of all pay and allowances. Enlisted men and women face similar restrictions under military regulations, the article stated.

Air Force officials said the article in "The Warren Sentinel," is not considered an official statement, but has proven helpful in explaining the issue.

"It is unofficial guidance being provided by a member of the base's judge advocate general's staff. People passed it on, because it was a clear statement of what the regulations are," said Air Force spokesman Lou Timmons at the Pentagon.

The article said expressions of opinions that are purely private conversation would not be affected. But it recalled that a general was reprimanded by the secretary of the Air Force several years ago for joking in a public speech about Clinton's lack of military experience.

STACY COHEN | COLLEGIAN

Masterpiece in progress

Sandy Kim of Boston makes a batik at the Craft Center.

■ industry

continued from page 1

According to an editorial published on Oct. 17 in the Providence Journal Bulletin, private developers have proposed more than 30 more plants at a cost of $15 billion, in New England.

"It seems to me to be shortsighted to throw it all away," he said. "Do you throw away this much progress, or do you see how it works and take it from there?"

Rosenberg also stressed that if the bill is repealed next Tuesday, legislators will be thrown into confusion because there is no way for them to measure what people were thinking when they voted it down.

The length of the bill, 30 pages in the Secretary of State's Information for Voters packet, suggests that most voters will not get a chance to read it entirely.

Jay Rasku, organizer for the campus chapter of the Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (MassPIRG), believes it is extremely important students understand the deregulation bill and vote "no" on question four.

"Once students get out into the real world, their taxes are going to bail out nuclear power plants," he said. "It's disgusting that we are paying for something that is their fault."

Although Rasku acknowledges that some progress has been made with the passage of the deregulation bill, he feels it is not enough.

"It's good because you can see on your bill where your energy comes from," he said. "Ideally, consumers can sign up for alternative energy... But it's [an issue of] basic disclosure, and we shouldn't have had to work as hard as we did simply to get that."

He also said this law was an example of corporate money buying power, referring to reports which show that the electrical utility industry has spent more than six million dollars advocating this bill, compared to the $150,000 spent by the Campaign for Fair Electric Rates and their (allies).

"[This law] just goes to show that if you have money, you can get any bill passed, and influence the legislature and the public," he said. "Students don't have the money to buy legislation yet, so their issues are not being addressed."

Students will have the opportunity to decide the merit of the Electric Utility Industry Restructuring law by voting on Nov. 3.

For more information on specifics of the law and opposing viewpoints, check out the following websites: www.state.ma.us/sec/cis, www.stopthebailout.com, www.yesno4.com.

Prosecutor demands a life sentence for former wife of fashion designer

MILAN, Italy (AP) — A prosecutor called on jurors yesterday to convict the ex-wife of Maurizio Gucci in the fashion scion's murder, saying she arranged his shooting out of "wounded pride."

The prosecutor sought life prison terms for Gucci's former wife, Patrizia Reggiani Martinelli, and four codefendants.

Life imprisonment is the harshest possible sentence in Italy, which does not have the death penalty.

Gucci — who was gunned down in Milan in 1995 at the age of 46 — was the grandson of Guccio Gucci, who founded the fashion company known for its leather goods and double "G" logo. He was the last Gucci to have an interest in the company, selling out for $120 million in 1993, three years after the couple divorced.

His former wife, Reggiani Martinelli, 50, stands accused of setting the murder plot in motion to gain control of his multi-million-dollar estate. The couple had two daughters.

Prosecutor Carol Nocerino dismissed Reggiani Martinelli's contention that she wasn't fully in control of her senses following surgery for a brain tumor in 1992. He said that a year earlier she asked a servant to find someone to kill Gucci.

"Her determination to have her husband killed grew over time and had nothing to do with a pathological condition," Nocerino said. "It had to do with the wounded pride of a woman who was abandoned by her husband, whose advice on his business affairs was rejected, and who ultimately lost access to the empire that bore his name."

On trial with Reggiani Martinelli are Pina Auriemma, a former confidante; Ivano Savioni, a hotel porter; pizzeria owner Orazio Cicala; and Benedetto Ceraulo, an auto mechanic who is accused of being the gunman.

Reggiani Martinelli is accused of paying $375,000 to have Gucci killed.

In completing two days of arguments before the jury of two judges and six civilians, Nocerino demanded convictions for premeditated murder and life terms for Reggiani Martinelli and her codefendants.

"It is not without emotion that I ask for... life imprisonment," Nocerino said. "But then I thought about the absurd death of Maurizio Gucci... I called up in my mind his figure falling... half turning as though to see who was gunning him down."

"Maurizio Gucci didn't deserve to die that way," said Nocerino, calling the slaying a "sad" death that ended a dynasty. Even though three defendants confessed — Auriemma, Savioni and Cicala — Nocerino said they didn't deserve lesser sentences because they all protected the alleged gunman, Ceraulo. Ceraulo has declared he is innocent.

Closing arguments from the defense are expected to last into next week.

U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday AM - Starting at $59.95
North Amherst Motors A Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd.
North Amherst, MA
549-RENT
* Cars • Mini Vans
* Trucks
* Cargo Vans
* 15 Passenger Vans
* Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
* We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older
* Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
(On bus route - one mile from UMass)

NEW AEROBICS NEW
CARDIO-KICKBOXING • YOGA
* Classes Daily
* Certified Instructors
* Suspended Wood Floor
* Area's Largest Room
www.amherstathletic.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
460 West Street
South Amherst, 256-0080

COMPETITIVE EDGE SKI & BIKE
tune-ups - $14.99
CAR RACKS - 15% off retail
1998 bikes - all 20% off
North Face CLOTHING - 10% off
LIGHTWEIGHT HIKERS - now in stock
BOOTS - all at great prices
SKIS - at discount prices
Nike Air Mada PRO WATERPROOF was $90.00 - now $70.00
Elan PSX SHAPE SKI PACKAGE - $299.00
4 Northampton Hwy. (Route 5) Holyoke, MA (413) 538.7662
374 Russell Street (Route 9) Hadley, MA (413) 585.8833
snowboard packages:
Vision SNOWBOARD · BOOTS · BINDING all for $249.00
Oxygen AR WITH BINDING - $349.00

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING
RECENTLY, MORNINGSTAR CALLED US CHEAP.
IT'S NOT EVERY DAY YOU GET A COMPLIMENT LIKE THAT.

All financial companies charge operating fees and expenses—some more than others. Of course, the lower the expenses you pay, the better. That way, more of your money goes where it should—towards building a comfortable future.

We make low expenses a top priority.

As the largest retirement system in the world—a nonprofit company focused exclusively on the financial needs of the educational and research communities—our expenses are among the lowest in the insurance and mutual fund industries.

In fact, TIAA-CREF's 0.31% average fund expenses are less than half of the expense charges of comparable funds.[1] It's why Morningstar—one of the nation's leading sources of annuity and mutual fund information—says, "At that level [TIAA-CREF] is cheaper than any other [variable annuity] policy, and is even competitive with the cheapest mutual fund complexes, though it offers far more benefits."[2]

"TIAA-CREF sets the standard in the financial services industry."

Of course, expenses are only one factor to consider when you make an investment decision. Morningstar also noted our commitment to "consumer education, service" and "solid investment performance." Because that can make a difference in the long run, too.

At TIAA-CREF, we believe people would like to spend more in retirement, not on their retirement company. Today, over two million people count on that approach to help them build a comfortable and secure future. So can you. To find out more, call us at 1 800 842-2776. We'd consider it a compliment.

Visit us on the Internet at www.tiaa-cref.org

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.®

1. Based on 1998 billing for accounts under management. 2. Standard & Poor's Insurance Rating Analysis, 1998; Lipper Analytical Services, Inc. Lipper Analytical Data, 1998 (Quarterly). 3. Of the 4,829 variable annuities tracked by Morningstar, the average fund had total fees covering annual expenses of 0.82% plus an insurance expense of 1.27%. Source: Morningstar, Inc., for periods ending 7/31/98. 4. Source: Morningstar Principia Variable Annuities/Life 4/30/98.

TIAA-CREF expenses are subject to change and are not guaranteed for the future. Past performance is no guarantee of future results. TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services distributes CREF certificates and interests in the TIAA Real Estate Account. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800 842-2776, extension 5609, for the prospectuses. Read them carefully before you invest or send money.

Student Affairs Review Committee

Community Meetings

Tuesday, October 27	Thursday, November 5
9-11 a.m.	4-6 p.m.
Room 917	Room 917
Campus Center	Campus Center

Over the summer, a committee was formed to review the current structure of Student Affairs at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst. Chancellor David Scott has requested that the committee engage in a broad exploration of programs and services for students and prepare suggestions for organizational configurations which will support the high quality of the total student experience.

To provide an opportunity for community input in the review process, the Student Affairs Review Committee is holding two community meetings. The first meeting will be held on Tuesday, October 27, from 9-11 a.m. in Room 917 of the Campus Center. The second will be held from 4-6 p.m. on Thursday, November 5, also in Room 917 of the Campus Center.

The committee expects to focus its exploration on five general categories: enrollment services, judicial system, academic support and advising and related affinity groups, campus life, and student programs and auxiliary support. Members of the Review Committee will be present at the community meetings for discussion.

All members of the UMass community are invited to attend the community meetings and offer their insight.

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Just thinkin'...

Stream of consciousness is a funny thing to me. I find it entertaining to sit down and think about the random things I, well, think about. And if you think about it, the random things you think about — your stream of consciousness — make up most of what it is that passes through your brain.

It's like a chain of sorts, with one thought jogging another thought, perhaps with something in common. That process seems to go on and on until someone kicks you or the phone rings or something.

Seth Koenig

Here's what I'm thinking about right now:

I don't care much for birthdays — my own, that is. People try to make you feel like one in a million on that day.

My problem with birthdays is that on that day, and every other day, I am, in fact, one in a million. Which means there are 999,999 people out there just like me. That fact leads me to believe that on my birthday, nothing special is happening.

I've heard rationalization about birthdays up the wazoo:

"Oh, we're celebrating because we're happy to have you around!"

If that was the case, why don't they throw parties every time I enter a room. We'd all live a happier life that way, I think.

"Birthdays signify that you're growing! It's an important moment!"

Yeah, and I'm growing the other 364 days of the year as well. Why narrow the partying down to one day?

Of course, materialistically speaking, I'd be hard–pressed to command everyone to ignore my birthday. I, like most people, need every scrap of financial help I can get — including that one shopping spree day of the year, which happens to be Aug. I for me...

The fact that Aug. 1 is my birthday means that I am a Leo. One of the classic pick–up lines is to ask somebody what their sign is, but no long–legged vixens have ever approached me and asked me what my sign is. Hell, no short, stubby–legged hermits have ever approached me and asked me what my sign is. Does that mean I'm ugly?

I know I'm not as ugly as Lyle Lovett, and he bagged Julia Roberts, although only for a short while. I think that I'm not too terribly much worse than Bill Clinton, and we all know how often he got some...

Bill is the leader of a government that pays $500 for a toilet seat, I pay $500 for a rough total of 5.7 credit hours. Bill says he's in favor of education, yet every time he goes to the john he craps over the value of more than a third of my semester. Maybe the great spelling bee reject, Dan Quayle, can bring back the practice of buying cheap toilet seats so that our schools have more money to teach us things, like how to spell "potato"...

While I'm thinking about cheap politicians, that gubernatorial debate between Scott Harshbarger and Paul Cellucci was last week. I wonder why it's called a "gubernatorial" debate when neither man is running for the position of "Guber" — although one might think so based on their actions. All they seem to do is respond to each other's negative ads with more negative ads. That's not a cool response...

Speaking of "response," how can one respond, when nobody ever "sponds" to begin with? Likewise, how can one reply when you never find someone "plying"?

"Plying" is a verb, theoretically, which is the same type of speech as running, throwing, and fixing...

Why do we consider spaying a cat or dog "fixing" them, when we're not "fixing" anything about them. Do you really believe that Rover leaves the vet's office after that procedure thinking, "Oh, good! I'm glad they did something about that pesky reproductive organ. It was really starting to bother me."

Of course not. Rover's not being fixed at all. He's being broken...

Lutherans would argue that Martin Luther fixed their religious lives, I think. I suppose that's why they named their Church after him. Does that mean that the Episcopal Church was named after Joe Piscopo? Is each service led by a body–building comedian? And if so, do they let Arnold Schwartzenegger preside over any services (after all, he did do Kindergarten Cop and Jingle All the Way)?...

Here's a perplexing thought that has nothing to do with anything at all: the construction and meaning of the word "momentarily." "Momentary," minus the –ly, means for a short time. The suffix –ly signifies an adverb, such as in the word "hungrily," meaning "in a hungry manner." Yet "momentarily" does not mean "in a momentary manner" or "for a brief time," but rather, "after a brief time," which is a completely different meaning. Someone who tells you that they'll be returning momentarily is generally trying to say that they'll be back soon (after a brief time), not that they'll only be staying for a second when they get back (for a brief time). The English language is crazy. Or maybe that's me...

My birthday is Aug. 1, but I'm not a big fan of birthdays...

Seth Koenig is a Collegian columnist

Amherst, 01002

Elsa Allen

I sit in my living room, it is Tuesday night, the television throws a blue glow throughout our poorly lit living room, and because it is on I feel compelled to watch it. Okay, I'll admit I was the one that turned it on, but nevertheless, there it was, calling to my eyes, "Watch me, watch me." My eyes listened.

As my eyes followed the subjects on the latest of the trendy "Generation X" oriented shows that have invaded our airwaves, I realized that my brain was doing very little work, and came to the inevitable conclusion that these shows were, to put it in the juvenile terms that I was reduced to, really sucky.

Somewhere, in his posh office in Hollywood, Rupert Murdoch, Grand Pontiff of all media outlets, has gotten together with some of his fellow 60–plus, millionaire, white, male cronies and decided that it would be really groovy to put out a show about some really hip, swinging college kids. Unfortunately, good ol' Rupert and friends probably haven't set foot on a college campus since the Cold War ended, and after watching his latest show, Felicity, this fact becomes clear.

So it got me to thinking, perhaps I should send my pal Rup a fax, suggest to him that he do a series about me and my friends, and really sock it to those big wigs over at NBC who think that people really believe the Friends are actually still friends, and that they haven't yet found a place to hang other than that coffee shop.

My show would go something like this:

Opening credits with a theme song that was not written by some ambiguous top 40, wannabe grunge band. I'm thinking the Spice Girls would start my show (hey, if you plan on having an obnoxious TV show, might as well do it right.)

The main character, me, would not live in some unrealistic form of housing (ever see the suite on Saved By the Bell: The College Years?). No, she would live in an apartment much like my own. A quaint bungalow, where things are broken (a toilet rigged with a coat–hanger flushing mechanism because the landlord refuses to admit the entire thing needs to be replaced.) and usually dirty (pizza boxes, beer bottles and the like.) There is no trendy new furniture, rather an old couch from a grandmother's basement, and a severely mangled easy chair that my roommate picked up off the curb and brought home in her Volkswagen (da da da).

So, with a cast of characters and a setting, I would need some events to plot out in my pilot episode. I could have the stereotypical interaction with the dragon–like professor on the first day of class (Poor little Felicity gets yelled at by her science professor on day one). But this doesn't happen in my show. My characters don't even learn their professors names until halfway through the season (I'll save that suspenseful moment for sweeps week) and the only thing they ask anyone in a lecture hall of 300 is what the answer to 27 across is. After class, the only words exchanged between professor and student would be along the lines of: "Hey man, I'm a Senior, can I get into this class?" "Add your name to the waiting list and I'll e–mail you if you get in."

Back at home after the first day of class, over a steaming bowl of Kraft Macaroni and Cheese, my roommates and I would not discuss the upcoming party on Saturday night (it's Wednesday) or what we would be wearing to said party. As our reality–laden friend Felicity did, I would not stress over inviting the boy I liked to the alleged party, or run home to drown my sorrows in Ben and Jerry's when he responds that he has already been invited by my best friend. No, chances are that said boy would arrive at said party, invitation or not, with twenty of his nearest and dearest.

If we were on Fox, the cast would sit around at the party, eating chips that have been supplied by the host, drinking "punch" that nobody knows has a large percentage of grain alcohol in it. A girl will end up puking while her friend holds back her hair, and everybody will have learned a lesson, drinking is bad. Yeah.

On my show, we crowd into a house (bar, yard, basement) of which we most likely haven't been formally invited to and whose inhabitants we can only associate as a roommate's boyfriend's classmate's cousin. We will knowingly drink alcohol, and puke on our own at 3 a.m. because everybody else is probably busy puking as well. Then, having learned no moral lesson, we will go out and do it again the next night.

It is nice to have these idealistic shows, but I think that it is sending the wrong message out to society. We are not a bunch of meek students living quietly in fancy apartments, stressing over whether or not our professors think we're cool. We are bad–ass, and we watch TV, a lot of it.

So I suggest that Rupert and friends take a dive into the 21st century, ditch 90210, and for once produce a show that grasps onto some shred of reality.

Anything. I'm waiting.

Elsa Allen is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Collegian drops the ball on debate

To the editor:

In response to the editorial "Don't Ignore Us!" and several other letters on the gubernatorial debate held on Oct. 19 in the Campus Center Auditorium, our proposed initial size was judged as inadequate by student and security representatives who helped plan the debate because it didn't allow sufficient participation for demonstrators and others who wanted to be involved in the political process from outside the debate area. While Bowker Auditorium would have been ideal, it had been booked for months.

Other large spaces on campus, such as Mahar and Herter auditoriums, are in constant use for lectures, and because it takes two days to set up for live television, to use these spaces would have meant cancelling two days worth of classes. That left the Mullins Center, where the smallest partition in the arena would have seated 4,000 people, which would have been too much space, and the VIP room, which seats about 200.

While the space wasn't perfect, we thought it better to use a less–than–perfect space than to forego the debate altogether. We consider it part of the University's responsibility to bring these events to campus and to play a role in public debate. We trust the entire experience was enlightening to the 80 students, faculty, administrators, legislators, trustees, and press representatives able to attend, and to the many, many thousands who watched on television or read about it in newspapers.

John A. Hird
Director, Center for Public Policy and Administration

To the editor:

Your editorial headlined "Don't Ignore Us!" on Oct. 19 disingenuously ignores the Collegian's own responsibility for students not getting access to the gubernatorial debate. As late as one day before the debate, the Collegian ran a front page article that said nothing beyond the fact that it would be held at the Mullins Center. Anyone reading that would have been justified in thinking they could attend. Indeed, that day I overheard two undergraduates on the bus talking about going. This is based on the Collegian's reporting. The Collegian misled its readers.

If the editorial and reporting staff had been on the ball, the paper would have been reporting for days, if not weeks, on where the debate was to be held, and where and when UMass students, faculty and staff should show up in order to watch it. A major political event on our campus deserves such advance attention. This sort of ordinary, proactive investigative journalism, the most basic sort, would have revealed the inadequacies of the arrangements. It might have done so in time for pressure to be brought to change them. Instead, Collegian readers learned only the morning of the debate itself that it was closed. Too late to do anything but protest.

Timur Friedman
Northampton

Administration addresses debate

To the editor:

First, the Center for Public Policy and Administration/the University hosted the event, while a Springfield media consortium sponsored the debate. The media consortium shaped the format, and perhaps should have considered arguing for more moderator control prior to the debate. The Center/University was never involved in the discussion of enforcing time limits on candidates nor of general moderator control of the proceedings.

Regarding the contentiousness of the debate, usually neither the host nor sponsoring organization have control over what the candidates say, not, in general, how they behave in the debate. Typically, middle debates are more contentious, and this one would have been contentious wherever it was held; partisan crowds would have voiced their opinions whether in a large hall or a small one.

Also, of the 80 tickets available for allocation by the UMass Center for Public Policy and Administration, 27 went to graduate and undergraduate students. As is common in these types of debate, the campaigns themselves had most of the tickets (122) and some of these presumably also went to students. And, while one student who was issued an invitation but whose name did not appear on a check–list at the entry way did not get in to the debate, due to an apparent mix–up, we have heard of no others who could not get in after tickets had been offered to them.

The major issue was the site for the debate. The small meeting room was a consequence of a last–minute acceptance by the candidates of our invitation and the lack of suitable alternatives. The Campus Center Auditorium, our proposed initial site, was judged as inadequate by student and security representatives who helped plan the debate because it didn't allow sufficient participation for demonstrators and others who wanted to be involved in the political process from outside the debate area. While Bowker Auditorium would have been ideal, it had been booked for months.

Other large spaces on campus, such as Mahar and Herter auditoriums, are in constant use for lectures, and because it takes two days to set up for live television, to use these spaces would have meant cancelling two days worth of classes. That left the Mullins Center, where the smallest partition in the arena would have seated 4,000 people, which would have been too much space, and the VIP room, which seats about 200.

While the space wasn't perfect, we thought it better to use a less–than–perfect space than to forego the debate altogether. We consider it part of the University's responsibility to bring these events to campus and to play a role in public debate. We trust the entire experience was enlightening to the 80 students, faculty, administrators, legislators, trustees, and press representatives able to attend, and to the many, many thousands who watched on television or read about it in newspapers.

John A. Hird
Director, Center for Public Policy and Administration

The other side

Though I'm certain you've heard about many controversial issues and concerns on this campus, I want to present an argument regarding an issue that is so contestable and emotion–drawing, that most citizens of this country would rather ignore its very existence: discrimination.

I have found that the common person believes that discrimination is the unexplainable behavior of a large group — a majority — toward a smaller group — a minority — because of factors such as sex, race, religion, sexual preference, etc. But that's not true. Discrimination is ignorant behavior of any group or person toward another group or person. The term "reverse discrimination" not only makes no sense, it further illustrates the false definition of discrimination created by radical, empty–headed, elitist leaders of the United States.

America is a collage of various cultures and religions, and because of that, it has the potential to be the most enriched nation of the free world. Currently, that's not exactly the case. Rather than having millions of people who incorporate different surrounding cultures into their own lives, we have various groups of people who refuse to let go of the past, and thereby inhibit all attempts at a reformed, "unified" nation.

Gary Mendese

I want you to understand that I'm not blind to the history of this country. I'm fully aware of the African slave ships in 1694, the violent acts committed against homosexuals, the devastation caused by the bombing of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, and every other disgusting unimaginable act in which this nation has taken part. All of these acts, though all not racially motivated, could possibly cause a culture to hold a grudge against the United States, but it's time we moved on. All groups still from country strive for equality and ample recognition, and this is a completely valid aspiration. After all, the Constitution says, "all men are created equal."

But what exactly is being accomplished with isolated groups displaying hatred for the "white" race, the so–called "majority?" Though I know that having groups like the Malcolm X Center and Asian House intend to provide a sense of unity and fraternity among members of a "minority" group, is that all that happens? Of course not!

You see, though I admire the intent of these programs, some members who taint the entire group cry oppression, hatred, and the refusal to "conform to white standards." Who are these people kidding? Not only are they giving others a bad name, they are also making efforts of equality counterproductive. After hearing the whining, pre–pubescent cries of some of these people for a while, the entire nation, not just Caucasians, can't help but cringe and turn the other way.

There are many groups now living in this country that have suffered from oppression and prejudice for hundreds and even thousands of years, and their attempts at equality are less radical, more mature and more accepted by the nation than the more outspoken few. This accomplishes a great deal more than being bitter and hot–headed. Again, I'm not blind to the fact that groups have been mistreated in the past, but shut up already!

By isolating yourselves in one particular group of people and believing that all or most of the members of the "majority" are all the same and are out to keep you out of their world, then you yourself are guilty of prejudice. I know not all members of these groups feel this way, but this article is not directed toward those who don't, so don't get hot and bothered over nothing.

Though I understand the purpose of Black Miss America, The Negro College Fund, and radical feminist groups, if the so–called majority was to form a group such as these, the world would be in an uproar. Don't worry, I don't think there should be any majority groups, but I want you to understand that if you believe a "majority" group would constitute prejudice, then just by laws of humanity, a "minority" organization would constitute the same. And for you fundamentalists that plan to write a response to me explaining the purpose of such organizations, or to scold me for my opinions, save it!

And to the white men who came up with the ridiculous politically correct language, go take a long walk off a short pier! I mean, the word "black" isn't even allowed to be used in reference to race. Being PC, we're supposed to say "African–American" when we see a black person. Well, what if they're not? What if they're of Cape Verdean or Haitian descent? By classifying an entire group of people of similar skin color with one PC term, we are guilty of prejudice once again. Would you call all Oriental–looking people "Chinese– American?" I doubt it. And while we're on the subject of language, why is it taboo to say "nigger" and "chink," but it's okay to say "redneck," "white boy" and "cracker?" Is it because these names belong to the majority? If so, you guessed it... it's discrimination and prejudice. Believe me, I'm not condoning the use of any of these words, I'm just presenting the facts and asking logical questions.

Now that I'm approaching the end of this sure to be attacked essay, I want you to close your eyes and imagine what I look like. If because of my views, you assumed I was a white male, you should reflect upon yourself, for you came to a stereotypical and prejudiced conclusion. I'm an American person, and we can leave it at that.

Look, I know the world isn't perfect and I know it isn't going to be, but if we are to succeed at all in reforming this nation into one that is harmonious with all of those who live in it, we have to grow up, wipe our tears, and move on. Aside from the outer appearance of skin color, we're all just a shade of gray, and the sooner we realize that, the faster this nation will be reborn and will flourish once again.

Gary Mendese is a Collegian staff member

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545–3500 • Fax (413) 545–1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor–in–Chief Victoria Groves Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
Steve Salerno Jr. Advertising Manager David Parmenter Advertising Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Laura Forster Developing Nations Editor
Mike Messaros Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Co-Jewish Affairs Editor

Morgan Tober Co-Jewish Affairs Editor
Heather Lei Guzzetta Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jill Carroll News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylanski Sports Editor
Allana E. Todman Women's Issues Editor

Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager

Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Paypas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri–Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545–3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Hampshire professor shares views on nuclear weapons

By Rebecca Sable
Collegian Correspondent

Eqbal Ahmad, a professor emeritus at Hampshire College, gave an emotional and informative lecture on Thursday, Oct. 15 at Hampshire College on the role of nuclear weapons in India and Pakistan.

His lecture, Fire on the Mountain: South Asia After the Nuclear Tests, sponsored by the Five College Program in Peace and World Security Studies examined India and Pakistan both before and after the nuclear testing initiated by India on May 11, 1998.

"The weapon is evil," said Ahmad. "It shouldn't exist. It should be eliminated globally." Nuclear weapons are a risk to the world and the American ideology that "nuclear weapons are a currency of power" endangers everyone.

In Ahmad's view, when India decided to test nuclear weapons, they destroyed an image of peace and non–violence that had been respected and imitated throughout the world for more than half a century.

In addition, Ahmad feels Pakistan, by responding to India's provocations, has suffered sanctions negatively affecting the government and the economy.

Ahmad sees India's decision to test the weapons as based on United States policy which has made nuclear weapons the "primary element of projection of power."

Throughout the entire period of disarmament, Ahmed said that realistically the United States was ensuring that only a few select countries were acquiring weapons. Not only did the United States look away while Israel developed its nuclear weapons, said Ahmad, they also "provided Israel with the most modern, advanced delivery capabilities."

In 1993, after a three–year period of naval expansion, the United States invited India to participate in joint exercises in the Indian Ocean, said Ahmad. This move only "when their appetite," and the Indians' perception of nuclear weapons as a symbol of power was "augmented by American policies." Nuclear weapons had become a "currency of power" to Indian government officials.

Using Japan and Germany as examples, Ahmad said, "for the first time in the history of the world, there has been the de–linking of military and economic power. Given the de– linking, what the hell are the Indians and Pakistanis going for?"

Throughout the lecture, Ahmad focused on the dangers and misconceptions of nuclear weapons. Referring to a quote from Henry Kissinger, "Nuclear weapons are the modern equivalent of raining the flag," Ahmad argued that we "should not take nuclear weapons seriously as a currency of power." It is a "stupid, Kissingerian view of the world," he emphasized.

Ahmad urged peace between India and Pakistan and said that their positions "cannot be moved without international pressure. Pressure must be put on both countries."

"There is a risk of nuclear holocaust between the Indians and Pakistanis as long as the Indians and Pakistanis remain enemies," he warned.

Ahmad's lecture was met with approval from students and community members.

Lauren Goldrich, a first–year student at Hampshire College, thought Ahmad's lecture "was really informative as well as frightening. The lecture was a necessary, eye–opening scare. It was excellent because he was so passionate about it."

Seth Levin, a sophomore undeclared major at Amherst College, expressed his opinion of the speech.

"I think Ahmad, being a very real presence at Hampshire College and the five–college community, helped the impact of his speech. He is an essential member of our community and that helped emphasize the importance of what he was talking about and the extreme urgency of the matter," he said.

Frances Crowe, a member of the Nuclear Abolition Task Force, felt that his talk was "very comprehensive, like only a Pakistani or Indian could do."

She thought that it was an "extremely valuable evening. His passion and expertise was wonderful."

Dedie Singapuri, also a member of the Task Force, was impressed with Ahmad's call at the end of the lecture to join in plowshare efforts to abolish nuclear weapons.

"That is the only thing that causes social change," she commented.

Ahmad, who was raised in Pakistan, has had years of experience in the international field. He has been involved in the Civil Rights Movement, and the anti–war movement. In addition, he has taught at Cornell University, the University of Chicago, and Hampshire College. Ahmad has also been at the Institute for Policy Studies and was a founding member of the Transnational Institute in Amsterdam.

KARA TOOMEY/COLLEGIAN

A tearful Sonam Dekyi clutches the picture of her imprisoned son, Ngawang Choephel, while appealing to an audience at Hampshire College on China's refusal to allow her to see him.

Tibetan student jailed in China since 1995

By Danielle Fugazy
Collegian Correspondent

This year the United Nations is celebrating its 50th year of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, while ironically, Tibet is suffering from its 50th year of Chinese occupation.

Students, faculty, Tibetans, and non–Tibetans alike gathered last Friday night at Hampshire College to show their support for Middlebury College student, Ngawang Choephel, who is being held prisoner in Tibet.

Choephel, a ethonomusicology major, was arrested by the Chinese Government in 1995, while researching traditional Tibetan dance and song. He was accused of being a spy and sentenced to 18 years in prison.

In July 1995, Ngwang Choephel was being held in Nyari Detention Center in the city of Shigatse. At the time of his arrest, his camera, two videotapes, and travel documents were confiscated by the Chinese authorities.

In November 1996, more than a year after his disappearance, a closed trial was held sentencing him to 18 years in prison for gathering sensitive intelligence information and engaging in illegal separatist activities. Choephel was informed of the trial and verdict.

There has been little information about Choephel's well–being since his disappearance. Aside from the original video footage and audio recordings Choephel sent out of Tibet before his detention, there is little information about his case. Most recently, a former inmate who saw Choephel in early 1998 said he looked dazed and in poor health.

The mother of Choephel, Sonam Dekyi, a Tibetan living in exile in India, is appealing to China to allow her to visit her only son as provided by Chinese law. The law stipulates that prisoners may have visits from relatives. (Article 48 Prison Law of the PRC, adopted Dec. 29,1994)

"I long to see my son before I die," said Dekyi, who is in poor health herself.

Missing in Tibet is footage taped by Choephel that he managed to send to India before his capture by the Chinese authorities. The film includes Chophel's research and was packaged together with the help of actress Goldie Hawn and actor Peter Coyote, who are both narrators for the film. The footage was so powerful that many were crying by the time the lights came back on. According to Jay Pillay, enthonomusicology professor at Hampshire College, and former teacher of Choephel, "his (Chophel) main goal was clearly to research and document the songs and dance from the Tibetan culture that has died out."

The Chinese government has still made no statement about Choephel's whereabouts and no lists of charges has been released. According to Pillay, in the video Chophel was interested in his roots and wanted to share it with the world.

In 1949, the Chinese invaded Tibet, 14 years later Choephel was born there. When he was two, Choephel's mother, Dekyi, took her only son over the Himalayas to India hoping they could find a better way of life. In India, Choephel became interested in traditional Tibetan song and music. In 1993, he was granted a Fulbright scholarship to study at Middlebury College in Vermont.

Presently, there are 600 documented political prisoners in central Tibet and treatment ranges from electric shock to beatings.

Students for a Free Tibet sponsored the event and are currently looking for help in writing letters to Secretary of State Madeleine Albright.

"Global village": unification of nations or two different worlds?

The world, this big old place with all its people, hits a crisis of "world" proportions every now and then. At all other times, we are given to assume, everything is quite well with the world in general and all things unwell are merely disconnected, local, non–global problems. We have had two "world" wars, and various "world" crises that have supposedly come and gone. We are told we are currently witnessing a global economic crisis. This is an undeniably serious crisis, but we need to open up the debate about what qualifies as being of "global" or "world" proportions in our media and society.

> "Over 55 percent of the world still lives in rural areas... And a lot of these people work as migrant workers on farms that package the products of their labor and send it to you and me to eat."
>
> Vamsee Juluri

The global economic crisis is supposed to be global because it is supposed to affect the whole world. Perhaps it does, but there are worse, and more compelling crises that have been going on for at least a couple of centuries now that we seldom think of calling crises. It is only when something occurs in the West — and those who hold power — that we decide to call it a global issue. We wake up to this global economic crises, for instance, only when our wanton masters upon Wall Street find their high–stress, high–finance speculation has landed them in a bit of trouble.

Similarly, a push–button massacre of Iraqis can be justified as a response to a threat not just to the United States, but to the whole world itself. On a more mundane note, American television is quite gung–ho in declaring "world premieres" of stuff no one outside the country is watching anyway. And there is the "World Series" (but who in the world is interested in it outside the U.S.?) To sum up, even a well– meaning slogan like "We are the World," when taken literally, sounds quite imperialistic in the context of the West's relations to the rest of the world. Who's this "we"?

There is no denying that there is an emergence of conscientiousness in the West about the world which has made for fund–raising, as well as public opposition to needless U.S. perpetrated massacres in the Middle East (such as the questions faced by Madeleine Albright at Ohio State when she went to pitch for more bombs on Baghdad).

The problem, is that we are yet to acquire, with the certainty of common sense, a clear and representative picture of the "global." We hear so much about globalization. We celebrate it for bringing the whole world together à la the IBM ad campaign ("Solutions for a Small Planet"), we fear it for taking jobs away from American workers, we condemn it for promoting child labor in other countries, but these issues are barely the surface of what we can safely call the real world issue.

The "world" for the most part is not a part of all these discussions we have about it. Only a small fraction of the five billion people in the world have access to the World Wide Web and all the debates about globalization. There is an "us" here — the relatively privileged people from various nations who have access to education, media, and talk about the world, and "them," the majority of the world's population, the very people we claim to be talking about through notions of "global" this and "global" that.

These people have little success to our grand ideas about world peace and development, but they are seriously affected by the outcome of our debates and designs for the world.

First, it was colonialism with its mission of civilizing non– European peoples. Then, it was development, for the former colonies which upon independence were told to modernize or else (now, it's globalization. Developing countries have to "reform" their economies and let our banks and companies make their profits. Good for us, but what about them? Who are they? Where are they? What are they doing?

"They," the bulk of the world's population we speak so easily about are all around and unseen. They are as disparate in the way for their exclusion from a chance for a decent life as they are in nationality and occupation (or lack thereof). There is one group of people who constitute a large part of the world's population and are getting a really bad deal out of the way things work. They are for the most part people from the developing countries, or what economists call the "South," and while it is easy to think of them as poor people from poor countries, it is more accurate to characterize them for what they provide to the world. To put it simply, this group consists of agricultural laborers. This is the group which should come to mind when we say "global" this or "global" that.

Historically speaking, their numbers as a part of the whole population may have decreased somewhat. Why? Colonialism threw them off their land and their livelihood. They were forced to grow cash crops for European companies instead of food for their own stomachs. They found their whole way of life destroyed. Many of them migrated to cities. Some became industrial workers and entered a new sphere of exploitation. Most of them ended up in what is called the informal economy, making a living on the streets, polishing shoes, carrying bricks, begging. The squalor we associate third world cities with, the shantytowns and the slums, did not appear magically, neither has this whole process happened long ago and is all done with now.

Over 55 percent of the world still lives in rural areas (the real "global village," and not the cyber–fantasy we hear about). And a lot of these people work as migrant workers on farms that package the products of their labor and send it for you and me to eat. And while their presence on farms in this country only receives attention when it is seen as a threat to American jobs and identity, they are not here by accident. They are here precisely because they are seen as exploitable and the economies of their home countries have been devastated by 400 years of Western profiteering. (On this note, let's remember 1848, when over half of Mexico came to be called Southwest United States).

So this is the "world" that we need to think about. And "they" are not far away from us, in some remote land. They are working on farms right around us in horrendous conditions where the pain in their bodies gives them little chance for a humane standard of life, but instead generates handsome profits for agri–business. But farm workers, are by no means a defenseless group. They have been pushed hard enough for them to organize as a collective bargaining force to demand better treatment from their exploiters. They have the will, but they need our support.

There is, as we speak, a crisis brewing with migrant (Chicano/a) farm workers in California. They have long been represented and supported by their union, the United Farm Workers (UFW), but are on the verge of losing whatever voice they have because of a sinister campaign by powerful farm owners to weaken their organizing efforts.

The UFW has been a pillar of strength for the people who actually make up "the rest" of the world. If you want to make a difference, then this is where it most needs to be done. You won't hear about this on CNN, but trust me, this is the real global crisis.

Vamsee Juluri is a UMass graduate student.

UFW President Arturo Rodriguez will be speaking at UMass on Nov. 10 at 7 pm in Campus Center room 904 on "Stopping the brutal exploitation of farm workers."

An eye into developing nations
African Renaissance calls for soul searching

By Vincent Mooki Mooki
Collegian Correspondent

It is with little doubt that the concept of an African Renaissance is one that in South Africa has started developing and inevitably hit (African's) eardrums to an extent that one can safely argue it has almost become a prostitute.

Questions that immediately leap to mind are what is the Renaissance about, what does it seek to achieve, and to who is the preaching of this concept being directed?

> "It is in actual fact a continental call for a new beginning, which is urging Africans to start developing themselves in the absence of that colonial supervision."

English professor Dan Izevbaye from Ibadan University in Nigeria, feels that it is important in the first place to indicate that the African Renaissance, as a term, was initiated in South Africa by Deputy President Thabo Mbeki, yet the term Renaissance is far from new or confined to only South Africa. The following are some of Izevbaye's views on the Renaissance.

* * *

Renaissance, in an African context, can be traced back to the late 1950's when the winds of change started to blow across the African continent against the plundering and exploitation of Africa's resources which was started in the 15th and 16th centuries by European colonialists. These are issues commonly discussed in the works of Pan Africanists such as Nkwame Nkrumah of Ghana.

African Renaissance as a concept, is not a decree or legislation nor even prescriptive, but it is a setting of a goal or a target, a proposal and a call to action. It is in actual fact a continental call for a new beginning, which is urging Africans to start developing themselves in the absence of that colonial supervision.

As a rallying call for collective responsibility, the concept emphatically expresses the need for co–operation and unity among African countries and the need for Africans to make Independent decisions. It is therefore, a call for self–discovery.

The call is prompted by undeniable and unacceptable economic and political conditions that have and still forms a central part of this continent. Such conditions involve poverty and civil wars which in turn result from greed and corruption. The political instability which has and still learn some of these countries apart is largely attributable to the lack, if not total absence of basic human rights across the continent.

In this case, the call seeks to discourage and criticize politicians in particular, against such practices as "politics of the belly or stomach" where the desire and practice of accumulation of wealth for personal gratification are evident, even physically.

The call is important because it is the African future which is being jeopardized by our very political leaders.

The call also seeks to discourage the exploitation of the resources of the continent by foreign countries at the invitation of our politicians who in turn are taking our money outside the continent thereby damaging its future by stalling development.

A classic example of such leaders are the late Mobutu Sesseko of the former Zaire and the former Nigerian military dictator Sani Abacha, who exposed their countries to foreign exploitation despite the poverty and suffering experienced by their people.

This call therefore is particularly directed towards politicians to create and provide a conducive political and economic infrastructure if the possibility of growth and development is to be entertained in Africa. One of the pre– conditions necessary for such development involves the establishment of basic human rights such as intellectual freedom. In this case citizens of every country should have the right to inquiry, expression, and intellectual freedom. In this case citizens of every country should have these rights because knowledge is important to growth and prosperity.

There are people who are still cynical of the concept because there are no signs of development towards the intended goals of the concept. It is pivotal that it is explained to these people and the explanation should be stressed from an African point of view since this call, is in actual fact, calling Africans to take a journey into the interiority.

Vincent Mooki Mooki is a student at the University of Fort Hare in South Africa. Professor Izevbaye is a visiting lecturer at the University of Fort Hare.

Memories from pop's past; looking to bands of today

HITS
Phil Collins
Atlantic

Does the mere sight of this man's name make you cringe? It shouldn't. Phil Collins is perhaps one of the 80's and 90's true pop music craftsmen. The man understands what a "single" is. This collection is a fine chronicle of a very successful career as the pop arena.

But it's obvious that Phil is slowing down a bit. His last tour featured him leading a big band; Phil did not sing. His last album, Dance Into the Light, was pretty poor and failed to yield any mega-singles. So, just in time for the holidays season, his label releases out the inevitable past Genesis retrospective.

The singles from Dance Into the Light are here. So is Collins' latest effort a collaboration with Babyface on a cover of Cyndi Lauper's "True Colors." As we have come to expect from Babyface, this is the epitome of cheese. Not to mention sick. It is the bulk of the material on Hits that brings a smile to my face. These are the songs that would fit onto the soundtrack accompanying a film of my grade school years. Admit it, Phil Collins was IT. You chuckle, yet I suggest that powerful "Easy Lover" would turn you up and dancing in a flash. Its inclusion is almost worth the price of admission. Up to now, it was only available on a mediocre album from ex-Earth, Wind and Fire member Philip Bailey (co-vocalist on the song).

Other hard to find songs are also included. Songs from films such as Against All Odds, Separate Lives and Buster (on which Collins also starred) which spawned the wonderful and sappy love song, "A Groovy Kind of Love." A song that everyone cranks when it comes on their car radio, "In the Air Tonight" is included here (maybe it's the memories of "Miami Vice" that it conjures up that allow it a special place in our hearts).

The magnificent singles from No Jacket Required are all here: "Sussudio," "One More Night," and "Take Me Home" as well as the homeless themed ditty that we all hummed along to a few years later — "Another Day in Paradise."

As the title suggests, this album is all about chart success. Perhaps the inclusion of "True Colors" is wishful thinking, we'll just have to wait and see. Some songs we have over and over again on the radio are suspiciously absent ("Don't Lose My Number" and "I Missed Again"). I'll just have to wait for the box set, I guess. B+
(Matthew Nixon)

Symposium possesses a kind of charisma that is absent in the increasingly generic alterno-pop genre.
COURTESY MP

ON THE OUTSIDE
Symposium
Infectious/Red Ant

This band has been touted as "the best live band in Britain" by such UK publications as Melody Maker and NME. A good deal of that energy makes it onto their latest recording On the Outside, but some of it fails to captivate.

"The Answer to Why I Hate You," the album's first track manages to be a delight, the visceral punk screaming of Ross Cummings offering a new twist on the usual Brit-pop. But the album's inconsistencies are abundant, as some tracks prove to be weak.

There are, however, a lot of surprisingly excellent songs on this album. "Drink the Sunshine" and "Obsessive Compulsive Disorder" are clever tunes, and there is a certain charisma about Symposium that is absent in the increasingly generic alterno-pop genre.

On the Outside may be unremarkable, but Symposium is definitely a band worth checking out. Especially if they come around at some point. B
(Kevin Monahan)

ADVENTURE
Furslide
Meanwhile.../Virgin

Nellee Hooper's work with such prolific artists as Massive Attack, Bjork and U2, would lead one to believe that he would have a more exciting band than Furslide as the first artist on his new label. Meanwhile... Furslide's Adventure doesn't offer much in the way of musical inventiveness like Hooper's other collaborations have. However, it almost (but not quite) makes up for it in lyrical creativity.

Guitarist/vocalist/songwriter Jennifer Turner has an excellent vehicle for her talents as a songwriter in Furslide, her voice and lyrics are excellent, and her skills as a guitarist are more than adequate. Having the rhythm section of Jason Lader on bass and Adam MacDougall on drums doesn't hurt either.

The problem with Adventure is Furslide's experimentation with funk, blues and psychedelica not managing to do anything interesting with any of these genres. It's sort of like learning to speak one language well before deciding to take up another.

Turner, best known as Natalie Merchant's guitarist on Tigerlily, pulls off some nice solos, but that's about it. Overall, Adventure comes off as a bland vehicle that wastes it's musicians potential. C (K.M.)

Turn to TRAX, page 7

AEROBICS
CARDIO-KICKBOXING • YOGA
* Classes Daily
* Certified Instructors
* Suspended Wood Floor
* Area's Largest Room
www.amherstathletic.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
460 West Street
South Amherst, 256-0080

ALLISON L. KOLINS
ATTORNEY AT LAW
77 Prospect Street – Suite 6
Northampton, Massachusetts 01060
(413) 585-0690 • allisonk@javanet.com

CASTAWAY LOUNGE
Rte. 5 & 10 Whately, MA 413-665-8733
1997 1998
Adult Entertainment proudly presents:
EVERY MONDAY NIGHT IS FOOTBALL NIGHT
5 Beautiful Exotic Dancers 5pm-1am
all other days entertainment 1pm-1am
$$$ BEAUTIFUL GIRLS, need money? $$$
No experience? No transportation? We will provide everything!
Call (413) 665-8733 - Ask for Jim
Coming AMATEUR NIGHT
Ladies must apply in person
Our beautiful VIP room is available for private parties
North of 91: Exit 22, take Rte. 5 & 10 north 2 miles
South of 91: Exit 24, take Rte. 5 & 10 south 2 miles

Welcome back... NOW GO AWAY!
Many tickets. Great advice. Nice people.
travel accessories and backpacks sold here!
European railpasses and international student ID cards issued on the spot!
Council Travel
CIEE: Council on International Educational Exchange
44 Main St., Amherst
(413) 256-1261
www.counciltravel.com

DAILY COLLEGIAN
Collegian Open House!
Come see New England's Largest College daily paper in action!
Tuesday, October 27th • 4 to 7p.m.
Basement of the Campus Center

UMASS Week
October 20-27, 1998
Brought to you by the Class of 2001 Class Council
Get up on your Celebrate... Diversity and Soap Box and Community Social Justice.
Events Sponsored By: Newman Center / /Newman Association, German Language Program, Tae Kwon Do Club, Paintball Club, Feminist Majority, Ballroom Dance Club, New World Theater, Alumni Association, Music Department, Hang Gliding Club, Mass Pirg, STARS, Japanese Program, Inter Religious Project, The Hillel House.
Events Include: Cultural movie nights, speakers, poetry readings, demonstrations, rallies, dances, dialogue nights, Religious services and performances.
Co-Sponsored By: Office of Human Relations, Office of Jewish Affairs, Jewish Student Union, Cultural Enrichment Fund, Chancellors Council for Community Unity and Social Justice, UMass Amherst Alumni Association and The Hillel House.
CLOSING CEREMONY
BY:
HAROLD KUSHNER
*AUTHOR OF WHEN BAD THINGS HAPPEN TO GOOD PEOPLE
*RECIPIENT OF THE CHRISTOPHER MEDAL AWARD
OCTOBER 27 @ 7 P.M.
IN THE CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM
FOR MORE INFORMATION, CALL SHANNON AT 7-1390
*Arrangements for Harold Kushner made through the B'Nai Brith Lecture Bureau

Blasting holes into the night?

When I left you last I believe I was amidst a plethora of my own complaints and unresolved criticism. After some introspective thoughts and a couple quiet games of NFL Blitz I have gathered myself and am ready to address the state of hip-hop once again.

Let me begin by posing a few fundamental questions: How many ways can Jay Z illustrate that he is a wealthy man? After Reasonable Doubt I was convinced of both his skill and bankroll. After In a Lifetime I was more convinced of the latter. Why is it that we criticize RassKass for weak production and misuse of bonified talent when we purchase, praise and pump Jay Z? Imagine Hard Knock Life if the Beatnuts, Show & AG and Dimond D produced the bulk of its tracks? What if he featured say O.C., Buckshot and Fat Joe instead of DMX, Jermaine Dupri and Too $hort? These formulas are simple hip-hop ethics and we the consumers reserve the right to, at least, ask these type of questions.

But let me proceed... Black Star was a good album right? I'd just like to know why a fair percentage of it was dedicated to exemplifying beat-jackers when its primary success hailed from "Definition," which contains a beat jacked straight from BDP's classic "The 'P' is Free." I like Mos and Kweli, I really do, but I refuse to defend their hypocracy.

It's official... after all the votes were pieced together and tallied the overriding word on the streets is that Tribe has lost their energy and stepped down from the ranks of incomparable standards. It was a long run and lately their feats becoming increasingly tired. And speaking of falling off, I was eating a bowl of cereal the other day when I noticed a picture of Canibus on the milk carton. It's a good thing he has a background in computers because I think we've all answered the question he asked us with his album title (Those who are following know I'm not being cryptic). What I am getting at is that becoming a fierce MC takes more than battling LL and making scorching guest appearances on other albums; and like Jay Z and Rass Kass, Canibus is just another waste of talent.

On the flip-side there are some positive aspects that deserve a nod. Outcast immediately comes to mind. After three albums I have yet to find flaw in their effort. Aquemini is perhaps "different" by an east coast vernacular but it is far too rich, both lyrically and musically, to ignore. It was also nice to see the re-emergence of Brand Nubian who stuck to the formula of preaching the five percent gospel over nicely-crafted beats. Foundation is a prime example of a carefully produced album.

Perhaps the only thing hotter than the Yanks is mouth is Philadelphia MC the Last Emperor. This kid can flat out flow. He can spit anything from battle lyrics to thought provoking metaphors and his mental approach to hip-hop is absolutely on point. His joint, "Keep On," leads the list of my five most flammable tingles of the month followed by: "Soundclash" by Shabaam Sahdeeq; "I Shot Regan" by Non Phixion; "Chonkyfire" by Outcast and Black Star's "Respiration."

Last but a far cry from least, if anyone ventures into the jungles of NYC, make doubly sure to pick up a little magazine called One Love. Only in its third issue, it is undoubtly the solution to the staynation problem that often surrounds the core of hip-hop. The post-reading experience is like a glass of water that cleanses your cotton mouth. From cover to cover it is raw and refreshing journalism.

David Katzoff is a UMass student.

■ trax

continued from page 6

HILLSIDE
Arnold
Columbia

Arnold's debut fares pretty well. This is really mellow, skirting the edge of psychedelic pop. There is plenty of strumming of acoustic guitars and lofty string arrangements.

The start of the show is "Rabbit," a tripped-out, spoken- word piece that ranks as one of the years best album tracks. A strange bouncing sound accompanies the story of a rabbit at the seaside. The track explains the cover art and serves to present Arnold's philosophy of life.

At times, the tunes verge on becoming country rock. Pretty cool for a bunch of Brits. B (M.N.)

O.K.
Talvin Singh
Island

Oh dear. Singh got a bit self-indulgent on this follow-up to his much-lauded debut, Soundz of the Asian Underground. It's much more trancey than dancey, but that's not the problem. He still uses Indian instruments and chants, but the result is far less hip. No more whimsical takes on Asian airline announcements — not as much energy. How did this London club-darling get so mellow?

The exceptions on O.K. are Decca and Soni, both of which incorporate chanting. They have some of the old "oomph." Most of the other tracks are sort of like techno elevator music — and they seem to go on forever. Singh's going to lose some street cred on this one.

Singh has said he wants to get Asian kids "into their own music" in recent interviews, but this is just not the way to do it. It's just O.K. C-
(Tanya Mannes)

■ volleyball

continued from page 10

the Minutewomen they fell short in game two 15-10.

UMass took the court for game three seemingly unmotivated to play. They fell behind early 12-3, and the Huskies would not relinquish the lead as they won game three, 15-11. The Minutewomen made a run late in the game but it was too little too late.

"We always play when it's a little too late, it's getting old. Kari Hogancamp played the last half of the third game the way she should have played the first two games. It starts with her defense. We need as a team to start playing tough in warm ups," Kenny said.

After dropping these three big games in a row the Minutewomen need to come back strong this weekend when they meet La Salle and Temple, at Curry Hicks. The second half of UMass' conference schedule begins this weekend. The Minutewomen need to come up with some big wins in order to have a shot at post season play.

"They have played everybody, they are going to play now for the rest of the season. Now it's up to them. They need to find a little more of a fight in them because it's pretty hard to win and I don't really know if they're willing to play that hard for five games. You don't start to play when you're down 14-7 in the final game," Kenny said.

Men's water polo excels in Calif.

By Matthew Despres
Collegian Correspondent

Bruised, but by no means beaten or down, the Massachusetts men's water polo team traveled to California this past weekend. Not to relax, hit the beach and take in a few rays, but to get back in the pool and continue doing what they have done best all season long: win.

The Minutemen left home with a 15-2 record, and dates with UC Santa Cruz and the NorCal tournament marked down on the calendar. They also had a nice two game winning streak to rest their heads on, and more importantly, head coach Russ Yarworth said the team was excited to go. That mindset proved to be fruitful after all the team had been through in the past few weeks, particularly the altercation with Queens that had left a few players injured.

But that is now in the past, as all the boys were back and ready to go.

"No, that [the injuries from the Queens match] was not a factor this weekend," Yarworth said. "We were all back."

The first challenge came from UC Santa Cruz last Thursday. The Minutemen worked the match to a 5-4 halftime score in their favor, and then blew Santa Cruz away in the second half, eventually running the score to 13-6. Senior Brian Stahl set the nets on fire with four goals, and was backed up by sophomore Brook O'Neill who found the back of the net for himself on three occasions. The win boosted the Minutemen to a stellar 16-2 overall record. Yarworth was pleased.

"We did a great job," Yarworth said. "Our level of play was up there and we displayed a good commitment to defense."

But that is now in the past, as all the boys were back and ready to go.

"No, that [the injuries from the Queens match] was not a factor this weekend," Yarworth said. "We were all back."

The first challenge came from UC Santa Cruz last Thursday. The Minutemen worked the match to a 5-4 halftime score in their favor, and then blew Santa Cruz away in the second half, eventually running the score to 13-6. Senior Brian Stahl set the nets on fire with four goals, and was backed up by sophomore Brook O'Neill who found the back of the net for himself on three occasions. The win boosted the Minutemen to a stellar 16-2 overall record. Yarworth was pleased.

"We did a great job," Yarworth said. "Our level of play was up there and we displayed a good commitment to defense."

Next the squad headed for the NorCal tournes, where they faced No. 18 Santa Clara in Stanford. It was once again Wyommissing, Penn. native Stahl leading the way, as he scored five times to lead the Minutemen to a 12-7 victory. While Stahl continues to impress Yarworth says the teams success is more than an individual effort.

"Brian is no bigger than the team, but he is a big part," Yarworth said. "They all are. Team is the key word here."

The low point of the weekend came against No. 6 Pepperdine, the first meeting between these two squads. UMass fell by a score of 12-6, bringing their season record to a still impressive 17-3.

The next time we see the team in action will be Oct. 24 and 25, when they travel to Annapolis, Md. to participate in the UAC Championships.

Arts is Cool!!

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS always $10.
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256-0733
145 main st. northampton 586-0155

We're moving from Machmer!
Pre-Major Advising Services
serving undeclared & pre-majors for Arts and Sciences
will be closed from
Tuesday, October 27 - Friday, October 30
We will reopen on Monday, November 2
in 615 Goodell
Telephone: 545-2191
Come see us in our new location!

Are Your Teeth Still on Summer Vacation?
UHS Dental Services offers Professional Dental Cleanings
Schedule an appointment TODAY at the University Health Services Dental Office.
577-5400
Ask about our 10-20% discount.

in Legal Education
To get ahead in today's economy, you need education beyond a college degree. More and more people are realizing the wide ranging benefits of a Juris Doctor degree from Massachusetts School of Law. A JD degree can give you the edge you need to succeed in business, health care, law enforcement, government and law.
Massachusetts School of Law
• LSAT not required
• Financial Aid and Tuition Plans available
ON-CAMPUS
Wednesday, October 28, 1998
See our booth at the Graduate and Professional Career Fair between 10:00 a.m. - 3:00 p.m.
Day & Evening classes available
500 Federal Street
Woodland Park
Andover, MA 01810
(978) 681-0800
www.mslaw.edu

Spend your weekends and break on the slopes!
Mount Snow Job Fair
Sat, October 24th • 10 am - 2 pm
Main Base Lodge
We'll be interviewing for Rentals, Tickets, Coaches, Food & Beverage, Phone Sales, Lift Attendants, Housekeeping, Childcare, Perfect Turn Pros, Patrol, Lodging, & MORE!
Mount Snow
VERMONT U S A
Free Skiing & Riding Await You!
Mount Snow Resort • Rt 100 • West Dover • Vermont
802-464-3333 • EOE
www.mountsnow.com

Mavi Jeans.
ZAMA
downtown Amherst

amc
Hampshire 6 • 584-7560
Hampshire Mall
WHAT DREAMS MAY COME (PG-13) Today Thurs at (5:30 @ $2.50) 8:00
HOLY MAN (PG) Today Thurs at (5:20 @ $2.50) 8:10
PRACTICAL MAGIC (R) Today Thurs at (5:40 @ $2.50) 8:30
BELOVED (R) Today Thurs at (4:00 @ $2.50) 7:30
RUSH HOUR (PG-13) Today Thurs at (5:30 @ $2.50) 8:10
URBAN LEGEND (R) Today Thurs at (5:30 @ $2.50) 8:10
RONIN (R) Today Wed at 8:00
NIGHT AT THE ROXBURY (PG-13) Today Thurs at (6:00 @ $2.50) 8:40
ANTZ (PG) Today Thurs (5:50 @ $2.50) 8:30
BRIDE of CHUCKY (R) Today Thurs (5:40 @ $2.50) 8:20
THERE'S SOMETHING ABOUT MARY (R) Today Wed at (5:20 @ 2.50)
Special Engagement, no Passes or Coupons
$2.50 (Twi-Lite) Show Daily
Mt. Farms 4 • 584-9383
Mt. Farms Mall

"Reason №2 why you should take my GRE course."
You'll score more...
Our students improve an average of 212 points. And they significantly outscore students who took that other course.
2
Call 1-800-2REVIEW
or visit us at www.review.com
Courses held on the UMASS campus! Smith, Mt. Holyoke, and YWCC as well.
THE PRINCETON REVIEW

Steve & Greg AsAdoorian
"UMass' Greatest Acoustic Duo Playing your Favorite Tunes From the 60's & 70's today"
Weekly Drink Specials
20oz Miller Lite Drafts $1
All Sam Adams Pints only $2
Bud & Bud light 16 oz. bottles $2
Dome Ice Bottles $2
Corona $2
Basket of Rocks 'Free T Shirt' • four bottle of rocks $6.99
PRIZES 10-12PM
22 oz. Rolling Rock 2.99
Over 40 Hand Crafted Beers
THE PUB
15 East Pleasant Street • Amherst

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

The Classifieds... Keeps you informed about college life!

Are you looking for an employment opportunity?

Do you need some cash?

Check The Classifieds today and see what great employment opportunities are out there and waiting for you!

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The UMass Women's Ice Hockey team won their first game 8-0 this Saturday at Holy Cross. The first home game will be Sunday, November 1st, vs. UMass-Lowell. Free admission at the practice rink and game time is 1pm.

AUTO FOR SALE

83 Volvo Wgn Green, 4 speed, AC, 131K miles, $1500 or B/O 256-2384

94 Honda Passport 2x4, 90K miles. Excellent condition $7950 367-9813

Honda Excel '88 $875, good town car 130K miles 665-7232

96 Integra SE Loaded, 2 Plus. No reasonable offer refused 546-3401

CARS $100-$500
Police Impounds
Hondas, Chevys, Jeeps, & Sport Utilities
MUST SELL!
1-800-522-2730 x4554

WANTED: Toyotas, Nissas, Prizms, Sentras. Any condition. Cash paid everyday 1-800-649-4795

AUTO PARTS

Hard Top for Jeep Wrangler. Black with defroster and wiper $800 549-0013

COMPUTERS

486 Computer
With 95 in disk, mouse, keyboard
No monitor $75
33 modem (internal), $50
549-5642 Sean

Macintosh Printer
Color StyleWriter 1500
$100 or B/O
Call Tony @ 549-5514

486 Computer
Great For Student
Works Good
$100
Color VGA $50
(413)584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

INSURANCE SALES

Earn $35,000+ in your 1st year as a personal lines account exec. If you have the drive and ambition to succeed, are well organized and have exceptional interpersonal skills, start your career in homeowner/auto insurance sales. We will train the right individual to sell our highly competitive insurance products and provide you with unlimited qualified leads. Candidate must be willing to work evening. We offer a competitive base + commission and complete benefits package. Send resume to W.D. Grinnell, Webber and Grinnell Insurance Agency, P.O. Box 538, Northampton, MA

WEBBER & GRINNELL INSURANCE

Wanted 98 People
We'll pay you
to lose up to 29+ lbs
Expires 11/11/98.
1-703-817-1071

Earn $100
Exercise Science
Immobilization Study
Needs You
Call Steve 549-3877

VarsityBooks.com seeks student managers to direct on-campus operations for rapidly growing e-commerce business. This paid part-time position is ideal for innovative, highly motivated, exceptionally bright, go-getters who want to prove experience isn't everything. Call 202-256-6048 for more info.

Artists, Illustrators, Cartoonists Start up Multimedia Company needs Illustrators for part-time work. Also, there are opportunities for cartoonists to publish their own work. Shanon Fynan 413-323-4578

EMPLOYMENT

Teaching Subs Preschool Center, Route 63, Leverett. $6.40 per hour. Call Susan 548-9674.

Waitress Part-Time
Make $400 & work 2 or 3 nights
Flexible hours
Dancers For Upscale Gentleman's Club
No experience necessary
Unlimited $$$ Potential
Bikini, Topless, or Nude!
Call 413-536-0502

Drivers Wanted
Pays $9 to $15 per hour
Inside help wanted too
Flexible hours
Call Dominos
256-8911

Delivery person and kitchen help wanted. Apply at D.P. Dough, Downtown Amherst.

Teaching Assistants/Instructional Aides
Amherst (Elana Aitken, Coordinator)
Innovative alternative learning environments for students with learning disabilities and behavioral issues
Training provided.
Excellent opportunity for those considering careers in education.
Send a letter and resume ASAP to
Jone Messmer #58
Hampshire Educational Collaborative
30 Industrial Drive East
Northampton, MA 01060
AA/EOE/ADA

ABSOLUTE SPRING BREAK..."TAKE 2"
2 FREE TRIPS ON ONLY 15 SALES and... Earn $$$$. Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida, Padre! Lowest prices! Free Meals, Parties & Drinks. Limited Offer 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplashtours.com

Kitchen Line Cooks Part-time, flexible schedules. Starting at $7.00/hr., depending on experience. 2 or 3, 5 or 6 hour shifts per week. Apply in person. The Pub Restaurant, 15 East Pleasant St.

EMPLOYMENT

SAVONS Earn holiday cash. No door to door required. Flexible 1-800-408-0085.

ENTERTAINMENT

Lights and Sound: Rave to Dorm Party. Your DJ's or ours. Call BARR Productions (413)737-8561.

FOR RENT

Take Over Our Lease 2 bedrooms. On bus line. Call 549-5318.

Fridge Rentals Free delivery. 253-9742.

FOR SALE

Ride Kildy Snowboard Used 3 times. Emery Bindings $175/BO 546-6179.

Large Dorm Fridge $50 Sean 549-5642.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Cindy- Only 3 days until your 21st birthday! Love, Us

HEALTH & BEAUTY

We're here to pump... YOU UP! Creatine Monohydrate, Creatine Surge, DHEA, Whey Protein and more from Fitness Workshop delivered right to your door 1-877-FIT-WORK www.fitnessworkshop.com

INSTRUCTION

CARDIO KICKBOXING Amherst Athletic Club. Train with the pros! 256-0080.

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE
50% student discount
Near campus
Classes filling soon
Space is limited, call
1-800-U-CAN-MIX

LOST & FOUND

Gold Wedding Band "BJS 6-3-72" Contact Amherst Police.

MUSICAL EQUIP

Drum Set 5 piece black TAMA Rockstar with Basic HARDWARE + cymbals $450 247-5248

MUSICAL INSTRUCTION

Piano Lessons Experienced Berklee Grad has Fall openings. On bus line. Classics, Contemporary, Improvisational. Very versatile. Cheryl 549-8580.

ROOM FOR RENT

Looking to fill 2 rooms in a 3 bedroom Puffton apt. Available either Dec 1 or Jan 1. Must commit till June 1. Call 549-7076.

Three Bedroom House Newly renovated, quiet area, big backyard, washer/dryer. 15 minutes from campus. Call Katie 256-5995.

ROOMMATE WANTED

Responsible housemate to share large house in Greenfield $285, utilities included. 508-943-1447 or 413-773-8586.

SERVICES

Rental Problems Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact The Student Legal Services Office. 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst Area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906.

TO SUBLET

3 bedroom apt for sublet. $875 per month, all utilities included. On bus route. Cliffside Apt. For more info call (413)665-0052.

TRAVEL

#1 SPRING BREAK Operator!
Check our web-site for the best deals!
www.vagabondtours.com
Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica & Florida
Group organizers EARN FREE TRIPS & CASH. Call today! 800-700-0790

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK '99
Largest selection of Spring Break Destinations, including Cruises!
Foam Parties, Drink Specials, and Club Admissions.
Group Discounts.
Epicurean Tours.
1-800-231-4-FUN

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 21

Fair — The International Programs Department will hold a fair in the Campus Center Concourse between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.

Lecture — A lecture entitled "Incompletes: A Double-Edged Sword" will be held from noon-1:30 p.m. in room 803 of the Campus Center.

Lecture — A lecture entitled "All Power to the People: The Black Panther Party and Beyond" will be held in the Campus Center at 7 p.m. Check information desk for room number.

Meeting — Amnesty International will have a death penalty discussion at 7 p.m. in room 903 of the Campus Center.

Speech — Daniel Sicken, a plowshares activist demonstrating against nuclear weapons, will speak at 7 p.m. in the Johnson Chapel at Amherst College.

Workshop — There will be a contraception and safer sex workshop at 7 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

THURSDAY, OCT. 22

Discussion — There will be a class and discussion, as well as Hare Krishna Vegetarian Feast and Bhagavad-Gita, in the Commonwealth Room in the Student Union at 6:30 p.m.

Lecture — A lecture entitled "Not Your Ordinary Academic Black Man" will be given in the Campus Center from 12:30-2 p.m. The event is part of the GLBT Lecture Series. Check at information desk for room number.

Lecture — A lecture entitled "Neither Disraeli nor Dreyfus: The German Jews and Liberal Europe" in the New York Room in Mary Woolley Hall at Mount Holyoke College at 4:15 p.m. A reception will follow.

Lecture — Judith Halberstam will talk about her book Female Masculinity at 12:30 p.m. in room 411 of the Campus Center. The event is part of the GLBT Lecture Series.

Meeting — The UMass English Club will have a meeting at 6 p.m. on the second floor of Bartlett. The movie "Shadowlands," based on the life of C.S. Lewis, will be shown.

Speech — Robert Ader will give a speech entitled "Conditioned Immune Responses: The Role of Conditioning in Drug Therapy (The Placebo Effect?!)" in the Hooker Auditorium at Mount Holyoke College at 6:30 p.m. A reception follows.

Workshop — A workshop on contraception and safer sex will be held at 3 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

NOTICES

Community — Official Mail-In Voter Registration Forms are available at the Registrar's Office, and Commuter Services in the Student Union. Voting is on Nov. 3.

Community — The Fall '98 final examination schedule will be available beginning Friday, Oct. 16. Copies will be available in the Registrar's Office in 213 Whitmore, and will be delivered to students who live in the residence halls. The schedule will also be on the World Wide Web beginning Oct. 5.

Exhibit — "Equal Partners" is being shown at the Smith College Museum of Art from Sept. 25-Dec. 13. This exhibit showcases the work of 15 American firms founded by female/male partners.

Exhibit — An exhibit entitled "From the Book of Triptych" will be shown at the New Africa House from Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Paintings representing a marriage of African and Western Aesthetics are included.

Workshop — A workshop for women survivors of childhood sexual abuse will take place on Nov. 7. The workshop include writing, drawing, and movement. In the evening, participants are also invited to perform dances, music, and monologues about healing from abuse. Call 586-7390 for more information and to sign up.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

If you think that shopping a college store means having no choices... Think again. NEW Ustore Not like a mall... Better.

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 21, 1998

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer	Africans in America: "Brotherly Love"			Amistad Struggle		Flip Schulke	Natura (In Stereo)
WFSB	3	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Nanny	Maggie	To Have & to Hold (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)	News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Nanny	Maggie	To Have & to Hold (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)	News	Late Show
WGVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Dharma-Greg	Two Guys-Girl	Drew Carey	Secret Lives	20/20	News	Nightline
WLVI	6		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny	Friends	Dawson's Creek (In Stereo)		Charmed (In Stereo)		News	Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy	Dateline (In Stereo)		3rd Rock-Sun	Newsradio	Law & Order "Flight" (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WTXX		6	Married...With	Home Imp.	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	7 Days "Come Again?"		Star Trek: Voyager "Drone"		News	Newsradio	LAPD
WVIT		10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Dateline (In Stereo)		3rd Rock-Sun	Newsradio	Law & Order "Flight" (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WTIC	8	11	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Frasier	World Series: Game 4 — Indians vs. Yankees at Braves or Padres					News	Friends
WWLP	9	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy	Dateline (In Stereo)		3rd Rock-Sun	Newsradio	Law & Order "Flight" (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WGBY	10	6	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer	Africans in America: "Brotherly Love"			Africans in America: "Brotherly Love"			Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	29	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Dharma-Greg	Two Guys-Girl	Drew Carey	Secret Lives	20/20	News	Nightline
WSBK	38		Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	7 Days "Come Again?"		Star Trek: Voyager "Drone"		7 Days	NHL Hockey: Bruins at Mighty Ducks
WTBS	42		Mama's Family	Mama's Family	Roseanne	Roseanne	★★ "Amos & Andrew" (1993, Comedy) Nicolas Cage					★★ "The Delta Force" (1986, Adventure) Chuck Norris
AAE	43		Northern Exposure		Law & Order "Securitam"		Biography "Debbie Reynolds"		American Justice (R)		Sherlock Holmes Mysteries (R)	Law & Order "Aftershock"
CNN	45	23	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand: Fortune	Sports	Moneyline
CON	46	29	R. Townsend	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	I Night Stand	Comedy Net 3	Foxworthy	Brett Butler	South Park	Upright	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	49		New House	Fix-n-Line	Gamma Shetter		Wild Discovery: Cheetahs		Discover Magazine (R)		Egypt Uncovered (R)	Justice Files "Killer Kids" (R)
ESPN	51		Up Close	Sportscenter		PBA Bowling	Rochester Open (Live)		Wonderful World of Golf		Billiards		Sportscenter
LIFE	52		Ellen	Ellen	Party of Five	Deal With It	Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		"Life of the Party: The Pamela Harriman Story" (1996, Drama)		Sex Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	53		(5:30) Jams	Countdown	Fanatic	Beavis-Butt.	Eye Spy Video	Say What?	Total Request Live (In Stereo)		True Life	Revue	Cut (In Stereo)	Lovaline
NICK	55		Figure It Out	Secret of Alex	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Allan Strange	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Happy Days	Laverne	I Love Lucy	Bewitched
SCIFI	56		Quantum Leap		Sightings	Star Trek: "Mudd"			★ "Rouge II: the Second Story" (1967, Horror) Aya Gross			Sightings	Star Trek
TLC	57	28	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours "Hospital"		Extreme Machines "Tanks"		What Happened? (R)		Driver (R)	Extreme Machines "Tanks"
TNT	58		Babylon 5 "Legacies"		ER "Homa" (In Stereo)		★★ "The Golden Child" (1986, Comedy) Eddie Murphy				Babylon 5 (R) (In Stereo)	"The Time Guardian" (1987)
USA	59		Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Xena: Warrior Princess		Weiker, Texas Ranger		★★★ "Dash Becomes Her" (1992, Comedy) Meryl Streep			New York Undercover
HBO	60		(4:45)		★ "Anaconda" (1997) Jennifer Lopez. PG-13		★ "Batman & Robin" (1997) Arnold Schwarzenegger. PG-13				Oz "To Your Health" (In Stereo)	Chris Rock	Kiss the Girls
MAX	61		(4:45) "Steel"		★½ "Spill" (1996, Brian Bosworth. PG-13		★★★½ "Born on the Fourth of July" (1989, Drama) Tom Cruise. (In Stereo)				★★½ "Murder in Mind" (1997) Jimmy Smits
SHOW	65		(5:30) "Adventures-Mo"		Outer Limits: Mary-25		★★ "Sunset Park" (1996, Comedy-Drama) Rhea Perlman.				"Hit and Run" (1997, Suspense) Kari Salin.		Compromising

HSCN 4 Hearing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	16	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	18	UVC-TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/4U Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	21	Govt. to Govt.
6	PBS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	23	Sundance
8	UPN1/20 Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	25	CTN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	26	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
16	WB/New Haven	33	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

Cathy By Cathy Guisewite

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Liberty Meadows By Frank Cho

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Spunk By Mike LaRiccia

Sven By Stephen Higgins

Kampus Kids By Adam Soutiere

Horoscopes

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — You won't have a lot of time to make the decisions that the day demands. Get yourself up and active as soon as possible.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You may discover that someone who has been close to you for some time can actually be more than just a friend. Discuss your plans openly.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You will have to tread very carefully today if you expect to combine business and pleasure with any degree of success. Much depends on timing.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You may be tempted to form a new union — either personally or professionally — with someone who has rubbed you the wrong way for a long time.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — Take care you're not too overbearing today. You'll want to be sure that others get the job done, but do so with style.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — The time has come for you to do things in ways that are expected of you. Don't rock the boat today.

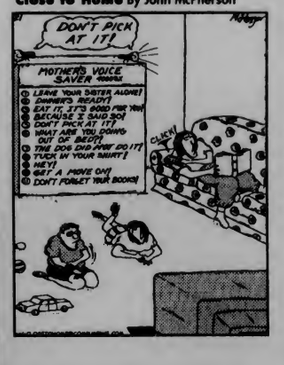
ARIES (March 21–April 19) — Someone may upset you today unintentionally, but the fact that it happens gives you food for thought. Perhaps your plans must change.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — Although you're in the mood for more freedom today, you may not know how to get it. Follow unwritten signs to achieve your goal.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — A certain sign is likely to be sent your way during the first part of the day. Do you have what it takes to respond in kind?

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — This is a good day for you to take on more responsibility. You'll have the chance to show what it means to take care of others.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — Don't be put off by cries of incompatibility today. The truth is that you can get along well with almost anyone if you try hard enough.



VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Don't try to fill your head with too many facts and figures today. "Average" is not for you. Follow your instincts and you'll surely excel.

Quote of the Day

"MOST people walk on the right!"

–Overheard

Close to Home By John McPherson

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Chicken Breast Sandwich
Sloppy Joe
Ravioli Alfredo

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Broccoli & Cauliflower Casserole
Mesquite Chicken Sandwich

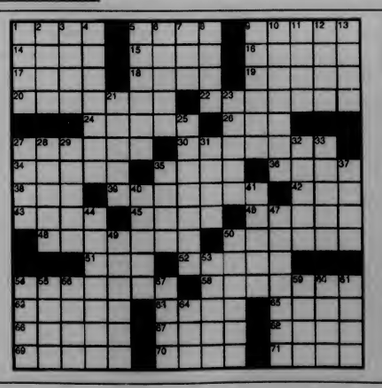
Worcester
LUNCH
Grilled Steak Sandwich
Homemade Chicken Pot Pie
Rotini/Tomato Meat Sauce
Rotini/Tomato Lentil Sauce

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Cauliflower Eggplant Casserole
Pastabilities
Cheese Lasagna

Hampshire
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Barbecued Pork on a Bun
Grilled Cheese Sandwich

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Fried Shrimp Dinner

Berkshire
LUNCH
Grilled Steak Sandwich
Mesquite Chicken Sandwich
Rotini/Tomatoe Lentil Sauce



DINNER
Roast Turkey
Handcut Cod Sub
Penne with Tomatos & Spinach
Pastabilities

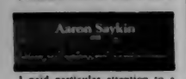
ACROSS
1 Enthusiasm
5 Isaac's son
9 Start
14 Seabird
15 Stare
16 Entertain
17 Sharp taste
18 Act regal
19 "Hit"
20 Supposed
22 Hone
24 Theme
26 "I — Camera"
27 Fail bloomers
30 Like an expired license
34 Lip cosmetic
35 Run away
36 — and gloom
38 Spoil
39 Preparing for publication
42 Zee's predecessor
43 Mimics
45 Pitcher Hershiser
46 Cures
48 Authorize
50 Eye part
51 Tack on
52 Twitch
54 Fringed carriages
58 Type of illusion
62 Gross
63 "Present!"
65 Alaskan city
66 Choreographer de Mille
67 — and anon
68 Writer Wiesel
69 Aquarium fish
70 Pops
71 Look for

DOWN
1 Greek letter
2 Important periods
3 Beattie namesakes
4 Peas and beans
5 Herons
6 Riyadh resident
7 Cobbler's tool
8 Luau strings
9 Grand — (island)
10 Precious stone
11 Swallow rapidly
12 Man or Wight
13 Electric sign
21 Telegraph inventor
23 Refuge
25 Coffee-makers' needs
27 Taj Mahal site
28 Silent
29 Type of pole
31 Astronaut Armstrong
32 Des Moines resident
33 Sir Arthur Conan —
35 Blaze
37 Plateau
40 Not stylish
41 Phantom
44 More thinly scattered
47 Royal furs
49 Black Sea port
50 Frances
53 — over: studied
54 "Out, Tabby!"
55 Beseech
56 Talk wildly
57 Outbuilding
59 Songwriter Porter
60 Pierre's girlfriend
61 Onion's cousin
64 Zsa Zsa's sister

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

C	A	M	P		G	R	I	M		S	T	E	P
U	S	U	R	P		A	Y	L	A		A	P	L	O
R	I	S	E	R		L	E	I	S		T	A	B	S
E	D	I	T	I	F	I	C	E		A	K	A		N	A	T
D	E	C	A	D	E			D	E	A	N
		B	E	A	C	H		B	R	A	F	T	S
Y	E	W		S	L	I	D		O	P	E	R	A
U	T	E		R	E	U	N	I	O	N		R	I	P
K	N	A	V	E		B	I	T	C	H		S	O	S
S	A	L	I	V	A		S	K	A	T	E
		T	A	U	N	T		R	I	A	T	A	S
S	H	H		E	G	O		M	E	A	S	U	R	E
W	A	I	T		O	T	T	O		R	E	N	E	W
A	V	E	S		L	A	O	S		A	L	I	N	E
P	E	R	K		A	I	L	E	S		S	C	A	R

Night Editor Lorraine Kennedy
Photo Technician Stacy Cohen
Copy Editor Joseph D. Savitch
Production Supervisor Joylyn Lombard
Production Staff Angie Annese, Soldy Am



SPORTS

Wednesday, October 21, 1998 — The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Big Mac on TV, Wells not so fat, Torre gets kudos

For a brief second Monday night, I thought my eyes were deceiving me. Then it began to sink in. This is what happened:

I was watching the New England Patriots lose to the New York Patriots (I mean Jets... well, no... Patriots), and

I paid particular attention to a McDonald's commercial that I thought I had seen before. You know, the one where Busch Stadium (home of the St. Louis Cardinals) is cheering "Big Mac, Big Mac." So anyway, the last time I watched this commercial, I thought that Mark McGwire was going to appear. After all, the fans were chanting his name. But I was relieved to see that he did not succumb to the "Dumb Endorsement Syndrome." Instead, Sammy Sosa appeared on the screen and asked, "Did somebody say McDonald's?" while biting into... well, what else... a Big Mac.

I actually found the first commercial to be funny as I thought to myself, "Hey Saykin, you fool, did you really think Big Mac would appear in a dumb commercial?" Well, Monday night, I was aghast to see Mark McGwire appear in the follow up to that advertisement speaking that patented line of "Did somebody say McDonald's?"

Why in God's name would he sell out like that? He even told reporters that he will be very careful about what products he would choose to endorse... but McDonald's? Why? Perhaps they offered his pudgy son free extra value meals for a year. Perhaps not.

I know that he may have been a perfect fit from McDonald's point of view (After all, he has the same nickname as the chain's most famous burger). But from what I have seen over the years, athletes tend to look ridiculous in any commercial of that genre. Not to mention the fact that the athlete is endorsing food which is extremely unhealthy for children. Now every kid in America is going to beg mommy or daddy for food which will make them as fat as McGwire's son. Trust me on this one. I ate at Mickey D's all the time when I was a porky little lad back in Holyoke. I've since trimmed down a bit, mostly because I refuse to eat garbage from fast food restaurants (except Taco Bell... nothing is better than a bean burrito when you have the munchies).

Even though you may have sold out a bit, Big Mac, I still love 'ya. No one will ever hit 70 home runs in one season again. Ever!

In other happenings, the Yankees are on the brink of their second World Series title in three years. I've pretty much run out of bad things to say about them, but I will always crack a smile when I look on the cork board in the Collegian Sports cubicle. We have a front page of the Boston Globe sports section, on which David Wells is pictured. One of our writers (and it wasn't me, I swear) wrote above him in big red-marketed letters "Fatso! The fattest pitcher in baseball." As much as I hate Wells, I may have to give that distinction to Sox reliever Rich Garces. Now that's a fat (not to be confused with the ebonic adjective "phat") pitcher.

Although the Padres managed to pound Wells for five runs in Game 1 of the Series, their bullpen failed them miserably. After yanking starter Kevin Brown after he allowed two base runners in the seventh inning, San Diego skipper Bruce Bochy made the most costly managerial mistake of his career. Brown has been known to let runners on base, but has a reputation of pitching himself out of trouble. Bochy didn't give him a chance, and gave the Yankees a 9–5 advantage from a 5–2 deficit in a matter of minutes.

Kudos to Yanks manager Joe Torre. First of all, I like the guy because he's Italian. Second of all, he seems to make the right moves at the right time, e.g. Shane Spencer in the first round, "El Duque" in the ALCS, and Ricky Ledee in Games 1 and 2 of the Series. Can you say AL Manager-of-the-Year?... although Jimy Williams may give him a run for his money.

As the Fall Classic winds down, I only hope that the Padres show some signs of life in the Series. Last season we were spoiled by the seven-game thriller between the Indians and Marlins. Before last year, baseball fans had gone six years without a seven-game World Series. If George Steinbrenner can keep this Yankee team together (and he won't, I'm just speculating because it's my job), we may not have an exciting World Series for another six years.

And lastly, to more or less paraphrase Bob Ryan from his Boston Globe column on Saturday: The Yankees are almost in a lose-lose situation this October. If they lose to San Diego, 1998 will be one of the greatest disappointments ever. And if they win, so what? Everyone expects them to win. There will only be a sense of relief when they win. Where's all the fun it that?

Aaron Saykin is a Collegian columnist.

Fowler continuing standout year

Junior goalie succeeds despite soccer's struggles

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

It is not easy to maintain a personal level of excellence when your team has compiled a 1–11–2 record, with two weeks remaining in the season.

Massachusetts men's soccer goalkeeper Todd Fowler has risen to this occasion, however, and performed in a stellar fashion throughout a disappointing campaign.

Fowler, a Chicago native came into his own last season when he assumed the starting job in net and has performed admirably in a dismal season for UMass this season.

The junior keeper has compiled a .730 save percentage, while collecting a 1.88 goals against average, and he has earned 2 shutouts this season.

Fowler's 5.01 saves per game average places him at 20th in the nation, and his 160 career goals against ranks as 10th best in UMass history.

Perhaps Fowler's toughest challenge to date has been mentally preparing for competition this season, as often times the team has not supported his tremendous efforts in net.

"This season has been frustrating for so many reasons for the whole team," Fowler said. We have great team unity this season, and we expected to fare so much better than we have.

"I still have to be ready to play my best and help the team win every time out no matter what our results have been."

One theme this season has been the Minutemen's inability to win close games. Fowler's play in net is one of the reasons the games have been so competitive.

"Todd is a leader on the field," Massachusetts Coach Sam Koch said. "He motivates the guys around him, and they want to earn the wins for him. Certainly his play and attitude have kept us in a lot of matches."

Fowler's mental strength has been built up in part because he knows what it to like to sit on the sidelines and observe others playing in front of him.

"When I first got here, I wasn't even traveling with the team," Fowler said. "I was third on the depth chart, but I worked hard because I desperately wanted to compete."

Fowler's transition from a bench warmer to starter came full circle seven games into last season on Sept. 20, when he stepped into the starting role against perennial power Boston University.

Fowler was superb in net on that afternoon, propelling the Minutemen to a stirring 2–1 overtime win.

"That BU game was probably my most memorable as a member of this team," Fowler said. "I was given the chance to start, and luckily I made the most of it."

One of the unusual qualities about Todd is that he has no unique rituals of preparations that he performs before or after games.

"Every other goalie I know asks me about what superstitions I have," Fowler said. "They are always disappointed that I don't have any.

"My high school coach once convinced me to wear a penny in my sock, but it didn't help, so that went out the window."

Fowler is diversified in that he has stood out in various sports throughout his athletic career.

He was a letterman in football, lacrosse and skiing at Shenendehowa High School, and continued his skiing endeavors at UMass.

Fowler was a member of the UMass ski team two years at UMass, an experience he values tremendously.

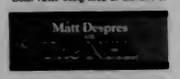
"Skiing is one of my passions, but it became too much to try and balance two sports and academics at the same time," Fowler said.

Fowler, a school of management major, is greatly committed to accomplishing his goals in the long term off the playing field.

"Thus far my time here at UMass has been extremely valuable in terms of achieving success later in life," Fowler said. "The atmosphere here really provides me with an opportunity to think for myself and act responsibly. My years here have been very positive."

In regards to rest of the season, Fowler and his mates will attempt to win their remaining games, and move on to greener pastures in the coming seasons.

"This team is capable of turning our fortunes around next year," Fowler said. "I certainly look forward to being a part of it.



COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Todd Fowler has been instrumental in keeping the men's soccer team competitive in their close losses this season.

Tampa's outlook changes abruptly

Phil Esposito might want to think about adding the number of his local pizza joint to the speed dial of his telephone this weekend. And, while he's at it, invite brother Tony Esposito over for a slice of pie or two. Or maybe he can sit back, pop a tape of the 1970 Boston Bruins in his VCR, and reminisce of his days as a stud center with the Black and Gold. After being fired as the GM of the Tampa Bay Lightning late last week, he is free to do whatever he wants.

Why the ousting? Tampa was in need of a major shakeup, and new owner Art Williams felt that this was it. Even though the Lightning finished a dismal 17–55–10 last season, and stumbled out to a 0–4 start this year, Williams says those elements did not factor into his decision making. Yeah, right. Art, if you happen to pick this up today, just give it to us straight from now on, OK? He says that he was uncomfortable with the power structure, which resulted in the firing of the brothers Esposito and the promotion of coach Jacques Demers to coach/GM.

So what happens now? Like any rebuilding process, a lot of waiting. But the storms collecting over the Ice Palace may blow away sooner than you think. Tampa has a very capable goaltending tandem of Bill Ranford and Darren Puppa, two tested, proven and still solid goalies in this league. Up front they have the young former "Legion of Doom" member Mikael Renberg, who is complimented by the likes of Craig Janney, Stephane Richer, Wendel Clark and Brian Bradley — an aging group, but far from being grumpy old men.

The biggest motivation points will come from two very different people, however. Vincent Lecavalier, the first overall pick in the 1998 entry draft, has shown signs of promise, and Tampa will look for him to produce early and often. John Cullen, who in the most inspirational of stories has defeated cancer and found his way back onto the Lightning roster, won't even have to score this year to make his presence felt. Hand him the Masterton Trophy for dedication now. A combination of the young and the old must come together to make this team fly, or at least get off of its back and learn to walk again.

And so Tampa goes, holding hands, skipping down the yellow brick road, hoping to find a good season behind the curtain instead of a dirty old man pretending to be an owner.

• Any true hockey fan has to love this. On Friday night, when the puck is dropped between Detroit and Toronto, Scotty Bowman will be back where he belongs: behind the Red Wing bench. That's right, the winningest coach in NHL history is back and ready to go. Bowman, who had an angioplasty back in July to clear an artery, and then a knee replacement in August, has been cleared by doctors to re- join his team in their hunt for a third consecutive Stanley Cup. Bowman is the owner of a 1,057–484–277 regular season record and a 194–112 playoff mark, with Stanley Cup rings for all but two of his fingers.

•While it may not be on the level of Babe Ruth haunting the Red Sox, another professional athlete has managed to come back and haunt his old stomping grounds. The newest addition to this club is Edmonton forward Bill Guerin, who last year was traded from New Jersey along with Valeri Zelepukin to Edmonton in exchange for Jason Arnott. Guerin, who spent his first six years as a Devil, scored on the man advantage in the first period of the contest, and then finished off his former mates by beating Martin Brodeur with less than three minutes to go in the game. It was his first game back in New Jersey. Gotta love it...

•And without further ado, it's time for my generically titled "Picks of the week."

•First, a huge applause for Boston's Lord Byron Dafoe and Rob Tallas, who led the Bruins to their first three wins by means of shutout, and who are also helping us Beantowner's to forget the dark days of Jon Casey and his "Amazing Technicolor Five-hole."

•The game I'll be watching, other than the Bruins of course, is Washington at Buffalo on Friday night. Last year's Eastern Conference finals rivals will throw strong goaltending at each other — Dominik Hasek and Olaf Kolzig — along with punches, goals and anything else they can find. This should be an exciting game and could either way. As much as I hate to say it, I take Washington by one. The goaltenders decide this one.

And lastly, for old time's sake, check out Edmonton at Long Island tonight at 7:30. Pretend it's the early 1980's when these two teams were still among the elite squads in the NHL. In a world of crappy expansion clubs and diluted talent, it's the best we can do.

Matthew Despres is a Collegian staff member.

UM volleyball falls short to UConn 3–0

By Paul Teves
Collegian Staff

The word of the night for the Massachusetts volleyball (8– 12, 5–5 in the Atlantic 10) team was "win" when they met Connecticut in Curry Hicks Cage last night for a non– conference tilt. The Minutewomen were in search of a win to stop the recent slump.

The Minutewomen entered their date with UConn, having lost their last two games to Xavier and Dayton, two big Atlantic 10 Conference rivals.

It was not meant to be for the Minutewomen who came up just a couple of points short in each game, en route to losing the match 16–14, 15–10, 15–11.

The Minutewomen were out hit and were outplayed thoroughly by the Huskies (15–9, 4–0 in the Big East). The UMass attack and hitting was gross. Besides Jill Meyers, the rest of the team struggled. Rebecca Hasson hit the ball well at times, and Kari Hogancamp began to heat up when it was too late.

"The reason they were able to out hit us was because they have four quality outside hitters, and tonight we had one and a half," UMass Coach Bonnie Kenny said.

The Minutewomen, who were underdogs tonight to the No. 1 rated team in the Big East Conference, started off well. They jumped out to a 7–3 lead against UConn in the first game, but the Huskies spent the entire game creeping back until they fisal over took the Minutewomen 12–11.

UConn struggled to put the first game away as they struggled with service errors. With the game tied 14–14, UConn's, senior outside hitter Annette Ryan took over by netting the last two kills, which lead the Huskies to a 16–14 first game win.

Already down one game to none, the Minutewomen hung tough, but when UConn was struggling to get the ball over UMass failed to capitalize. The Minutewomen committed numerous unforced errors and a number of service errors.

"Choking, we came in and served for 30 minutes before we played, we served everyday in practice, we served this morning. We've got to be able to make it. It's pretty easy to hit the little ball over that net, there really is no excuse for missing serves," Kenny said.

When the errors began to mount for UMass in game two the Minutewomen fell behind 14–7. Despite a small run by

Turn to VOLLEYBALL, page 7

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

The volleyball team had New England rivals UConn visit this weekend.

Men's tennis beats A–10 foe

By Matt Frascella
Collegian Staff

It had been one week since the Massachusetts men's tennis team had played in a team competition. That match was a 6– 1 loss to the University of Connecticut, and it has been on their minds for that entire week.

The UMass squad (4–2) may have found the perfect formula for forgetting about that match, in the form of doing some drubbing of their own.

Yesterday the host Minutemen defeated its first conference foe, the University of Rhode Island, by a score of 6–1. The win was key in developing a strong conference record, the benchmark by which the Massachusetts team will be ranked in the Atlantic 10 tournament at the end of the year.

"Every time we play an A–10 match it is extremely important," said UMass head coach Judy Dixon. "URI has been one of those programs trying to go from the bottom of the pile to the middle of the A–10. We are a program that is looking to go from the middle of the pile to the top."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Rufino Navarro

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Todd Cheney

The win featured a sweep in all three doubles matches and individual victories in the Nos. 2 through 6 seeds. The doubles teams were impressive in all three matches.

"I was pleased with doubles," said Dixon. "The doubles point was crucial because it set the tone for the match. Bo Navarro and Rob Manchester played well together. They beat the No. 2 Providence College team this weekend and that helped to give them confidence."

The tandem of Todd Cheney and Eric Reblin playing at No. 2 doubles scored a 8–3 win, as did the team of Josh Bainton and Todd Champeau who won at No. 3 doubles. That No. 3 doubles team has been productive, winning three straight contests for the UMass.

Continuing his success for the Minutemen was senior Todd Cheney. Cheney won big for the maroon and white with a 6–3, 6–1 victory at the number two singles position.

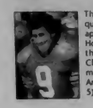
"It was a big win for us because it was an A–10 match," said Cheney. "We should win 6–1. They are scrappy and you have to go out and take care of them right away."

The one-sided victory was important for the Minutemen as they look to reestablish themselves in the wake of the UConn loss.

"How we win this match is important," said Dixon. "The fact that we won this match 6–1 is decisive."

The win improves UMass to a perfect 3–0 at home and 1–2 on the road, but with the bulk of their games on the road this raises some concerns for the team.

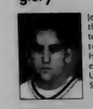
"It is easier to play here," said Dixon. "We have a wonderful facility. It is very draining to play away from home. I worry about it."



The Minutemen will return to action at home next Tuesday when they take on St. John's.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN



Volume CIV Issue 32 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Thursday, October 22, 1998

Flicks for fall

The Valley should quench your movie appetite this fall as Hollywood rolls out the big names. Check out our fall movie preview (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Skating towards glory

Jeff Blanchard and the UMass hockey team take to the ice tonight for a Hockey East conference date with UMass Lowell (see Sports, page 16).

WORLD

Israeli, Palestinians stall during talks

QUEENSTOWN, Md. (AP) — Israel, frustrated by a lack of progress in Mideast peace talks, yesterday made preparations to depart. "It's not just a threat," a senior Israeli official told The Associated Press.

"We are considering it and we've made all the preparations," the official said.

The talks snagged yesterday as Israel and the Palestinians traded accusations for the failure to arrive at a West Bank accord during the first six days of the summit, which has been shepherded by President Clinton.

Israel said the Palestinians had failed to fulfill their commitments to upgrade security and amend anti-Israel statements in the covenant of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

The Palestinians, in turn, accused the Israelis of "political blackmail" and of introducing new demands at the last minute as the United States prepared to present a plan to press both sides to bridge gaps.

NATION

Texans flee flood as rivers rise

WHARTON, Texas — Floodwaters crawling with ants and snakes advanced on this farm town yesterday, forcing police to go door-to-door to urge people to flee after a week of storms that killed 22 people.

Hundreds heeded warnings to leave before roads are washed out by the swift-flowing Colorado River, and the mayor declared a dusk-to-dawn curfew.

People without transportation were taken on school buses to nearby El Campo, where the civic center was set up as a shelter. Up to 40 percent of Wharton's 10,200 people were asked to evacuate as the town became the latest target of floods from record rain that began Saturday in central and south Texas.

Preliminary estimates put the cost of damage at $400 million as President Clinton approved a request from Gov. George W. Bush to declare 20 counties federal disaster areas, making them eligible for federal aid.

In Wharton, 55 miles southwest of Houston, the Colorado climbed above flood stage and was forecast to crest at 50 feet this evening. That would be 11 feet above flood stage and top the record 46.1-foot mark set during Dec. 1991 floods.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	day	day
HIGH: 48 LOW: 27	HIGH: 48 LOW: 35	HIGH: 62 LOW: 38

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds.....page 14
Comics.....page 15
Crossword.....page 15
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 14
News.....page 3
Sports.....page 16

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

SGA favors additional Orchard Hill purple lot

By Julie Fialkow
Collegian Staff

Only two motions were passed at the University of Massachusetts Student Government Association (SGA) Senate meeting last night.

The first motion passed was to create a purple parking lot in the field adjacent to Dickinson Hall in Orchard Hill.

Senator Brendan Hart (Central, at large), Senator Ari Molinsky (Van Meter), and Governor Andrew Helman (Central Area) all spoke before the senate about the merits of building the lot. They also explained the work already in progress around the issue.

"The problem with parking is it takes an hour to find a spot. We have been working with director of parking services Mike Brennan," Molinsky said.

According to Molinsky, $30,000 is available from parking services to begin construction on the 50–space lot.

However, at a space allocation meeting last week, the construction proposal from Brennan was rejected because according to Molinsky, "they didn't really know if students wanted it."

Helman added there is an urgency for a decision to be made about the lot because paving companies will not do the job if the ground is frozen.

Helman said there is only a month before the temperature will force the project to be pushed into the spring. The next space allocation meeting is in two weeks.

Molinsky added the project would take about one day to complete.

Opposing the motion, Senator Asif Sayani (Grayson), said the proposed area for the purple lot is used by Orchard Hill students as a recreational area.

"There are always softball games and football games in that area. I know people are playing in that field. It would be convenient, but [Orchard Hill residents] appreciate that area. You have to consider everyone in Orchard Hill, not just people with cars," said Sayani.

Secretary of public relations and policy Braun Tamulis questioned Sayani's reasoning.

"Is it more important to walk 20 minutes to find a parking space, or to find recreation? Safety is more important," he said.

Senator Brandon Beane (Commuter Area) also spoke on behalf of the motion.

"[Molinsky, Helman, and Hart] have researched this, they have spoken to their constituents," Beane said "They have researched this, not Senator Sayani."

The other motion passed was to approve committee appointments.

Other minutes of the meeting included a presentation from Patricia Vandenberg, director of public affairs, about the new University of Massachusetts logo.

The logo, she said is meant to reflect, "the nature of this University, and what is good and special about UMass."

"We did research on where UMass exceptional? We found a few key themes and messages about UMass," she said.

Vandenberg explained how the university was the first to advocate that education need not create a barrier between the 'ivory tower' and the real needs of society.

"Knowledge is being created here," said Vandenberg.

The past logos at the University were chaotic and there was no real theme, said Vandenberg.

She also said it is important to market the University by having s clear, recognizable symbol to represent it.

"We asked people to vote on the logo, they said the one we chose was stylish and modern, yet traditional and prestigious looking."

The new logo is officially registered and trademarked.

Another speaker at the meeting was the interim Vice Chancellor of Student Affairs, F. Javier Cevallos.

"I have deep respect for what you do as a governing student body," he said "it is very important for us to hear what you as a senate want to do."

Assistant professor John Barrett dies

University of Massachusetts visiting assistant professor Jonathan Barrett, 34, of 1040 N. Pleasant, Amherst, died Oct. 18 of a heart attack.

Barrett was a British citizen who received a bachelor's of arts degree with honors from Oxford University, a master's degree from the University of Warwick and a Ph.D. from the University of California, Los Angeles. He was a visiting professor with the philosophy department since the fall of 1996.

Barrett leaves his parents John and Annette Barrett of London, and his life partner, Claire Campbell of Amherst.

A Unitarian service will be held at the Dickinson Streeter Funeral Home, 305 State St., Springfield at 10 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 24.

— Lorraine Kennedy

Candidate Dean Cook to talk at CRC meeting

By Julie Fialkow
Collegian Staff

Dean Cook, the Libertarian candidate for governor of Massachusetts, will speak tonight at a meeting for the University of Massachusetts Cannabis Reform Coalition (CRC).

Cook, who spoke to students outside the William D. Mullins Center during the Oct. 13 gubernatorial debate, will talk about his support of marijuana legalization tonight.

The meeting will be held at 7 p.m. in the Colonial Lounge and is open to the public.

Terry Franklin, press spokesperson for the CRC, emphasized the point that Cook is the only candidate who has made himself available to speak to students during this election.

Franklin said Cook was looking for a space to speak with students, so the CRC invited him to speak at their meeting.

"The Libertarian party is the only party that supports us. Dean Cook has spoken here twice before, last spring and at the debate," Franklin said.

Franklin outlined one aspect of Cook's campaign platform.

"Last time [Cook] spoke, the first thing he said he'd go do is let everyone out of jail that was there on a non–violent drug offense," Franklin said.

Cook spoke at last year's

Turn to COOK, page 2

Glenn dropped from NASA experiment

By Paul Recer
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — John Glenn has been quietly dropped from an experiment to test effects of the hormone melatonin on sleep in space.

The test of melatonin, which is linked to sleep, is among three objectives in a sleep-disorder study that involves Glenn and another crew member in a space shuttle flight to be launched next week. The 77-year-old astronaut will continue with the other elements of the sleep study and will conduct about 10 experiments in orbit, officials said yesterday.

Dr. Charles A. Czeisler, a Harvard Medical School researcher supervising the experiment, said Glenn twice took melatonin during the ground-based part of the sleep study.

Afterward, the scientist said he observed "a physical finding" that would exclude Glenn from taking melatonin in space. He said the conclusion was based on experiment criteria filed with the Food and Drug Administration.

"I later learned that the physical finding was well known to NASA and had been for some time," said Czeisler.

NASA officials refused to discuss the "physical finding," contending that as part of Glenn's medical record it is protected under privacy regulations.

Czeisler said he suggested that NASA apply to the FDA for a waiver to allow Glenn's full participation in the study, but space agency officials were cool to the idea. Instead, said Czeisler, Glenn was simply excluded from taking the melatonin pill.

The loss of melatonin data from Glenn is not a serious setback for the experiment since his role in the study was mostly to examine the effects of advanced age on the ability to sleep in space, said Czeisler.

Glenn will participate in all other parts of the sleep test, including swallowing a dime-sized pill containing a radio transmitter, giving urine and blood samples and wearing electronic gear to measure brain waves, respiration, pulse, heartbeat, hand motion and eye movement.

Glenn said earlier this year that he would be a full participant in the sleep experiment. He did, in fact, twice take capsules of melatonin. It was not until Aug. 24 that Czeisler and the agency determined that Glenn would not take the hormone in space. In briefings and interviews as recently as this week, NASA officials made no mention of the change. NASA officials admitted it only after reports published by Newsweek and The New York Times. Peggy Wilhide, the NASA associate administrator, said the agency routinely withholds information about revised medical experiments aboard the space shuttle in order to protect the astronauts' privacy.

ROBERTO DELGADO / COLLEGIAN

Menacing clouds

The view from the Morrill Science center provided a breathtaking view of the sunset yesterday afternoon.

Local law enforcement officers to pose as liquor store workers

By Lorraine Kennedy
Collegian Staff

Liquor store owners have paired up with local law enforcement officials to develop a program to deter minors from purchasing alcohol.

The Cops in Shops program uses undercover officers to stop underage alcohol buyers.

"[It] works to address the issue of minors purchasing alcohol by placing undercover officers posing as store employees in liquor stores," according to a press release from the Hampshire County Human Services Department.

Officers are present in participating liquor stores in order to assist the owners with "suspicious licenses" and also to apprehend adults of at least the 21–year–old legal drinking age who attempt to procure alcohol for minors, said Amherst Chief of Police Don Maia.

Stores participating in the program display signs on their windows and refrigerators stating: "WARNING: Police Officers May Be Posing As Store Employees."

According to Massachusetts law, anyone under age 21 who attempts to purchase alcohol can be fined up to $300.

Any person who transfers, alters or defaces a Massachusetts driver's license or uses false identification can be fined up to $200 or imprisoned for up to three months or both. Upon conviction, the underage person's driver's license will be suspended for one year.

Adults of the legal age who purchase alcohol for minors can be fined up to $2000, imprisoned for not more than six months, or both, according to information from the press release.

Due to the effectiveness of the Cops in Shops program, which began in late August, it will be continued indefinitely, according to Maia.

In addition, Maia alluded that local bars may participate in the program as well.

"There have also been requests by bar owners to move [the program] into the bars," Maia said. "All are considering it."

The program is funded by a grant from the Safe Roads program, a regional traffic safety program which aims to prevent traffic crashes and their resulting injuries and fatalities.

105th Congress ends in conflict

By Cassandra Burrell
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The 105th Congress ended yesterday with Republicans and Democrats still in an ideological and partisan stalemate over the composition of the federal bench.

The Senate confirmed 17 of President Clinton's nominations to federal judgeships yesterday, bringing the total for the year to 65.

That's 29 more than last year, but Democrats continue to grumble over what they see as a politically motivated Republican confirmation slowdown that puts unreasonable demands on courtrooms already overloaded with cases.

Republicans say there is no partisan slowdown.

"This Congress has taken steps to significantly reduce the federal judicial vacancy rate to its lowest rate in almost a decade," Sen. Orrin Hatch (R-Utah), chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee, said yesterday. The committee takes the first look at

Turn to CONGRESS page 2

University nets grant from science association

By Elizabeth Johnson
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts was one of only 12 recipients from a pool of 130 to receive a four-year, $5.98- million grant from the National Science Foundation (NSF) recently.

For the past 25 years, the Material Research Science and Engineering Center (MRSEC), at UMass, has been funded by grants awarded by the NSF.

Each time a grant is offered there are always new institutions as contenders, and each time UMass has demonstrated its prowess in the field of polymer science.

"UMass has had outstanding high quality for a very long time, and still proved itself worthy," said Linda Slakey, dean of the College of Natural Sciences and Mathematics.

Grant proposals must specify certain areas of research which would benefit from the grant. One example is understanding surface properties of polymers, or linked sequences of molecules that form synthetic substances, such as nylons and plastics. The focus is nanotechnologies, which is essentially the construction of very small machines that work at the microscopic level and are used to study the surface of polymers.

Throughout the 25 years, UMass has received funding from the NSF two sequential programs have grown and expanded. The Material Research Laboratory (MRL) began in 1974 and developed into MRSEC by 1994, now focusing on areas of polymer science, engineering, chemistry, physics and chemical engineering. The originators of MRL have now since retired but managed to attract a new generation of leadership and staff that continue the work, producing research of a similar level of quality.

MRSEC also supports graduate and undergraduate education. In particular, a student-organized polyscience club works with middle school students to share knowledge of polymer science and make it accessible for all ages through a program called "Plastics All Around Us."

■ Congress

continued from page 1

presidential nominations and votes whether to reject them or to send them for a vote by the full Senate.

Appointed by the president, federal judges have lifetime tenure and can exert influence long after the appointing president leaves office.

Are Senate Republicans really dragging their feet? It depends on what numbers you're looking at.

Fifty of the 834 federal judgeships remain vacant. The Senate left town without passing judgment on four other candidates approved by the Judiciary Committee, including Judge Richard Paez, who was first nominated to 9th U.S. District Court of Appeals in San Francisco in January 1996. Those nominations — and two dozen never voted out of committee — died when the Senate adjourned. Clinton will have to resubmit them or substitutes when Congress reconvenes in January.

"Of all the indictments that add up to a do-nothing Congress, few failings are as harmful or an inexcusable as the snail's pace the Senate has taken in filling judicial vacancies," Sen. Patrick Leahy (D-Vt.), said. "We are not even keeping up with attrition."

Democrats say that in 1994, the year before Republicans regained control of the Senate, 101 judges were confirmed. In contrast, two federal appeals court circuits have had to cancel hearings over the last couple of years because of vacancies.

And the confirmation process is taking longer, Democrats say. In 1994 and 1995, an average of 86 days to 87 days passed from a time a nomination was submitted until the Senate voted to confirm, Leahy aide David Carle said. Leahy said the number rose in 1996 "to a record 183 days on average."

"Last year the average number of days from nomination to confirmation rose dramatically once again," he said. "From initial nomination to confirmation, the average time it took for Senate action on the 36 judges confirmed in 1997 broke the 200-day barrier for the first time in history. It was 212 days."

Hatch said that during the 104th Congress' two-year session, when Republicans wielded control of both Houses for the first time in 40 years, 75 Clinton judges were confirmed. Republicans say that compares favorably with the 71 confirmed by the 101st Congress, when President Bush was in the White House and Democrats ruled the Senate.

During the 100th Congress, 84 Reagan nominees were put on the bench by a Democrat-majority Senate.

"Even if we were to stop holding nomination hearings — and we have not — I think you will see that our efforts compare quite favorably to other Congresses in terms of the number of judges confirmed at this point in the year, especially if you look at recent Democrat-controlled Congresses," Hatch said.

Republicans also point out that Clinton never submitted nominations for 29 vacancies.

"If and when the administration sends us qualified, non-controversial nominees, they will be processed fairly and promptly," Hatch said.

That's not to say, however, that the Judiciary Committee isn't taking a closer look at Clinton's candidates, Hatch said. Although judicial nominees routinely promise not to bring their political views into court, Republicans have express dismay over what they consider an inordinate number of liberal Clinton nominees, including some who go beyond interpreting the law and take it upon themselves to make public policy.

"Frankly, the record of activism demonstrated by so many of President Clinton's nominees calls for all the more vigilance in reviewing his nominees," Hatch said.

Breast cancer study seeks safe treatment

WASHINGTON (AP) — In the largest breast cancer study ever, government researchers are embarking next year on a multiyear project designed to find a safe drug to prevent the disease.

Tamoxifen, already widely used as a breast cancer treatment, is thought possibly to reduce in certain women the risk of getting breast cancer. But it comes with dangerous side effects, including an increased risk of uterine cancer.

The new National Cancer Institute study will compare tamoxifen with the osteoporosis drug raloxifen to see if raloxifen will do as good a job of preventing breast cancer, with fewer side effects.

■ Cook

continued from page 1

Extravaganja, a pro-cannabis culture celebration, on the Amherst Town Common in April.

Elaine Burchin, campaign manager for the Libertarian party of Massachusetts, said their party is a combination of both Democratic and Republican principles.

"When you look at Democrats, for example, they are pro- gay lifestyle, we favor that," she said, "But also we embrace smaller government like Republicans do."

Burchin said Libertarian ideas are based in the constitution.

"We say, 'Get out of our pockets and our bedrooms.' We believe in core constitutional beliefs," Burchin said.

Burchin said it is a misconception that Libertarians are anarchists.

"Unless there is coercive action, people should be able to do what they want. It is not anarchism," Burchin said. "We just believe people's individual rights should be respected."

Burchin also said Cook is the only candidate in this year's gubernatorial race who advocates for the right of gun ownership.

"We've wrapped up the votes of gun owners," she said.

Franklin recollected something Cook said backstage at Extravaganja, while police made several arrests.

"[Cook] said, 'If they had that much money to waste on something like this, [police] is a perfect case for a tax cut.' He was talking about the eight undercover officers, a couple of police on horses and a group of state reserve police in case there was trouble — they didn't use them though."

Franklin said the meeting will not only give a platform for Cook, but also help to boost the CRC's membership.

"We are trying to put a ballot question for the town government election in April. It will have to do with legalization of some sort," he said. "We need a lot of electoral support."

ROBERTO DELGADO / COLLEGIAN

Betcha' don't know where this is

A secret spot gave rise to artistic inspiration yesterday afternoon.

NEWS NEEDS WRITERS!

The News Department is now hiring reporters for various beats so now is the chance to get involved.

It's the best experience around and it's what you need to get internships or build your resume.

If you want to stand out to future employers then writing for Collegian News is the way to do it.

So come down to the Campus Center Basement 113 any afternoon and ask for Jill Carroll, news editor, and find out for yourself how fun it is to work for the Collegian.

In the Oct. 19 issue of the Daily Collegian Dan Deutsch, co-organizer for the Hillel House coffee house was not mentioned. Also, the program will be every other Tuesday. The Collegian regrets the errors.

Casino Night

FRIDAY
OCTOBER 23, 1998
Campus Center Auditorium
7:00 PM - 1:00 AM

BLACKJACK TABLES
ROULETTE TABLE
WHEEL OF FORTUNE

ADMISSION $5.00

TOMORROW

UMass Vote!

WELCOME HOME UMASS ALUMNI

Half of the proceeds from this event are going to the American Red Cross to aid the victims of Hurricane Georges.

The Office of Alana Affairs would like to recognize the following organizations for their support: Alumni Affairs, Campus Center Bluewall, Campus Center Hotel, and the UMass Daily Collegian.

UMASS
STUDENT TICKET PICK-UP SCHEDULE
10:00 AM - 2:00 PM - Campus Center Concourse

PICK-UP DATE	SPORT	DATE OF GAME/OPPONENT
Tues. Oct. 13, 1998	HOCKEY	OCT. 22 v UMASS-LOWELL
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	OCT. 16 v MIDNIGHT MADNESS
Mon. Oct. 19, 1998	HOCKEY	OCT. 30 v MERRIMACK
Mon. Oct. 26, 1998	HOCKEY	NOV. 1 v NEW HAMPSHIRE
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	NOV. 5 v CONVERSE ALL-STARS
Mon. Nov. 2, 1998	HOCKEY	NOV. 8 v HARVARD
	HOCKEY	NOV. 13 v MAINE
	HOCKEY	NOV. 14 v MAINE
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	NOV. 11 v MARATHON BASKETBALL
Mon. Nov. 9, 1998	HOCKEY	NOV. 21 v UNION
Mon. Nov. 23, 1998	HOCKEY	DEC. 5 v BOSTON UNIVERSITY
Mon. Nov. 30, 1998	HOCKEY	DEC. 13 v NEW HAMPSHIRE
Mon. Dec. 7, 1998	MEN'S BASKETBALL	DEC. 19 v DETROIT
Mon. Dec. 14, 1998	MEN'S BASKETBALL	DEC. 29 v DAVIDSON
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	JAN. 2 v VIRGINIA TECH
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	JAN. 5 v IONA
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	JAN. 13 v DUQUESNE
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	JAN. 16 v KANSAS
Mon. Jan. 18, 1999	HOCKEY	JAN. 23 v BOSTON UNIVERSITY
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	JAN. 26 v FORDHAM
	HOCKEY	JAN. 29 v BOSTON COLLEGE
Mon. Jan. 25, 1999	HOCKEY	FEB. 6 v MERRIMACK
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	FEB. 4 v RHODE ISLAND
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	FEB. 7 v ST. JOSEPH'S
Mon. Feb. 1, 1999	HOCKEY	FEB. 13 v NORTHEASTERN
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	FEB. 10 v ST. BONAVENTURE
Mon. Feb. 8, 1999	HOCKEY	FEB. 19 v ARMY
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	FEB. 20 v XAVIER
Mon. Feb. 15, 1999	HOCKEY	FEB. 27 v PROVIDENCE
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	FEB. 28 v TEMPLE

PICK-UP & GAME DATES SUBJECT TO CHANGE.
VALID UMASS STUDENT ID CARD NEEDED TO PICK-UP TICKETS. AUXILIARY FEE SHOULD HAVE ALREADY BEEN PAID.

ROBERTO DELGADO / COLLEGIAN

Get your behind to church

A low perspective on St. Brigids Roman Catholic church, during sunset, on Tuesday afternoon.

Gymnastics Moceanu sues to be legal adult

By Terri Langford
Associated Press

HOUSTON — Seventeen-year-old Olympic gymnast Dominique Moceanu is suing her parents for her independence, accusing them of squandering her earnings and robbing her of her childhood by pushing her relentlessly to succeed.

Moceanu ran away from home on Sunday, saying her parents argued with her for months and threatened to fire her beloved Romanian coach and have the woman deported.

She sued Monday in state court to be declared an adult, and got a court order keeping her parents away from her at least until a Nov. 11 hearing.

"I kill myself training and going to school, and what is he doing with my money?" Moceanu said in yesterday's Houston Chronicle, referring to her father. "They haven't been working since 1996. Where does their income come from? Me."

At a news conference yesterday, her father, Dumitru Moceanu, pleaded for her to come home and resume training.

"We love her very much," he said, choking back tears. "She's just a child, she's just a minor. I don't believe this comes from her. It comes from other people."

Normally, a child doesn't become an adult under the law until age 18. Moceanu won't turn 18 until Sept. 30. Being declared an adult would give her control over her earnings.

Moceanu's lawyer, Roy W. Moore, said neither he nor his client knows how much money she has earned from appearance fees and other sources or how much has been lost. Moore said a trust for Moceanu is gone, possibly used to bankroll a $4 million gym and other ventures of a business that he believes is now broke. Moceanu also complained that her relationship with her parents "always had to be about the gym."

"I would think, 'Don't you guys know anything besides gymnastics? Can't we go out for ice cream? Can't you be my mom and dad instead of me being your business?'" she said.

The gymnast also told the newspaper her father hit her a couple of times. Moceanu did not return calls for comment yesterday. Moceanu, born in Los Angeles to Romanian-immigrant parents, was at age 14 the youngest member of the 1996 U.S. Olympic team, and the pixie-like athlete helped the women's gymnastics team win a gold medal.

She hopes to compete in the world championships next year and possibly the Sydney Olympics in 2000.

Moceanu moved to the Houston area with her parents in 1990 so she could train with Bela Karolyi, the celebrated coach of Nadia Comaneci, Mary Lou Retton and Kerri Strug. After the 1996 Games, Karolyi retired from elite coaching.

ROBERTO DELGADO / COLLEGIAN

Downtown

An unknown figure departs from a restaurant in downtown Amherst Tuesday afternoon.

African allies prepare defense of Congo

By Angus Shaw
Associated Press

HARARE, Zimbabwe — Southern African military allies of embattled Congolese President Laurent Kabila began preparing yesterday for a prolonged and costly offensive against rebels in the dense eastern jungles of the country.

"We will not allow [Congo] to fall into the hands of those who have invaded it. Never, never," Zimbabwe's President Robert Mugabe said.

The announcement could lead to a major escalation of the conflict that began Aug. 2 with rebel advances aimed at toppling Kabila.

Kabila's allies — Namibia, Zimbabwe and Angola — made the decision yesterday in Harare. To date, their forces were concentrated in western Congo.

A Congolese rebel leader warned Kabila's allies to back off.

"They must know they cannot stop our struggle. This will be a long war," Arthur Ngoma, a leader of the rebel Congolese Democratic Coalition, told The Associated Press from the eastern rebel stronghold of Goma.

The Congolese rebels — ethnic Tutsis, disenchanted members of Kabila's army and opposition politicians — accuse Kabila of corruption, mismanagement and promoting tribalism.

Kabila says the rebels are puppets of Rwanda and Uganda, his erstwhile allies who installed him in power in May 1997 after an eight-month war against dictator Mobutu Sese Seko.

Seasonal rains that close many roads are imminent. Low cloud cover and tropical rainfall would also curtail the allies' advantage of air power, said Harare-based defense analyst Michael Quintana.

Zimbabwe has strike jets, helicopters, transport planes and armored cars backing about 13,000 troops in Congo, which formerly was called Zaire.

Mugabe spoke after chairing a three-hour meeting with Angolan President Eduardo dos Santos, Sam Nujoma of Namibia and top Kabila aide Victor Mpoyo. Kabila didn't attend, saying he was ill. Kabila's allies say they are bound by mutual membership along with Congo in the 14-nation Southern African Development community to protect a fellow government in trouble and maintain security in the region.

Zimbabwe on Tuesday acknowledged that 16 of its soldiers were captured by Congolese rebels in the eastern town of Kabalo, the first sign of allied involvement in that region.

Mugabe said President Yoweri Museveni of Uganda called him by telephone yesterday to say he would do his best to ensure their release.

Their capture followed the fall 11 days ago to rebels of Kindu, a strategically important town 235 miles southwest of Goma, the rebels' eastern headquarters.

Woman appointed head of FDA

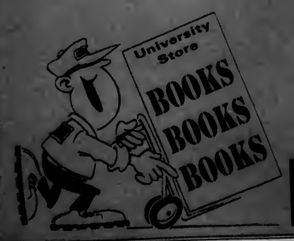
WASHINGTON (AP) — New Mexico cancer specialist Dr. Jane Henney was confirmed yesterday as the first woman commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration.

The voice vote to approve Henney came a day after Sen. Don Nickles (R-Okla.) said he supported the nomination. Nickles had delayed final action to dramatize his dislike of past FDA policies.

Henney succeeds Dr. David Kessler, who clashed with some Republicans over his aggressive efforts to stem underage smoking. Kessler left the post last year to become dean of the Yale University Medical School.

The 51-year-old scientist nominated in June to replace Kessler is vice president of the University of New Mexico's Health Sciences Center. She served as Kessler's deputy from 1992 to 1994, which gives her firsthand experience with the agency that regulates drugs, medical devices, foods and cosmetics that make up 25 percent of the national economy.

President Clinton said in a statement, "The nation now has an FDA commissioner who is committed to assuring that Americans have safe food, safe and effective drugs and medical devices and improved public health."



"Her expertise in science and technology and lifelong dedication to individual patients will enable her to strike the important balance between the need for timely approval of prescription drugs and medical devices, while maintaining safety and quality," Clinton said.

UNIVERSITY STORE'S Textbook Annex UMASS AMHERST

Please buy the textbooks you need today!

We will return unsold books to the publishers!

Be sure you have the books you need.

TEXTBOOK ANNEX
9AM-4PM Mon.-Fri.
545-3570

YOU'RE IN COLLEGE.
DO SOMETHING SMART.

Save $60 now on a Stratton/Okemo College Pass, just $299* until Dec. 1, 1998.

Ski and ride both Stratton and Okemo – two great Vermont mountains for one great price. It's only for full-time college students, and it's only available at this low price when you sign up by 12/1/98.

Bonus savings! Save an extra $10 off the single-day ticket price with your Stratton/Okemo College Pass during Holiday periods of 12/26/98-1/2/99 and 2/13-2/15/99.

Purchase your pass at either mountain today.
www.Stratton.com www.Okemo.com
1-800-STRATTON 1-800-78-OKEMO

STRATTON Vermont's Mountain Resort
OKEMO MOUNTAIN RESORT

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Do the minimum

Love is not always pleasant. People become misguided by their feelings, forcing their love on others who don't feel with the same intensity. They bombard the object of their affection with phone calls, gifts, poignant letters; in short, too much attention. Or parents, gripped with a hungry sort of love, obsess over their children's lives, wanting to know where they are every minute. It's like they want to eat the person alive.

Why can't a person just feel love, but do the minimum? Why must love be expressed so strongly? Some people don't want a dramatic, bodice-ripping relationship, they just want some affection. Perhaps if love were expressed in a different way, it would be well-received.

Tanya Mannes

For instance, my friend "Ann" is an intern at a school for disabled kids, making $6 an hour. Believe it or not, from this job, Ann has learned a lot about love. The school is short-staffed, which means she takes charge of a classroom of nine children who are supposed to have a full-time teacher. Ann wants to see if teaching special-ed is right for her as a career, so she doesn't mind getting the 'lowest level' kids, while the other interns want the cuter, livelier ones.

One boy in particular, in Ann's classroom, has cerebral palsy. Wheelchair-bound, like the rest, he can't do much physically. He's 15 and weighs 65 pounds, light even for his condition. His limbs are underdeveloped, and he is obviously weaker than anyone else in the room.

The boy's parents are the exception at this particular, progressive school. They wouldn't allow intravenous or gastrointestinal 'tube' feeding, like that most children with severe cerebral palsy rely upon. These kids have no swallowing reflexes; they can't control those muscles, so they live on fortified liquid food. This boy's parents "bird-feed" him, which can be considered child abuse. Ann and the teachers are forbidden to do it. His mother makes chicken, vegetables, potatoes, or other 'normal' food and purees it. Then she pours it down his throat as he coughs and gasps for air. The trouble with this method is, you never know how much of the home-cooked meal gets into his stomach, and how much gets into his lungs.

> "Some people don't want a dramatic, bodice-ripping relationship — they just want some affection."

While Ann feels frustrated on behalf of the boy, she won't let herself blame his parents. She just doesn't understand. The social worker counsels her, "These parents do so much more than most could imagine. They spend $26,000 a year just so he can go to a day school like this. They change and diaper him long after toilet training would have ended. He will never say a word. They probably blame themselves for the disease. Don't judge them."

For some parents, she goes on to explain, the only way to express their love is through food, because they certainly can't have heart-to-heart talks with a child like that. Not that it's a healthy way to love.

Ann says, "I rarely hear him make noise. I saw him cry softly to himself a few times, and I heard him laugh once. His physical therapist, I know it might sound perverted, but what she does is wrap his legs around hers, while they sit on the floor. I mean, she needs to be able to control his movements. Then she shakes him gently, holding him under the arms. Once she did this, and he smiled." Her eyes widen as she remembers.

"She shook him a teeny bit harder. Like most of the kids, he adores that physical stimulation, touching, moving. He suddenly let out a laugh, sort of like gurgling. Everybody in the room turned and looked at this kid. They were like, 'Wow.'"

Everyone in the room felt something important that day. They appreciated the laugh, gurgle or however it came out. This was not just a hunched-over student in a wheelchair, or a helpless "baby bird" in a nest. This was a 15-year-old boy who was starved for attention, for this touching. For him to know he was loved, nothing needed to be forced down his throat.

Like Sleeping Beauty awoke from her sleep with a gentle kiss, he 'awoke' with a gentle touch. Likewise, it's possible for anyone to love without hurting, to have without holding, affection and pain moment by moment balanced.

Tanya Mannes is a Collegian staff member.

Yankaphan

Y I'm in an abusive relationship. I've been in denial for quite a long time, but I'm ready to come clean and admit it to myself and to the people around me. I've been in this unhealthy relationship on and off for about 20 years.

Usually my partner treats me good from about January to July. During those months our relationship is filled with renewed hope and joy. Every year I feel like things might be changing between us. Then the second part of the year rolls around and things get ugly again. Once the summer starts coming to an end my partner begins to beat me daily.

The one thing that gives me hope and keeps me alive is knowing that I am not the only one in a relationship like this. Everyone else that has a relationship with this partner of mine receives these physical and emotional beatings just as badly as I do. My father, my uncle Fred and my roommate Jay receive these beatings. After all, when you grow up in Massachusetts you can't help but like the Boston Red Sox.

Dan Viens

During the month of September 1978 two extremely important events took place. On Sept. 6 of that month I was born and over the course of the entire month the Sox blew a huge lead in the American League East and eventually lost to the Yankees in a one-game playoff.

Anyone who is a Red Sox purist cringes whenever they see Bucky Dent hitting the homerun with what might have been a corked bat, over the Green Monster to win that historic game. That September God was sending me a sign. He was obviously telling me that I was born to be a Yankees fan and that I should forget about the hometown team.

The Red Sox have not won a World Series since 1918. However, unlike many other teams who have either gone a long time or haven't won it yet they have come very, very close many times.

In all the games the great Ted Williams played he never won a World Series. Carl Yazstremski and the Impossible Dream Team of 1967 lost in the "Fall Classic" to the St. Louis Cardinals. Then in 1975, in what was probably the greatest World Series ever played, they lost to the Cincinnati Reds.

None is worse however than the heartbreaking seven-game defeat to the New York Mets in 1986. Remember Mookie Wilson's pathetic grounder trickling through the legs of Bill Buckner in the 6th game of that series? My uncle Fred always says, "The Mets didn't win that World Series, the Red Sox lost it!"

After 1986 the Sox reached the playoffs in '88, '90, and '95. In each of these years they kept the postseason torture short and less painful by losing every single game.

Then this past season rolled around. They finally got a top-of-the-line free agent in Pedro Martinez and everyone was optimistic. They did indeed have a great season, toying with our emotions for 162 games. Then they proceeded to rip my heart out and throw it in a blender by losing three straight games and being ousted from the playoffs.

Once again, another spring, another summer and another fall WASTED by routing for the Boston Red Sox. Now I have to wait another six months until the season begins and then another six months after that to see if they even make the playoffs. Plus they will probably let one of the best first basemen in baseball, Mo Vaughn, go to some division rival.

Year after year this team is beating, using and abusing me. Then they make me endure another cold, hard, New England winter until that ray of hope begins to shine in April.

The worst part is that the New York Yankees, the Sox's arch rivals, have won the World Series like twenty five times. Every time the Yankees win you hear the collective slapping of every Red Sox fan's face. It all stems back to the selling of Babe Ruth by the Red Sox to the Yankees.

I thought, "Maybe I could become a Yankees fan." I put some time into it and realized that there is really no natural way for me to switch teams. Changing from Red Sox to Yankees is like changing one's sexual preference. It is impossible. Then all of a sudden I figured out what needed to be done in order for me to become a Yankees fan.

Someone in this world would have to invent a pill that could make me become a loyal follower of the Bronx Bombers. It could be called Yankaphan or something like that. After all, if chemists can make old guys get erections and grow hair with Viagra and Propecia then there must be something that they can do for me. There must be some pharmaceutical combination out there.

> "Changing from Red Sox to Yankees is like changing one's sexual preference. It is impossible."

The possibilities for this pill are endless: whether legal or illegal. If the pill were legal then doctors all over the place would be prescribing it. It would be like the ultimate Percocet. It would have the power to stop pain that had been going on for years in many Red Sox fans all over the place. Just imagine the plight of a 79-year-old Sox fan who only wants to see his beloved team hold up that championship trophy.

With Yankaphan, he could die happy. Considering the fact that there are other pharmaceuticals like Morphine, Valium and Nitrous Oxide, Yankaphan could be sold for hundreds of dollars on the black market. Seeing that the drug dealers would be making so much money, maybe they would stop selling other drugs like cocaine and heroin. This would clean up the streets.

If anyone has heard of such a thing or if you are a curious chemistry major pleas give me a call. I'd be willing to pay top dollar. Until then if you see me with bruises on my arm I'll probably tell you that I fell down the stairs, but you'll all really know that they came from the Boston Red Sox.

Dan viens is a UMass student

Reality check, ladies

Today is National Young Women's Day of Action. The Day of Action commemorates the death of Rosie Jimenez, who was the first known woman to die from an illegal abortion after Congress passed the Hyde Amendment, which denies women federal Medicaid funding for abortions.

Rosie Jimenez died with a $700 scholarship check in her pocket that she was saving for her education. The Day of Action is an opportunity for women to find our power and demand our right to make choices. On this day, women across the country will raise their voices and organize around the problems of race, class and gender that affect their lives.

Students from UMass and the Five College area have planned and coordinated an educational and advocacy campaign that includes a speak-out and a night of music, poetry, speakers, and information tables in the Student Union Ballroom.

> "Feminists need your support — and I'm not referring to the kind of support that a miracle bra provides."
>
> Gina Hall

Earlier this week, however, I realized that one of the most salient issues facing our community on a daily basis is the misconception of what constitutes a feminist. I was confronted with an attack on feminism that offended me as a woman and an activist. I discovered that my "feminist's worst nightmare" is a woman who is so confused by the negative images promoted by the media that she thinks feminism is about what you look like and whom you hate instead of about women working for equality.

Feminism is not about body hair. It is not about men holding doors for women. I shave my legs and wear makeup, and yes, I am a feminist. I am a strong woman. Every choice we make has political implications. I don't deny that. People send definite messages through their appearance. The choices I make about my appearance, however, do not exclusively reflect my politics; nor do unshaven armpits define a woman as "more" feminist than any other woman. My short hair does not make me a feminist. My belief system does. Distorted ideas about feminism alienate women who support the goals of the movement, but are intimidated by the negative image. To paraphrase Naomi Wolf, who visited the campus last spring, defining feminism as a checklist of attitudes closes off the identity to large numbers of individuals. Caricatures of feminists by the media discredit the movement.

What is a feminist then? The Feminist Majority Foundation describes a feminist as any person — man or woman, boy or girl — who advocates political, economic and social equality for women. Naomi Wolf maintains that feminism should mean nothing more complicated than women's willingness to act politically to achieve what they determine that they need. The postcard on my wall instructs, "Redefine feminism so that it defines you." The qualifications become more and more vague. The fact is that feminism is a discipline with many theories and standards of behavior. Activists come in all styles and ideologies.

If you choose not to define yourself as a feminist, please don't blame feminism when the prince hasn't shown up with your glass slipper. Feminist attitudes do not scare men away from politeness. That is an arbitrary association. Feminism works to achieve respect for all women and men. Feminists need your support — and I'm not referring to the kind of support that a miracle bra provides.

I will not "lighten up" about the issues that are important to me. This campus needs open dialogue about feminism. I am certain that it was merely a coincidence that National Young Women's Day of Action has not received much media coverage.

The presence, however, of columns that attack feminism in mainstream media sends a message to activists that their work is invalid. Coverage like this is an assault on the growing feminist movement on this campus.

Until women refuse to let their gender be used as a tool to divide us, equality will always be a struggle. I will not "relax" until a strong feminist community has a voice at UMass. I know I am not alone. Today is our Day of Action.

Gina Hall is a UMass student.

Attention students with something to say:

We are looking for more columns, so stop griping to your roomie and bugging people down at the bus stop and write something! Put your thoughts together in a clear, concise, intelligent, thought-provoking, refined 800-1000 word article and bring it down to the Collegian office in the basement of the Campus Center. Ask for Mike, Alexis or Tanya.

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor-in-Chief Position Vacant Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
Steve Salerno Jr. Advertising Manager David Parmenter Advertising Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Laura Forster Developing Nations Editor
Mike Messaros Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Co-Jewish Affairs Editor
Morgan Tobor Co-Jewish Affairs Editor
Heather Lei Guzzetta Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jill Carroll News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylarski Sports Editor
Allana E. Todman Women's Issues Editor
Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Preston Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Fall Movie Preview

Big stars, high concepts in fall films

Rob Roensch

It's only mid-October, but Hollywood has already given us at least three worthy contenders for the Best Picture Oscar: Saving Private Ryan, The Truman Show and Beloved; not to mention a string of strong, smaller-scale pictures from Out of Sight to Rounders. It wasn't that long ago that Hollywood could manage only one Best Picture nomination for the merely good Jerry Maguire compared to four for the independents. The uneven but energetic American indie scene has helped to reenergize Hollywood.

Of course we still have dumptruck loads of bland assembly-line "product" like Holy Man and Armageddon, but now more than recently, there are exceptions. The financial sucess of The Truman Show and Saving Private Ryan suggests that this trend has legs.

The fall movie schedule is remarkable for the sheer number of movies coming into release, around 144. The season also includes several interesting Truman-esque gimmick pictures and a semi-return to smaller stories that emphasize character over formula, although there will be a healthy dose of horror attempting to snare Scream's audience.

There is no way to predict the quality of these movies before they come out, but it's safe to say that movie fans can look forward to a full and interesting fall. Here is a preview of some of the more high profile projects that will hit the multiplexes in the coming months.

PLEASANTVILLE
Directed by Gary Ross

Visual effects have been used mostly in the service of science fiction epics, but hopefully the visual trick-laden Pleasantville will help change that trend. Characters change from black-and-white to color in this tale of two contemporary teenagers who find themselves stuck inside an episode of a 1950's sitcom.

If Hollywood writer turned first-time-director Ross (Big, Dave) has a sharp eye, expect this movie to be spoken about in the same breath as this summer's similarly high-concept media satire The Truman Show.

Adding to the movie's respectability are the presences of Tobey Maguire and Joan Allen, two excellent actors who already proved that they could humanize WASP family angst in The Ice Storm.

MEET JOE BLACK
Directed by Martin Brest

Brad Pitt certainly looks good in a suit, but does he have the acting chops to play Death? And could Brad Pitt play a hatrack and still bring people to the theaters? We may have to wait awhile to see Mr. Pitt's take on "hatrack-ness," but at least we can see his interpretation of Death as a kinder, gentler sort of Grim Reaper in Meet Joe Black.

Pitt's angel of death comes to earth to learn why people fear him, befriending Anthony Hopkins' businessman and falling in love with the businessman's daughter, played by new face Claire Forlani. It must disappoint a father when his daughter starts dating The Dark One.

I STILL KNOW WHAT YOU DID LAST SUMMER
Directed by Danny Cannon

It's a wild shot in the dark, but I Still Know What You Did Last Summer will probably have lots of kids getting stabbed and pictures of Jennifer Love Hewitt running around with low-cut tops. Golden boy scriptwriter Kevin Williamson is not attached to the sequel, but how hard can mixing smirky dialogue and giant hooks be?

Anyway, the sequel should be significantly more bloody than the first. It may also be louder, with pop star Brandy sharing the screaming duties. There may even be a third sequel, tentatively titled I Really, Really, Really Still Know What You Did Last Summer.

THE SIEGE
Directed by Edward Zwick

This tense political thriller from director Zwick (Glory, Courage Under Fire) centers on a terrorist attack on New York City and the resulting chaos. What could be a simple action picture takes a sharp turn away when the government declares martial law and begins rounding up Arab-Americans and forcing them into prison camps, much the same way as Japanese-Americans were locked away during WWII.

The movie's exploration of the place of Arab-Americans in the U.S. should provide a strong dissenting voice to the constant stereotyping of Arabs as villains in Hollywood action pictures.

Zwick's favorite actor, the sober, fiery Denzel Washington, stars as lead good guy while Bruce Willis plays the Army commander. It sounds pretty interesting theoretically, but the public putting up with a direct politcal message is another ball of wax.

A BUG'S LIFE
Directed by Steve Lasseter and Andrew Stanton

A Bug's Life is the second bug movie in under three months, this one coming from the same computer nuts over at Disney's Pixar that gave us Toy Story. One of its virtues is a wider cast of insect characters including an ant (voiced by "Newsradio's" David Foley), a male ladybug (Denis Leary), a black widow spider (Bonnie Hunt), and a very evil grasshopper (Kevin Spacey). If the animation is as stunning as it was in Toy Story, then A Bug's Life will be a hit. There is room in the world for two insect epics.

THE WATERBOY
Directed by Frank Coraci

Adam Sandler reteams with Wedding Singer director Frank Coraci in this goofball flick about a dimwitted waterboy who accidentally discovers his talents for tackle football. The movie is set in Louisiana, so expect lots of ridiculously obvious jokes about the South, especially surrounding Sandler's over-protective Cajun mother, played by respected actress Kathy Bates. The Craft's Fairuza Balk shows up as a woman who finds something sexy in Sandler's nutball routine.

It's safe to say that this movie won't figure prominently in the Oscar race, but who cares?

THE THIN RED LINE
Directed by Terence Malick

Can audiences take another American-realist war epic so close on the heels of Saving Private Ryan? We are about to find out. This movie is based on the James Jones' 1962 novel that follows an American rifle unit fighting the Japanese in Guadalcanal.

The Thin Red Line also marks the return of reclusive auteur legendary director Malick, whose last movie was 1978's Days of Heaven. Despite the return of a well-known director, the movie's main selling point will be its long roster of A-list Hollywood guys in supporting roles, from John Travolta to George Clooney.

STEPMOM
Directed by Chris Columbus

They should hand out Kleenex at the door for this one. Longtime real-life friends Julia Roberts and Susan Sarandon star as the new girlfriend and the ex-wife, respectively, of Ed Harris's stuck-in-the-middle father. What follows is a comic/dramatic battle for the affection of children that takes a sudden turn into illness. It will be interesting to see how Home Alone director Chris Columbus deals with subject matter more sensitive than a kid throwing bricks.

CELEBRITY
Directed by Woody Allen

"Trendy" is not a word you can usually use to describe Woody Allen movies, but in Celebrity, his latest picture, the bespectacled director inadvertently capitalizes on the Leonardo DiCaprio circus by giving the young idol a small role. Even more ironically, the movie itself is about the media and the price of fame, with Kenneth Branagh playing the main role of a hack writer.

The cast is typically large and diverse, with appearances by, among others, Vanessa Redgrave, fashion designer Issac Mizrahi and NBA star Anthony Mason.

A CIVIL ACTION
Directed by Steven Zaillian

This courtroom drama based on the 1995 bestseller pits John Travolta's charismatic lawyer against a fleet of corporation hired guns in a dispute over tainted drinking water. Pollution and children with cancer may seem too serious for most casual audiences, but John Travolta has the star power necessary to draw people to the theaters. The movie is also set locally, in an industrial suburb of Boston.

THE PRINCE OF EGYPT
Directed by Brenda Chapman and Steve Hickner

If you've been waiting for an animated musical about the Bible, specifically the book of Exodus, then your day will soon be here. This cartoon feature promises to be the anti-Disney: more weighty subject matter, less tie-in merchandising.

But it is not all together new. Prince uses the songs of Disney houseman Stephen Schwartz (Pocahontas, The Hunchback of Notre Dame). And how will Bible-purists feel about the movie's portrayal of Moses, voiced by the Iceman himself, Val Kilmer? God only knows.

PSYCHO
Directed by Gus Van Sant

The new Psycho is one of the single worst ideas for a movie ever. Oddball critics-darling director Van Zant decided to

Turn to TUBE, page 10

CALVIN

Theatre and Performing Arts Center

Friday, October 30 • 8 pm
judas priest
SPECIALLY BY DR. VIN. SUBS. CHOICE BAND
plus Moon Dog Mane

Thursday, November 5 • 8 pm
Paul Taylor Dance Company
Presented by the New England Foundation for the Arts and the Northampton Center for the Arts

Saturday, November 7 • 8 pm
moe.

Tuesday November 17 8 pm
Widespread Panic

10/30	Judas Priest plus Moon Dog Mane
11/5	Northampton Center for the Arts and the New England Foundation for the Arts Present: The Paul Taylor Dance Company
11/6	Lyle Lovett
11/7	moe.
11/12	David Sedaris WFCR benefit
11/15	Mary Black St. Pat's Parade benefit
11/17	Widespread Panic
11/20 & 11/22	Commonwealth Opera: "The Magic Flute"
12/4	Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra with Wynton Marsalis
12/6	Pilobolus Dance Theatre
12/18	John McDermott: Christmas Memories
1/1/99	Cry, Cry, Cry: Dar Williams, Richard Shindell & Lucy Kaplansky
1/2	Noche Flamenca
1/13	The Kronos Quartet
2/6	Chick Corea & Gary Burton
2/7	The Northampton Arts Council's Silver Chord Bowl
2/11	Ladysmith Black Mambazo
3/6	Cirque Eloize
3/7	Arcadia Players: George Washington After Hours
3/18	James Galway
3/19	Nai-Ni Chen Dance Company
Coming soon: Bill T. Jones/Arnie Zane Dance Co., Cassandra Wilson, Sonny Rollins, Terry Gross

CALVIN THEATRE - 19 KING STREET, NORTHAMPTON, MA 413-584-0610
Tickets for the Calvin Theatre are available at the Northampton Box Office, Thornes Marketplace in Northampton.
To charge by phone call 586-9686 or 1-800-THE-TICK. Visit www.massfive.com for more information.

all shows all ages! Pearl Street Nightclub

Friday, October 23 · 8:30 pm · Clubroom
MAD PROFESSOR plus the Drum Dollie
Saturday, October 24 · 8:30 pm · Clubroom
JEFF PITCHELL & TEXAS FLOOD plus Super 400
Friday, October 30 · 8:30 pm · Ballroom
HATEBREED plus Shadows Fall
Friday, October 30 · 8:30 pm · Clubroom
DUKE RDBILLARD
Saturday, October 31 · 8:30 pm · Ballroom
MAX CREEK plus Electric Blue & the Kozmik Truth
Saturday, October 31 · 8:30 pm · Clubroom
STASH
Sunday, November 1 · 8:30 pm · Ballroom
NEW MORTY SHOW
Tuesday, November 3 · 8:30 pm · Ballroom
MIXMASTER MIKE plus M.O.P.
Wednesday, November 4 · 7 pm · Ballroom
UNITY TOUR: AGNOSTIC FRONT, DROPKICK MURPHYS, U.S. BOMBS AND MAXIMUM PENALTY
Friday, November 6 · 8:30 pm · Ballroom
BEAUSDLEIL AVEC MICHAEL DDUCET
Sunday, November 8 · 7 pm · Clubroom
SAM BLACK CHURCH plus Nothingface and Gargantua Soul
Tuesday, November 10 · 8:30 pm · Ballroom
JAZZ IS DEAD plus Living Daylights
Wednesday, November 11 · 8:30 pm · Ballroom
JOHN HIATT
Wednesday, November 11 · 8:30 pm · Clubroom
MONEY MARK AND BUFFALO DAUGHTER
COMING SOON: Cake, Tribe 8, Black Oak Arkansas, Raging Slab, Tricky, Whale, Itals, AfroNaut, Sick Of It All, the Voluptuous Horror of Karen Black, Clay People, Little Feat, Saw Doctors

all shows music alone shall live all ages! IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL

Thursday, October 22 · 7 pm
CHERYL WHEELER plus Don White
Friday, October 23 · 7 pm
RL BURNSIDE plus Robert Cage
Friday, October 23 · 10 pm
MENTOS & THE NEW HORIZON BAND
Sat., 10/24 · 7 & 10 pm & Sun., 10/25 · 7 pm
THE NIELDS plus the Maggies (10/24) plus Ben Demerath (10/25)
Tuesday, October 27 · 8:30 pm
OTEIL & THE PEACEMAKERS featuring Oteil Burbridge of A.R.U.
Wednesday, October 28 · 10 pm
CAT POWER plus Tren Brothers
Thursday, October 29 · 7 pm
DICK GAUGHAN
Thursday, October 29 · 10 pm
LETTUCE
Fri., 10/30 & Sat. 10/31 · 8:30 pm
MOXY FRUVOUS
Sunday, November 1 · 7 & 9:30 pm
THE CHO PROJECT Steve Tibbetts & the Nuns of Tibet
Monday, November 2 · 7 pm
DAVID LINDLEY
Tuesday, November 3 · 7 pm
NEW ORLEANS KLEZMER ALL-STARS
Wednesday, November 4 · 7 pm
LEON REDBONE
Wednesday, November 4 · 10 pm
THE SPINANES
Thursday, November 5 · 7 pm
FERRON plus Rose Polenzani
Thursday, November 5 · 10 pm
BABALOO plus the Blue Rags
COMING SOON: Richie Havens, Tim Mason, Bo Diddley, Trailer Park, John Gorka, Larry John McNally, Moe Tucker Band

PEARL STREET NIGHTCLUB, 10 PEARL ST., NORTHAMPTON, MA · THE IRON HORSE, 20 CENTER ST., NORTHAMPTON, MA
Tickets for all shows available at the Northampton Box Office, 2nd Floor, Thorne's Marketplace, Northampton | 800-THE-TICK or 413-586-8686. Tickets for the Iron Horse are available at For The Record in Amherst. Tickets for Pearl St. are available at
For The Record, About Music in Broadfield and Platterpus Records in Westfield. 24-Hour Concert Info: (413) 584-0610 or visit www.massfive.com

This Avenue a magical journey

COURTESY MICHAEL HALSBAND

Jazz pianist extraordinaire Danilo Perez reaches spiritual heights on his new album, Central Avenue.

Few times in any musical genre can one experience something so musically profound that it may be considered a spiritual experience. Few times can a music so wholly grip the listener that he or she is driven to fits of ecstasy.

Jazz pianist Danilo Perez just may be in the running to become a guru of jazz spiritualism. His latest release on Impulse, Central Avenue, definitely shows signs of gaining many followers.

Perez was born in Panama in 1966, and his father began his instruction on the piano when he was only three. At age 10, Perez was mastering European classical piano at the National Conservatory in Panama.

Finishing his studies at the Berklee College of Music in 1988, Perez went on to sharpen his skills with Dizzy Gillespie's United Nations Orchestra from 1989 to 1992. In '94 he played on the Grammy-winning, Danzon, with Arturo Sandoval.

Perez' latest lives up to all the hype, delivering his special blend of latin rhythms meshed with bop and avant garde melodies. The combination works.

The opener, "Blues for the Saints," builds on repeating piano phrases and a twanging, vibratory bass-line, then busts into a very slick and salsa-ridden melody. The tried and true piano, bass and drums really pack a punch.

The truest Latin flavor is exemplified on "Impromptu (Conversations)," which features tabla, congas and guiro along with the drum kit, a piano played as if Perez is ascending a spiral staircase, and background falsetto vocals which present the song as a grandiose masterpiece. But "Impromptu," is just one of the tracks that makes this recording a spiritual experience.

When Perez and his band embrace Coltrane's "Impressions" later on the album, it's as if the spirit has reached its peak and can no longer be contained. The congas and the clave create a mystical percussion that seems to nip at each beat like a bird pecking at berries. On the piano, Perez manages to retain the original resilience of McCoy Tyner's basslines while putting his own mark on the melodies.

Jazz/Blues Weekly

The disc concludes with "Panama Blues," which is introduced by Spanish vocals accompanied by the strings of a cuatro. The track evolves into a hybrid of avant garde and Spanish folk music, fusing the two as if they are naturally related and providing a fitting denouement.

The title of this disk, Central Avenue, refers to the main drag of Panama City, where various cultures, seemingly unrelated, are allowed to mix and intermingle. Since Perez manages to join seemingly unrelated musical styles to create a unique and sophisticated music, it is a fitting title.

Joe Sullivan is a Collegian columnist.

MATLAB
SIMULINK
STATEFLOW
Toolboxes
Blocksets

The MathWorks–
A Revolutionary Place to Work!

The MathWorks, Inc., based in Natick, Massachusetts, develops, markets and supports MATLAB, Simulink, and numerous other high-end computing products for scientists, engineers, and technical professionals. Our products are used throughout the world in industries such as automotive, aerospace, environmental, telecommunications, computer peripherals, financial engineering and medical.

Fostering an entrepreneurial atmosphere, our corporate culture, like our products, is innovative, vibrant, and leading edge. We are committed to encouraging individual growth and creativity through an exciting challenging environment in which individuals can excel and grow.

We offer great salaries and top-notch benefits, including three weeks vacation, casual work environment, bonus program, 401K plan with company match, company paid outings, free breakfast, fruit, drinks and weekly massages!

ON-CAMPUS INTERVIEWS: November 5, 1998

The MATH WORKS Inc.

To explore your future with The MathWorks, please stop by the Career Center and sign up now for an on-campus interview, or send us your resume. Meanwhile, explore our Web site at www.mathworks.com and click on Job Openings.

24 Prime Park Way, Natick, MA 01760-1500 USA • Tel: 508-647-7000 • Fax: 508-647-7003 • E-mail: resumes@mathworks.com

The MathWorks is an equal opportunity employer. © 1997 by The MathWorks, Inc. All rights reserved

Magic one bad witch's brew

By Adam Martignetti
Collegian Correspondent

PRACTICAL MAGIC
Directed By Griffin Dunne
with Nicole Kidman, Sandra Bullock, Aidan Quinn
Playing at the Hampshire Six Theaters

Practical Magic has more than enough charm and intrigue to be an enjoyable film, but instead comes off as over-done and wishy-washy. It's almost as if the plot was written in complete disregard of the characters or any other element of the movie, for that matter.

Twas thinking witches, potions, magic, fun, charm and some romance. What I got was a movie bogged down by an intricate plot that entangled two sisters, who just happened to be witches. Thereby, a story that's supposed to be 'and of "off-the cuff" and "uplifting" is quickly made into a bland, generic melodrama.

Trying to keep up with its elaborate plot, Practical Magic glosses over the individuality of its characters, their struggles, their relationships, their romances and their triumphs.

The first part of the movie, which was entirely too rushed, follows the pair of polar opposite sisters from their childhood as orphans to their adult lives with their aunts. A tale is told of the curse placed on any man who dares to love an Owens woman; he is doomed to die. Gilly, the wilder of the two, prances about pools in Arizona for five years, while Sally, the one who wants to be normal, marries, has kids and is a widow in about three minutes of screen time.

After meandering through some warm-hearted, "feel good" sister bonding, the movie hits the real story. One of Gilly's boyfriends is out of control so they kill him by accident, bring him back to life, kill him again and hide the body. For the rest of the movie, they need to avoid the spirit, which haunts them, and a detective, investigating the man's disappearance.

Practical Magic is good for a couple of laughs, some funny hijinks and that's about all. It's not even a decent romantic comedy. The romance aspect doesn't take place until the latter parts of the movie. Even then, it seems contrived and whimsical — too like a fairy tale to be believed. I realize that it a movie about witches, but still it seems like the producers were determined to attach the typical happy ending to this movie no matter how fake and formulaic it may seem.

Sure, the casting was great. Nicole Kidman is just wild enough and mysterious enough to be a very appealing witch. I can't remember the last role Sandra Bullock was unconvincing in. Her unassuming innocence and everywoman appeal make her a great choice for the part. It's hard to imagine that Practical Magic accomplishes so little with such a good cast. The movie never really establishes a clear direction and by the time it does, you realize that you don't want it to go there. Too late though, you're stuck in a Venus plot-trap, which looks so alluring, but proves to be fatal.

I fully expected that Practical Magic was going to be a chick flick, but I didn't expect the bland uniformity with which it adhered to its genre. Did they have some sort of checklist when they were making it? Antiquated, remote setting... check. Self-indulgent gal party scene... check. A sweet, teary Sandra Bullock... check. Getting revenge on ex- boyfriend... check. Over-hyped soundtrack with Stevie Nicks songs produced by Sheryl Crow... double check.

In fact, Practical Magic never really feels like a true movie. It amounts to a tour of the zany, wacky lives of two sisters — entirely too episodic. Thereby, the movie is not light-hearted and fun as it was intended, but rather mystifying and confusing. Considering the witch motif of the movie, perhaps it is appropriate that Practical Magic is nothing more than smoke and mirrors, without a lot to back it up. C–

~ Art Galleries ~

Barnes Gallery — Water Music: The tiny brooks and waterfalls of Peter Atwood's ceramic fountains complement the paintings of Thomas Morton and Jozan Treston. Gallery show: Oct. 14–Nov. 7. Gallery hours are Tuesday–Saturday 1–5 p.m.

Hampshire College — Main Gallery. Gallery hours are Monday–Friday, 10:30 a.m–4:30 p.m.; Sunday, 2–5 p.m. Call the gallery at 559–5544.

Forbes Library Gallery — Collograph Prints and Mixed Media Drawings and Portraits of my World. Oct. 3–30. Gallery hours: Monday 1–9; Tuesday & Wednesday 9–5; Thursday 1–5; Friday & Saturday 9–5.

Mount Holyoke College — Art Museum. American Modernism, Roy R. Neuberger's collection, is now on display. Hours are Tuesday–Friday, 11 a.m.–5 p.m.; Saturday–Sunday, 1–5 p.m. Call 538–2245.

Mount Holyoke College — Art Museum. The exhibition On the Nature of Landscape is now on display. Hours are Tuesday–Friday, 11 a.m.–5 p.m.; Saturday–Sunday, 1–5 p.m. Call 538–2245.

University of Massachusetts — Augusta Savage Gallery. Notes from the Street, black and white photographs by Anthony Lam. The exhibit will run from Oct. 28–Nov. 25. Gallery hours are Monday and Tuesday 1–7; Wednesday–Friday 1–5.

University of Massachusetts — Wheeler Gallery. Sacred Bestiary by Marjorie Lehan will be on display from Oct. 21– Nov. 20. Hours are Monday–Thursday 4–8 p.m., Sunday 2–5 p.m. For information call 545–0680.

University of Massachusetts — 125A Herter Hall. Monte Caprili will run from Oct. 23–Nov. 20. Hours are Monday– Friday, 11 a.m.–4 p.m. Saturday–Sunday 1–4 p.m. Call 545–0976.

University of Massachusetts — Hompden Gallery. An exhibition of Cellblock Visions: Recent Art from American Prisons. Curated by Phyllis Kornfield. This exhibit will be on display from Oct. 22–Nov. 20. Hampden hours are Mon– Friday 3–7 p.m. and Sunday 2–5 p.m. Call 545–0680.

Worcester Art Museum — Blurring the boundaries: 25 Years of Installation Art. Running from Oct. 4 through Jan. 3. For information call 508–798–5646.

Williams College Museum of Art — Williamstown. Coming to America; Graphic Designer Emigrants and Exiles. To register call 413–597–2429.

— compiled by Emily Trask

Vienna Boys Choir pours on the talent and charm

COURTESY ICM ARTISTS

A staircase of singing boys, collectively known as the Vienna Boys Choir, highlighted the Fine Arts Center Tuesday night.

By Emily Trask
Collegian Staff

VIENNA BOYS CHOIR
Fine Arts Center
Oct. 20

The Vienna Boys Choir sang its way into the hearts of audience members in the Fine Arts Center at the University of Massachusetts Tuesday night.

In celebration of its 500th anniversary, the choir is touring North America, and Amherst was one of the 10 stops. Joining the choir was the men's Chorus Viennensis and the Vienna Chamber Orchestra.

The program was introduced by University of Massachusetts Chancellor David K Scott. Providing his own comic relief, he said, "I just saw the group out back, and I swear they don't look a day over 12."

The program for the evening included Te Deum in C major by Franz Joseph Haydn, Missa "Virgo Prudentissima" by Heinrich Isaak. Three Motets by Anton Bruckner, Psalm No. 23, D. 706 by Franz Schubert, Te Deum for Leopold II by Antonio Salieri, Gesang der Geister uber der Wassern, D. 714 by Franz Schubert and the Mass in C major, K. 317 by Mozart.

Te Deum in C major, began the evening. It was an upbeat, energizing piece that incorporated all of the groups.

The third piece, Three Motets, began with Locus Iste. This movement was done a capella. Full of crescendo and decrescendo, this piece possessed a haunting quality, further enhanced by the dissonant harmonies which were perfectly melded with the rich melody. This unaccompanied piece allowed us to truly hear and experience the flawless intonation of these small voices grounded by their mature predecessors.

In the final piece, Mass in C major, by Mozart, the intensity was built up with each movement. With the sixth and final movement, soprano soloist Terence Wey stole the show. There was pure truthfulness in his voice, which he sustained from the beginning of the piece.

Opening with his sweet melodious voice, slowly the other soloists joined him. Then the entire choir joined them. The product of this collaboration was spectacular to hear. With the final moments of the piece, the large ensemble, comprised of about 18 men and 30 boys, seemed to be communicating with one single enchanting voice.

For most of the concert, these young performers maintained a professional stance, but every once in a while you could catch one of them fidgeting, whether it be one with a pair of glasses or one scratching his face. During some of the pieces, they would shoot quick smiles and giggles at one another, which only enhanced the charm of their performance.

The Vienna Boys Choir was founded by Imperial decree on July 7, 1498 by the humanist emperor Maximillian I to fulfill his wish to have choristers in the Imperial Chapel. From its beginnings, this organization has attracted the finest musicians in the west, including Gluck, Mozart, Haydn, and Bruckner. One of the greatest prodigies, and without a doubt the most famous choirboy, was Franz Schubert, who sang as a choirboy from 1808 to 1813.

The chorus Viennesis owes its existence to the desire of the Vienna Boys Choir to perform a wide range of works for mixed voices. Only former members of the Vienna Boys Choir are eligible to join this chorus, since they all share the same vocal training from an early age.

The Vienna Chamber Orchestra, which recently celebrated its 50th season, is recognized as one of the premier interpreters of the chamber ensemble repertoire. The orchestra's extremely successful collaboration with Phillipe Entremont began in 1976. Under his direction, the Vienna Chamber Orchestra has performed in the major music capitals throughout the world.

The one negative aspect of the show was due to no fault of the Viennese performers, rather to the ignorance of their American audience. It seems as though a number of the audience members are unaware of the rules of etiquette pertaining to this type of concert.

One should always wait for the piece to end before applauding, and also there should be no applause between the various movements of one piece of music. It is unfortunate and embarrassing that these mistakes were made on more than one occasion during Tuesday night's performance.

THANKS FOR READING THE COLLEGIAN!!!

WITH EVERYTHING THIS BANK ACCOUNT HAS TO OFFER, WE COULDN'T MAKE YOUR LIFE ANY EASIER.

UNLESS, OF COURSE, WE PAID FOR YOUR TUITION.

Only the Student Value Package gives you so much for so little

BankBoston

Get Free SUBWAY® Sandwiches

1. Valid school ID or acceptance letter required. To qualify for X-Press Check and Reserve Credit you must be at least 18 years of age and have no adverse credit history. 2. If you make withdrawals, deposits, transfers, and balance inquiries electronically by phone, ATM, or computer only, the monthly fee is discounted to $3. The normal monthly Student Value Package fee is $6. 3. Purchase a six-inch Subway® Sandwich and a 21-ounce soft drink and get a second six-inch Subway® Sandwich and 21-ounce soft drink of equal or lesser price free upon presentation of a Student Value Package coupon. Offer expires Mar. 31, 1999. Offer available at participating Subway® locations and may not be combined with any other offer. One coupon per person per visit. Subway is a registered trademark of Doctors Associates Inc. 4. Online Banking with BankBoston HomeLink® is free (e.g., transferring funds, checking balances). There is a $3.50 monthly fee for Online Bill Payment with HomeLink. Member FDIC

www.Shopping.com

TEXTBOOKS...

You've gotta have 'em, so why spend more than you have to? At Shopping.com you can buy your books online and save up to 45% on textbooks and up to 50% on best sellers....with no waiting in line!

...and with all that money you're going to save, you can pick up any of our Billboard TOP 40 CD's for only $8.97 each!

Then check out our huge selection of computers and over 250,000 computer accessories, supplies and software titles.

the latest video games for your Sony Playstation, Nintendo64, Sega Saturn, Gameboy or SNES

camcorders, stereos, VCR's, magazines, fragrances, sporting equipment, a complete line of furniture and accessories

and all of the other TWO MILLION things you're going to need to go to school!

www.Shopping.com 1-888-LOVE-2-SHOP

Aiwa CSD-EX226 CD Radio Cassette Recorder $69.95 YOU SAVE $100!

JVC Personal CD Player with HYPER BASS $79.96 YOU SAVE $20.03!

Creative Labs VooDoo 3D PCI 12MB Graphics Accelerator $179.99 YOU SAVE $120.01!

Canon BJC 250 Photo-Realistic Printer $108.99 YOU SAVE $20.01!

Diamond Multimedia SupraExpress 56K Internal Fax/Modem $83.77 YOU SAVE $16.18!

Creative Labs PC-DVD Encore with DXR2 Technology $181.81 YOU SAVE $118.19!

www.Shopping.com 1-888-LOVE-2-SHOP

*Due to market fluctuations prices may vary. Prices do not include shipping and handling.

"Felicity" scribe caught lying in Tinsel Town

Last week, as I was watching "Entertainment Tonight," I was fascinated by their "exclusive" story about Riley Weston, a writer for the show "Felicity" who convinced the show's producers that she was 19 and was recently named of of the 100 most creative people in show business by Entertainment Weekly. This prodigy also caught the eyes of Disney, who just inked her for a six-figure television deal.

So what was the exclusive? It's that Weston isn't 19, she's really 32. She legally changed her name a few years back from Kimberlee Elizabeth Kramer. Not only is she a writer for the show, but she is scheduled to appear in one of the upcoming episodes.

Brooke Steinberg

Weston decided to come clean after "ET" received news about her true identity, and she said that it is very common for older actresses to lie about their age, and that she is deeply sorry for all that she has done. Yet it seemed like she didn't truly regret it, and if she wasn't caught in her hoax, she wouldn't have come clean.

I felt quite cheated by this revelation, and not because I am a fan of the show. While I realize that it is common for people in any profession to exaggerate or lie on their resume, I never imagined the scandal it could cause as this one has. It raises important questions about the television industry, in terms of both age and the extremes that people will go through to be famous.

I started to think about the different avenues of television. Take the talk shows. Oprah, Sally, Jerry, Ricki. These hosts are very successful and are not young and beautiful. Yet the majority of their shows revolve around people who do lie, invite scandal into their lives, and perhaps appear on these shows just to experience their "15 minutes of fame," even if it does involve ripping out someone's hair or throwing a punch. I looked at soap operas, and found a variety of actors. Some are old, some are young, some are beautiful, some are not so attractive. And based on a lot of the young people's acting skills, I wouldn't doubt that they lied on their resumes.

I also don't doubt that the producers saw right through them as well. And in prime time, there is a variety of roles and actors out there, from comedies to dramas, as well as the qualities of their writing.

Reflecting on all of this, I still couldn't understand what led Weston to do this, and better yet, why it bothered me so much.

And then it hit me. Well, part of the above, that is. I remembered all the hype surrounding Good Will Hunting, when it came out and all through out the Oscars. Ben Affleck and Matt Damon's real life story was something out a movie itself. They have been best friends since their childhood in Boston, struggled as actors, then wrote a script, pitched it to Miramax, who picked it up, got Robin Williams to star in it, and the rest is history.

All of this, and the two are only in their 20s. It was unheard of before. Their story was an hope to many kids out there. For me and my best friend

Turn to SCRIBE, page 9

Singer's an unusual suspect

By Bryan McAllister
Collegian Staff

Early on in Steven Spielberg's Jaws, police chief Roy Sheider is not enjoying his day at the beach, having been tormented by thoughts of shark attacks. Scanning the water for possible shark fins, he's interrupted by an old man wearing a swimming cap and attempting to joke with the chief about not going into the water.

"That's some bad hat, Harry," Sheider tells the old man.

And so the completely random idea for Bryan Singer's production company, Bad Hat Harry Productions, was born. It means absolutely nothing at all, but then again, Singer hasn't been known to be a "usual" guy.

The acclaimed director of 1995's biggest sleeper, The Usual Suspects, Singer offers yet another dark and disturbing film with tomorrow's release of Apt Pupil.

The movie, based on the Stephen King novella of the same name, is a haunting tale of adolescent curiosity meeting old evils. Sixteen-year-old Todd Bowden (played by The Client's Brad Renfro) discovers that a Nazi war criminal (Sir Ian McKellen) is hiding in his hometown, and soon engages in a battle of wits over the hoary man's age-old secrets.

It's a far cry from The Usual Suspects, but hardly a total departure for Singer. To put it bluntly, he's interested in evil, and perhaps his best talent (besides fooling an audience) is drawing out our fears. It will be a test, though, as the film opens this weekend, whether Apt Pupil will keep the audience as enthralled as his much heralded second feature did.

Singer began his filmmaking career in his early teens, shooting 8mm movies in his backyard, which enabled him to attend the prestigious School of Visual Arts in New York. After graduating, Singer enrolled in that mecca of film schools — USC, the home of talents like George Lucas and Robert Zemeckis.

His post-USC short The Lion's Den, starring childhood friend Ethan Hawke, won him some prestige and allowed him to film Public Access, a 1993 winner of the Grand Jury prize at the Cannes Film Festival.

But, it was The Usual Suspects, with its eclectic cast including Academy Award–winning Kevin Spacey, that made the then-28-year-old Singer one of Hollywood's hottest young directors.

Directed in appropriately shady, seedy atmosphere, Suspects played with our minds, offered the best Hollywood movie ending in years, and placed the name of Keyser Soze in pop-culture. Besides the best supporting nod for Spacey, the film won a best original screenplay award for writer Christopher McQuarrie.

Despite the success of the film, things were not so serene for Singer and Apt Pupil. First, Stephen King's books have a long history of being exploited to cheesiness on film. Second, a lawsuit involving several young boys being naked for a shower scene caused the film to be delayed severely.

Controversy is bound to ignite again when the film is released, due to the heavy subject matter — the Holocaust — being toyed with.

Perhaps that's the reason Singer's next project will be a

Turn to MOVIE, page 9

COURTESY JOHN BAER

Usual Suspects director Bryan Singer barks orders at the helm of his latest feature, Apt Pupil, opening tomorrow.

FOX rules TV with Classic

Rule No. 1 of television is that there is absolutely nothing can compete with the World Series. Even though this is probably the worst series ever, and there's no reason that it should not be over in four games, the Fall Classic is stirring up the ratings and drawing in viewers all over the world.

Tube Notes with Ryan Benharris

It's too bad that a year which was clearly one of the best seasons in baseball history has to be followed up by such a lousy World Series, but none-the-less, people are definitely going to watch it. The price for advertising is sky high — only the Super Bowl costs more to run a commercial. So what are the network doing to try to compete with the baseball's domination of the ratings?

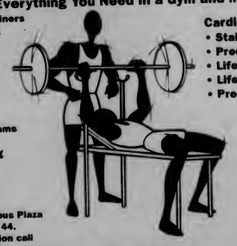
NBC's biggest night of the week is obviously on Thursdays, when it runs the "Must See TV" line-up. For the first time all season, "Friends," "Frasier," and "ER" are all repeats. They're the season premiers that were run this September. Obviously, NBC is trying to avoid putting something on television that's going to cause a conflict when FOX is showing baseball. NBC, the leader in television simply by putting up the highest ratings every week, shows that it wants no part in taking on the huge number of viewers that will clearly not be watching.

All the other networks are following suit. I highly doubt that the WB's Buffy the Vampire Slayer received half as many viewers this week as it normally does. Even ABC's highly followed "Spin City" felt the wrath of the Yankees and the Padres this past Tuesday.

The most interesting thing to look at is how FOX is handling its unusual reign at the top. The most common thought that I keep having while watching the World Series is: "You have to remember that this is FOX and FOX will do anything for ratings."

If I see one more commercial for the "all new season of 'Party of Five'" during the Series, I'm gonna scream. The most ironic part about this is that I love "Party of Five," but I don't love someone throwing it down my throat that I have to wait another three weeks to see a new episode.

Perhaps the most important commercials that FOX is running are ads that do not need to be seen. Here's a question for you: What channel is the Super Bowl going to be shown on this January? If you've watched five minutes of the World Series you'd know that "You're watching FOX, home of the Super Bowl XXXIII!" Think about it, you do not need to have a commercial to advertise for the Super Bowl. I can guarantee



Turn to TELEVISION, page 9

Now Open....The Area's Best Fitness & Health Club

UltimateFitness THE HEALTH AND FITNESS CENTER

Featuring the latest in Fitness Training & Equipment
"Everything You Need in a Gym and More!"

- Certified Personal Trainers
- Fitness Testing & Programming
- Nutritional Consultation
- Tanning
- Sauna
- Juice Bar & Supplements
- Full Aerobics Programs Including:
  -Cardio Kickboxing
  -Sports Step
  -Boot Camp
  -and many more

Cardiovascular Equipment
- Stairmasters
- Precor Treadmills
- Lifecycle Recumbent Bikes
- Lifecycle Upright Bikes
- Precor Crosstrainers

State-of-the-Art Strength Training Equipment
- Bodymasters & Icarian Free Weights
- Cybex Circuit Training Equipment

Located in the Campus Plaza next to Liquors 44.
For more information call 253-7571

Bookworks™

BOOK SIGNING

JACK CANFIELD

Co-Author of

CHICKEN SOUP FOR THE SOUL

Today!

Thurs. Oct. 22

3 to 5 pm

Campus Center Concourse in front of UStore

Save 10% or More on nearly Every Book! Every Day.

Bookworks is a division of UStore

Spirit Haus

"Fantastic Selection of Kegs"

LIQUOR SPECIALS
PARROT BAY RUM 750 ML $10.99
JIM BEAM 750 ML $9.79
Dr. McGILLICUDDY 750 ML MENTHOL MINT SHNAPPS $11.99
KAHLUA 4 PK READY-TO-DRINK CHILLERS $12.79

WINE SPECIALS
750ml ALICE WHITE CHARDONNAY 2/$11.79 +DEP
10% DISCOUNT ON REG. PRICE WINE WITH GRAD STUDENT ID

BEER SPECIALS
SAM ADAMS OCTOBERFEST 6 PK BTLS $4.99 +DEP
PAULANER OCTOBERFEST 6 PK BTLS $6.99 +DEP
BUD/BUD LIGHT 20 PK BTLS $12.99 +DEP
KEYSTONE LIGHT 30 PK CANS $10.99 +DEP

MICRO BREW SPECIALS
UNDERGROUND 6 PK BTLS $5.99 +DEP
(ALL FLAVORS) TASTING Fri., OCT. 23rd 6-8PM
SNUTTY NOSE 6 PK BTLS $5.29 +DEP
(PALE ALE, OLD BROWN DOG ALE, PORTSMOUTH LAGER)
OREGON 6 PK BTLS $4.99 +DEP
(I.P.A., BUTTERCUP, HONEY ALE, RASPBERRY WHEAT)
CIDER JACK 6 PK BTLS $4.99 +DEP
TASTING Thursday OCT. 22nd 7-9PM

(COLD PLATES, CO2 TANKS, BULK ICE, GLASSES AVAILABLE)

SPIRIT HAUS ALSO FEATURES A FULL REDEMPTION CENTER!

RED DOG

PRICES GOOD OCTOBER 15- OCTOBER 21

MAJOR CREDIT CARDS ACCEPTED OPEN 9am to 11pm
338 COLLEGE ST (RTE 9) 1 MILE EAST OF AMHERST CENTER ON RTE 9
PHONE (413) 253 5384 • FAX 256 8433

~Student Nurses' Association~ ~Health Tip of The Week~

Many students in the UMass community drink alcohol on the weekends. Are you one of them? If so, you might want to know that many substances when taken with alcohol have uncomfortable, harmful, even fatal results.

So, before you crack open that first beer, please make sure that you are not using any of the following substances.

- Aspirin & Ibuprofen (Advil & Motrin): Possible result — Gastric irritation.
- Acetaminophen (Tylenol): Possible result — Liver toxicity.
- Tricyclic Antidepressant and MAO Inhibitors: Possible results — Increased Central Nervous System depression; may lead to drowsiness; lethargy; stupor; respiratory collapse; coma; death.
- Narcotics (Tylenol with codeine): Possible results — Increased Central Nervous System depression (see above)
- Antihistamines (over-the-counter cold and cough meds): Possible results — Increased Central Nervous System depression (see above)
- Hypnotics or Sedatives: Possible results — Increased Central Nervous System depression (see above)

This is not an exhaustive list of substances that may result in adverse reactions when taken with alcohol. It's always smart to read the warnings on your prescriptions and over-the-counter medications.

Just because a friend says that he/she doesn't experience such reactions, don't assume that you won't. Everyone responds differently to medications. Using caution when mixing medications and alcohol is one way of being a responsible drinker.

— compiled by the Student Nurses' Association

■ scribe

continued from page 8

Sarah, Affleck and Damon became (and remain) our inspiration to write our own screenplay and hopefully get it on the big screen. And not when we're old and grey. They proved, though they might just be the exception, that it is possible it could happen soon.

There are not a lot of young writers in the business who have made a big splash. That seems ironic, since there seems to be a plethora of television show, magazines and movies geared toward young people today. Perhaps Weston, or should I say Kramer, saw this as her way of making her mark. And she certainly did.

The other issue here is that she lied about her accomplishments on her resume. Many people might not see a problem with this, because everybody lies on their resumes. But I don't see this as the typical "doctoring" concerning experience. When I heard that Felicity had a 19- year-old writer on staff, I was pleased that a show about teenagers had someone on staff who actually was a teenager, someone who understood the teenage perspective.

On top of that, she had supposedly accomplished so much in such a short amount of time. Like Damon and Affleck, Weston was one of those who proved she could break the mold of old men succeeding in the television industry. And for a while she did, but with the lack of merit and honesty.

I cannot speak for Weston, but I'm sure power, fame and money were all motives in her decision. Having been in the business for a while, maybe she saw that woman in their 30s weren't getting the roles that the young kids did. And from a writing perspective, perhaps she saw that kids don't make it for the opposite reason: they haven't been around for too long. So, Weston created the perfect person: a combination of what she wasn't and could never be.

This scandal is one in it's own. The lack of sex and drugs in this story might explain why it hasn't been plastered all over magazines and television. I think it should. I think the producers of "Felicity" should stop keeping mum about this issue, and the press should attack it.

If there is anything good to come out of all of this, I hope television shows and movies will hire kids as writers or consultants, kids who can relate to what is happening on screen and who can contribute their ideas. I believe it's about time, and, of course, age and honesty.

Brooke Steinberg is a UMass student.

The Collegian is New England's largest college daily

('nuff said.)

COURTESY JOHN BAER

"Friends'" David Shwimmer takes a small role consoling Brad Renfro in Apt Pupil.

■ movie

continued from page 8

bit lighter and more commercial. The long awaited film version of the X-Men is set for a 1999 release. Not a comic book fan or a special effects talent, Singer is not the obvious choice for a director. But, his preparation and devotion to the film craft will perhaps solve these obstacles.

Singer visited the set of Titanic and spoke with director James Cameron about the filming of visual effects, and developed a relationship with "X-Men" creator Stan Lee, who serves as the film version's executive producer. Singer, as usual, will also get a little help from his friends with a screenplay by Suspects scribe McQuarrie.

■ television

continued from page 8

you that if you turn on your television on the last Sunday in January, and you want to see some football, you're not going to have any trouble finding the station it was on. They could put the Super Bowl on The Home and Garden Network, and every single person in the room would know exactly what station to tune into at what time.

The only reason viewers are forced to watch commercials for what stations the Super Bowl is on, during the World Series, is because FOX executives are hoping that executives for McDonald's, Pepsi and Microsoft are all watching, and all realize that when January rolls around, it's going to be time to pull out the checkbook. The cost of a 30-second advertisement will be higher during the Super Bowl than ever before, and you can bet that when you're sitting there watching the Patriots beat up on whatever losing team the NFC plans to send, you can thank the World Series for allowing you to see such great commercials.

In other news, unemployed comedian Jerry Seinfeld is in a heap of trouble. It seems that Jerry's love life has gone awry again, and this time he has people calling him a home-wrecker. Jerry has allegedly been dating Jessica Nederlander, wife of an extremely wealthy New York opera house owner, only four short months after her wedding. Her husband Eric, is extremely upset, and plans to divorce his wife, and sue the comedian.

After being successful in almost everything he's ever done, this is Seinfeld's second blunder involving women. The first happened a few years ago when he was allegedly dating an 18-year-old woman from New York. I guess that love life is something that Jerry just couldn't master.

However, there are some TV personalities that do seem to have their love life together. Two marriages in the works were announced this past week. People magazine reported that "Friends" star Courtney Cox is now engaged to her Scream co-star, David Arquette. Cox, who had been linked to Counting Crows' lead singer Adam Duritz for quite some time, claims that she fell in love with Arquette as soon as she met him, and couldn't be any happier.

Cosmopolitan magazine has also announced that "Party of Five" star Jennifer Love Hewitt is in the process of planning her wedding to MTV VJ Carson Daly. It's nice to see that there will be more Hollywood marriages for the tabloids to exploit in the coming years.

Finally this week, did anyone see how TV queen Oprah Winfrey's movie Beloved fared at the box office. Beloved grossed just over $8 million, and finished in fifth place for the weekend. Despite being a wonderful film, the box office bomb was mostly because the film was not released nationwide, and has a running time of over three hours.

I think what must have hurt Oprah the worst is when they reported that Bride of Chucky made more money than her film. But if you think about it, if Oprah was really doing this for the money, she could just as well been the Bride of Chucky. I'm sure people would've gone to see that. However, I'm sure it's a safe bet that Chucky's bride won't be accepting any Best Actress awards at this year's Oscar ceremony. Oprah will.

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian columnist.

Can't Figure out the Crossword?

FIND THE SOLUTION

COME THE DAILY COLLEGIAN'S

OPEN HOUSE

Tuesday, October 27th

4 TO 7 P.M.

BASEMENT OF THE CAMPUS CENTER

Badger makes impact on advertising, design

By Carol Deegan
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Madonna Badger. The name may not be familiar, but the images are. Remember those provocative Marky Mark underwear and jeans ads for Calvin Klein? Those seductive Kate Moss/Obsession ads?

These are two of the eye-catching campaigns that have sprung from the imaginative mind of Badger, who, at 34, is president and creative director of Badger Worldwide Advertising (BWA), her own advertising, design and marketing agency.

Another image: supermodel Rachel Williams tugging on the waistband of her Hot Sox tights.

And that's just the beginning.

"I think what people come to me for is for what I think instinctively is going to work, or I think is the next great thing, or where I think this brand category is heading," said Badger during an interview at her SoHo offices.

BWA has created campaigns for A/X Armani Exchange; 5S, a new line of skin care and makeup from Shiseido; Francesco Biasia handbags; and Adrienne Vittadini accessories.

"What we really do for people is find the essence of who they are and bring it to the public. Right now, our primary clients are fashion and beauty clients," she said. "For the most part, we take who they are and bring that to the forefront and really make that into the main image they're giving the customer."

Badger is not afraid to be daring or playful.

BWA created a series of ads showing two women fighting over a Francesco Biasia handbag.

"The idea of two beautiful and chic women fighting over a handbag conveys to our consumer that she must own a Francesco Biasia handbag, too," she said. "In the ads, they're very playful, very fun, as sisters can be, in competition, and the ads didn't come across as being gratuitously sexy. It was something that appealed to all of us as women, so it made sense."

About five years ago, Badger left her position as senior art director at CRK, the in-house advertising agency for designer Calvin Klein, to start her own company.

With a staff of 20, BWA offers a broad range of integrated services including brand development, advertising, marketing, art direction and media planning.

In other words, the works.

"Consistency is the key," Badger said. "Every aspect of a business or product is equally important. Whether an ad, a label, a poster or a package, the same effort must be focused on every detail, every nuance must be addressed. Our strength is the ability to identify and develop a one-image concept for reaching consumers."

For A/X Armani Exchange, photographer Regan Cameron shot 16 black-and-white scenes in two small towns in Arizona. Through digital technology, the company's logo was superimposed on the backs of playing cards, the screen of a drive-in theater and the side of an old warehouse.

"I developed this idea of the AX/Armani Exchange logo really being part of your life, that's in every aspect of your life. It's a very lifestyle-oriented campaign, it's very cinematic, it really is about A/X being a part of your life and being in your life," she said.

The models were dressed in a mix of Armani basics and seasonal items.

"What we're really representing is, 'Heh, you know what? You could be these people.' It's accessible, it's fun, it's playful, and it's also incredibly great clothes, great style, at a really great price," Badger said.

The A/X Armani Exchange campaign was launched in September, just as the company's new Fifth Avenue store was opening.

For Shiseido's 5S line, BWA developed an integrated concept on the tag line, "Own your mind and body."

Badger and her staff were responsible for naming the formulations, designing the logo and the packaging, creating the store environment and launching the products.

The 5S store opened in SoHo in May. Customers can sit at "mingle tables" and experiment with products. (The 5S senses are energizing, purifying, calming, adoring and nurturing. For each sense, the colors and formulations of the products were paired to elicit the particular result desired.)

"The best part about it for me was really looking at cosmetics as being something that will transcend into the 21st century," Badger said. "And so that was the really great part about developing this brand. It was making it modern and also giving it staying power. And I think with a lot of my other campaigns that I've done, I've always tried to keep that in mind, the idea of how can I keep it incredibly modern but also in a way that gives it a 21st-century edge."

Raised in Kentucky, Badger began her career working as a graphic designer in the art department of Esquire magazine. One year later, she left New York for Paris, where she worked at Madame Figaro, a fashion and lifestyle magazine. She later returned to New York where she worked as an art director for several magazines before joining CRK.

Recently, BWA was hired to create ad campaigns for Emanuel Ungaro collections, including the designer's eyewear and Ungaro Parallele. Ungaro L'Homme, U Weekend and U Collection.

Badger also has her creative eye on the millennium. She wants to develop campaigns for automobiles and electronic appliances, including cell phones, televisions and stereos. What about the trend toward using celebrities in advertising? "I think there has been celebrity-esque advertising for as long as there's been movie stars," she said. "And we've become, especially in the late '80s and early '90s, we got kind of re-mystified, I guess, with the idea of the celebrity again."

COURTESY LINDA CHEN

Fall movies get a touch of testosterone as Gene Hackman helps out Will Smith in Jerry Bruckheimer's Enemy of the State.

■ tube

continued from page 5

remake Alfred Hitchcock's classic Psycho mostly shot-for-shot, using a hip modern cast with Vince Vaughn and Anne Heche in the big roles.

Why on earth would anyone want to remake someone else's masterpiece? Do we need another Psycho? Why would such a great American director coming off a huge sucess (Good Will Hunting) take such a strange risk? Maybe he's counting on people going to see the movie just to figure out what the heck he was thinking.

YOU'VE GOT MAIL
Directed by Nora Ephron

You've Got Mail is a cute romantic comedy that brings the Sleepless in Seattle gang back together: Tom Hanks, Meg Ryan and director Ephron. This movie has the same risk of bombing that the new Star Wars does. It's money in the bank.

On this go around, Hanks and Ryan play rival bookstore owners who meet and fall in love over the Internet. Cuteness and hijinks ensue. Greg Kinnear joins the cast as the guy who Meg Ryan pretends to be in love with for a little while. Steve Zahn and the everpresent Parker Posey will provide foils for the mushiness.

ENEMY OF THE STATE
Directed by Tony Scott

Will Smith abandons his goofball hero for a more adult persona in the paranoia-thriller Enemy of the State. Smith's rich lawyer is falsely accused of a crime and spends most of the movie running away from high-tech government goons. The movie is directed by men-with-big-guns director Scott and produced by action freak Jerry Bruckheimer, so don't expect subtlety. Gene Hackman as a helpful ex-spy should keep things intense.

Pob Roensch is a Collegian staff member.

THE FINE ARTS CENTER SERIES

Kate vs. Petruchio in 3 Rounds

THE TAMING OF THE SHREW
THE ALABAMA SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL
The 1990's meet the 1950's! Shakespeare's bawdy battle of the sexes is set in the 50's by one of America's best acting companies. "... brash and brilliant" –The New York Times
SUNDAY, OCTOBER 25, 7PM, CONCERT HALL
Presented with the generous support of the Daily Hampshire Gazette

A Master Salutes a Maestro

Christopher Parkening
guitar
In Celebration of Andres Segovia
Join us for an intimate evening with one of the world's preeminent classical guitarists, as he shares his memories of his teacher, the great Andres Segovia. Includes a film biography and Parkening's interpretations of Segovia's most cherished repertoire, played on the Maestro's own guitar.
TUESDAY, OCTOBER 27, 8PM, BOWKER AUDITORIUM

Three Americas

The Fine Arts Center and Jazz à la Mode present
Eliane Elias
JAZZ PIANO
This Grammy-nominated Brazilian pianist/singer and her band connect the music of North, Central, and South America to create an unforgettable night of jazz. "Elias understands how to make great music. . ." – JazzTimes
SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 7
8PM, BOWKER AUDITORIUM

WE'RE RAISING THE ROOF!
While our new lobby is under construction, you may enter the Concert Hall via alternate entrances. On-site signs and guides will show you the way

The Fine Arts Center
University of Massachusetts Amherst

Call 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS for tickets

TICKETS ONLY $5 $7 $9 FOR FIVE COLLEGE STUDENTS

Inspired Minds Wanted

Where you work should be a place that inspires the mind.
Imagine that.
Visit www.EDS-Imagine-IT.com and ask yourself,

What Inspires you?

A more productive way of working

EDS

[EDS] is a registered trademark of Electronic Data Systems Corporation. [EDS] is an equal opportunity employer M/F/D. ©1998 Electronic Data Systems Corporation. All rights reserved.

Education in Legal Education

To get ahead in today's economy, you need education beyond a college degree. More and more people are realizing the wide ranging benefits of a Juris Doctor degree from Massachusetts School of Law. A JD degree can give you the edge you need to succeed in business, health care, law enforcement, government and law.

Massachusetts School of Law

• LSAT not required
• Financial Aid and Tuition Plans available

ON-CAMPUS
Wednesday, October 28, 1998
See our booth at the Graduate and Professional Career Fair between 10:00 a.m. - 3:00 p.m.
Day & Evening classes available
500 Federal Street
Woodland Park
Andover, MA 01810
(978) 681-0800
www.mslaw.edu

Enjoy Home Coming Weekend With Great Sale Prices from Liquors 44!

LIQUORS 44

Don't Drink and Drive

Everyday Pricing

1/2 KEGS LIGHT NATURAL $34.99 + DEP
1/2 KEGS ICEHOUSE, RED DOG, ROLLING ROCK $36.99 + DEP
1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD LT., BUD ICE $40.99 + DEP

MILLER HIGH LIFE GENUINE DRAFT & LIGHT CASE OF 24/12 OZ. CANS $11.49 + DEP
NATURAL LIGHT & NATURAL ICE CASE 2-12 PK. CANS $8.49 + DEP
CAMAMOUNT All Flavors 4 PK. BOTTLE $4.99 + DEP
HEINEKEN & AMSTEL CASE 24-12 OZ. LOOSE BOTTLES $17.99 + DEP
MICHELOB & MICHELOB LIGHT 18-12 OZ. CANS $9.99 + DEP

WINE OF THE MONTH
Pionero CHARDONNAY CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750ML $5.49
FRANZIA 5 LT. BAG-IN-A-BOX CHABLIS, RHINE, BLUSH, WHITE OLD RED, CHILLABLE RED, CLARET, BLANC, TR. COLOMBARD, WHITE GRENACHE $6.99
ST. FRANCIS CHARDONNAY 750 ML. $8.49
ESTATE CELLARS FROM RIGLI WINES CHARDONNAY, MERLOT, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5L $6.49
CITRA WINES ALL FLAVORS 1.5L $5.99
VENDANGE WHITE ZINFANDEL 1.5L $4.99
Kryocin COMBOS ALL FLAVORS 4 PK. $4.49

RUBINOFF VODKA 1.75L $8.99
SEAGRAM'S GIN & LIME GIN 1.75L $12.49
JACK DANIELS 750 ML. $13.99
BACARDI RUM SILVER & GOLD 1.75L $15.49
CLUNY SCOTCH 1.75L SALE $12.99 MAIL-IN REBATE -2.00 FINAL COST $10.99
SAUZA GOLD TEQUILA 750 ML. $8.99
DEKUYPER PEACHTREE SCHNAPPS 750 ML. $6.99

Discounts Available on Cases of Wine & Liquor. Ask For Details.

AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344
NORTHAMPTON 586-3007
HOLYOKE 534-4555

SALE PRICES THURS. 10/22/98 THRU WEDS. 10/28/98

Agents strike back

By Chris Sheridan
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Should the NBA players union stay the course and continue to resist a bad deal? Or would the best move be to decertify the union and try to beat the owners in a long, dragged-out court fight?

That was the question to be debated today in Las Vegas at a meeting of the player agents' advisory council.

Today, Michael Jordan, Scottie Pippen and Karl Malone are among those expected in attendance at Caesar's Palace as the union holds a meeting open to all players.

Commissioner David Stern and the owners, meanwhile, would prefer to be back at the bargaining table.

"I can tell you," Stern said. "This union leadership stymies us. Russ [Granik, deputy commissioner] and I, for something over 50 years combined, we've been able to negotiate with every other combination of executive directors and presidents in the history of this union. And lawyers. And somehow, we are unable to have a conversation that gets us any negotiation."

One day after the union lost its guaranteed contracts arbitration grievance before arbitrator John Feerick, there was an internal debate as to what's the next best course of action. Some thought the wisest move would be to continue to present a unified front and resist accepting a bad deal — even if the lockout lasts into January.

Others, including a vocal minority of the agents' council, were pushing for decertification, a move that could lead to a multiyear fight with the owners.

Players earlier this summer gave the union's executive council the go-ahead to decertify, so a vote among the rank-and-file would not be necessary.

"The players will not back down," union director Billy Hunter said. "The sooner the owners realize this and end the lockout, the quicker we can avoid enormous damage to the sport of basketball." By decertifying, the union would remove itself as the official bargaining agent for the players. A court injunction would then be sought to end the lockout.

If an injunction was granted, the owners would lift the lockout, open camps and impose new work rules. And if the new rules were more restrictive than the old ones, the players would be expected to file an antitrust suit against the league seeking treble damages.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Running into battle

The Massachusetts men's cross country team is not in action this weekend, but the Minutemen return to action next week at the Atlantic 10 championships.

Great Scott helps Yanks whip SD

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — Scott Brosius is up there now with the greatest New York Yankees.

Babe Ruth, Lou Gehrig, Joe Collins, Yogi Berra, Reggie Jackson. Before Tuesday night, they were the only Yankees to hit home runs in consecutive World Series at-bats.

And now, there's Scott Brosius.

"I'm enough of a student to know my name doesn't really go there," he said after homering twice and driving in four runs in a 5-4 victory over San Diego that gave the Yankees a 3-0 World Series lead.

After the Padres took a 3-0 lead in the sixth, Brosius woke up the Yankees with a solo homer off Sterling Hitchcock. And with Padres All-Star closer Trevor Hoffman clinging to a 3-2 lead in the eighth, Brosius hit a three-run shot to straightaway center field.

"He had a Reggie Jackson night, one of the great World Series performances in Yankee history," Game 3 starter David Cone said. "He just crushed the ball."

Brosius had imagined himself in this very situation.

"This is the type of thing that as a kid you dream about," he said. "I've done it in my back yard 100 times."

This time, the field was a little bigger and the fence was a little deeper.

But not too far for Brosius. You could hear a pin drop in Qualcomm Stadium after he hit it. Hoffman hung his head. Even the Swinging Friar was stunned.

San Diego wasn't beaten by one of those big stars in the middle of the New York lineup. The Padres were bumped by Brosius, a virtual throw-in in a trade with Oakland last November who is not even sure New York will attempt to re-sign him for next year. Brosius came to the Yankees only because Oakland was willing to take Kenny Rogers off their hands.

"It was Ronny Brand's idea," New York major league scouting head Gene Michael said before the game, referring to one of the team's West Coast scouts. "Turned out pretty good."

Brosius arrived at Tampa, Fla., last February after slumping to .203 with just 41 RBIs for Oakland in 1997.

"This game can humble you," he said. "I think sometimes it was harder to hit .200 than it was to hit .300," he said. "It was a just a year where if anything could go wrong, it did go wrong. It was one of those things that kind of snowballed."

This year, he batted .300 with 19 homers and a career-high 98 RBIs, becoming an All-Star for the first time.

"We didn't know what Scott Brosius was all about," Yankees manager Joe Torre said. "The first half of the year, it didn't take long for us to see that he knocked in big runs for us, and was very important for us both defensively and offensively."

In Game 6 of the AL championship series, his three-run homer put the Yankees ahead of Cleveland 6-0, sending them on their way to a record 35th AL pennant.

He leads the Yankees in postseason hits (17), average (.395), homers (four) and RBIs (14). Against the Padres in the Series, he's 7-for-13 (.538).

And he's doing this while worrying about his father, who was back home in McMinnville, Ore., recovering from colon cancer surgery, until jetting into San Diego just before game time.

"This season has been a whole positive distraction for what he's gone through," Brosius said. "I know he hasn't been feeling real good lately, so it's kind of nice to have some moments like this, where we kind of stop thinking about the quote 'real-life things' and think about the dream a little bit."

LAUREN ROSKY / COLLEGIAN

Sweet swinging

The UMass women's tennis team, winners of its last three matches, put that streak on the line against Columbia this Saturday. Read the preview in tomorrow's Collegian.

Thanks for reading the Collegian!

SPRING BREAK HEADQUARTERS
Heller Travel
Student Travel Specialists.
LOWEST student and faculty discount airfares.
HELLER TRAVEL
You just can't get it anywhere else!!
146 Massachusetts Avenue at Berklee
Boston, MA (2115- (800) 843-1544
email: heller@berklee.edu

BUY ONE.....GET ONE.....FREE!!!!!
JONATHAN'S SPORTS WORLD
Specializing in Racquet Sports Gear
ALSO STOCKING: RUNNING SHOES, LACROSSE EQUIP., AFTER SKI BOOTS, SKATES, SKI WEAR, SKI TUNE-UP TOOLS, HOCKEY STICKS, BILLIARD AND DART SUPPLIES
Women's bathing suits... buy one get one— FREE!!!!!
Hiking Boots 30% off Tag
Expires 11/30/98
(For Both Specials)
350 Russell Street Rt. 9 Hadley, MA 01035
413-585-8654 • 800-891-5538

安城中国饭店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
we do not use "MSG"
• MANDARIN & SZECHUAN CUISINE
• SEAFOOD SPECIALTIES
• FRESH VEGETABLE DISHES
• FROM OUR OWN FARM
• EAT-IN OR TAKE-OUT
• FULL LIQUOR LICENSE
253-7835 or 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst

BILLIARDS
Z10A Belchertown Road
Amherst, MA 01002 256-8284
8 Thursday Night 7:30
9 Ball Tournament
$10 per person
9 "Everyday from 3-7pm $4.00 hour pool"
Live Music Every Thurs. Fri & Sat
Thursday - 9:45
"SCHWA"
Best! 1998

R&P
(413) 253-9742
250 SELECTIONS OF FINE WINES
(including UMass Old Chapel Wines)
just 2 miles south of Amherst College on the right.
GREAT SELECTION OF BEERS AND 30-PACK SPECIALS!

We're moving from Machmer!
Pre-Major Advising Services
serving undeclared & pre-majors for Arts and Sciences
will be closed from
Tuesday, October 27 - Friday, October 30
We will reopen on Monday, November 2
in 615 Goodell
Telephone: 545-2191
Come see us in our new location!

Collegian Sports Rocks!!!

UMASS STUDENT TICKET PICK-UP FOR MEN'S BASKETBALL GAMES AGAINST NIAGARA (PRESEASON CHASE NIT), UCONN (MASSMUTUAL U-GAME) AND BOSTON COLLEGE

10:00 AM – 2:00 PM – CAMPUS CENTER CONCOURSE
9:00 AM – 4:00 PM – CURRY HICKS CAGE

Available	Cost	Location	Opponent	Date
Nov. 2	$5.00	Mullins Center	Preseason Chase NIT v Niagara	Nov. 16
Nov. 2	$5.00	Mullins Center	MassMutual U-Game v UConn	Dec. 9
Nov. 2	$10.00	Worcester Centrum	Boston College	Dec.12

STUDENTS MUST PRESENT A VALID UMASS STUDENT ID CARD IN ORDER TO PURCHASE TICKETS. EACH STUDENT IS LIMITED TO TWO TICKETS PER EVENT.

A College Student's Guide To...
BACKOLOGY 100 & NECK NIGHT 102- Your chance to earn a back-a-laureate degree in spinal self-care.

The Lumbar Spine
You'll Learn:
• Normal Spinal Function
• Body Mechanics
• Tips on Posture
• Exercises for the care and feeding of your lower back
• What happens when you "Put your back out," and (how to put it back in)
SESSIONS TO BE HELD October 20, 6-8 pm
Physical Therapy Department University Health Services.
Sign up in Physical Therapy or call 577-5158.

That Pain in Your Neck
You'll Learn:
• Normal Spinal Anatomy & Function
• Body Mechanics
• Tips on Posture
• Exercises for the care and feeding of your neck
• What happens when you "Put your neck out," and (how to put it back)
SESSIONS TO BE HELD October 27, 6-8 pm
Physical Therapy Department University Health Services.
Sign up in Physical Therapy or call 577-5158.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Dribbling for wins

Jake Brodsky will lead the UMass men's soccer team into battle this weekend against La Salle and Fordham. Catch the preview in tomorrow's Collegian.

UNC athletes sit the bench

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina quarterback Oscar Davenport has been suspended from Saturday's game against Wake Forest for violating unspecified team rules.

Coach Carl Torbush also said Tuesday that offensive lineman Jon Hall will remain suspended for the rest of the season. Hall, a fourth-year junior guard, pleaded no contest to simple misdemeanor assault involving a female student at North Carolina.

Davenport was injured on the fourth play of the Tar Heels' season-opening loss to Miami of Ohio. The senior starter missed the rest of that game and the following week's loss to Stanford. Davenport played in the Tar Heels' loss to Georgia Tech on Sept. 26 and started North Carolina's wins the following weeks against Clemson and Pittsburgh. Davenport has completed 34 of 63 passes for 428 yards and three touchdowns this season.

"It's unfortunate to have to do this, but the team has rules by which all players must abide, regardless of one's position on the team," Torbush said. "I'm disappointed for our team and for Oscar, but it's a situation we have to deal with and continue to prepare for our game with Wake Forest."

Freshman Ronald Curry will start for the Tar Heels (2-3, 1-1 Atlantic Coast Conference) against Wake Forest (3-3, 2-1). Davenport is 7-2 as a starter, his only losses coming against Florida State last season and the Miami game on Sept. 5. Davenport failed to complete both of those games due to injuries.

■ NFL

continued from page 16

Miami is 4-2, like the Pats, but they aren't that good. Dan Marino, who used to be their bread and butter — and their water and oxygen, for that matter — is not a strong factor anymore, and their defense, although respectable now, is not consistent or talented enough to keep up with Drew Bledsoe and Robert Edwards.

Providing the Ravens aren't stupid, they'll come within the immense 10 1/2 point spread set between themselves and their hosts this weekend, the Green Bay Packers. Brett Favre has finally been figured out by coordinators around the league, and has thrown nine interceptions in the last three games, resulting in a 1-2 three-game streak.

Rod Woodson and his defensive mates ought to be able to do whatever it is that the other teams did and victimize him. Mike Holmgren says that Favre has been struggling because Dorsey Levens has been injured, but we all know that that's a cop-out.

Jacksonville is the worst 5-1 team in the history of the league. The Jaguars, although a solid ball club, have squeaked by several mediocre teams (which they should've been pulverizing) to obtain their hefty-looking record, as evidenced by their slim victories over the Bears and the Oilers among others. This time, they must enter Mile High Stadium to play against the Denver Broncos (-7 1/2) one of the legitimately great teams of the NFL in one of the hardest places to play. The Broncs will cover.

Finally, I'm going to make myself look extremely good by picking the Bills to go into Carolina and whoop the Panthers. Statistically, this isn't a lock, as Vegas is designating Buffalo as 2-point underdogs — I guess the mafia's starting to get to them down there. Saying that the competitive Bills with little big man Doug Flutie at the helm aren't going to bludgeon Carolina is absolutely ludicrous, and I think we all know that.

The only odd they might be playing against is the "they can't go without a win forever" theory, which just might work if the Bills weren't so tenacious. I'm going to put this theory into effect as I'm going to unofficially pick the Redskins to win next week (they're off this week).

Seth Koenig is a Collegian columnist.

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

Setting it straight

Freshman setter Heather Holtsberg will take UMass volleyball into action this weekend against La Salle and Temple. See the preview in tomorrow's Collegian.

CASTAWAY LOUNGE
Rte. S.B.10 Wilbraham, MA 413-665-8733
1997 BEST 1998
Adult Entertainment proudly presents:
EVERY MONDAY NIGHT IS FOOTBALL NIGHT
5 Beautiful Exotic Dancers 5pm-1am
all other day entertainment 1pm-1am
$$$ BEAUTIFUL GIRLS, need money? $$$
No experience? No transportation? We will provide everything!
Call (413) 665-8733 — Ask for Jim
Coming AMATEUR NIGHT
Our Beautiful VIP Room available for private parties
North of 91: Exit 22, take Rte. 5 & 10 north 2 miles
South of 91: Exit 24, take Rte. 5 & 10 south 2 miles

COMPLETE AUTO BODY REPAIRS
ALL MAKES AND MODELS
DANA AUTOMOTIVE
"THE AFFORDABLE TRANSPORTATION PLACE"
COLLISION REPAIR • GLASS INSTALLATION
Authorized GM/VW Body Shop
Frame & Unibody Straightening
24 HR. HOTLINE 586-7250
FREE LOANERS
968 Bridge Road NORTHAMPTON

Steve Madden.

ZANNA
downtown Amherst

Special notice for members of outdoor organizations:
Don't Miss EMS Club Day
Tuesday, October 27
20% off everything in stock!
Hampshire Mall Rt. 9
(413) 584-3554
EMS

Are Your Teeth Still on Summer Vacation?

U H S Dental Services offers Professional Dental Cleanings
Schedule an appointment TODAY at the University Health Services Dental Office.
577-5400
Ask about our 10-20% discount.

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE
- DISCOUNT OIL -
NORTHHAMPTON / HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888
• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

"Reason No 2 why you should take my GRE course."
You'll score more...
2 Our students improve an average of 212 points. And they significantly out-score students who took their other course.
Call 1-800-2REVIEW or visit us at www.review.com
Courses held on the UMASS campus! Smith, Mt. Holyoke, and WNEC as well.
THE PRINCETON REVIEW

Thanks for reading Collegian Sports, partner!

The Collegian- shining for you!

Spice of life.
India House dinner nightly
45 State Street
Northampton
586-6344
Proudly announcing the opening of
ALKA TRAVEL
Specializing in travel plans to India, sub-continent, and Europe.
Talk to us about discounted Air Fare.
Call 587-3030 for further information and rates.

Spear, Leeds & Kellogg
Come meet our Senior Managing Director (Amherst Alumnus) at our info session:
Amherst College - Converse Hall, Porter Lounge
Tuesday, October 27 at 6pm
We are one of the leading Wall Street Financial Services firms (largest NYSE and AMEX Specialist firm and NASDAQ market-maker).
We are looking for talented individuals for our TRAINING PROGRAM, CLEARING SERVICES and TRADING GROUPS. We offer a COMPETITIVE salary and EXCELLENT BENEFITS PACKAGE, including BONUS AND PROFIT SHARING. Interested parties can also fax/mail resumes to:
Fernando Casadevall, HR Generalist
Spear, Leeds & Kellogg
120 Broadway, 7th Floor
New York, NY 10271
Fax (212) 433-7490
We are an Equal Opportunity Employer by choice regardless of race, religion, age, sex, national origin or disability.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Back on their feet

The UMass football team will look to rebound from last week's loss to Connecticut during Saturday's Homecoming game against Villanova. Catch the preview in tomorrow's Collegian.

New staduim proposal strikes out in New York

By Michael Hill
Associated Press

ALBANY, N.Y.— It's outta here. An appeal to allow New York City residents to vote Nov. 3 on whether they want to replace Yankee Stadium was turned away by the state's top court.

The decision by the state Court of Appeals exhausts the appeals process for a referendum that would have given voters a chance to decide whether a $1 billion stadium should be built for the Yankees on Manhattan's West Side.

It also gives New York City Mayor Rudolph Giuliani a victory in his feud with city Democrats who wanted the measure on the ballot. Giuliani had proposed a new stadium in Manhattan after Yankees owner George Steinbrenner indicated he might move the team from the Bronx when the club's lease with the city expires in 2002.

"The proposition is over," Giuliani said from Providence, R.I., where he was campaigning for a fellow Republican.

"The court made the right decision."

New York City Council Speaker Peter Vallone, a Democrat running for governor, had championed the measure with an eye toward galvanizing voters in the Democrat-dominated city who want to keep the Yankees in their storied Bronx stadium. Democrats had particularly hoped that a high voter turnout on a stadium referendum — stoked by a potential World Series victory by New York over San Diego — could help Rep. Charles Schumer in his challenge to U.S. Sen. Alfonse D'Amato.

Vallone, too, would presumably have profited by a heavy turnout in his race against incumbent Republican Gov. George Pataki. The Giuliani-appointed Charter Revision Commission got the referendum bumped off by invoking its power to place on the ballot an alternate referendum on campaign finance reform.

Democrats accused Giuliani of political trickery, and got an initial ruling in their favor from a lower court judge.

But an appeals court ruled against Vallone on Oct. 17, saying that the charter commission acted legally.

The Court of Appeals on Tuesday refused to hear Vallone's appeal because no substantial constitutional question was directly involved. Vallone had argued that the Giuliani administration had unconstitutionally deprived the city council of its right to give voters the referendum.

Vallone insisted Tuesday that city residents were effectively being deprived of the right to vote by the Giuliani administration, and said he was calling upon the U.S. Justice Department to intervene.

"It's really very sad that one person can impose his or her will and deprive of people of their right to vote," Vallone said Tuesday.

When asked if he expected intervention with only two weeks left until the Election Day, Vallone said: "All you can do is try your best."

Yankee Stadium, opened in 1923 and known by the moniker "The House That Ruth Built," is one the most famous ballparks in America. But Steinbrenner is unhappy with the neighborhood around Yankee Stadium, its accessibility to mass transit facilities and the amenities in the stadium itself, including a shortage of luxury boxes.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Kicking forward

Kara Green and the UMass women's soccer team attempt to keep their A-10 post-season hopes alive and kicking when they face La Salle and Fordham this weekend.

Goten
In Sunderland

NOW Accepting Reservations for Christmas & New Year's Parties !
Rt. 116 • Sunderland (413) 665-3628
Casual Dress • Call for Reservations • Banquet Facilities for up to 50 People
Tuesday - Sunday
Tues, Weds, Thurs, Fri. & Sat. 5:00 til close
Sunday 2 til close
Complimentary Photos at Birthday Parties
OF JAPAN
COOKING AT YOUR TABLE
Two Dinners for $20*
Shrimp and Steak Combination includes salad, soup, vegetable noodle, rice, tea & ice cream
Two Dinners for $20*
Shrimp and Scallop Combination includes salad, soup, vegetable noodle, rice, tea & ice cream
Two Dinners for $17*
Steak and Chicken Combination includes salad, soup, vegetable noodle, rice, tea & ice cream
* NOT AVAILABLE TUES 5-8 PM, SUN 2-8 PM
SPECIALS ARE NOT AVAILABLE SAT. EVENING MON.

Peacework
Intl Volunteer Programs
December 24, 1998 - January 15, 1999
VIETNAM
Volunteers will help construct a school [illegible] Delta and renovate a clinic in Nhatrang. Participants will [illegible] the local community while learning about the culture, history and social issues of Vietnam. Apply by November 10, 1998. Cost: Appl $2200-2600 depending on departure city. Return volunteers, expert leadership, photos available. ALSO THIS WINTER: January 2-14, 1999 Volunteer [illegible] Cuba. Assist with construction of housing for low-income families in Havana. Apprx. cost $861 plus airfare. Apply by Nov. 10, 1998.
PEACEWORK project also in Dakar, Senegal
Managing projects in humanitarian service around the world since 1957
195 Washington Street SW, Blacksburg, VA 24060 / Web Site: www.peacework.org
Phone (540) 951-1176 / Fax (540) 951-2191 / E-mail: vfp@peacework.org

amc
Hampshire 6 • 584-7550
Hampshire Mall
You're in a Rehearsal!
Entered by October 5th, 1998 shows 6 in any PG 13 or R rated film after 6pm
Mt. Farms 4 • 584-9263
Mt. Farms Mall
WHAT DREAMS MAY COME (PG-13) Today at (5:30 @ 52.50) 8:20
HOLY MAN (PG) Today at (5:20 @ 52.50) 8:10
• PRACTICAL MAGIC (R) Today at (5:40 @ 52.50) 8:30
• BELOVED (R) Today at (4:00 @ 52.50) 7:30
RUSH HOUR (PG-13) Today at (5:30 @ 52.50) 8:20
URBAN LEGEND (R) Today at (5:30 @ 52.50) 8:10
NIGHT AT THE ROXBURY (PG-13) Today at (6:00 @ 52.50) 8:40
ANTZ (PG) Today at (5:50 @ 52.50) 8:30
BRIDE of CHUCKY (R) Today at (5:40 @ 52.50) 8:20
THERE'S SOMETHING ABOUT MARY (R) Today at (5:20 @ 2.50)
Special Engagement, no Passes or Coupons
$2.00 (Twi-Lite) Show Daily

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
STARTS FRIDAY - The Only Area Engagement
Curtain Daily 7:00 and 9:20
FULLY RESTORED TO ORSON WELLES' ORIGINAL VISION!
"A REAL GENIUS AT WORK!" JACK KROLL, NEWSWEEK ★★★★ MESMERIZING!
TOUCH OF EVIL
ACADEMY of MUSIC Cinemafreaks NORTHAMPTON, 584-8435

UP TO $2500.00 FOR BOOKS-TUITION EACH YEAR
• Practical Experience for Resume
• Advancement Opportunities
• Flexible Hours around class schedule
• 401K Plan
INTERESTED ?
Full and part time management positions available with FPS Inc., a Burger King franchise with restaurants in Western Massachusetts and Northern CT.
Write or fax: F.P.S. Inc. P.O. Box 357 Southampton, MA 01073 Fax: 413-527-7654

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
We have over 30,000 pints of fresh ales & lagers.
WE SHARE!!
Thurs- Love Bomb (70's Dance)
Fri- Top Hat with Earl Davis (R&B)
Sat- The Beat Roots
Sun- Jazz with Wil Lettman Quartet
• Fully Stocked Bar
• Late Night Menu Till Midnight
24-36 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-4400

Best Place for a Hot Tub
EAST HEAVEN HOT TUBS

30% STUDENT DISCOUNT
W/VALID I.D.
SUNDAYS -THURSDAYS
Holidays Excluded
413-586-6843 • 33 WEST ST. • NORTHAMPTON
www.eastheaven.com

DELIVERY HOTLINE
549-0077
Newly Rennovated Sushi Bar!

CHINESE & JAPANESE RESTAURANT
103 N. Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA 01002
(413)256-8923 • 256-8924
NOW ACCEPTING OCMP!

Department of Music & UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST
MULTIBAND POPS
Musicians & Dancers in Concert
Featuring:
University Wind, Jazz, Percussion & Marimba Ensembles, Dancers, Orchestra, Vocal Jazz and African American Music Ensemble & Minuteman Marching Band
Friday, October 23
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall 8pm
Tickets:
$15 General Admission; $10 UMass students, elders & children under 18
Tickets available at the Bowker Box Office, 545-2511
Co-sponsored by:
22 WWLP Advocate ALUMNI WTTT AM 1430 PIONEER VALLEY

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

THEY'RE SHOOTING a movie in Northampton, Saturday, 10/24: $25. You may get in for free. Hotline: 586-6558.

AUTO FOR SALE

88 Dodge Colt Wgn 127K miles. $900. Runs good. 549-1010.

83 Volvo Wgn Green, 4 speed, AC, 131K miles. $1500 or B/O. 256-2384.

94 Honda Passport 2x4, 80K miles. Excellent condition. $7950. 367-9813.

Honda Excel '88 $875, good town car, 130K miles. 665-7232.

96 Integra SE Loaded. 2 Phat. No reasonable offer refused. 546-3401.

CARS $100-$500
Police Impounds.
Hondas, Chevys, Jeeps, & Sport Utilities.
MUST SELL!
1-800-522-2730 x4554

WANTED: Toyotas, Novas, Prizms, Sentras. Any condition. Cash paid everyday. 1-800-649-4795.

AUTO PARTS

Hard Top for Jeep Wrangler. Black with defrost and wiper. $800. 549-0013.

COMPUTERS

Macintosh Printer
Color StyleWriter 1500
$100 or B/O.
Call Tony @ 549-5514.

486 Computer
Great For Student
Works Good
$100.
Color VGA $50.
(413)584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Wanted 98 People
We'll pay you
to lose up to 29+ lbs.
Expires 11/11/98.
1-703-817-1071

Earn $100
Exercise Science
Immobilization Study
Needs You.
Call Steve 549-3877

EMPLOYMENT

Drivers Wanted
Pays $9 to $15 per hour.
Inside help wanted too.
Flexible hours.
Call Dominos
256-8911

Legal Assistants Wanted Spring 1999 Internships with Student Legal Services Office; get attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary— training provided. Deadline to begin the application process is Nov 13, 1998— Contact The Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Paid Marketing Internship Campus Street Reps Wanted: to market and promote animalhouse.com, the ultimate online college community. E-mail us at campus@animalhouse.com or call 800-254-8433.

HELP WANTED
Financial Services Co. based in Agawam opening new location in Hadley has several part-time positions available. Hours are 5pm to 9pm, Mon-Fri. Responsibilities include booking and scheduling appointments for our Mortgage consultants. We provide a service which enables home owners to save $20,000 to $50,000 on scheduled interest payments on their home loan without re-financing.
- NO SELLING INVOLVED
- MINUTES FROM CAMPUS
- ON BUSLINE
- $6.00/HR + BONUS

Call our Agawam office to schedule an interview. (413)789-2454.

SAVONS Earn holiday cash. No door to door required. Flexible. 1-800-406-0085.

EMPLOYMENT

The Magma Group is looking for student organizations and motivated student reps to assist with promotions on campus. This is an easy way to earn great money while working flexible hours. For more info please call (617)783-9700 ext 22.

VarsityBooks.com seeks student managers to direct on-campus operations for rapidly growing e-commerce business. This paid part-time position is ideal for innovative, highly motivated, exceptionally bright, go-getters who want to prove experience isn't everything. Call 202-256-6048 for more info.

Artists, Illustrators, Cartoonists Start up Multimedia Company needs Illustrators for part-time work. Also, there are opportunities for cartoonists to publish their own work. Shanon Fynan 413-323-4578.

Waitress Part-Time
Make $400 & work 2 or 3 nights.
Flexible hours.
Dancers For Upscale Gentleman's Club
No experience necessary.
Unlimited $$$ Potential.
Bikini, Topless, or Nude!
Call 413-536-0502

Teaching Assistants/Instructional Aides
Amherst (Elana Aitken, Coordinator)
Innovative alternative learning environments for students with learning disabilities and behavioral issues.
Training provided.
Excellent opportunity for those considering careers in education.
Send a letter and resume ASAP to:
Jone Messmer #58
Hampshire Educational Collaborative
30 Industrial Drive East
Northampton, MA 01060
AA/EOE/ADA

EMPLOYMENT

Kitchen Line Cooks Part-time, flexible schedules. Starting at $7.00/hr., depending on experience. 2 or 3, 5 or 6 hour shifts per week. Apply in person. The Pub Restaurant, 15 East Pleasant St.

ABSOLUTE SPRING BREAK..."TAKE 2"
2 FREE TRIPS ON ONLY 15 SALES and... Earn $$$$. Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida, Padre! Lowest prices! Free Meals, Parties & Drinks. Limited Offer 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplashtours.com

INSURANCE SALES
Earn $35,000+ in your 1st year as a personal lines account exec. If you have the drive and ambition to succeed, are well organized and have exceptional interpersonal skills, start your career in homeowner/auto insurance sales. We will train the right individual to sell our highly competitive insurance products and provide you with unlimited qualified leads. Candidate must be willing to work evening. We offer a competitive base + commission and complete benefits package. Send resume to W.D. Grinnell, Webber and Grinnell Insurance Agency, PO Box 538, Northampton, MA

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ FOR HIRE: DJ FOOZ is now booking your next function. Spinning the best music for any occasion. Call Tim 549-9127.

Lights and Sound: Rave to Dorm Party. Your DJ's or ours. Call BARR Productions (413)737-8561.

FOR RENT

Take Over Our Lease 2 bedrooms. On bus line. Call 549-5318.

Fridge Rentals Free delivery. 253-9742.

FOR SALE

Ride Kildy Snowboard Used 3 times. Emery Bindings. $175/BO. 546-6179.

GREEK AFFAIRS

Congratulations New Members: Jessica, Cheryl, Amy, Jenn, Colleen, Leah, Kate G., Andrea, Melissa, Kristen, Jill, Cori, Courtney, Natalie, Kate H., Brooke, Wendy, Katie. Love, AXΩ

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Cindy- Only 2 days until your 21st birthday! Love, Us

HEALTH & BEAUTY

We're here to pump... YOU UP! Creatine Monohydrate, Creatine Surge, DHEA, Whey Protein and more from Fitness Workshop delivered right to your door. 1-877-FIT-WORK. www.fitnessworkshop.com

INSTRUCTION

CARDIO KICKBOXING Amherst Athletic Club. Train with the pros! 256-0080.

MUSICAL EQUIP

Drum Set 5 piece black TAMA Rockstar with Basic HARDWARE + cymbals. $450. 247-5248.

MUSICAL INSTRUCTION

Piano Lessons
Experienced Berklee Grad has Fall openings. On bus line. Classics, Contemporary, Improvisational. Very versatile. Cheryl 549-8580.

ROOM FOR RENT

Looking to fill 2 rooms in a 3 bedroom Puffton apt. Available either Dec 1 or Jan 1. Must commit till June 1. Call 549-7076.

ROOM FOR RENT

Three Bedroom House Newly renovated, quiet area, big backyard, washer/dryer, 15 minutes from campus. Call Katie 256-5995.

SERVICES

Legal Questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Keg Systems New installations, parts. CO2 filled. Call Bryan 586-2452.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst Area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TO SUBLET

3 bedroom apt for sublet. $875 per month, all utilities included. On bus route. Cliffside Apt. For more info call (413)665-0052.

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK 99!
Cancun * Nassau * Jamaica * Mazatlan * Acapulco * Bahamas Cruise * Florida * South Padre
Travel Free and make lots of Cash!
Top reps are offered full-time staff jobs.
Lowest Price Guaranteed.
Call now for details!
www.classtravel.com
800-838-6411
930 Comm Ave South
On BU's West Campus

SPRING BREAK '99
Largest selection of Spring Break Destinations, including Cruises!
Foam Parties, Drink Specials, and Club Admissions.
Group Discounts.
Epicurean Tours
1-800-231-4-FUN

TUTORING

Have your paper typed by an English Major! $1.50 1st 2 pages, $1 each additional. Proofreading and Typing, $2 a page. Call Jen at 256-6351.

WANTED

NOTICE
If anyone saw the incident at Pruddy's on Friday, Oct. 16, involving a student and bouncers please call me- A.J 256-6075

Active Women Needed For Nutritional Study Graduate Research Study in Zinc Supplementation. 18 to 40 years old and exercising 3 times a week. Call Christy at 532-2733.

The Classifieds..

Does a Body Good!!

Do you have the mid-term blues?

Are you longing for the beach and fun?

Look forward to Spring Break and Plan a FUN vacation NOW!!!

Check out The Classifieds today!

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, OCT. 22

Discussion — There will be a class and discussion, as well as a Hare Krishna Vegetarian Feast and Bhagavad-Gita, in the Commonwealth Room in the Student Union at 6:30 p.m.

Lecture — A lecture entitled "Not Your Ordinary Academic Black Man" will be given in the Campus Center from 12:30–2 p.m. The event is part of the GLBT Lecture Series. Check at information desk for room number.

Lecture — A lecture entitled "Neither Dreyfus Nor Dreyfus: The German Jews and Liberal Europe" in the New York Room in Mary Woolley Hall at Mount Holyoke College at 4:15 p.m. A reception will follow.

Lecture — Judith Halberstam will talk about her book Female Masculinity at 12:30 p.m. in room 811 of the Campus Center. The event is part of the GLBT Lecture Series.

Meeting — The UMass English Club will have a meeting at 6 p.m. on the second floor of Bartlett. The movie "Shadowlands," based on the life of C.S. Lewis, will be shown.

Speakout — National Young Women's Day of Action will hold a speakout on the struggle for equality from noon–1 p.m. on the student union steps.

Speech — Don Feder, columnist for the Boston Herald, will give a speech entitled "Bill Clinton and Other National Tragedies: The Long and Weary Road to Impeachment" at 7 p.m. in room 168C of the campus center.

Speech — Robert Ader will give a speech entitled "Conditioned Immune Responses: The Role of Conditioning in Drug Therapy (The Placebo Effect?)" in the Hooker Auditorium at Mount Holyoke College at 6:30 p.m. A reception follows.

Workshop — There will be a swing workshop from 5:30–7 p.m. in Totman room 101. No partner is necessary. Event is sponsored by the Ballroom Dance Club.

Workshop — A workshop on contraception and safer sex will be held at 1 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

FRIDAY, OCT. 23

Ceremony — The Isenberg School of Management will unveil the naming of the school with a ceremony honoring Gene and Ronnie Isenberg. Seating begins at 8:30 a.m., and the program begins at 9 a.m.

Community — The Theatre in the World weekend begins with registration at 7 p.m. in the Rooke Theatre at Mount Holyoke College. A welcome and speech entitled "Women and the Future of American Theatre" will follow at 8:10 p.m.

Meeting — The "UMass Students for a Free Tibet" will have a meeting at 6 p.m. in the campus center room 174.

Show — There will be a Caricature Show in the Bluewall Cafe from 5–9 p.m. Students can get personalized caricatures done while listening to music and watching comedian Will Mathews perform. The movie "Lethal Weapon 4" will follow.

NOTICES

Community — Official Mail-In Voter Registration Forms are available at the Registrar's Office, and Commuter Services in the Student Union. Voting is on November 3.

Exhibit — "Equal Partners" is being shown at the Smith College Museum of Art from Sept. 25–Dec. 13. This exhibit showcases the work of 15 American firms founded by female/male partners.

Workshop — A workshop for women survivors of childhood sexual abuse will take place on Nov. 7. The workshop includes writing, drawing, and movement. In the evening, participants are also invited to perform dances, music, and monologues about healing from abuse. Call 586-7590 for more information and to sign up.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Next time, try US first. New Ustore — Not like a mall... Closer.

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board	18 The Learning Channel
3 CBS/3 Hartford	19 UVC-TV19
4 CBS/4 Boston	20 ABC/40 Springfield
5 ABC/3 Boston	21 Gavel to Gavel
6 PBS/57 Springfield	22 NBC/22 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Ch.	23 Syndicate
8 UPN/20 Hartford	24 Bloomberg Financial
9 Weather Channel	25 CTN
10 NBC/30 New Britain	27 TBS
11 Fox/61 Hartford	28 BET
12 PBS/24 Hartford	29 TV Land
13 WCCH & HSCN	30 Univision
14 International	31 Comedy Central
15 UMass Academic TV	32 Cartoon
16 WB/New Haven	33 Much Music
17 HSCN Programming

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 22, 1998

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer	Africans in America "Judgment Day"			Colonial Era to Civil War		Conn. Journal	Chef!	This Old Hse.
WFSB	3	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Promised Land (In Stereo)		Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)	48 Hours (In Stereo)	News	News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Promised Land (In Stereo)		Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)	48 Hours (In Stereo)	News	News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Depression		Wayans Bros.	Jamie Foxx	Steve Harvey	For Your Love	News	Friends	Nanny
WLVI	6		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny	Friends	Wayans Bros.		Newsradio	Frasier (R)	Will & Grace	ER "Ambush" (R) (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends (R)		Newsradio	Frasier (R)	Will & Grace	ER "Ambush" (R) (In Stereo)	News	Newsradio	LAPD
WTXX		9	Married... With	Home Imp.	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	"Charleston" (1998, Science Fiction) Bobbie Phillips, Eric Lloyd.						News		Tonight Show
WVIT		10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Friends (R)		Newsradio	Frasier (R)	Will & Grace	ER "Ambush" (R) (In Stereo)	News		Friends
WTIC	8	11	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Frasier	World Series: Game 5 – Indians or Yankees at Braves or Padres						News		Tonight Show
WWLP	9	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends (R)		Newsradio	Frasier (R)	Will & Grace		Africans in America "Judgment Day" (R)		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGBY	10	6	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Africans in America "Judgment Day"						News		Nightline
WGGB	11	28	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Vengeance Unlimited "Justice"		Figure Skating U.S. Professional Championships. (In Stereo)				News		Cheers
WSBK	12		Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	"Charleston" (1998, Science Fiction) Bobbie Phillips, Eric Lloyd.						e "Invasion U.S.A." (1985, Adventure) Chuck Norris.
WTBS	13		Mama's Family	Mama's Family	Roseanne	Roseanne	WCW Thunder		WCW Thunder				Touch of Frost (R) (Part 1 of 2)		Law & Order "Cause Mortis"
A&E	14		Northern Exposure "Crit Tree"		Law & Order	Jeopardy!	Biography: Mary Tyler Moore		American Justice (R)				Newsst... Entertainment		Sports	Moneyline
CNN	15	23	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live				Aspen Comedy Festival (R)		Daily Show	Stein's Money
COM	16	38	Gallagher	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	"Xtro" (1982, Horror) Tony Fenton.		"An American Werewolf in London" (1981) David Naughton.				Aspen Comedy Festival (R)		Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	17		New House	Fix-It-Line	Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery: Kalahari		Into Unknown	Strange-True			Nature's Wrath		Justice Files	"Scammed" (R)
ESPN	18		Up Close	Sportscenter		Reno Air Show	25th Anniversary – Battle of the Sexes						Japanese Sumo Wrestling		Sportscenter
LIFE	19		Ellen	Ellen	Party of Five	Mixed Signals	Chicago Hope "Lean Let Die"		Eye Spy Video (Say What?)		Total Request Live (In Stereo)		Celebrity		Cut (In Stereo)	Loveline
MTV	20		5:30 Jams Countdown		College Tour	Beavis-Butt	Eye Spy Video (Say What?)		Beavis-Butt		Daria	Undressed	Real World		Real World
NICK	21		Figure It Out	Secret of Alex	Doug	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Skeeter	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Happy Days	Laverne	I Love Lucy		Bewitched
SCIFI	22		Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Sightings	Star Trek: Voyager	Medical Detect	Without Warn.	Search for the Safer Car (R)		Crash Test (R)		"Hostile Ir" (1992, Horror) Tim Trask, William Katt.		Sightings	Star Trek
TLC	23	28	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours (R)		★★★ "Geronimo" (1993, Drama) Joseph Runningfox. (In Stereo)						★★★ "Crazy-Horse" (1996, Drama) Michael Greyeyes.		Medical Detect	Without Warn.
TNT	24		Babylon 5		ER "A Miracle Happens Here"		★★★ "Far and Away" (1992, Drama) Tom Cruise, Nicole Kidman. (In Stereo)						New York Undercover
USA	25		Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Xena: Warrior Princess		★★★ "Body Cat" (1997) Jamie Foxx.				Tactical Assault" (1996) Ruger Hauer.		Inside the NFL (In Stereo)
HBO	26		★★ "Quicksilver" (1986, Drama) Kevin Bacon. (In Stereo) PG-13				★★½ "Sudden Impact" (1983, Drama) Clint Eastwood.						"Night of the Demons 3" (1997) Amalia Kinkade.		"The Fem"
MAX	27		(4:45) "My Girl"		★½ "Sir Patrol" (1990) Royal Rose. PG		★★ "Overnight Delivery" (1996) Paul Rudd.						Seven Years		Lino L (R)	Ruta Awaken.	Red Shoe	Dead Man's
SHOW	28		★★ "Changing Habits" (1997, Mona Kelly. (In Stereo) PG-13

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Liberty Meadows By Frank Cho

Non Sequitur By Wiley

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Sven By Stephen Higgins

Sven By Stephen Higgins

Horoscopes

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — Someone is likely to drive you to distraction today with a great deal of whining. Put your foot down, but do it gently.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You're not likely to get the reaction you're seeking today unless you hand pick your audience. Keep things in the family today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You are in the mood for some spiritual nourishment today. You can have it, but expect it to come from an unlikely source.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You may want to limit your interaction with certain people to just setting the job done. For now, lea ve it at that.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — You may discover that an enemy is really a valued friend. Both of you can inspire the other to do some great things!

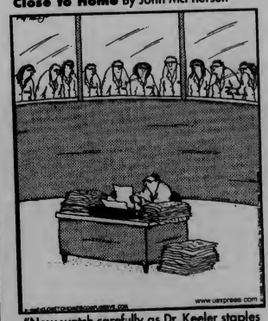
PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — The harmony you seek may be somewhat out of reach today. Stay in and around familiar territory in order to enjoy a modicum of peace.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — The admiration you feel for someone may come to mean more to you today than in the past. There is a connection being formed here.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You're in no mood to admit feelings of insecurity and vulnerability, but your behavior belies the mask you're wearing. Let others help.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — Now is not the time to get involved in something you are not prepared for. You're best bet is to stick to familiar tasks today.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You're in the mood for adventure today, but be sure to weigh the consequences of your actions before putting yourself in danger.



LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — You're feeling rather domesticated these days, so find true contentment by spending the day with loved ones at home.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Someone may be trying to throw a wrench in the works, but you will see it coming and should be able to avoid any lasting damage.

Quote of the Day

"I've changed my plea to guilty because freedom is wasted on me."
–Morrissey

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Now watch carefully as Dr. Keeler staples the insurance claim form to the patient's admission form.".

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Broccoli Royal
Veal Parmesan Sandwich

DINNER
Szechuan Beef and Broccoli
Baked Ziti
Grilled Cheese Sandwich

Worcester
LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Bow Ties/Italian Sausage Sauce
Beans and Rice

DINNER
Szechuan Beef and Broccoli
Handcut Cod Sub
Szechuan Tofu and Broccoli
Pastabilities
Chicken Cacciatore

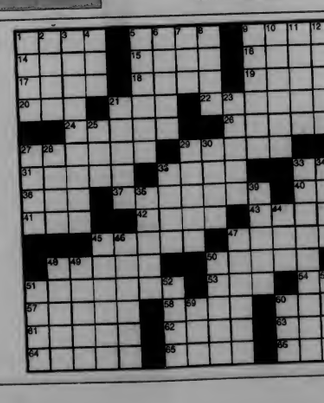
Hampshire
LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Veal Parmesan Sandwich

DINNER
Szechuan Beef and Broccoli
Baked Ziti

Berkshire
LUNCH
Worcester Breakfast Sandwich
Hamburger on a Roll
Ziti/Tomato Sauce
Black Bean Chili

DINNER
Chicken Cattiatore
Szechuan Beef and Broccoli
Szechuan Tofu and Broccoli
Pastabilities

Night Editor — Casey Kane
Photo Technician — Roberto Delgado
Copy Editor — Ken Mc Donald
Production Assistant — Rob Snow
Production Staff — Lisa Metcalf, Bridget Dolezsar



ACROSS
1 Gratuities
5 Mineral
9 Sticky
14 Rake
15 Russian river
16 Century plant
17 Singer James
18 Flimsy, as an excuse
19 Compare
20 — de cologne
21 Hole
22 Some have four leaves
24 Out-of-date
26 "— You Glad You're You?"
27 Elephant seal
29 Yawns
31 "The Little Mermaid"
32 Is sick
33 Old French coin
36 Allow
37 Scarf
40 Golf score
41 "— Is lal"
42 Belfry inhabitants
43 Harms
45 Oafs
47 Mother —
48 "From the Terrace" writer
50 Goddess of hunting
51 Cut off
53 Domicile: abbr.
54 Acted
57 Safe
58 Cousin of PDQ
60 Ocean's motion
61 Come to terms
62 H.H. Munro's pen name
63 Before long
64 Birds' homes
65 Eve's home
66 Homely

DOWN
1 Oak or maple
2 Smidgen
3 Tolerate
4 Caspian —
5 Stubborn
6 Angry
7 Machine part
8 Sir — Guinness
9 In abundance
10 Pointed arches
11 "The Old — Bucket"
12 Tennis champ Chris —
13 Longings
21 Sacred song
23 Expire
25 Fruit-cooler
27 Angel's "headgear"
28 Popular cookie
29 Freebies
30 "— fair in love . . ."
32 At a distance
33 Moving further apart
34 Wild —: misdeeds
35 — Minor: constellation
38 WWII craft
39 Ostriches' kin
44 Coffee container
45 Edward
46 Speechifies
47 Man's jewelry
48 Midwestern Indian
49 Units of time
50 Duckling's dad
51 Lendl of tennis
52 Soothe
55 Object of adoration
56 Refute
59 Depressed
60 Greek letter

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

C	A	S	H	B	A	J	A	Y	U	C	C	A
O	B	O	E	A	T	O	P	E	T	H	E	L
Y	O	U	N	G	S	T	E	R	A	M	E	N	D
E	D	S	O	K	A	Y	O	R	O	T	T	O
R	E	D	I	E	F	G	I	N	S
A	N	D	R	I	V	E	T	E	D
A	C	I	N	G	B	O	D	E	D	L	Y	E
B	U	L	K	H	A	Y	D	N	G	L	E	N
E	S	K	M	O	R	A	Y	F	E	E	D	S
P	A	R	A	S	O	L		L	A	M
A	D	E	N	M	A	R	S	H	I	P
F	E	R	V	I	D	P	A	N	G	O	D	E
A	L	T	A	S	Y	A	N	C	O	U	V	E	R
L	I	N	G	O	A	T	E	F	E	A	R	S
L	A	D	E	N	M	E	S	S	O	R	L	Y

© 1998, United Feature Syndicate

SPORTS

Pats don't tackle and lose to Jets; Jones a mistake

It's been a couple of weeks since I've had a chance to write this column, so I might be a little rusty.

For you New Yorkers, out there, you win. The Yankees are winning and the Jets came out and played up to my beloved Patriots on Monday night. On New York's behalf, Vinny Testaverde had a great game — he consistently stepped up in the face of the blitz and hit key passes down the field. Glenn Foley, if you want a starting job in the NFL, start looking elsewhere.

Seth Koening
on

Now I'm going to pick apart why the Pats lost: Defense, defense, defense. New England defensive coordinator Steve Sidwell has apparently taught his talented understudies that a back massage constitutes a tackle. How many times did let fullback Leon Johnson take a Vinicenzo dump-off pass down the sideline for 12 yards because six Patriots came by and missed weak arm-tackles?

Sidwell also never stopped blitzing, regardless of how many times he failed miserably at it. If at first you don't succeed. Steve, try an underneath zone with Ty Law on loudmouth New York wideout Keyshawn Johnson man-to-man on the corner.

The only New England defender who did his job was safety Lawyer Malloy. If you're a football fan at all — I don't care from where — you've got to love Malloy. That headhunter doesn't just tackle people, he decapitates them. That's what I like to see in a safety; the ability to instill fear in everyone running a route over the middle because they know he's going to clean their clock whether they catch the ball or not.

In other news in the league, the San Diego Chargers got fed up with losing and inserted June Jones into their coaching slot. Remember when Jones was the skipper of the Falcons? Apparently San Diego doesn't, because they promoted the guy to the head job. I'm guessing that it wasn't a good idea. When Jones had all the tools in Atlanta, he got shellacked week in and week out. With only rookie quarterback Ryan Leaf and bruising running back Natrone Means to propel the team, he'll prove quickly that he isn't the man to bring the ring.

It's a running debate down here at the Collegian whether or not Randall Cunningham deserves to go into the Hall of Fame after his career finally ends. I don't have a definite opinion yet, but if he can single-handedly drive the Minnesota Vikings deep in the playoffs this year, I think he can make a case for himself. His stats upon coming out of retirement are just sickeningly good. Keep an eye on him.

If Emmitt Smith is "back," like so many people say, then why is the Dallas offense looking so pathetic this year? Only the Super Bowl champion Denver Broncos have scored more than 20 points on the Cowboys' defense this year, yet the arrogant Texans are 4–3 — not an impressive record when you consider they lost to the 2–5 Bears last week. Troy Aikman, Michael Irvin and the Boys must not have their mojo working. Where are all their fair-weather fans now? You bandwagon riders out there know who you are, so hang your heads in disloyal shame!

The man still, however, is Barry Sanders, who schooled everybody's new favorite team, the Green Bay Packers, last Thursday night with a 73-yard touchdown scamper in the midst of a 155-yard game. Hell, yeah.

While we're on Detroit, how about that new kid, Charlie Batch? This isn't going to make any difference now, but I've always thought Scott Mitchell was overrated. He played well replacing Dan Marino in 1992 (it seems so long ago now), but he's not a starting signal-caller in this league, despite his lofty numbers over the last couple of years. Batch, on the other hand, seems to have that special something that makes great QBs. It remains to be seen if he can keep it up, but the rookie has that drive in him that, although might not get him 4,000 yards and 30 scores, wins games.

My bold predictions of the week:

In the only other NFL column I did I made four picks and went 2–2, and the games I lost were really close. Here comes the reckoning day.

Instilling my loyal faith in my beloved Patriots, I will guarantee a win at Miami (–1) this weekend. New England is not favored to come out victorious, but they will "squish the fish" as they always play well against the Dolphins, and they will be fired up after losing to the New York Jets.

Turn to NFL, page 12

UMass hockey takes to ice against Lowell

By Paul Teves
Collegian Staff

What's the best way to bounce back after a tough loss to the No. 4 team in the nation? Simple, come back to the friendly confines of the William D. Mullins Center for a home game.

This is what the Massachusetts hockey team will be doing tonight when they take on Hockey East rival UMass-Lowell.

The Minutemen are coming off a tough loss to No. 4 Michigan State, in East Lansing, Mich., 3–1. But the Minutemen played well and are hoping to carry any momentum gained into their home date with Lowell.

Despite losing stars like Greg Koehler, who scored 37 points in 33 games last year, to the Carolina Hurricanes of the National Hockey League, the River Hawks return a lot of experienced players in a year of high turn over in the Hockey East Conference.

"They lost Greg Koehler, but they are one team that's sitting there waiting to pounce on Hockey East teams. It's an important game for us. We have the Alumni Cup with Lowell, which includes three games with them, it's a game we need to win," Massachusetts coach Joe Mallen said.

The depth on Lowell may also present problems for the Minutemen. Some of the key returning starters for Lowell include forwards Chris Bell, who contributed 31 points last season, John Campbell, who scored eight goals while adding 13 assists, and Brad Rooney, who scored 11 goals and tallied 14 assists. They also return defensive standout Kevin Bertram, who had 21 points of which 18 were assists.

"UMass-Lowell is always a team in our league that has good depth. They also return 19 starters, including four defenseman. It's going to be a great test for us right now no doubt," Mallen said.

After the Michigan State game last Saturday night Mallen talked about how the penalties at the end of the game had taken away some opportunities for the Minutemen. UMass had five power play opportunities and converted on none, but more importantly it had to fight to kill off eight of 10 penalties acquired. The Minutemen gave up two goals shorthanded, including the game-clincher by Mike York on a five-on-three.

"After reviewing the game film and we had dimiss some of those calls as not great calls, but we did talk for sure about having less penalties then the other team, and having more powerplay opportunities than the other team," Mallen said.

One of the main reasons UMass was in the game so long against Michigan State was sophomore netminder, Markus Helanen. Helanen came up with 31 saves, some of which were of the incredible variety. It not for Helanen's play in the third period during those various power play opportunities, the Minutemen could have suffered a demoralizing loss.

"He played very well, you want to get more than 30 shots and give up less than 30 shots a game. I think were not going to win many hockey games if we continue to give up more than 30 and shot less than 30. Those are two keys right now that we're going to shoot for," Mallen said.

In order for the Minutemen to come up with the much needed win in their home opener they need a variety of things. They will need to provide more shots than the 17 shots they mustered against the Spartans. They will also need to use their speed as a big plus against the River Hawks.

"We're trying to continue to play in our system, we only allowed one five-on-five goal the other night, and our goal is to keep every team to three goals or less. We've got to mount our offense a little more and get more shots. Play for some transition type goals, and if we can do that then we can win the game," Mallen said.

For UMass, there are several players which could make a big difference for them this season. Besides the 10 freshman on the team who are expected to strengthen the defense as well as provide some clutch late game offense, the Minutemen also return speedsters Jeff Turner and Nick Stephens.

The Minutemen also expect solid results from forwards R.J. Gates, (one assist thus far this season) Nathan Sell (one goal against Michigan State) and last year's returning star Jeff Blanchard. Blanchard buried four goals and tallied 15 assists last season.

UMass will also need leadership as well as an emotional spark from captain, defenseman Dean Stork. Stork is not only expected to provide this team with leadership, but also with scoring. His most important role this season is to be a leader for a core of young defenseman, who will need to carry UMass through a difficult Hockey East schedule.

"Our speed is something we're trying to feel out, Turner and Stephens are very fast, now we just need to see who is going to break out in the scoring column for us and provide us with the scoring that we need to win. The thing is that on this team anybody can do that," Mallen said.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO
Sophomore goalkeeper Markus Helanen will lead the UMass hockey team into battle tonight against UMass Lowell at the Mullins Center.

Massachusetts field hockey set to meet URI in final A-10 test

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts field hockey team will face its final regular-season conference challenge today when the Minutewomen travel to Rhode Island for a 3 p.m. contest.

The meeting will be the last Atlantic 10 game of the regular season for UMass, which has already garauteed itself a spot in the postseason conference tournament.

This is especially important for A–10 field hockey schools, because only the winner of the postseason tourney will advance to the NCAA tournament.

"You have to take care of your conference first," UMass coach Patty Shea said after her team beat La Salle and West Chester two weeks ago. "If you take care of the regular season games in conference, then you can set different goals for the rest of the season."

UMass has all but taken care of the Atlantic 10, with a shellacking of the Explorers (8–0) and an easy win over West Chester (3–1). Last week, the Minutewomen defeated Temple (4–1) and S. Joseph's (3–0).

With a win today, UMass will secure a perfect conference record.

Regardless of today's performance, the Minutewomen will be the No. 1 seed when play opens in the Atlantic 10 tournament at Temple University in Philadelphia on Nov. 7. They will face the lowest seed in the four-team tourney during the semifinals.

Whatever team UMass faces in the tournament — and more importantly, the Rams today — will have to be prepared for an offensive battle. Freshman Anke Bruemmer and senior Erica Johnston currently lead the team in scoring with 18 and 16 points respectively.

While Johnston has divided her time between goal-scoring and acting in a set-up role, Bruemmer has racked up her points on tallies. Bruemmer is especially dangerous on the UMass offensive penalty corners, where she is a primary hitter, a role Johnston also handles.

Consistently helping Johnston and Bruemmer on the corners have been sophomore Patty Robinson and senior Vicky Browne. Browne hits out from the sideline on corners, while Robinson stops the ball on the circle.

Kate Putnam, whose career points total of 56 is bolstered by 26 assists, has taken a more prominent scoring role this season. Last week alone Putnam put together one of her best offensive efforts with the game-winning goal against Syracuse on Oct. 13 (a 3–0 UMass win) and a pair of tallies, including the game-winner, against St. Joseph's last Sunday (another 3–0 UM win).

The Minutewomen will wrap up their regular season with Saturday's final home game. Regional rival Connecticut will visit Richard F. Garber Field as the team honors its seniors: Putnam, Johnston, Browne, Laura Phelan and Kerry Lyons.

Minutewoman Notes: Former UMass standout Tara Jelley will be on hand for this Saturday's Homecoming contest against Connecticut. The Greenfield native will not be in the stands, however. A current assistant coach at UConn, Jelley will be roaming the sidelines against her alma mater.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN
Erica Johnston and the Massachusetts field hockey team take their undefeated conference record to Rhode Island today.

Yanks and Torre win Series in four

By Jim Litke
Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — The first time, he was due.

He owed a ring to the big brother who raised him and besides, Joe Torre had gone longer than anybody else in the major leagues — almost 4,300 games as a player and manager — without getting to the World Series.

This time, he got here dragging the weight of expectations behind him.

"I'm not much for making comparisons," Torre said, "but it's definitely tougher."

"The last time was kind of magical. It was more like holding on, seeing where the ride would take us. This time, it's achieving what everybody expected of you since June."

The Yankees did not disappoint, posting a 3-0 win last night to complete a four-game sweep of the San Diego Padres. In 1996, a good baseball team and a long season wore down Torre's nails and his nerves and wound his stomach tighter than the seams on a baseball. He lost one brother, Rocco, in the middle of the season and his older brother, Frank, a Braves first baseman who gave Joe his World Series ring, was in a hospital awaiting a heart transplant.

And yet, improbable as it seemed after his Yankees fell behind the Atlanta Braves two games to none, Torre felt in that very same gut that it would end the way it did.

This time, as the front man for the deepest, most talented team in the game, it was more a matter of keeping cool, knowing which screw to tighten and which to loosen. It was getting some of his stars to accept sitting on the bench some days, keeping the role players confident enough to step in at the big moments.

And more than anything else, with all the winning New York did — 114 games in the regular season, breezing through three postseason series with only two losses - it was finding a way to keep everybody on the club happier most of the time than they had a right to be. In that sense, the old catcher had a lot of practice.

"He knew how to do that even when he played," recalled Tony Cloninger, the Yankees bullpen coach who came up to majors in 1961 with Torre on the old Milwaukee Braves. "Take me, for instance. I was the kind of pitcher who always had to have his way, but I'd go five, six, seven straight games with Joe behind the plate where I never shook him off once. Now, he's got to keep 25 guys happy and if you look at where we are, you can see he hasn't lost his touch."

After a stellar playing career, New York is Torre's fourth stop as a manager. He worked the bench on the other side of the Big Apple, for the Mets for five seasons, without much distinction. He turned in a first-place finish and two seconds in Atlanta in three years and got fired anyway. That experience sent him into the broadcast booth for Gene Autry's Angels for a half-dozen years, certain he didn't need the aggravation any longer.

He had a cushy job, a comfortable life in California, a wife happy that he was home most of the time, good hours, lots of golf — just about everything he ever wanted. But then, early in 1990, less than a month after Torre turned 50, Whitey Herzog was fired as manager of the St. Louis Cardinals.

When he called up the organization he bled red for as a player, Torre was a little too wizened to pass off his application as a solution to a mid-life crisis. Instead, it was something much simpler.

"I guess," Torre said at the time, "that I just like the view better from the dugout than anywhere else in the park."

The more you hear him talk about the game, the more his ballplayers and coaches talk about him, the easier it becomes to understand why the three organizations that employed him as a field hand were willing to rehire Torre as a field manager. Or why mercurial George Steinbrenner grabbed him once he turned up on the open market and hasn't cut him loose since.

Torre is loyal. He works hard. He spunks well. He is a proven former ballplayer, which never hurts in trying to resurrect a proud team. More than any of it, though, it's because he's looked at the game from top to bottom, from the broadcast booth to the bench, and always come back for more.

"People want to know what it is about Joe that suddenly made him such a smart manager," New York general manager Brian Cashman said. "But it's not like he's doing anything different than he ever did.

"He's just got better horses now and more than anything, he's not afraid to lead. Not lead by screaming, but by making sure everybody gets an opportunity. The hard thing for all these talented guys is to trust somebody making decisions that affect them," Cashman said. "They know Joe's been where they are. That's what trust is about."

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 33 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Friday, October 23, 1998

Play that funky music

The 24th Annual Multiband Pops concert kicks off Homecoming weekend this Friday. Check out our preview inside (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Homecoming Feast: Cats

Kerry Taylor and the UMass football team take on Villanova this Saturday at Warren P. McGuirk Stadium in this year's Homecoming game (see page 12).

WORLD

Chinese deny Western interpretation of rights

BEIJING (AP) — China ended its first-ever human rights conference on a defiant note, signaling it would not embrace Western definitions of civil liberties, state media reported yesterday.

In a speech ending the two-day conference Wednesday, the Chinese government's most senior spokesman, Zhao Qizheng, said Beijing would hew to its own interpretations of human rights.

While acknowledging the universality of rights, Zhao said the rights to economic survival and development come first, according to accounts of his speech carried by the Xinhua News Agency and China Daily.

Zhao's speech underscored that China's policies have changed little, despite its greater willingness to discuss human rights problems and sign key U.N. rights treaties.

Chinese leaders have long argued that economic rights take primacy over basic civil and political liberties in ruling a still largely impoverished nation of 1.2 billion people.

NATION

Griffith-Joyner killed by epileptic seizure

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — An epileptic seizure caused the death of Olympic gold medal sprinter Florence Griffith- Joyner as she slept last month, authorities said yesterday.

Lt. Frank Fitzpatrick, head of forensic sciences for the sheriff's office, said toxicology tests showed she had taken about one tablet each of the over-the-counter painkiller Tylenol and antihistamine Benadryl, but "there was nothing unusual in terms of drugs."

The seizure involved a congenital blood vessel abnormality. Dr. Barbara Zaias said Griffith-Joyner had a "cavernous angioma" on the front left part of her brain, a condition found in about 25% of the population.

Many people with the condition live their whole lives without knowing they have it, but in others it can cause headaches and seizures, she said.

Dr. Richard Fukumoto, chief of forensics for the Orange County Sheriff's-Coroner department, said Griffith-Joyner had apparently been lying on her stomach and the seizure possibly caused her limbs to stiffen and turn her head to the right, where her breathing was constricted by covers and pillows.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 56 LOW: 35	HIGH: 65 LOW: 41	HIGH: 64 LOW: 38

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics .....page 11
Crossword .....page 11
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 10
News .....page 1
Sports .....page 12

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegion

Ban on tailgating alcohol to be enforced at Homecoming

By Lorraine Kennedy
Collegian Staff

Due to an amendment to the alcohol policy, only non-alcoholic tailgating will be permitted at this Saturday's Homecoming football game between the University of Massachusetts and Villanova.

According to UMass Chief of Police John Luippold, the ban on the consumption of alcoholic beverages outside of the stadium will be strictly enforced.

"There will be consistent enforcement from the [UMass] police department in regards to those statutes regarding alcohol, minors transporting or carrying, and any disruptive behavior as a result," Luippold said.

"In addition to police and security personnel, there will be a number of staff from the University assisting and advising patrons of the policy and requesting compliance.

"Some staff members will include members of the Dean of Students Office, so students may [also be punished] under the Code of Conduct," he continued.

In April 1988, former Chancellor Joseph Duffy announced the establishment of a ban on the use of alcoholic beverages by faculty, staff, students and alumni at all outdoor events on campus.

The alcohol ban was in effect for four years until former Chancellor Richard O'Brien lifted the ban in the fall of 1992 on an experimental basis for football tailgating only.

In light of both local and national events surrounding the abuse of alcohol last year, however, Chancellor David Scott reinstated the ban on alcohol during tailgating. Luippold explained that tailgating during Homecoming is especially a concern to him because "a number of individuals come to socialize and not partake in the festivities associated with the football game."

He stressed, however, that the ban on alcohol should not be the focus and that many non-alcohol-related events are planned for Homecoming weekend.

"We would really like to see a great turnout at Saturday's game... and we're hoping everyone will come and have a good time with the understanding that they will leave their alcohol at home," Luippold said.

Cook speaks on campaign issues defines personal beliefs and Libertarian Party principles

By Julie Fialkow
Collegian Staff

Libertarian candidate for governor of Massachusetts, Dean Cook, spoke about his belief in personal freedoms at the University of Massachusetts Cannabis Reform Coalition (CRC) meeting last night.

Cook discussed where the Libertarian party stands on several pertinent issues in this year's gubanatorial race, such as taxation and educational reform.

When asked what Cook intended to do for higher education if elected he said, "The students here will be wage earners, home owners, and voters. One thing happens with the government controlling the education system; it raises prices."

Cook explained, the more student loans available, the higher the tuition fees.

"Basically they're getting students to mortgage their futures. You're paying more for going than what you're getting, if they keep all the fees at the school within the University, it will be better off financially," he said.

Cook also said students should vote for him because, "they're not going to be students forever," he said, "If they don't want government to control lives, their only choice is to vote Libertarian."

Cook said the way he thought the world was as a student, and how he perceives it to be now, is totally different.

"When you're in college you think of how things should be. But when I run a campaign I have to deal with the way things are," he said.

Cook said that his plan for drastically, if not completely, eliminating the income tax, will benefit University students in the long run.

"If these students want jobs when they graduate, we have to cut taxes. They're starting to do layoffs now. There are not going to be jobs out there when you guys graduate. With no jobs, how are you going to pay off loans?" he said.

Cook discussed the core belief of the Libertarians: personal choice. As long as no one is infringing on someone else's rights or causing harm, said Cook, they should be able to make their own decisions.

Turn to COOK, page 2

DAVID BIUTTA / COLLEGIAN
Libertarian candidate for governor Dean Cook spoke last evening in the Student Union.

DAVID BIUTTA / COLLEGIAN

Shout it out

Rosemary Freeland speaks at the sixth annual Young Women's Day of Action yesterday.

Scott supports United Way, plans for 2000

By Christie Vincent
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts Chancellor David Scott, spoke at yesterday's faculty senate meeting about the United Way and Strategic Action Plan, among other topics brought to the senate floor.

He encouraged the faculty to donate what they could to the United Way Campaign.

"It's remarkable when you see how UMass people help the United Way, and how the United Way helps UMass people. I want to make it a crusade. Please do what you can," he said.

Scott is chairperson of the campaign. He said the United Way has 28 agencies in the Hampshire community.

Jenny Spencer, president of the Massachusetts Society of Professors informed the senate about post-tenure review.

She announced that there would be a post-tenure review web sight by Oct. 27 where faculty could discuss the issue.

"There will be a faculty forum at the sight in which faculty members can record their own responses [about post- tenure review]," she said.

The meeting then switched from a discussion of professors to students.

A question was presented to the floor concerning what the University would do about a new test proposed by the Massachusetts Board of Higher education that undergraduate students would have to take in order to graduate.

"The Board of Higher Education has no jurisdiction over the University," Scott said.

He said the UMass presidents and the chancellors will discuss the Board's recommendations on Monday.

Turn to UNITED, page 2

ResLife promoting Breast Cancer Awareness Month

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

October has been nationally declared "Breast Cancer Awareness Month," and students at the University of Massachusetts are wearing pink ribbons to promote awareness of breast cancer and to recognize individuals who have, or have had, breast cancer.

The pink ribbon has become a universal symbol and even celebrities like Stevie Wonder are helping to recognize breast cancer. Wonder re-wrote his "Ribbon in the Sky" to "Pink Ribbon in the Sky," in tribute to a friend's sister that died of breast cancer.

According to the National Breast Cancer Association, one out of every eight women has a lifetime risk of being diagnosed with breast cancer. In fact, it is the leading cause of death for women ages 35–54 years-old.

Community Development Assistant Kara Martin of Pierpont/Moore feels that breast cancer is a concern that most people do not take seriously.

"A lot of people don't realize how devastating breast cancer can be," Martin said.

In honor of Breast Cancer Awareness Month, University Residential Life has arranged for Informational tables to be set up today from 9 a.m.–3 p.m. in the Campus Center and all Dining Commons. These tables, staffed by ResLife, will be distributing pamphlets and board kits containing information on preventing breast cancer and how to perform breast self-examinations.

Martin hopes people will give donations to help in the improvement of breast cancer research.

"We're asking people to donate whatever they can give," Martin said. "Even if it's just a quarter, every cent is going to help."

Through the available funding, the Susan G. Komen Breast Cancer Foundation is advancing research, education, and treatment, in working toward eradicating breast cancer as a life-threatening disease.

Research has discovered that breast cancer can be caused by a number of factors including the presence of breast cancer in two or more family members. This increases the potential risk of an individual in direct line of inheriting breast cancer.

A person's background can also have an impact on their chances of developing breast cancer at some point in their life.

People that have had biopsies showing certain benign changes in breast tissues or have had mammograms (breast X-ray) showing calcium deposits in breast tissue, should immediately arrange for a clinical breast examination.

It has also been proven that men can also obtain breast cancer and the survival rate of men with breast cancer compared to that of women with breast cancer is just as low.

However, now more than ever, breast cancer can be cured with early detection and prompt treatment. Around 92 percent of early stage breast cancers are curable.

Self breast examinations should be performed once a month. Check for abnormal lumps, hard knots, swelling, dimpling, or thickening. Also look for any abnormal change in size, shape, color, or discharge.

Turn to DIG, page 2

Tribute to alumnus Shabazz by BSU

By Laura Forster
Collegian Staff

A mural dedicated to the life of Dr. Betty Shabazz will be unveiled at 4 p.m. this afternoon in the University of Massachusetts Campus Center.

Sponsored by the Black Student Union and the Campus Center Administration, the mural is part of a memorial event to the late wife of Malcom X, who spent her life preserving her husband's words and teachings.

An alumnus of UMass, Shabazz received her doctorate in education in 1975, while also raising four daughters and making public appearances in memory of the legacy of Malcom X.

The two hour event will include solo and group dancing and musical performances by UMass students Lloyd Wright, Sean Miller, Irene Shakily, Bonita Oliver and many others.

Wright, a sophomore hotel restaurant and travel administration major, will be rhyming with Miller, a junior communication major as part of their group, Black Steel in the Hour of Chaos. Wright and Miller worked with the Black Student Union in creating the dedication mural.

Wright, who refers to Shabazz as a "... strong, black female role model," pays tribute to her in some of the group's lyrics.

UMass faculty speakers include Afro–American Studies professor John Bracey, and Women's Studies lecturer Alexandrina Deschamps, among others.

The Shabazz family will also be present at the event.

Shabazz died last year on June 23 at the age of 61. Shabazz struggled for three weeks with extensive third-degree burns due to a fire apparently set by her troubled 12– year old grandson. Her death came 32 years after she witnessed the assassination of her husband.

Jeff Beliziare, president of the Black Student Union, expressed his hopes in paying tribute to the strong and determined life Shabazz led.

"I hope that we are able to do justice in honoring her name... May she rest in peace," said Beliziare.

Dig may have exposed Webster's well

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Staff

Archaeologists are wondering, is it the well or just a well that was discovered in an excavation of Boltwood Walk this week.

The well, discovered within the foundation of a building, could possibly be the well of Noah Webster, who wrote the first Webster's Dictionary.

"We have found a well. The well we found is brick-lined so it's later than 1802. We don't know that for sure [if it's Webster's]," said Mitchell Mulholland, director of University of Massachusetts Archeological Services. "[He] did live here in Amherst from 1812–1822. He lived right on the corner."

Archaeologists believe the well might be Webster's because it is locat-

DAVID BIUTTA / COLLEGIAN
Archaeologists are conducting a dig at the future site of a parking garage in Amherst.

Police Log

Accident/Leaving the Scene
Oct. 20
A vehicle made an unsafe lane change on Commonwealth Avenue, forcing another vehicle into the curb. The offending vehicle left the scene.
Oct. 19
A vehicle in Lot 11 on Stadium Drive was struck by a hit and run vehicle.

Accident/Property Damage
Oct. 20
A vehicle, backing up, struck a parked vehicle in Lot 11 on Stadium Drive.
There was a minor accident between a truck and a vehicle on Mullins Way.

Assault & Battery
Oct. 19
A past assault in Mackimmie Residence Hall that occurred over the weekend was reported. The victim obtained an emergency Restraining Order.

B & E/Burglary
Oct. 19
A room was entered in the Campus Center Hotel; personal items were stolen.

Fraud
Oct. 20
An individual in Washington Residence Hall reported debit card used for illegal purchases.

Health/Safety Hazard
Oct. 20
Environmental Health and Safety called to check on offensive odor on second floor of DuBois library.
The Physical Plant reported a sink hole on Natural Resources Road. The road was closed.

Larceny
Oct. 20
An individual reported cell phone, valued at $251, stolen from room in John Adams Residence Hall.
An individual reported Nintendo games, valued at $480, stolen from Pierpont Residence Hall.
A TV/VCR combination, which had been reported stolen, was found outside, adjacent to Brown Residence Hall.
An individual reported tools, valued at $250, stolen from locked storage area in Morrill Science.
A telephone, valued at $100, was stolen from a room in Coolidge Residence Hall.
Oct. 19
A license plate was stolen from a vehicle in Lot 13 on Olympia Drive.
An individual from John Q. Adams Residence Hall reported credit card stolen.
$30 in cash was stolen from an office in Morrill Science.

Vandalism
Oct. 21
A group having a "food fight" in Lot 49 on Windmill Lane was dispersed.
Oct. 20
Owner found vehicle in Lot 49 on Orchard Hill Drive with the doors open. No damage was done.
Oct. 19
Damage to a vehicle was reported in Lot 12 on Forestry Way.

DAVID BILOTTA / COLLEGIAN

Expression of love
Two love-birds express their love for each other.

UMass to honor Isenberg with plaque and Chancellor's Medal

By Elizabeth Johnson
Collegian Correspondent

The University of Massachusetts is naming the Isenberg School of Management today, in honor of Eugene M. Isenberg who has made various contributions to the University and nationwide to a multitude charities.

Today at 9 a.m. in room 120 of the Isenberg building there will be an unveiling of the plaque.

Isenberg is also the recipient of the Medallion of Entrepreneurship, an award presented annually for combining an innovative business success with a service to humanity.

The UMass chapter of Beta Gamma Sigma, the National Honor Society for business programs, nominated Isenberg for the award of excellence.

Isenberg and his wife, Ronnie, have donated many gifts to special needs programs in New York and Florida, and Beta Gamma Sigma wanted to recognize them.

Following the ceremony the School of Management will have an open house from 10 a.m. to noon.

Also, today at 2 p.m. during a convocation held in Bowker Auditorium in Stockbridge Hall, a Chancellor's Medal will be bestowed upon Isenberg for outstanding service to the University.

This is the highest honor given by the campus. The Isenbergs also donated a gift of $6 million to Campaign UMass, mainly supporting the School of Management.

Part of this will be put toward the construction of a new wing on the Isenberg School of Management.

At this point in time it is the largest donation made to this five-year drive whose goal is to raise $125 million. Campaign UMass enlists advocates and promotes the University's image in Massachusetts and across the nation.

Thomas O'Brian, dean of the School of Management, described the contribution. "I think it symbolizes the transition of the University into a new league. Alumni contributions in the future will be essential to achieving our aspirations. This has set the course," O'Brian said.

Eugene and Ronnie Isenberg will be honored guests during the UMass Homecoming Festival Weekend which is comprised of the homecoming parade and football game played at the Warren P. McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

Tomorrow night, Oct. 24, at the Mullins Center, more than 600 attendees will honor the Isenbergs at a private, black-tie dinner.

Eugene Isenberg is a 1950 alumnus of the University of Massachusetts, graduating with a bachelor's degree in economics. Working out of Houston, Texas, he is chairman and CEO of Nabors Industries, a leading oil-and-gas-drilling contractor and is also a director of the American Stock Exchange.

■ dig

continued from page 1

ed near the house he used to live in which is now the Amherst Building.

"The locals who know history and know the area have always said the well and garden were in the back of the house," Mulholland said.

But Mulholland said it hadn't been determined if the well was built when the foundation of the building was, or if the building was constructed later around the well.

The excavation is being done before construction begins on a parking garage in that spot. Other excavations will be done in the parking lot, but they will only be small trenches.

Several artifacts were found such as bottles and pieces of pottery, but they date to the first quarter of this century when the building was demolished.

"This is a structure built in the late 19th century. It was demolished in 1938," said Tim Baker, field supervisor of the University of Massachusetts Archeological Services.

Baker said when it was demolished the hole was filled in with dirt and debris nearby. So, many of the artifacts found date to that time period.

"We have to look at context. Artifact's context tells a story of what was happening at that site," Baker said.

However, he said the foundation is the key to finding out if the well was Webster's.

"The existing foundation is the most important part of the site," Baker said.

The well was located using old maps and pictures. One of the maps used was drawn by Webster's daughter.

"A local photographer took pictures of the well," Baker said.

Years after Webster lived there, a photographer moved into the house and took pictures of where the well was. The pictures were printed in the local paper at that time with an arrow drawn in pointing to the location of the well.

"The town of Amherst already knew what was there. They did an excellent job of [finding] maps and did some sleuthing to find where the well is," Mulholland said.

The excavating is expected to be finished sometime in the next three days.

■ cook

continued from page 1

"Two years ago on Boston Common, I worked at a Libertarian booth after I had made a speech. I met a woman who was homeless, a former stripper, her knee went bad and she went from shelter to shelter. We gave her literature and my wife and I took her out to lunch," said Cook.

"Two years later I ran into her and she thanked me up and down. I had told her the only one to help you, is you. She took it to heart."

Cook said the woman has a part-time job now as a photographer, has an apartment, and is totally self-sufficient.

"I didn't really do anything. I just said to her that I believe you can help yourself and she did," said Cook.

Cook also spoke to the CRC about his stance on legalization of drugs.

"For Libertarians the issue isn't about marijuana, it's a position on freedom," said Cook. "We're against the war on drugs. Prohibition does not work. It promotes organized crime and drive-by shootings."

Cook encouraged people to get involved with the Libertarian party.

"It doesn't take much to run for governor, look who's up there now. You don't have to be so smart, just have a big mouth and know what you're talking about," he said.

■ united

continued from page 1

Chancellor Scott presented an update on the Strategic Action plan to the Senate.

The presentation discussed the plan's recent achievements in image, facilities, funding and outreach. He also discussed its plans for the future, which includes six new facilities to be built for the year 2000. Future financial plans for the University were explained as well. The plan also includes future visions for a band building, a telcom/computing center, child care and development center, a social and behavioral science building, and a Museum of Natural History.

Jane goes to class.
Jane is bored in class.
Jane decides to write for Collegian News.
Jane makes lots of friends at the Collegian.
Jane gets lots of great news articles.
Jane gets a great internship.
Jane shows her great resume to an employer.
Jane gets the job of her dreams.
Jane says she owes it all to Collegian News.
Be Jane.

Have a great Weekend!!!

BUB'S BAR-B-Q

'Pig Out In Style'
KIDS
FOR THE PAST 14 CONSECUTIVE YEARS
BY THE ADVOCATE · (413)548-9630

If you or someone you know is drinking too much, we can help.
DOES SOMEONE YOU CARE ABOUT DRINK TOO MUCH?
For a confidential appointment
contact REAP @ 545-0137
(Residential Education Alcohol Program)
REAP is a Student Assistance Program
Located in Moore Residence Hall Lobby
Southwest
This message is brought to you through donations from the UMass Police Department

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students! 545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

Affordable
Jewelry Natural Fiber Scarves
Blouses Skirts Dresses
Happy B'day Cards Posters
Earrings Candles
India Print Bedspreads Incense
T-Shirts Chinese Shoes
Rings Bracelets Chains
Sweaters
Dresses
Socks Leather Sole
Area Rugs
Baskets Paper Lampshades
Mugs
Sale
20 to 50% off selected Clothing
The GreatGifts Mercantile
Visa / MC
Th.Fri.9PM Sun 12-5 Daily 10-6
Amherst-Carriage Shops
Northampton-108Main St.

Fuzzy Sweater.

ZANNA
downtown Amherst

ATKINS FARMS
Country Market
Rte. 116 & Bay Road, South Amherst, MA
(413) 253-9528 • (800) 594-9537
New England Country Market
Scratch Bakery
Deli Department
Produce Department
Meat Department
Specialty Foods
Gift Department
Attention Parents !!!
Student Special Care Packages
Great idea for parents far away from their busy, hard working and hungry son or daughter.
We deliver to UMass, Smith College, Mt. Holyoke and Amherst College daily.
Birthday cakes, flower arrangements, balloons, snack paks, get well paks, happy birthday paks, gift baskets, nacho paks, and a mix-and-match section with 80 items to customize a healthy and delicious treat.
Send a gift on a special occasion, when they are studying for a test or just to say you miss them.
Call for a brochure • (413) 253-9528 or 1-(800) 594-9537
We accept Visa, Mastercard, Amex and Discover.

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Jason Trenkle • Photos by David Bilotta

If you were the Chancellor of the University of Massachusetts for one day, what would you do?

"I would probably make the UMass policies and regulations more equally enforced for the students and not have discrepancies."
Molly Sullivan
Sophomore
Psychology

"I'd give all the on-campus employees a day off for one whole day."
Emily Vacanti
Sophomore
Legal Studies

"I would make it so that there would be no classes."
Jose Santos
Senior Economics

"I'd give each student a certain amount of spending money and they could do whatever they wanted with it."
Neb Abebe
Sophomore
Computer Engineering

"I would have a T-train installed in Southwest so I could just jump on the train and not have to freeze my ass off walking to the yellow lot to get my car."
Clint Merrill
Freshman
Undecided

"There would air conditioning in Bartlett 65. I had to drop a class this semester because it was too hot."
Matt Terrill
Freshman
Undecided

DAVID BILOTTA / COLLEGIAN

All present and accounted for
All four campus swans made a rare appearance together by the pond recently.

Gaybashers sabotage funeral

By Julia Lieblich
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Gay activists and conservative Christians alike were appalled by the scene: At the funeral of 21-year-old Matthew Shepard, the gay man beaten to death in Wyoming, the Rev. Fred Phelps and his band of protesters carried signs saying, "God hates fags."

"I found it almost impossible to believe that human beings could be so brutal and vicious to a hurting family," says the Rev. Jerry Falwell.

It was not the first time. Phelps and about a dozen members - mostly his relatives - of the Westboro Baptist Church in Topeka, Kan., picketed the funerals of Sonny Bono because his daughter Chastity is a lesbian activist; President Clinton's mother because, Phelps says, she raised a son who supports gays; as well as numerous people who died of AIDS.

For conservative Christians, Phelps is a pitiful caricature of the believer who fosters negative stereotypes of Christians who oppose the homosexual lifestyle.

To gay activists, he's the far end of a spectrum of conservative Christians who fuel hate crimes with their anti-gay rhetoric, whether menacing denunciations or the recent advertising campaign featuring men and women who say they changed their sexual orientation.

"If you scratch away at the compassionate ex-gay campaign, you're going to find out all these flowers came from the same seeds," says Cathy Renna, director of community relations for the Washington-based Gay and Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation. "Homophobia is homophobia is homophobia."

Robert H. Knight, director of Cultural Studies for the Family Research Council, a conservative public policy group, says he called Phelps to implore him to call off the picket. "I had corresponded with them urging them to abandon this 'God hates fags' message a year before. I said it misconstrues the message of Christ, which was one of love."

Carmen Pate, president of Concerned Women United, a conservative public policy group, says that most conservative groups opposing homosexuality emphasize loving gays and lesbians while denouncing the gay lifestyle.

Arne Owens, spokesman for the Christian Coalition, agrees. "You must be loving toward all human beings while recognizing the role of sin in the world." If conservative Christians do protest, their leaders say, most limit themselves to public rallies such as gay pride marches.

Still, Knight complains, the media use Phelps as "a shorthand description of conservative Christians, which is unfair." Renna of the Gay and Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation agrees with Christian conservatives that Phelps is unique, but only because he expresses the hatred other groups couch in less incendiary language.

"The message is similar, but he packages it differently. There's a link between anti-gay rhetoric and what most people find a disgusting display of a man picketing a funeral." Rebecca Isaacson, political director of the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force, agrees: "If this is love, I'd like to see what hate looks like."

Calculus Tutor
• Friendly & Helpful
• Affordable
• Available Anytime
(at your campus bookstore)
CALCULUS MADE EASY
www.wizprow.com

Procter&Gamble
LATINOAMERICA
Posiciones Permanentes - Internados de Verano
Únete a ejecutivos de P&G Latinoamérica quienes hablarán de oportunidades para ti el:
29 de octubre de 1998
6:00 - 8:30 p.m.
The Hynes Convention Center
900 Boylston Street, Boston
Ballroom A
• Ofrecemos carreras en Mercadeo, Finanzas & Contabilidad, Ingeniería & Logística, Información & Tecnología y Desarrollo de Negocio de Clientes.
• Buscamos estudiantes de Maestría o Bachillerato de cualquier concentración con características de dinamismo y liderazgo.
¿Qué debes hacer?
Lleva tu resumé antes del 24 de octubre a:
UMASS
Mather Career Center
o envíalo a través del "web-page" a:
http://www-ccn.acad.umass.edu
Visita nuestro Web site www.pg.com/carreers
PAMPERS IVORY ARIEL PANTENE PRO-V Crest Bounty Charmin

GOLDEN KEY NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY
Golden Key National Honor Society Congratulates the 1998 New Members
Each year, Golden Key National Honor Society recognizes the most outstanding undergraduate students in all fields of study—those who have maintained high standards of academic achievement.
Golden Key rewards its members, not only for their scholastic excellence, but also for their demonstrated leadership and community service. The Society has awarded more than two million dollars in both undergraduate and graduate scholarships since its founding in 1977.
Golden Key Lifetime Benefits
Academic Recognition
Scholarships
Career Assistance
Networking
Publications
Leadership Opportunities
Community Service Opportunities
The Society's Mission is to recognize and encourage scholastic achievement and excellence in all fields of study, to work with faculty and administrators to maintain a high standard of education, to provide financial assistance to outstanding members through undergraduate and graduate scholarships, and to promote altruistic conduct through voluntary service.
For more information, please visit Golden Key's web site
http://gknhs.gsu.edu

-- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian --

Smoking for everyone!

Of course the ban on smoking should be lifted. All this talk over the past few years of making cigarettes illegal is preposterous. Approximately 390,000 smokers die every year and another 50,000 people are killed annually by second-hand smoke.

We need these deaths, guys. Consider: about six billion people live on Planet Earth right now, with only nine people dying for every 1,000 being born. Over 250 million of these people live in the U.S. This is that overpopulation thing that all those kooky tree-huggers warned us about back in the blissful Reagan years (They pulled the same crap with that ozone layer stuff, remember?). Overpopulation means longer lines at the DMV and I know nobody wants that. Anything that slows down overpopulation can't be all that bad. More smokers equals fewer people.

"I want people to start dropping like flies. It will make finding a place in Manhattan in two years that much easier for me."

Boomer Pinches

I want smoking to be legalized everywhere — bars, churches, nursery schools. I want freeways lined with billboards that read SMOKING: THE COOL WAY TO DIE, with a picture of an impossibly proportioned supermodel in heaven, having a smoke with Jesus. I want parents to start their children at an early age, say five, and cultivate pack-a-day habits. I want these kids hooked young. My dream is a nation of black-lunged teenagers in wheelchairs, hooked up to oxygen tanks, with only a few more months until they bite it. A forty-five minute smoking period could replace gym class in public schools — those kids hate getting all sweaty anyway. We could have National Smoking Day, celebrated by a huge festival at Tobaccoland, the amusement park with the nicotine theme. Contests would be held to see who can smoke the most filterless cigarettes in a 24 hour period (anyone who dies on the spot wins by default). I want people to start dropping like flies. It will make finding a place in Manhattan in two years that much easier for me.

With cigarettes legal, it's only fair we legalize other drugs as well. Crack, for example. And good old cocaine. Imagine how much more fun people-watching would be if everyone did coke. Every day would be like a Martin Scorsese flick. LSD, PCP, ecstasy, heroin — the government could make all of this legal and tax it (I'm far from the first person to suggest this, but such a brilliant idea bears repeating. Can you think of a better way to balance the budget?).

I know what you're thinking: "But Boomer, all these drugs combined don't kill even a third as many people as that wonder drug tobacco." True. But they merely lack proper advertising. Like that TV advertisement, the one with the Tricky song, where the woman takes apart her face and has no teeth and all that. Just won't do.

We need cartoon characters, like Joe Camel. I'm thinking Winnie the Pooh, high on crack and lighting up a pipe for Piglet ("Everybody's doing it, Piggy. Hell, Tigger's been doing it for year..."). A 20 second spot with Mickey Mouse having a really bad flashback while on Mr. Toad's Wild Ride. We need celebrities who use drugs and are applauded for it (Mark McGwire, thank you for getting that ball rolling in your own small way). If you thought Jack Nicholson was nuts in The Shining, wait till you see him on angel dust, taking out windshields with his 9-iron. If there's one thing alcohol has taught us, it's that a successful advertising campaign can overcome any pesky little facts that might deter potential customers. Alcohol kills about 90,000 a year. Not up to par with cigarettes, granted, but no slouch either. And don't forget about alcohol's special perks, like drunk driving accidents. Best of all, roughly 50% of violent crimes, including murder, are preceded by the drinking of alcohol by the victim or the perpetrator or both. Don't think that doesn't help bring the death toll up.

Some people, jumping on the "legalization bandwagon" that will no doubt follow will call for the legalization of marijuana. Terrible idea. No future in it. For one thing, marijuana doesn't kill anybody, a truly pathetic statistic when one considers that even aspirin racks up a solid 2,000 corpses per year. Sure marijuana's got a few carcinogens, but so do McDonald's hamburgers. The sad truth is, more people die in embarrassing auto-erotic asphyxiation incidents than from Mr. Reefer. And anyway, taxing a non-addictive drug that people can easily grow in their backyards is economically unsound. That's why you never hear about pot dealers pulling drive-by shootings on one another; no real money at stake. The government would make zero profit. Useless for our purposes. Besides, it's old hat in this day and age. Our founding fathers, George Washington and Thomas Jefferson, smoked this stuff. That old and musty Declaration of Independence is in fact written on paper made from hemp. Is this the hip, cool drug that kids want to smoke these days? I think not.

So enough of this smoking-ban gibberish. If you're a non- smoker who supports the ban, quit whining and leave your nicotine-addicted brethren alone. Smokers are just doing their part for the greater good of humanity. Follow their lead and take up a nice hobby yourself, like Russian Roulette. And if you are a smoker, keep up the good work. I'll give you a light anytime.

Boomer Pinches is a UMass student.

Wrestling with respect

It's a media conspiracy.

I think you know what I'm talking about. It's a controversy that doesn't really exist but is merely fabricated by those in power who have a stake in fanning the flames, much to the disgust of the discerning American public. I'm talking, of course, about the media bias and hatred towards the hallowed sport of professional wrestling.

The pile-driving of professional wrestling has been all over the media lately. TV Guide has written articles assaulting the immortal Hollywood Hulk Hogan. When Boston was graced with the presence of WrestleMania XIV, The Boston Globe was very snide in it's coverage, burying it in the depths of the sports page and getting all the names wrong. Even certain articles in everyone's favorite college newspaper have taken up the side of the infidel in this battle royale.

I'm going to come right out now and admit that I am a wrestling fan. I always have been and I always will be. I go to the shows. I have two NWO shirts. I'm one of those ill- kept loud specimens of humanity that crowd the Bluewall on Monday nights because the cable system here commits the heresy of not carrying TNT or USA — the only stations on the dial for a 'rasslin fan.

It seems like a truckload of fun to me. I laugh, I taunt, I anticipate the moves. I reminisce with the person next to me. Remember when he was Papa Shango and started that thing with the Ultimate Warrior? I shake my head in disgust when the moves are just blatantly fake. I argue about which lineup of The Triple Threat is the greatest (For the record: Shane Douglas, Chris Benoit, and Dean Malenko). In short, I have a blast and go home happy.

"You know what? I bet you'd be a wrestling fan if you let yourself be. "

Rob Schulze

What I can't figure out is what everyone has against wrestling. It's strange — if you say that you are a wrestling fan, you suddenly undergo this dark metamorphosis from Cosmopolitan College Student to Smokey the One-Toothed Yokel. Nobody understands.

"It's fake," Way to go, Sherlock. Of course it's fake. Nobody ever has or ever will argue this point. If the Rock punched you in the mouth, you wouldn't wake up for a month, let alone get up off the canvas five minutes later. Of course, TV is fake. Movies are fake. Books, for the most part, are fake. You don't turn off The Terminator in disgust because Arnold Schwarzenegger isn't really a robot. Do you feel betrayed because John Lithgow isn't really an alien (although that is open to debate)? "Baywatch" is the most popular TV show in the world, and there isn't some big controversy because the main stars are basically baggies filled with Vaseline. So, if Val Venis wants to pretend to be a porn star and the Undertaker is a dead man (Don't you get it? He's not alive!) it doesn't bother me. It's all the same.

"It's a soap opera." Once again, no argument here. On the other hand, soap operas are extremely popular. Hell, they have their own network awards show. They get respect. It's a perfectly acceptable social event to sit around and stare blankly at "Dawson's Creek", but watching "Monday Night Raw" will kill your brain cells. Strange: It's okay to watch a show intended for ten year old girls, but watching one for thirteen year old boys is evil. Plus Vince McMahon is a better actor than Katie Holmes will ever be.

You know what? I bet you'd be a wrestling fan if you let yourself be. It's along the same lines as the "We each have our own inner Judas Priest fan club" theory. Every Monday all those people who come to the Bluewall to study or talk with friends or whatever always, always, end up becoming completely absorbed in what's happening in the continuing Stone Cold saga. The place is more packed every night. I once saw a small group of very dignified elderly men in suits come in to purchase frogurt and by 10:30, they were deciding who the next champ should be (I think they picked Kane — they liked the mask.). You just have to let yourself go to the guiltier side of life. Eat giant bars of chocolate, drink beer, read an Anne Rice novel, and wash it all down with some pro wrestling. You'll probably be happier.

So, in closing, leave my wrestling alone. Yeah, it's fake. And a soap opera. And they all use steroids. I do, however, love it anyway, and there is nothing that you can do to change my mind, no matter how many respectable publications rank on the sport. Newsweek is probably just envious of the rippling abs that Ken Shamrock and I both have.

Rob Schulze is a UMass student.

Sell–out!

I was having some difficulty in coming up with a topic for this editorial, and, as always, my good friend television came up with a solution to my problem. Ah, television, is there anything it can't do?

Anyhow, on to the article. Being the hip, hip college students that you are, I'm sure you're familiar with Jay and Silent Bob, the Kevin Smith creations that have become cult heroes for our crazy, modern times. Recently, Jay has taken to appearing in commercials for Nike, the company whose skill in combining catchy slogans and pop icons with cheap third- world labor has made it one of the great cultural institutions of the twentieth century. The first time I saw Jay (I have absolutely no idea what his real name is) in his new role as a corporate spokesman, I was sitting with a bunch of my friends. Within five seconds of the beginning of the ad, shocked accusations echoed around the room. "Sell out!" we gasped. "He's nothing but a prostitute!" we cried.

Jay, the rude, drug dealing Messiah of Chaos was working for the system. The character made famous by an independent, black-and-white film had brushed his hair, cleaned himself up, and was selling athletic shoes in commercials that probably cost about 17 times as much to make as Clerks did. We were crushed. How could he?

Wait a minute.

Why the hell was I upset about this?

The Rolling Stones and David Bowie provide soundtracks for software commercials. Bob Dylan sold the rights to "Times They Are A-Changin'" to some Scottish bank. Nike already bought John Lennon's "Instant Karma" a few years back. Every time something like this happens, I get a mild feeling of nausea as I watch some revered celebrity use their image to peddle a product that some marketing executive has decided I desperately need. I feel betrayed.

Mark Shea

as if a close friend came over my house and started trying to sell me life insurance.

But why do I feel that way? Do I actually think that these famous people owe me something? I enjoy the movies and music that I do because I identify with them in some way. The people who create them are saying something about their hopes, fears, and frustrations that I recognize in myself. But just because they're saying something about life which I agree with, why should I feel as if we have some connection which they are treacherously taking advantage of when they shill for some huge company?

The answer, I think, is that I like to live vicariously through famous people. I don't think I'm alone in this, but since I know more about myself than I do about other people, I'll stick to talking about myself here. Celebrities and fictional characters like Jay (and aren't celebrities really just fictional characters anyway?) do and say things that I wish I could, but don't. When I watch Clerks or Mallrats and see Jay acting like a crazy loon, I think, "Yeah! He's bad-ass! Y'know, I'm kinda like that," even though I have never in my life acted like him. I recognize the anger he feels towards the world, and I wish I could express it as honestly as he does. Of course, I can't because he lives in a movie where actions have very few repercussions. I live in real life, where if you acted like him they'd throw you in jail and pretty much everyone would hate you. Nevertheless, being able to act like Jay is a fairly attractive fantasy.

Still, even though I know that these famous people are just playing a role in an impossible reality in order to make some money, it's still a bit of a slap in the face when I have that fact illustrated for me by a Nike commercial.

I suppose that there is a solution to my problem, an easy way to avoid getting upset when I see some famous person I thought I respected selling Internet access or credit cards or what have you. All I'd have to do is live my life the way I want to: to do and say and think as I feel, not how I feel I should. Then I wouldn't need famous people to do it for me, and I wouldn't care when they cashed in their credibility to sell sports utility vehicles and fast food.

On the other hand, living honestly and straightforwardly seems really hard, and turning on the television is so easy.

I wonder what's on?

Mark Shea is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

This is in response to the article that appeared in the paper on Wednesday Oct. 21, 1998 titled "On The Other Hand." First of all, it does not matter if you are black, white, red or purple. But after reading your article I found out one thing: YOU'RE IGNORANT! You may be aware of the slave ships in 1694, but due to your lack of knowledge and your gain of ignorance you may think that is what black history is all about. Well let me enlighten you. Black history goes deeper than slave ships. ...Africans were the first human beings on earth. They gave the world its earliest culture, civilization, and conceptualization of God. How could someone have the audacity to say "it's time we moved on?" How can we as a people move on when white supremacy still exists? Racism and white supremacy are the true parents of this country. How can we move on when the media portrays blacks as savages, clowns, and criminals. If you want to talk about the constitution and "all men are created equal," according to Thomas Jefferson, you're right, all men are created equal in the eyes of God except red men and black men. But due to your ignorance, I would not expect you to know that. Why should we shut up and not speak our minds and conform to white standards. Is that what you call "the mature way of gaining equality?" I don't think so. Black people do not have enough public outcry among black politicians, businessmen or women, community leaders, and the clergy as it is. No one encourages white hatred or hatred upon other races, but why do we have to tolerate being inferior and in a sense, third-world people?

Black people are not an isolated group crying oppression, but as a people, if we must survive in America, then we must confront the inescapable realities of racism and white supremacy. I do not blame you for calling this "crying out oppression and why the majority cringes and turns the other way" because that is what this country has been doing for thousands of years.

The Malcolm X center is not a "black group" displaying hatred for the white race. It's not called the Malcolm X group. It's exactly what it says, a center. A center dedicated to Malcolm X who, in case you did not know, was one of those "outspoken black people" who did not conform to white standards but fought for the life, liberty and pursuit of happiness of blacks that all men and women were so-called entitled to. I don't know if this nation will ever succeed in "reforming into one that is harmonious with all of those who live in it," but for you to make such a statement you must know this country is based on white supremacy. Black people are human beings and must demand a higher standard of living. A need for mutual cooperation among all people is what this nation needs to live in a "harmonious society." I respect your views and opinions but don't ever tell a group of people that has been oppressed for so long, and are still seen as inferior to some people, to "shut up and move on." Now that I approach the end of this essay close your eyes and imagine what I look like. Well, unlike you I am not ashamed to say, I am a black young woman that will strive and struggle to improve and restore the qualities of righteousness in myself first and then my people.

Danielle Wheeler

The Collegian wishes everyone a happy homecoming!

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

Write for Ed/Op!!!

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor-in-Chief Victoria Groves Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
Steve Salerno Jr. Advertising Manager David Parmenter Advertising Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Laura Forster Developing Nations Editor
Mike Mesaros Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Co-Jewish Affairs Editor

Morgan Tobor Co-Jewish Affairs Editor
Heather Lei Guzzetta Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jill Carroll News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylanski Sports Editor
Allana F. Todman Women's Issues Editor

Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager

Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Various members and friends of Belle and Sebastian prove that you have to study before you can rock. COURTESY RONNIE BLACK

Belle and Sebastian Fly High in Boston

By Stacey Shackford
Collegian Staff

BELLE AND SEBASTIAN
Morse Auditorium, Boston University
Oct. 21

BOSTON — The band Belle and Sebastian has gathered an almost cult-like following since the release of their critically acclaimed album, If You're Feeling Sinister. Thursday night, 600 of their faithful followers streamed into Morse Auditorium and sat in silent awe as their figurehead, Stuart Murdoch, took the stage. For them, it was more than just a concert. It was a religious experience.

The gathering took place in a Boston University auditorium that curiously resembled a church, complete with a large dome and apse, stained glass windows, and balcony pews. On stage, two bronze pillars flanked a fake door painted with a star of David and crowned by two stone tablets.

The crowd sat politely through the opening act. Consisting of members of Versus and Yo La Tengo, the quintet Containe actually performed a pretty impressive set. They started out with a mostly acoustic soft ballad, and progressed into faster electric rock. Songs four and five approached country, as one band member plucked away on a tin banjo. The final two songs were tight, happy pop songs performed by the three female members of the band. They were well received by the audience, but nonetheless, most fans were glad to see them finish.

As Belle and Sebastian took the stage, a hush came over the crowd and they looked on in reverence as singer/songwriter Stuart Murdoch opened with "Simple Things," a track from their latest release, The Boy With the Arab Strap. It was the first time many of the fans had ever laid eyes upon the enigmatic octet from Glasgow. The band has kept a low profile through the years, rarely appearing live and shunning photographs. Thursday night's performance was the first stop of their long awaited American tour.

Sitting on the floor and leaning on the rails, the audience cozied up to Murdoch's sweet vocals and the orchestrations of the band. Murdoch was clearly the central figure of the band, beginning many of the songs as solo efforts.

A very nervous Isobel Campbell took center stage, however, for "Is it Wicked Not to Care?" Wearing a poodle skirt and patent leather saddle shoes, she looked like a painfully shy school girl performing for the first time in a school

Turn to BELLE, page 6

Orson Welles' Evil to touch down in Noho

By Rob Roensch
Collegian Staff

World famous director Orson Welles has actually made movies other than the unavoidable Citizen Kane. One of the best is Touch of Evil, a restored version of which is opening this weekend at the Academy of Music in Northampton.

The movie is one of the greatest B-movies ever made, a tale of corruption and evil starring Charlton Heston, Janet Leigh and Welles himself. Touch of Evil is particularly famous for its eight minute opening that tracks between characters without a single cut. The restored version cuts out the intrusive soundtrack and credits and puts the dialogue and ambient noise back in. The new version is closer to Welles' original vision, with scenes and reaction shots reordered and recut, according to Welles' notebook.

U–Mass music events to mark Homecoming

By Emily Trask
Collegian Staff

In celebration of Homecoming Weekend at the University of Massachusetts, faculty members and students from the Department of Music and Dance will present a two-day musical extravaganza.

Jazz, orchestral, percussion, piano and wind music will all be presented as over 500 faculty and student performers will take to the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall stage today to present the 24th Annual Multiband Pops. The ensembles include the Chapel Jazz Ensemble, Minuteman Marching Band, Percussion Ensemble, Symphony Band, UMass Marimbas, University Dancers, University Jazz Ensemble, University Orchestra, Wind Ensemble, and Vocal Jazz and African American Music Ensemble. The event is presented by the University of Massachusetts Department of Music & Dance. Professor Malcolm W. Rowell, Jr., director of bands and Peter Tanner, coordinator.

"We are proud to be able to offer this event on an annual basis," says Ernest May, chairman of the

Turn to MUSIC, page 6

BUCCI HAIRCUTS ... always $10. 25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256.0733 145 main st. northampton 586.0155

UMASS STUDENT TICKET PICK-UP SCHEDULE
10:00 AM - 2:00 PM - Campus Center Concourse

PICK-UP DATE	SPORT	DATE OF GAME/OPPONENT
Tues. Oct. 13, 1998	HOCKEY	OCT. 22 v UMASS-LOWELL
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	OCT. 16 v MIDNIGHT MADNESS
Mon. Oct. 19, 1998	HOCKEY	OCT. 30 v MERRIMACK
Mon. Oct. 26, 1998	HOCKEY	NOV. 1 v NEW HAMPSHIRE
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	NOV. 5 v CONVERSE ALL-STARS
Mon. Nov. 2, 1998	HOCKEY	NOV. 8 v HARVARD
	HOCKEY	NOV. 13 v MAINE
	HOCKEY	NOV. 14 v MAINE
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	NOV. 11 v MARATHON BASKETBALL
Mon. Nov. 9, 1998	HOCKEY	NOV. 21 v UNION
Mon. Nov. 23, 1998	HOCKEY	DEC. 5 v BOSTON UNIVERSITY
Mon. Nov. 30, 1998	HOCKEY	DEC. 13 v NEW HAMPSHIRE
Mon. Dec. 7, 1998	MEN'S BASKETBALL	DEC. 19 v DETROIT
Mon. Dec. 14, 1998	MEN'S BASKETBALL	DEC. 29 v DAVIDSON
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	JAN. 2 v VIRGINIA TECH
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	JAN. 5 v IONA
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	JAN. 13 v DUQUESNE
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	JAN. 16 v KANSAS
Mon. Jan. 18, 1999	HOCKEY	JAN. 23 v BOSTON UNIVERSITY
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	JAN. 26 v FORDHAM
	HOCKEY	JAN. 29 v BOSTON COLLEGE
Mon. Jan. 25, 1999	HOCKEY	FEB. 6 v MERRIMACK
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	FEB. 4 v RHODE ISLAND
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	FEB. 7 v ST. JOSEPH'S
Mon. Feb. 1, 1999	HOCKEY	FEB. 13 v NORTHEASTERN
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	FEB. 10 v ST. BONAVENTURE
Mon. Feb. 8, 1999	HOCKEY	FEB. 19 v ARMY
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	FEB. 20 v XAVIER
Mon. Feb. 15, 1999	HOCKEY	FEB. 27 v PROVIDENCE
	MEN'S BASKETBALL	FEB. 28 v TEMPLE

PICK-UP & GAME DATES SUBJECT TO CHANGE.
VALID UMASS STUDENT ID CARD NEEDED
TO PICK-UP TICKETS. AUXILIARY FEE SHOULD HAVE ALREADY BEEN PAID.

Casino Night

FRIDAY
OCTOBER 23, 1998
Campus Center Auditorium
7:00 PM - 1:00 AM

BLACKJACK TABLES
ROULETTE TABLE
WHEEL OF FORTUNE

ADMISSION $5.00

TONIGHT

UMass Vote!

WELCOME HOME UMASS ALUMNI

Half of the proceeds from this event are going to the American Red Cross to aid the victims of Hurricane Georges.

The Office of Alana Affairs would like to recognize the following organizations for their support: Alumni Affairs, Campus Center Bluewall, Campus Center Hotel, and the UMass Daily Collegian.

COURTESY JOE KUSHNICK

The University Jazz Ensemble performs this Friday in the Fine Arts center as part of the Annual Multiband Pops concert.

■ music

continued from page 5

Department of Music & Dance. "It provides a wonderful forum for the public to see and hear the variety and level of musical ensembles in which so many of our talented students perform. We hope that audience members will return to our concert halls during the year to hear performances given by these advanced groups."

Kicking off the second day of events will be Nigel Cove, who will provide the second evening of music tomorrow in Bezanson Recital Hall. Cove's program, which is entitled "Celebrating Beethoven & Gershwin," will focus on works by these two great musicians and will include Beethoven's Sonata, Op. 28, "Pastoral," and Thirty-Two Variations in C minor. The program will also include Mozart's Fantasia in D minor, Gershwin's Three Preludes and pieces from his Song Book, as well as More Sort of Love Songs by UMass Department of Music & Dance faculty member, Charles Bestor. Professor Coxe has presented solo concerts in England, Germany, Romania, Hungary, France, Canada, and of course, the United States, and has appeared as a soloist with the Hall Orchestra, London Philharmonic and Royal Philharmonic.

Multiband Pops and "Celebrating Beethoven & Gershwin" begin at 8 p.m. Tickets may be purchased in advance at the Bowker Box Office or by calling (413)545-2511. Audience members should be aware that last year's Homecoming concerts were sold out. Tickets to Multiband Pops are $15 for general admission, and $10 for UMass students, elders, and children under 18. Tickets to Nigel Coxe's piano recital are $6 for general admission, and $3 for UMass students, students from other colleges, elders and children under 18.

■ belle

continued from page 5

recital. In fact, most of the band seemed that way. They all concentrated on their individual instruments, hardly interacting with each other or the audience. Somehow, miraculously, the whole thing came together perfectly.

Towards the end, the band loosened up a bit and finally seemed to be enjoying themselves. During "The Boy With the Arab Strap," Murdoch was actually bopping his head happily as he pounded away on the piano. Shortly after, Murdoch and drummer Richard Colburn started to jokingly perform a cover of Boston's "More Than a Feeling." After a few missed chords and incoherent Scottish rantings, the band performed a rousing rendition of "Judy and the Dream of Horses," followed by cheerful audience clapping.

Bassist Stuart David took over the mic for "A Space Dream" as band members ran around the crowded stage playing multiple instruments. In fact, each band member played an average of four instruments each. Isobel played an amazing eight, including cello, tambourine, guitar, recorder and cow bell.

Lead guitarist Stevie Jackson sang "Wrong Girl," one of the band's two twangy new numbers. The crowd was delighted to hear the unreleased material. They also liked favorites from If You're Feeling Sinister, "Like Dylan in the Movies," "Seeing Other People," and "Get Me Away From Here (I'm Dying)." Belle and Sebastian ended the evening with "Sleep the Clock Around," and exited the auditorium to a standing ovation.

Overall, the show was spectacular. The only regret was no encore performance. The crowd left hungry for more beautiful ballads and head-bopping beats. Everybody wore a huge grin as they emptied into the blustery cold night air. They had glimpsed heaven, and it was wonderful.

Women's crew team off to solid start

By Jimmy Chen
Collegian Correspondent

With last year's Atlantic 10 championship and NCAA runner-up performance behind them, the 1998-99 Massachusetts women's crew squad, who will battle in Philadelphia and Hanover this weekend, find themselves starting everything all over again. Nevertheless, this year's team has had a smooth start.

Renee Domina

Neyla Leslie

On their Oct. 4th season opener at Textile River Regatta, the varsity eights came in fourth while the lightweight fours took the crown. Other UMass crews also had some respected runs helping the team to score 387 points and place third among 80 other fine crews around the nation.

The very next week, the Minutewomen headed down to Middletown and competed in The 24th Annual Race at the Head of Connecticut where the varsity eights finished seventh while the lightweight fours placed fifth.

Last weekend, at the head of the Charles, in front of the national television, the Minutewomen again had a strong showing as the lightweight fours finished eighth out of 24 crews and the varsity eights raced thirty-second of 53 teams.

The lineup has changed for this weekend in Philadelphia and Hanover due to the injuries. The senior varsity eights captain Neyla Leslie will lead a new crew to compete in Open fours with two other returnees from the last year's NCAA runner-up crew, junior Tamara Saratlic and sophomore Amy Lawless.

The senior lightweight captain Renne Domina, on the other hand, will lead her crew in Quad action with junior Ann Rubinstein, sophomore Jules Blight, and sophomore Brook Eaton.

"This is the youngest crew in UMass history," said UMass coach Iiin Dietz, "but we are not really in a rebuilding year because there are some very dedicated athletes here."

Dedicated indeed, the Minutewomen wake up at the crack of dawn to go and practice for at least four hours a day.

"After losing half of the girls from last year, we are very inexperienced," said Dietz. "The younger kids have got to step up at the plate and grow a little bit, but physically, we will be fine."

Coach Dietz also mentioned that the fall season is merely preliminary since most of their major competitions will be held in spring. Therefore, Dietz puts emphasis on staying "low key" and learning the personnel.

"Our main focus right now is getting people back in shape and working off with one another while being competitive the whole time," Domina said.

And when the spring does come, the Minutewomen will take on the challenge of completing four straight Atlantic 10 titles and giving a shot at the national championship once again.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Another tough one

Water polo on a roll; To play at ECAC's

By Alexander Wood
Collegian Staff

After their 3-2 west coast trip against some of the best competition in the country, the Massachusetts men's water polo team will bring its experience and its 18-4 record back to the east coast as the head down to the pools in Annapolis, Md. to participate in the ECAC Championships.

The No. 12 ranked Minutemen will be looking to retain their title as champions which they won last season in this tournament by downing George Washington University 9-6.

The team has been facing stiff competition as of late, going head to head with a ranked team in six of their last eight games. Coach Russ Yarworth was happy with his team's play last weekend.

"We did some good damage. We won the games we should have and we could have won the others," Yarworth said.

The Minutemen will be looking forward to this weekend's action as it will give them a chance to get into a regulation pool, as practice facilities have been a problem all season.

"It's a good tournament because it gives us some experience and we want to win, but it's not a must-win situation," said Yarworth.

UMass will play a round robin as they face Princeton and Navy on Saturday, and then take on one of the winners from the second bracket.

"Princeton is a fast team with a quick keeper. Navy is one of our biggest rivals, so we always have to be ready for them. And from there we'll see how it goes," Yarworth stated.

While Yarworth has been pleased with his team's performance, he will be looking for them to sharpen the mental aspects of their game this weekend.

"We learned a little about maintaining intensity [in last weekend's tournament]. Against Pepperdine [No. 6] we were tied at 5-5 and then we lost our concentration for three minutes and that cost us the game. Same against San Diego [No. 10], we were locked up 7-7 in the third and we lost our concentration and they banged in a couple quick goals. We have to be intense the whole time."

The Minutemen have been putting out some outstanding individual performances recently. Senior Brian Stahl will look to continue his hot streak after coming off the injured list to score 14 goals in five games last weekend, including a five goal effort against Santa Clara [No. 18] and a hat trick in a loss to Pepperdine. Junior Timmy Troupis has also had the hot hand adding six goals in five games to his stats including three versus Santa Clara. Meanwhile, junior Richard Huntley has been warming up the other side of the pool with 51 saves in five games and posting a 7.8 GAA against some of the top teams in the country.

"It's good experience for us to be playing in a big pool and against good competition," Yarworth said.

Oct. 22, 1998

Dear Students and Fans:

I would like to thank you for the tremendous night the players and I had at Midnight Madness on Friday, October 16. It was the loudest and most exciting Midnight Madness we've had in my 10 years as a coach here at UMass.

When the lights went out and we were introduced, you cannot imagine the tremendous rush the players and I felt when the noise escalated in the Mullins Center. You also played a tremendous part in our recruiting efforts for that weekend. The recruits could not believe the support we have from our students and fans. I hope you understand how important you are to the basketball program.

The electricity in the Mullins Center that night was unbelievable, and I can't wait to feel that same electricity during the season.

Thanks again and we'll see you on November 5.

Sincerely,
James "Bruiser" Flint
Head Coach

UMass women on fire; To play 3 this weekend

By Jenn Gaylord
Collegian Staff

At the beginning of the 1998-99 season, Massachusetts women's tennis coach Judy Dixon was asked what her goals were for the year. She enthusiastically replied "to earn a national ranking."

Well, the Minutewomen are now one step closer to reaching that goal and they can achieve the next step this weekend with their big match in New York.

Last weekend the Minutewomen traveled to Philadelphia for one of their biggest matches of the season. On Oct. 17, they played against Temple University and on the 18th they went up against La Salle and Georgetown.

The outcomes of these matches were very important for their placement in the national rankings. The Temple match was vital for good Atlantic 10 conference seedings and the national rankings. To have a chance at a national ranking the women had to defeat the Owls – and they did – by a score of 6-3.

Last season, the Owls were fourth in the A-10, but they didn't look that way in Saturday's match.

According to Dixon, "Temple was unprepared for the match. They didn't start very well, and we took advantage of that."

The Minutewomen then finished their successful trip with wins over the Explorers and the Hoyas. Against La Salle, UMass lost only two games in the entire match and came away with a 7-0 win.

In the Hoyas competition, UMass swept the singles matches and lost only one of the doubles matches. They defeated Georgetown by a score of 8-1.

"We had a great weekend," senior co-captain Jackie Braunstein said. "We fought hard, and we need to keep the momentum going for next weekend's big match."

Junior Ola Gerasimova added, "We are in great shape. This is probably the best [women's tennis team] in UMass history."

When asked how they'll do this weekend, the upbeat attitude of the squad remained prevalent.

"As long as we are as focused as we were last weekend and play together as a team, we should win," freshman Helena Horak said.

Their next big test will be this weekend when they travel to West Point, N.Y. to face Columbia, Army, and Air Force. If the women can win two of these three matches, they will definitely have a national ranking.

LAUREN ROSBY / COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts women's tennis team will look to continue its winning ways this weekend when it faces Army.

UM volleyball tackles Temple

By Paul Teves and James Murphy
Collegian Staff

When the Massachusetts volleyball team returned home last weekend after playing the majority of the season on the road, five straight matches at home seemed very appetizing.

Well, so much for home cooking! The Minutewomen have dropped the first three matches of the current homestand, falling to 5-5 in the Atlantic 10 and 8-12 overall. This is not where UMass wanted to be three games into there longest homestand. With four of the five matches Atlantic 10 tilts, the Minutewomen were hoping to gain ground heading into the second half of the conference season.

There is still hope though for UMass to salvage some points in the standings as they face-off against La Salle and Temple this weekend at Curry Hicks Cage.

The Minutewomen will take to the court Friday night against La Salle, which they beat in three straight games the first time they played. But UMass will have to come up with a stellar effort in order to defeat Temple, a team they suffered a 3-1 loss to Philadelphia.

La Salle's overall record is deceptive. The Explorers are 13-8 overall, but 3-7 in the conference. La Salle has been good against the division II competition, but has struggled against the real competition.

"We played the our best match of the year against La Salle, but their timing has gotten a lot better," UMass coach Bonnie Kenny said. "We must come prepared to play."

The Temple Owls present a real Atlantic 10 challenge for UMass. Temple is 13-5 overall, and lead the conference with a 9-1 record. The plus for UMass is that the Owls have struggled on the road, going 2-3.

Alma Kovaci has provided most of the Owl's offense. Kovaci has accumulated 362 kills and a season attack percentage of .301. She is also top draw defensively, with 229 defensive digs, which leads the team.

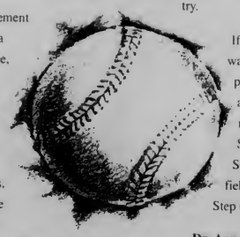
"Temple is the best team in A-10, but if we keep it close we might be able to win like Delaware did," Kenny said.

For the Minutewomen, the offense will need to be provided by Co-captains Jill Meyers and Kari Hogancamp. Hogancamp and Meyers have consistently hit in double digits in kills.

In order for the Minutewomen to defeat the Owls, they will need strong contributions from Rebecca Hasson in the middle. Hasson will need to block effectively and contribute on offense.

Outside hitter Janeen DeMarte, will need a strong performance in order for the Minutewomen to win.

"Janeen's coming into her own. She's a fighter and wants the ball and if she can help free up Jill, that would help us a lot," Kenny commented.



amc
There is a Difference!
Silence is Golden
No child under 6 in any PG-13 or R rated film after 6PM.
Mt. Farms 4 • Mt. Farms Mall
584-9153
WHAT DREAMS MAY COME (PG-13)
Today at (4:50 @ 5:20) 7:40
Sat at (1:40 (4:50 @ 5:20) 7:40
Sun at (4:50 @ 5:20) 8:10
Mon-Thurs at 8:10
SOLDIER(R)
Today at (2:10 @ 5:30) 8:00, 10:30
Sat at (1:50 (2:10 @ 5:30) 8:00, 10:30
Sun at (1:50 (2:10 @ 5:30) 8:00
Mon-Thurs at (6:00 @ 2:50) 8:00
PRACTICAL MAGIC (PG-13)
Today at (1:30 @ 3:50) 7:50, 10:20
Sat at (1:40 (1:30 @ 3:50) 7:50, 10:20
Sun at (1:40 (1:30 @ 3:50) 8:00
Mon-Thurs at (5:30 @ 2:50) 8:00
BELOVED (R)
Today at (4:00 @ 7:30) 11:00
Sat at (2:30, (4:00 @ 5:30) 7:30
Sun at (2:30 (4:00 @ 5:30) 7:30
Mon-Thurs at (4:00 @ 2:50) 7:30
RONIN (R)
Today at 10:10
Sat at 10:10, Sun at 1:20
Mon-Thurs at (5:40 @ 2:50)
Hampshire 6 • Hampshire Mall
584-7550
RUSH HOUR (PG-13)
Today at (3:00 @ 5:30) 8:10, 10:30
Sat at (1:30 (3:00 @ 5:30) 8:10, 10:30
Sun at (1:30 (3:00 @ 5:30) 8:10
Mon-Thurs at (5:30 @ 2:50) 8:10
URBAN LEGEND (R)
Today at 8:00, 10:40
Sat at 8:00, 10:40
Sun @ 1:10, Mon-Thurs @ 8:10
APT PUPIL (R)
Today at (5:10 @ 5:50) 7:50, 10:40
Sat at (1:40 (5:10 @ 5:50) 7:50, 10:40
Sun at (1:40 (5:10 @ 5:50) 7:50
Mon-Thurs at (5:40 @ 2:50) 8:20
NIGHT AT THE ROXBURY (PG-13)
Today at (5:30 @ 5:50) 7:40 Sat at (2:00 (5:30 @ 5:50) 7:40
Sun at (2:00 (5:30 @ 5:50) Mon-Thurs at (6:00 @ 2:50)
ANTZ (PG)
Today at (3:20 @ 5:35) 7:30, 9:50
Sat at (1:00, (3:00 (5:20 @ 5:35) 7:30, 9:50
Sun at (1:00, (3:00 (5:20 @ 5:35) 7:30
Mon-Thurs at (5:50 @ 2:50) 8:30
BRIDE OF CHUCKY (R)
Today at (5:30 @ 5:35) 8:00, 10:50
Sat at (1:30, (5:30 @ 5:35) 8:00, 10:50
Sun at (1:30, (5:30 @ 5:35) 8:00
Mon-Thurs at (6:00 @ 2:50) 8:40
PLEASANTVILLE (PG-13)
Today at (4:20 @ 5:55) 7:40, 10:30
Sat at (1:20 (4:50 @ 5:55) 7:40, 10:30
Sun at (1:20 (4:50 @ 5:55) 7:40
Mon-Thurs at (5:20 @ 2:50) 8:00
$2.50 'Twi-lite' Show Daily!
Special Engagement
No Passes or Coupons

LEARN TO PLAY HARDBALL IN THE BUSINESS OF SPORTS.

Today, the world of sports is no game. It is a $125 billion industry that needs well-trained business professionals to run it. That is why the W. Paul Stillman School of Business at Seton Hall University has established The Center for Sports Management.

Offering sports management concentrations leading to a Bachelor of Science degree, an M.B.A. a joint J.D./M.B.A., or an Advanced Certificate, Seton Hall can prepare you for a wide world of sports career opportunities, giving you the competitive edge you need to succeed. Courses include law, marketing, economics and finance as they pertain to the sports industry. And, you can design a portion of the curriculum to fit your interests in sports-related public relations, broadcasting, advertising, corporate sponsorships, licensingand more.

Highly regarded for its business school and its athletic successes, Seton Hall University, in south Orange, NJ, is just 20 minutes from New York City, offering you a unique educational opportunity and internships in the heart of the global sports industry.

If you have always wanted to combine your passion for sports with a great career in business, The Center for Sports Management at Seton Hall offers the field of your dreams. Step up to the plate now!

Dr. Ann Mayo, Director of the Center for sports Management will be available to discuss the MBA in Sports Management and other graduate programs at Seton Hall, at the Graduate and Professional Schools Information Day, October 28, 1998 at the Murray D. Lincoln Campus Center.

The Center for Sports Management at Seton Hall

College of Arts and Sciences
College of Education and Human Services
College of Nursing
School of Law
Stillman School of Business

SETON HALL UNIVERSITY
The Catholic University in New Jersey
Founded in 1856
400 South Orange Avenue
South Orange, NJ 07079
http://www.shu.edu
Seton Hall is an equal opportunity/affirmative action institution

School of Diplomacy and International Relations
School of Graduate Medical Education
School of Theology
University College

"VOTED BEST DELIVERY PIZZA AT UMASS" "BASED UPON STUDENT POLL" ON CAMPUS
PIZZA PAPA JOHN'S
331 Russell Street, Hadley
5 8 6 - 7 7 7 2
OPEN 'TIL 3AM FRIDAY & SATURDAY
Accepting: MasterCard VISA
Campus Special
$6.99 PLUS TAX
Large Cheese Pizza or Large 1 Topping Pizza
(Offer expires November 6, 1998)
NEW HOURS OF OPERATION
Sunday - Thursday 11am - 2am
Friday & Saturday 11am - 3am
TEN FOR $10
2 TEN INCH CHEESE PIZZAS FOR $10
$10.00
Offer expires 11/6/98
•Not Valid with any other offer
•Valid only at participatin locations
• Customer pays all applicable sales tax
•Additional toppings extra
1 LG ONE TOPPING AND 6 PACK OF COCA-COLA
$9.99
Offer expires 11/6/98
• Not Valid with any other offer •
Valid only at participating locations • Customer pays all applicable sales tax • Additional toppings extra

DAVE FINKS / COLLEGIAN

Let's get ready to rumble

Sophomore midfielder Kathleen Machamer and the Massachusetts women's soccer team will host two huge games this weekend versus La Salle and Fordham.

COLLEGIAN GRAPHICS ...are Pleas

UMASS STUDENT TICKET PICK-UP FOR MEN'S BASKETBALL GAMES AGAINST NIAGARA (PRESEASON CHASE NIT), UCONN (MASSMUTUAL U-GAME) AND BOSTON COLLEGE

10:00 AM – 2:00 PM – CAMPUS CENTER CONCOURSE
9:00 AM – 4:00 PM – CURRY HICKS CAGE

Available	Cost	Location	Opponent	Date
Nov. 2	$5.00	Mullins Center	Preseason Chase NIT v Niagara	Nov. 16
Nov. 2	$5.00	Mullins Center	MassMutual U-Game v UConn	Dec. 9
Nov. 2	$10.00	Worcester Centrum	Boston College	Dec 12

STUDENTS MUST PRESENT A VALID UMASS STUDENT ID CARD IN ORDER TO PURCHASE TICKETS. EACH STUDENT IS LIMITED TO TWO TICKETS PER EVENT.

TAKE A HIKE!

Visit a Whole New World of Culinary Delights at New England's Greatest Wine Shop

Wine and Food Tastings
Every Saturday Afternoon

- More 4000 Wines, 700 Beers, and Hundreds of the World's Finest Spirits and Exotic Liquors.
- USDA Prime Meats, Fowl and Game, including Wild and Free-Range Turkey.
- Fresh Truffles and Foraged Mushrooms
- Jams, Jellies, Chocolates, and Honey
- The Finest Olives, Oils, Mustards, Chutneys and Vinegars
- Nationally Recognized Expertise and Service.

TABLE & VINE

Interstate 91 to Northampton, Exit 21 Rt. 5, South for 1.5 miles. From Amherst, Rt. 9 to Northampton, cross the Hadley Bridge, Right at Light (Damon Road) and Right at Next Light onto Rt. 5 North. 100 Yards Up on Left. Call for Our Free Newsletter. Or Visit Us On Line.

(800) 474-2449
(413) 584-7775
http://www.tableandvine.com
staff@tableandvine.com
Big Y

■ captains

continued from page 12

her decision to come to UMass.

"It was one of the best decisions of my life. I've really enjoyed my three-plus years here," Thompson said. "I've learned so much while I've been here, and Coach [Rudy] has also been great."

Talk about a quality import

Lecot has been a woman on the move over the past four years. After deciding to leave her native Canada to come to college in the United States, the Gaineau, Que. native first decided to attend the University of Maine.

However, after two standout years at Maine, including a 1996 season in which she scored 17 goals and was the America East Player of the Year, Lecot decided it was time for another change in scenery. And sure enough, Rudy and the Minutewomen were waiting with open arms.

"We're pleased [that she decided to transfer from Maine]," Rudy said. "We're really glad that she decided to come here."

Lecot's impact offensively was felt immediately upon her arrival in Amherst. She tallied 31 points in 1997 and was named a first-team Atlantic 10 regular season pick, as well as an All-Tournament team selection and an All-Northeast team second team member.

And the senior forward hasn't skipped a beat this season either. She leads the team in goals and points, and is in the hunt for the Atlantic 10 Player of the Year award.

Just like her fellow co-captain Thompson, Lecot is also pleased with her decision to come to UMass.

"I've just loved my experience here and I only wish I had been here for four years," Lecot said. "I'd just like to thank Coach [Rudy] for his belief in me and I'm grateful for getting the chance to play. I also want to thank my teammates to for standing by me when things were tough as well as all of the fans."

The Unknown Road Ahead

Who knows what may lie ahead for Lecot and Thompson once they have donned the Maroon and White for the final time and have left UMass? Rudy, however, is sure that they will be successful in whatever the future may hold.

"They are a coaches dream because they are really good people. They are decent, honest, reliable, and good students too," he said. "They're the types of players that coaches want 18 of, and I wouldn't be surprised if both of them end up being pretty good coaches."

And if they are as good of coaches as they are players, then Rudy might be staring at another former player behind the bench of a Division I program sometime in the near future.

■ field

continued from page 12

the pre-game Senior Day festivities. After four seasons of wearing the Maroon and White, co-captains Kate Putnam and Vicky Browne, Erica Johnston, Laura Phelan, and Kerry Lyons will bid their goodbyes to the home fans and the friendly turf of Garber Field. Although the finale may be emotional, Shea feels her senior players will compete with the utmost tenacity to ensure that their final home appearance will be a memorable one.

Erica Johnston

"It's the last game of your regular season, and it culminates four years of a great effort," Shea said of the importance of the UConn contest for her seniors. "It's the last time they'll put on a home uniform for their institution. They've invested four years. [As a senior], you want to leave a lasting impact."

Laura Phelan

Despite missing three games as a result of a concussion, All-American forward Johnston leads the highly-talented senior class list of scorers with a team-high 17 points. Putnam, who often plays the role of playmaker at midfield, ranks second among the senior class in the point standings with a total of 13. Browne, an England native, follows with 12 points, most of which are due to her efficiency on the powerful UMass penalty-corner attack. Phelan, the most versatile player on the Minutewoman roster, has scored three goals while acting as an anchor for a young defense. As one of the more aggressive UMass forwards, Lyons has earned the reputation as a clutch player after scoring two game-winning overtime goals in 1997.

"They've done a tremendous job," Shea said of senior players. "They've been leaders, they're the ones who have gone out and made it happen by making a commitment. They've taught the underclassmen the ropes, they've taken charge out on the field, and you can't ask for anything better, really."

Kerry Lyons

As if the Minutewomen did not have enough motivation entering their annual clash with the Huskies, coach Shea's squad now has an added incentive for victory. Current Connecticut assistant Tara Jelly, a former UMass field Hockey standout (Class of 1993), returns to Amherst with the hope of edging her Alma Mater. Although Jelly coaches for the arch-rival of the Minutewomen, Shea feels that her presence on the UConn staff indicates the strength of the UMass program.

"I think it says that UMass has a great program, and I think that it says that [other] coaches respect the program tremendously," Shea said of Jelly's presence in Connecticut. "Coaches who want to hire the best for their program are going to look to the UMass program. UMass has a standard."

Slow start not so bad; UM hockey still solid

By Michael Kabylanski
Collegian Staff

Don't be fooled by the 0-2 start that the Massachusetts hockey team has gotten off to during its opening two contests of the 1998-99 season.

For a squad that was picked to finish last in Hockey East this year, UMass could easily be 2-0 right now instead of 0- 2. Last night couldn't have been a better example of that, as the Minutemen held a 3-2 lead late in the third period against UMass-Lowell, only to watch it slip away and turn into a heartbreaking 4-3 loss in overtime.

"It was a well-played game up and down the ice, but in our situation when you've got the lead late in a game you've got to find a way to hold on to it," Massachusetts hockey coach Joe Mallen said. "We're going to try to look at it [the tough loss] as a positive and use it as a springboard forward."

The primary point that needs to be addressed is that this is not the same UMass hockey team that took to the ice last season.

The 1998-99 edition of the squad is composed of mainly freshman and sophomores and is arguably the most underrated in Hockey East. Michigan State coach Ron Mason and UMass-Lowell coach Tim Whitehead would both attest to that.

"They're a lot better than a last place team," said Mason in regards to the pre-season predicted finish for UMass in HE. "Overall I was impressed with their team, and I think that they're going to win a lot of games."

That's well-deserved praise from the coach of the No. 4 team in the nation, a squad who was given all they could handle for 60 minutes before pulling out a 3-1 win.

Last night was a different story, however. UMass deserved to come away with a hard-fought two points, but instead only came away with grief and disappointment.

"I just turned out that we got the bounce in overtime," said Whitehead of the game-winning goal, a shot that was redirected off a UMass player before going in. "I was really impressed with the way that UMass played. If they had won, they would have deserved it, but that's the way it [the puck] bounces sometimes."

So while the losses may seem to bring the thought of "here we go again" to the forefront, that shouldn't be the case. Although the Minutemen have had to deal with a pair of tough losses in a span of five days, don't expect the Minutemen to dwell on these first two outings. In fact, the odds are very likely that the Minutemen will come out firing against Merrimack next Friday night.

"We've got to start off [turning it around] by working hard in practice," UMass captain Dean Stork said. "We can beat any team in this league with no problem.

Spoken like a true captain.

■ hockey

continued from page 12

Lowell acquired a penalty with 3:16 left, but low and behold, the Minutemen broke down and gave up the puck with less than two minutes to play. Instead of dumping the puck, Brown made a heads up pass, which sprung Jeremy Kyte on a two on one. Kyte opted to shoot and scored with 1:53 remaining in the game.

UMass struggled in overtime. They gave up seven shots and had none on Fankhouser.

"We want to keep them to 30 or less and get 30 or more for us, but when you have the lead, the focus isn't necessarily to get shots, it's to play defense," Mallen said.

They took a late penalty by captain Dean Stork for holding. Lowell took advantage of the power play right away when Kevin Bertram found Bell at the point, and he shot through a screen to beat Helanen and UMass in sudden death overtime with 22 seconds to play.

"You don't expect a call in an overtime situation, but it's up to the discretion of the official. We had more power plays then they did and that's how we want to do things," Mallen said.

American Heart Association.
Fighting Heart Disease and Stroke

Heart health can start on the playground. It shouldn't end there. Stay active through life. Thirty minutes of physical activity 3–4 days a week can help cut your risk of heart disease. For information, call 1-800-AHA-USA1, or online at http://www.amhrt.org

This space provided as a public service. ©1996, American Heart Association

McMurphy's Uptown Tavern
Kegs & Eggs
Homecoming Sat. 10/24 9 a.m.
37 North Pleasant St.

Feel it.
Think it.
Become One with it.
(Go to it)
THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEVGIAN OPEN HOUSE
DAILY COLLEGIAN
LARGEST COLLEGE DAILY HOSTS AN OPEN HOUSE... A MUST SEE!
COLLEGIAN OPEN HOUSE TODAY!
THE DAILY COLLEGIAN'S
OPEN HOUSE
Tuesday, October 27th 4 to 7 p.m.
department tours:
business 5:30pm, graphics 6:00pm, newsroom 6:30pm
Basement of the Campus Center
Designed by Robin Johnson

UM home for a pair; Hosts Explorers, FU

By Michael Kabylanski
Collegian Staff

The first steps back to Dayton begin this weekend for the Massachusetts women's soccer team.

The Minutewomen found the friendly confines of Baujan Field at the University of Dayton much to their liking last weekend when they rallied from a 1-0 second half deficit for a 2-1 win.

Now, with the Atlantic 10 tournament to be held back at that same location in two weeks, UMass is going to need to put together a big weekend against La Salle and Fordham if they want to make a return for post-season play.

"We're in the driver's seat right now. Everything is in our hands," Massachusetts women's soccer coach Jim Rudy said. "Should we drop some points this weekend, then it goes out of our hands exclusivity and into the hands of others."

UMass (7-9, 4-3 in the Atlantic 10) currently sits tied with Virginia Tech for the fourth and final spot in the tournament right now with two weekends left to go. Rhode Island and St. Joseph's are the next two closest teams, but the Minutewomen would win the first tie-breaker against all of those teams because of head-to-head victories earlier in the season.

The Minutewomen defeated St. Joe's 2-1 in double- overtime back on Oct. 4, URI 3-1 on Oct. 6 and Virginia Tech 5-0 on Oct. 11.

Right now, however, the focus will be on La Salle and Fordham. The Explorers will come into the weekend with a 6-6-2 mark, 2-4-1 in the A-10, and would put themselves right back in the hunt for a tournament berth with a win on Friday.

"La Salle is a well-organized, confident team," Rudy said.

Leading the way for the Explorers will be Tracey Spinelli and Dana Gavaghan, who lead the team in points with 13 and 10, respectively.

Fordham, who will come to Totman Field on Sunday afternoon at 1 p.m. for Senior Day, are of serious concern to Rudy despite its 5-9 overall record, 2-5 in the A-10.

"We've always struggled against Fordham. They've kept every game close," Rudy said. "The scouting report on them is that for two-thirds of the field, they're as good as anybody, but they are having some trouble scoring. But then again, so did Colorado and Xavier, and they went out and scored their most goals of the year [in a game] against us."

Sunday's game will also mark the end of the collegiate careers for senior co-captains Amanda Thompson and Sophie Lecot. The perfect complements to each other, Lecot has taken charge offensively for UMass, while Thompson has been the backbone of the Minutewomen defensive unit.

Other underclassmen who will look to create winning memories their final home weekend for Lecot and Thompson will be junior Emma Kurowski and sophomore Kara Green. Together these two, along with Lecot, will provide the offensive punch for UMass.

The defensive core and goalkeeping has also been steadily improving for UMass over the season's second half. Junior Angie Napoli and freshman Cori Stevens have both had big games between the pipes while splitting time, and will both be looked upon to contribute this weekend.

Men's soccer to face La Salle, FU

KARA STOKES / COLLEGIAN

Todd Baron and the Massachusetts men's soccer team will make trips to Philadelphia and the Bronx this weekend when they face La Salle and Fordham.

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

Despite falling out of contention for postseason play in the Atlantic 10, the Massachusetts men's soccer team will attempt to finish strong beginning this afternoon at La Salle.

The Minutemen (1-11-2, 1-5-1 A-10), will face the Explorers at McCarthy Stadium before heading to New York City to meet the Fordham Rams on Sunday fternaon.

"We want to play well here heading into next season," Massachusetts goalkeeper Todd Fowler said. "We are capable of coming up with some more wins before the year is out."

The Minutemen will first target La Salle, who currently sport a sub-par record of 3-9-1 overall, 2-4-1 in the A-10.

Brad Kurowski

However, LaSalle did defeat St. Joseph's 3-1, the same squad that pummelled UMass 6-1 three weeks ago.

LaSalle will be led by Nick Zegetowsky, who leads the Explorers with seven points on three goals and an assist for the season. Another threat on the attack will be David Rajakovich, who has racked up three goals on the year.

In net, Don Yuohey has logged all 1227 minutes for the Explorers this campaign, and has made 84 saves while allowing 24 goals against.

Theoretically, the Rams will prove to be a stiffer challenge for UMass, as they post a 9-5-1 overall record, 5-2 in the A-10.

Fordham swept a set in Philadelphia last weekend, with victories over Temple and St. Joseph's.

The Rams feature a steadily balanced offensive unit that will be led by John Wolyniec and Anthony Tristani.

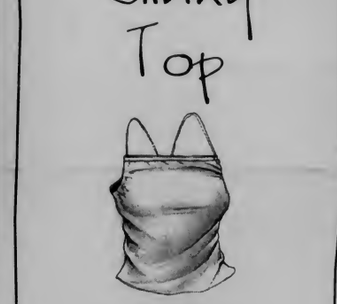
The New York City products have combined for 53 points this season, with 39 alone for Wolyniec. Others to watch will be Todd Viera, and David Farfe who enter the weekend with seven points apiece.

Fordham coach Frank Schnur has utilized a two-pronged attack in goal with the combination of Devin Moore and Jim Grandinetti.

Moore has started eight games with a personal record of 5- 2-1, while Grandinetti got the call in seven games and has posted a 4-3-0 mark.

Meanwhile, the Minutemen will look for much greater offensive production than they have had thus far. UMass has only converted on 11 shots in their 14 games this season.

Brad Kurowski, Matt Christy, and the injured Seth Lilburn lead the team with two scores apiece.



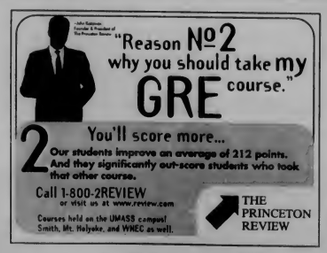
UMass' play was encouraging in their two losses last weekend at Totman Field, to Xavier and Dayton, and the team will hope to build on that stamina on the road this weekend.

The Minutemen hung tough with the conference leading Xavier in a 4-2 loss, before dropping a nailbiter to Dayton 1-0.

Minutemen Notes : Two scoring changes have made including the crediting of a goal to Paul Corcoran in the lone win at George Washington. The score was originally ruled an own goal, as UMass prevailed 1-0. Kyle Bidenbach has been given an assist against St. Joe's in a 6-1 loss. UMass will conclude the home schedule with Senior Day next Sunday against St. Bonaventure.

Department of Music & UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST
MULTIBAND POPS
Musicians & Dancers in Concert
Featuring:
University Wind, Jazz, Percussion & Marimba Ensembles, Dancers, Orchestra, Vocal Jazz and African American Music Ensemble & Minuteman Marching Band
Friday, October 23
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall 8pm
Tickets: $15 General Admission; $10 UMass students, elders & children under 18
Tickets available at the Bowker Box Office, 545-2511
Co-sponsored by: 22 WWLP, Daily Hampshire Advocate, UMass Alumni Association, WTTT AM 1430 Pioneer Valley

in Legal Education
To get ahead in today's economy, you need education beyond a college degree. More and more people are realizing the wide ranging benefits of a Juris Doctor degree from Massachusetts School of Law. A JD degree can give you the edge you need to succeed in business, health care, law enforcement, government and law.
Massachusetts School of Law
• LSAT not required
• Financial Aid and Tuition Plans available
ON-CAMPUS
Wednesday, October 28, 1998
See our booth at the Graduate and Professional Career Fair between 10:00 a.m. - 3:00 p.m.
Day & Evening classes available
500 Federal Street
Woodland Park
Andover, MA 01810
(978) 681-0800
www.mslaw.edu



ZANNA
downtown Amherst

340 WEST STREET(RT 116), SO. AMHERST
ANITA'S breakfast, lunch, bakery breakfast 6-2 wknds, 6-11wkdys
$1.00 off any adult meal*
Maximum off $5.00. Any day except Sunday.
*Minimum meal price $4.00.
253-7208

NEW AEROBICS NEW
CARDIO-KICKBOXING • YOGA
• Classes Daily
• Certified Instructors
• Suspended Wood Floor
• Area's Largest Room
www.emherstathletic.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
460 West Street
South Amherst 256-0060

SPRING BREAK HEADQUARTERS
Heller Travel
Student Travel Specialists. LOWEST student and faculty discount airfares.
HELLER TRAVEL
You just can't get it anywhere else!!
146 Massachusetts Avenue at Berklee
Boston, MA 02115 (800) 843-1544
email: heller@berklee.edu

Graduate studies are the best prescription for career advancement.
The Rouvé College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences at Northeastern University offers graduate studies for those who want to excel in a health-related profession.
You'll be taught by faculty who have distinguished themselves in both teaching and research. Your studies will be enriched through Rouvé's affiliations with some of Boston's finest medical research facilities. Study may lead to a master's degree, certificate of advanced graduate study (CAGS), or doctoral degree. Most programs are offered on a part-time as well as full-time basis. For your convenience, courses meet in the later afternoon and early evening.
For more information, call Stephanie at (617) 373-2706; fax (617) 373-4701; write to: Graduate School, Rouvé College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences, 203 Mugar Life Sciences Building, Northeastern University, Boston, MA 02115; or get on the web at www.rouvé.edu/neu-vegrad/
ATTEND OUR OPEN HOUSE
Saturday, October 24, 9:00 - 12:00 pm,
3rd Floor, Curry Student Center
Graduate Programs and Degrees
Counseling Psychology, Rehabilitation and Special Education:
Master of Science
• Applied Behavior Analysis
• Applied Educational Psychology School Counseling
• School Psychology
• Rehabilitation Counseling
• College Student Development & Counseling
Master of Science in Counseling Psychology
Master of Science in Education
• Intensive Special Needs
• Special Needs
Certificate in Early Intervention
Certificate of Advanced Graduate Study
• Counseling Psychology
• School Psychology
Doctor of Philosophy
• Counseling Psychology
• School Psychology
Communication Disorders:
Master of Science
• Audiology
• Speech-Language Pathology
Certificate in Early Intervention
Health Professions:
Master of Science
• Clinical Exercise Physiology
• Perfusion Technology
Master of Science in Physicians Assistant Studies
Master of Health Professions
• General Option
• Health Policy
• Regulatory Toxicology
Biomedical Science:
Master of Science
• General Biomedical Science with specialization in Pharmaceutics, Toxicology and General
• Medical Laboratory Science
• Medicinal Chemistry
• Pharmacology
Doctor of Philosophy
• Biomedical Science with specialization in Medical Laboratory Science, Medicinal Chemistry, Pharmaceutics, Pharmacology, Toxicology, Interdisciplinary Rouvé College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences Northeastern University

We're moving from Machmer!
Pre-Major Advising Services
serving undeclared & pre-majors for Arts and Sciences
will be closed from
Tuesday, October 27 - Friday, October 30
We will reopen on Monday, November 2
in 615 Goodell
Telephone: 545-2191
Come see us in our new location!

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

THEY'RE SHOOTING a movie in Northampton, Saturday, 10/24: $25. You may get in for free. Hotline: 586-6558.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take Over My Lease 1 bedroom at Puffton Village. On bus line. Suitable for two. Call 549-6434. Sabriya or Jamila.

AUTO FOR SALE

88 Dodge Colt Wgn 127K miles. $900. Runs good. 549-1010.

83 Volvo Wgn Green, 4 speed, AC, 131K miles. $1500 or B/O. 256-2384.

94 Honda Passport 2x4, 80K miles. Excellent condition. $7950. 367-9813.

Honda Excel '88 $875, good town car, 130K miles. 665-7232.

CARS $100-$500 Police Impounds. Hondas, Chevys, Jeeps, & Sport Utilities. MUST SELL! 1-800-522-2730 x4554

WANTED: Toyotas, Novas, Prizms, Sentras. Any condition. Cash paid everyday. 1-800-649-4795.

AUTO PARTS

Hard Top for Jeep Wrangler. Black with defrost and wiper. $800. 549-0013.

COMPUTERS

Macintosh Printer Color StyleWriter 1500 $100 or B/O. Call Tony @ 549-5514.

486 Computer Great For Student Works Good $100. Color VGA $50. (413)584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

EARN CASH Flexible Hours Now Hiring At Sbarros Hampshire Mall (413)584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

INSURANCE SALES

Earn $35,000+ in your 1st year as a personal lines account exec. If you have the drive and ambition to succeed, are well organized and have exceptional interpersonal skills, start your career in homeowner/auto insurance sales. We will train the right individual to sell our highly competitive insurance products and provide you with unlimited qualified leads. Candidate must be willing to work evening. We offer a competitive base + commission and complete benefits package. Send resume to W.D. Grinnell, Webber and Grinnell Insurance Agency, PO Box 538, Northampton, MA

WEBBER & GRINNELL INSURANCE

CHILDRENS HEALTH RESEARCH

Abt Associates is recruiting Research Interviewers to participate on a Federally sponsored national survey of the immunization status of children. Interested applicants should be able to work a minimum of 20 hours per week evenings including 1 weekend shift. The position requires good communication skills and some computer experience. Hourly wages start at $6.25/hour, $6.88/hour weekends, with regular merit increases. Health and Dental Insurance is available. For further information, or to arrange a personal interview contact: 1-800-792-4514. Abt Associates is an equal opportunity employer.

Kai Chi Restaurant hiring waitstaff/drivers. Apply in person after 5pm.

EMPLOYMENT

Legal Assistants Wanted Spring 1999 Internships with Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary— training provided. Deadline to begin the application process is Nov 13, 1998— Contact The Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Paid Marketing Internship Campus Street Reps Wanted: to market and promote animalhouse.com, the ultimate online college community. E-mail us at campus@animalhouse.com or call 800-254-8433.

HELP WANTED Financial Services Co. based in Agawam opening new location in Hadley has several part-time positions available. Hours are 5pm to 9pm, Mon-Fri. Responsibilities include booking and scheduling appointments for our Mortgage consultants. We provide a service which enables home owners to save $20,000 to $50,000 on scheduled interest payments on their home loan without re-financing.

- NO SELLING INVOLVED
- MINUTES FROM CAMPUS
- ON BUSLINE
- $6.00/HR + BONUS

Call our Agawam office to schedule an interview. (413)789-2454.

Wanted 98 People We'll pay you to lose up to 29+ lbs. Expires 11/11/98. 1-703-817-1071

Earn $100 Exercise Science Immobilization Study Needs You. Call Steve 549-3877

EMPLOYMENT

Artists, Illustrators, Cartoonists Start up Multimedia Company needs Illustrators for part-time work. Also, there are opportunities for cartoonists to publish their own work. Shanon Fynan 413-323-4578.

Waitress Part-Time Make $400 & work 2 or 3 nights. Flexible hours. Dancers For Upscale Gentleman's Club No experience necessary. Unlimited $$$ Potential. Bikini, Topless, or Nude! Call 413-536-0502

Drivers Wanted Pays $9 to $15 per hour. Inside help wanted too. Flexible hours. Call Dominos 256-8911

$AVON$ Earn holiday cash. No door to door required. Flexible. 1-800-408-0085.

ABSOLUTE SPRING BREAK..."TAKE 2" 2 FREE TRIPS ON ONLY 15 SALES and... Earn $$$$. Jamaica, Cancun, Bahamas, Florida, Padre! Lowest prices! Free Meals, Parties & Drinks. Limited Offer 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplash-tours.com

ENTERTAINMENT

Lights and Sound: Rave to Dorm Party. Your DJ's or ours. Call BARR Productions (413)737-8561.

FOR RENT

Take Over Our Lease 2 bedrooms. On bus line. Call 549-5318.

Fridge Rentals Free delivery. 253-9742.

FOR SALE

Ride Kildy Snowboard Used 3 times. Emery Bindings. $175/BO. 546-6179.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Cindy- Only 1 day until your 21st birthday! Love, Us

Happy Birthday Laural FINALLY!!! How many more minutes until midnight? Have fun but be careful! I'm so happy that you are a big girl now! Love Ya, Jen

HEALTH & BEAUTY

We're here to pump... YOU UP! Creatine Monohydrate, Creatine Surge, DHEA, Whey Protein and more from Fitness Workshop delivered right to your door. 1-877-FIT-WORK. www.fitnessworkshop.com

INSTRUCTION

CARDIO KICKBOXING Amherst Athletic Club. Train with the pros! 256-0080.

ROOM FOR RENT

Quiet setting, kitchen privileges. Laundry, parking, nonsmoking. $350. 549-4853.

Looking to fill 2 rooms in a 3 bedroom Puffton apt. Available either Dec 1 or Jan 1. Must commit till June 1. Call 549-7076.

Three Bedroom House Newly renovated, quiet area, big backyard, washer/dryer, 15 minutes from campus. Call Katie 256-5995.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst Area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TO SUBLET

3 bedroom apt for sublet. $875 per month, all utilities included. On bus route. Cliffside Apt. For more info call (413)665-0052.

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK '99 Largest selection of Spring Break Destinations, including Cruises! Foam Parties, Drink Specials, and Club Admissions. Group Discounts. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-FUN

WANTED

NOTICE

Active Women Needed For Nutritional Study Graduate Research Study in Zinc Supplementation. 18 to 40 years old and exercising 3 times a week. Call Christy at 532-2733

Are you getting tired of where you are living?

Are you looking to move out?

Look in The Classifieds today and see what your options are!

Are you looking to sell something?

Need a roommate?

Do you have a service you can offer?

Place an Ad in The Classifieds today and reach the whole student population!

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, OCT. 23

Ceremony — The Isenberg School of Management will unveil the naming of the school with a ceremony honoring Gene and Ronnie Isenberg. Seating begins at 8:30 a.m., and the program begins at 9 a.m.

Community — The "Theatre in the World" weekend begins with registration at 7 p.m. in the Rooke Theatre at Mount Holyoke College. A welcome and speech entitled "Women and the Future of American Theatre" will follow at 8:30 p.m.

Meeting — The "UMass Students for a Free Tibet" will have a meeting at 6 p.m. in the Campus Center room 174.

Show — There will be a Caricature Show in the Bluewall Cafe from 5–9 p.m. Students can get personalized caricatures done while listening to music and watching comedian Will Mathews perform. The movie "Lethal Weapon 4" will follow.

SATURDAY, OCT. 24

Comedy — MISSION IMPROVable, the UMass improvisational troupe, will perform at 8 p.m. in room 163 of the Campus Center.

Culture — There will be a night of performances promoting awareness of Asian culture from 7–9 p.m. in Sweeney Concert Hall in Sage Hall at Smith College.

Screening — A screening of "Where is Stephanie?" will be in Gamble Auditorium at Mount Holyoke College at 2:30 p.m. The screening is part of the Theatre in the World weekend.

Workshop — A workshop and performance will be given as part of the Theatre in the World weekend at 11 a.m. in Pratt Hall at Mount Holyoke College.

SUDAY, OCT. 25

Concert — The Hampshire College Chorus will perform at 2 p.m. at the Grace Church on the Amherst Town Common. Admission is free.

Panel — A panel entitled "Where Do We Go From Here? will be held in Rooke Theatre at Mount Holyoke College at 9:30 a.m. The event is part of the Theatre in the World weekend.

Trip — The Sierra Club will have a scenic trip in Quabbin at 10 a.m. Call Alexandra at 586-5586 for more details.

NOTICES

Community — Official Mail-In Voter Registration Forms are available at the Registrar's Office, and Commuter Services in the Student Union. Voting is on November 3.

Exhibit — "Equal Partners" is being shown at the Smith College Museum of Art from Sept. 25–Dec. 13. This exhibit showcases the work of 15 American firms founded by female/male partners.

Workshop — A workshop for women survivors of childhood sexual abuse will take place on Nov. 7. The workshop will include writing, drawing, and movement. In the evening, participants are also invited to perform dances, music, and monologues about healing from abuse. Call 586- 7390 for more information and to sign up.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Save 10% or more on nearly every book.* Every day!

Bookworks™

Conveniently located in the New Ustore Mon-Fri 9 to 9 Sat. 11 to 4 413-549-2691

*Offer not valid on Textbooks, Periodicals, Special Orders or Sale Priced Books.

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 23, 1998

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEOH	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Travel and Leisure Auction						Entertainment Auction
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Kids-Darndest	Candid C.	Buddy Faro (In Stereo)		Nash Bridges (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Kids-Darndest	Candid C.	Buddy Faro (In Stereo)		Nash Bridges (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Two of a Kind	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Brother's Kpr	20/20		News	Late Show
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny	Friends	★★½ "Point Break" (1991, Drama) Patrick Swayze,						News	Nightline
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Dateline (In Stereo)		Trinity "In a Yellow Wood"		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	15	Married...With	Home Imp.	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Legacy "Blood Relative"		Love Boat: The Next Wave		News	Newsradio	Newsradio	LAPD
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Dateline (In Stereo)		Trinity "In a Yellow Wood"		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Frasier	Captivity	Get. Personal	Millennium "Closure"		News		Friends	Mad. Abt. You
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Dateline (In Stereo)		Trinity "In a Yellow Wood"		Homicide: Life on the Street		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	6	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Slate We're In	Time Goes By	Monty Python	Red Dwarf	Charlie Rose
WGGB	29	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Two of a Kind	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Brother's Kpr	20/20		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Jud'ge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	Legacy "Blood Relative"		Love Boat: The Next Wave		Mad Abt. You	Mad Abt. You	Frasier	Cheers
WTBS	72	Mama's Family	Mama's Family	Roseanne		★★★ "Dicaprio" (1991, Suspense) Eddie Kaye, John Heard						★★★ "The War of the Roses" (1989)
A&E	40	Northern Exposure		Law & Order "Hot Pursuit"		Biography: Donna Reed-Moon		American Justice (R)		Mildomor Murders (Part 1 of 2)		Law & Order "D"
CNN	20	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Cold War "Berlin" (R)		Sports	Moneyline
COM	35	1 Night Stand	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	Pee-wee Herman (R)		★★ "The Couch Trip" (1987, Comedy) Dan Aykroyd				Upright	Premium
DISC	49	New House	Fix-It-Fine	Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery: Salmon		Discovery News		Divine Magic: Supernatural		Justice Files	"Hard Time" (R)
ESPN	43	Up Close	Sportscenter		Conversins	NHL Hockey: Washington Capitals at Buffalo Sabres (Live)						Sportscenter
LIFE	45	Ellen	Ellen	Party of Five	"Going Home"	Chicago Hope "Last, Last"		"Remembrance" (1996, Drama) Eva LaRue, Angie Dickinson,				New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	53	(5:30) Jams Countdown		Beat of Rock N' Jack		Rock N' Jock Presents: The Game (In Stereo)				Rock N' Jock Video Warm-Up (R) (In Stereo)			Loveline
NICK	51	Figure It Out	Secret of Alex	Doug	Rugrats	Kablam!	Animorphs	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Happy Days	Laverne	I Love Lucy	Bewitched
SCIFI	59	Amaz. Stories	Sci-Fi Entert.	Sightings	Star Trek "Journey to Babel"			★★½ "The Haunted" (1991, Horror) Sally Kirkland,				Sightings	Star Trek
TLC	28	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours "On Hate Street" (R)		48 Hours "Young Justice"		UFOs: Stories of Abduction (R)				48 Hours	"Young Justice" (R)
TNT	65	Babylon 5		ER "Dead of Winter" (In Stereo)		Hollywood Salutes Arnold Schwarzenegger			Hollywood Salutes Arnold Schwarzenegger			Chiffs "Pilot"
USA	60	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys		Renk: Warrior Princess		Walker, Texas Ranger		★★★ "Working Girl" (1988, Comedy-Drama) Melanie Griffith, (In Stereo)
HBO	63	(5:15) "Men in Black" (1997)		Inside the NFL (In Stereo)		★★ "Fire Down Below" (1997, Drama) Steven Seagal				"Texas Chainsaw Massacre: Next Gen"			Chris Rock
MAX	67	★★ "My Fellow Americans" (1996) Jack Lemmon,				★½ "Excess Baggage" (1997) Alicia Silverstone, (PG-13)				★★½ "Maximum Risk" (1996, Adventure)			Emmanuelle
SHOW	69	(4:00) "Portrait"	★★★ "Microcosmos" (1996, Documentary)			★ "Wishmaster" (1997) Tammy Lauren,		Stargate SG-1	Stargate SG-1	Dead Men x Gun	(In Stereo)	Outer Limits

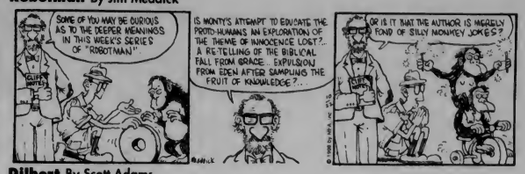
HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board	18 The Learning Channel
3 CBS/3 Hartford	19 UVC-TV19
4 CBS/4 Boston	20 ABC/40 Springfield
5 ABC/5 Boston	21 Gravel to Gavel
6 PBS/57 Springfield	22 NBC/22 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Ch.	24 Syndicate
8 UPN/20 Hartford	25 Bloomberg Financial
9 Weather Channel	26 CTN
10 NBC/30 New Britain	27 TBS
11 Fox/61 Hartford	28 BET
12 PBS/24 Hartford	29 TV Land
13 WOCH & HSCN	30 Univision
14 International	31 Comedy Central
15 UMass Academic TV	32 Cartoon
16 WB/New Haven	33 Much Music
17 HSCN Programming

Cathy By Cathy Guisewite

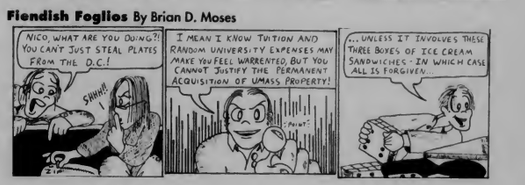
Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Foxtrot By Bill Amend



Non Sequitur By Wiley

Liberty Meadows By Frank Cho



Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Fiendish Foglios By Brian D. Moses

Non-Cents By John Zaccone Jr.

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You and a co-worker may have been mismatched recently, resulting in tensions that can be easily overcome by a simple rearrangement.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — Since you're going to want things to come out exactly as planned today, your strategy must be detailed and perfect.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You may be able to enjoy things that you had not thought of enjoying until today, thanks to someone who has gone out on a limb for you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — It's important that you impress someone with your speech and behavior today. What happens may affect you for some time.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You can do a great deal toward recuring a higher profit–margin for yourself at this time. However, take care you don't offend your superiors!

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — You may not often entertain thoughts of rubbing someone the wrong way, but any such behavior today is likely to come back to haunt you.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You may find yourself involved in a conflict over who is right and who is wrong today. Remember, no one is infallible.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — While you finish one project today, think ahead to what will pay off most handsomely down the road. Make plans now!

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You can move at least one step ahead of the pack today by relying on your own instincts. It will see you through a difficult patch.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — Make sure you're not taken in with things that make you deaf to outside suggestions. Listen carefully and you'll see results.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Take care that you don't let the differences you have with a Pisces native erupt into the kind of conflict that can take years to resolve.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — What happens on a small scale today can indicate what is likely to happen on a far grander scale. Open your eyes if you wish to see the signs.

Quote of the Day

"I'm Frightened!"

–Someone not referring to Halloween.

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Calm down, Louise. I'm sure it's just part of the after-dinner entertainment."

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Pizza
Tuna Noodle Casserole

DINNER
Chicken Fajita
Spaghetti/Italian Sausage Sauce
Tofu Fajita
Quarter Pound Burger

Worcester

LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Sloppy Joe
Spaghetti
Vegan Sloppy Joe

DINNER
Chicken Fajita
Baked Fish

Hampshire

LUNCH
Hamburger
Chicken Cutlet
Cod

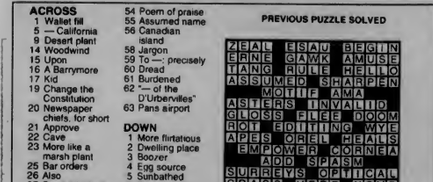
DINNER
Chicken Fajita
Baked Fish

Berkshire

LUNCH
Grilled Cheese
Sloppy Joe
Vegan Sloppy Joe
Pizza

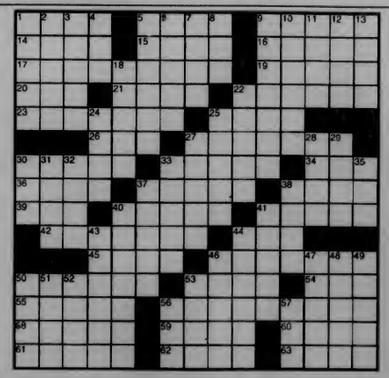
DINNER
Duchess Meat Pie
Chicken Fajita
Tri Bean Casserole
Pastabilities

Night Editor: Dinsa Jimenez
Photo Technician: David Bilotta
Copy Editor: Laura Sansoucy
Production Supervisor: Matt Wolaver
Production Staff: Stephen Mackey, Allen Mackey



ACROSS

1 Wallet fill
5 — California
9 Desert plant
14 Woodwind
15 Upon
16 A Barrymore
17 Kid
19 Change the Constitution
20 Newspaper chiefs, for short
21 Approve
22 Cave
23 More like a marsh plant
25 Bar orders
26 Also
27 Secured with a metal bolt
30 Getting all A's
33 Was an omen of
34 Soup ingredient
36 Greater part
37 Composer Franz Joseph —
38 Valley
39 NWT native
40 Eel
41 Nourishes
42 Sun-avoider's need
44 Hasty escape
45 Yemeni city
46 Combat vessel
50 Impassioned
53 Twinge
54 Poem of praise
55 Assumed name
56 Canadian island
58 Jargon
59 To — precisely
60 Dread
61 Burdened
62 "— of the D'Urbervilles"
63 Pans airport



DOWN

1 More flirtatious
2 Dwelling place
3 Boozer
4 Egg source
5 Sunbathed
6 Rose oil
7 Young kangaroo
8 Spring mo.
9 Wished (for)
10 Maximum
11 Newsman Huntley
12 Dollar fraction
13 Actor Ray
18 Auctioneer's word
22 Bestowed
24 Like a dungeon
25 Lightheaded
27 Pfl for Prince Charles
28 "Vogue" competitor
29 — -in-the-wool
30 Lincoln's nickname
31 Tooth part
32 Actress Chase
33 Nobleman
35 Nav. officer
37 Watered
38 Jewels
40 Wisconsin capital
41 Coen brothers' film
43 Devastate
44 Sharp weapons
46 Ebbs
47 Emulate a hummingbird
48 Perfect
49 "Friends" star Matthew
50 Autumn
51 Director Kazan
52 Peel
53 Cracker spread
56 Tub
57 Flying saucer: abbr.

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

10/22/98 © 1998, United Feature Syndicate

SPORTS

Dayne looks for a big day; A&M is all ready to go

I'm thinking maybe the Iowa Hawkeyes will try the Red Rover strategy when taking on Wisconsin freight train Ron Dayne this weekend in Ames.

Brett Manser
on football

Just join hands and tell the man to come on over. They better invite him, too, 'cause don't get the man mad. Then you'll have Bumps, Bites, 'n' Bruises written all over your Sunday morning dosage of FSPN.

Plain and simple, Dayne runs straight. There is no dancing in this guy's routine. And Iowa is going to have to construct some kind of wall that Dayne can just run into, like he does with his garage on off-days. And that garage is pondering a day off itself.

Badger coach Barry Alvarez had an idea, and last week put that into full effect, as Dayne blew holes in Illinois' front seven, gaining 190 yards on 39 carries en route to a 37–3 drubbing of their conference rivals. But there's an asterisk to the junior's grand, grand finale, as this year looks to be his last in the collegiate ranks.

Wisconsin opponents thus far: 14–30

Small detail.

Don't let that 7-0 mark and undefeated record in the conference fool you because this Wisconsin team would be run out of the stadium against the 1993 Rose Bowl champions. And those wins haven't been tremendously convincing.

Indiana, whom Dayne swiped the lead from with a touchdown in the final quarter of Wisconsin's 24–20 victory in Bloomington, is 3–3, which represents the best record among UW's opponents.

Iowa is yet another speedbump for the Badgers, who managed to avoid what would be the real test on the 1998 season, a matchup with the top-ranked Buckeyes. Weird how that works out...

The Hawkeyes could be in some big trouble if this Wisconsin team is for real. The Badgers have the nation's #1 rush defense on their side, and, well, Iowa, with the loss of Tavian Banks to the Jacksonville Jaguars, have been surviving with redshirt freshman Ladell Betts. Good defenses feast on the inexperienced, a tactic Wisconsin has used once or twice in leading the Big Ten in turnover margin with a +17 advantage.

Coach Hayden Fry does have history to work with here. Not since 1974 has an Iowa team been upended at home by Wisconsin. If anything, Fry can work with that, but otherwise, the Hawkeyes are outmatched.

At 3–4, Iowa needs a win here for bowl consideration. The future of the Badgers will be determined in trying to gain respect. But hey, they've got everyone else fooled. In this conference clash, I'll take Great Dayne and Wisconsin, giving 6 1/2 to Iowa.

Mauser's Toilet Bowl Picks of the Week:

Last week: 2–1

Season: 9–6

Well, I do believe that it like ho-downs, uh huh, good ol' Texan shootouts, so draw, pardner...

The bottom line in this Big 12 battle is that it is Texas Tech's Ricky Williams or A&M's Dat Nguyen's to win. When it comes down to it, these two guys will meet far too many times in far too many key situations.

Williams and Nguyen are the big play guys on their respective squads. While Williams thought the only battle he would be in this far into the season was in a rush-off with his namesake from Texas, his Red Raiders (and they are his) are in the midst of a conference jumble.

This is one of many games that will help iron things out for the Big 12. Missouri travels to Lincoln to take on the 'Huskers who are bloodthirsty after losing 28–21 to A&M, while the conference and the rest of the nation wait for undefeated Kansas State to show their true colors, but that won't happen until November 14th in their home date with Nebraska. Colorado also sits in the corner on their little stool, hardly the powerhouse of old, but wins are wins any which way you look at it.

I don't see the Aggies losing at home. Had the game been scheduled to take place in Lubbock, yes, maybe Tech would have a shot, but I don't see them being able to move the ball against the Wreckin' Crew. If the Red Raiders can avoid turnovers and turn successive first downs in field goals, and in turn, a low scoring game, yes, maybe Tech would have a shot. But c'mon, Nguyen is the quickest on the draw west of the Mississippi. I like A&M at home, giving 9 1/2.

On the undercard, Tennessee's a lock, giving 16 1/2 at home against Alabama. Finally, gimme Mississippi State, a diamond in the rough, in Baton Rouge, getting 8 1/2 against LSU.

Brett Mauser is a Collegian columnist.

Lowell shocks UM 4–3

Minutemen stunned in overtime

By Paul Teves
Collegian Staff

Opening night for the Massachusetts hockey team in Hockey East. Its opponent UMass–Lowell. The spot, the William D. Mullins Center.

The script was written well, all except for the ending for the Minutemen. They would score first, as well as carry the lead into the last 1:53 of the third period. But as was the case often last year, the Minutemen came up a goal short.

UMass Lowell	4
UMass Amherst	3

The Minutemen lost 4–3 in overtime to the River Hawks. First, there was the improbable goal to tie the game with less than two minutes to play, followed by the game winner with less then 30 seconds to play in OT.

The Minutemen began the night with a disallowed goal. The goal would have belonged to junior Jeff Blanchard, but the goal was disallowed due to the net coming dislodged.

The Minutemen then went on to miss several great opportunities in the first period, but finally capitalized on a shot by Jeff Turner, who gathered the puck off a deflection and shot one home with 3:33 remaining in the first period.

The River Hawks responded with 6:49 remaining in the second period. Chris Bell broke on and got a shot, which was saved by UMass goalie Markus Helanen, but the follow up shot from a weird angle by Anthony Cappalletti deflected off Helanen and fell into the net.

The third period provided the offense. With 15:01 left in the third, UMass gave up the puck at the blue line, and the River Hawks right winger Craig Brown scored through a screen to give Lowell a 2–1 advantage.

After that goal the Minutemen became sharp shooters. Although they were only able to muster three shots for the rest of the game, two would go in.

With 10:41 remaining in the third, UMass Bryan Fitzgerald won the face and Nick Stephens unloaded a blistering snap shot which roofed over Lowell goalie, Scott Fankhouser's glove.

The Minutemen would take the lead just about six minutes later on their first shot since the last goal. UMass center Kris Wallace, who was following the play, caught a lucky hop when the puck squirted loose to him in the slot and he made a crippling move to his backhand and scored the goal to give UMass a 3–2 lead with 4:46 remaining.

"Well played game up and down, but when we have the lead late in the game, we've got to grind a way to hold on to it," UMass Coach Joe Mallen said.

The game seemed sealed when

Turn to HOCKEY, page 8

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts hockey team watched a 3–2 third period lead evaporate and turn into a heartbreaking 4–3 UMass– Lowell win in overtime last night at the Mullins Center.

UM football home; Ready to host 'Nova

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

In losing to Connecticut last Saturday, it was not necessarily an upset, but for the college football fans around the greater New England area, it was a bit unexpected.

Football
Massachusetts @ McGuirk
Saturday, 1 p.m.

A unit jump-started by a new system going into Storrs to take on a Husky team with a raw quarterback to lead them onto the field looked like easy pick'ens for the Massachusetts football team (4–2, 2–1 in the A–10).

Instead, heading into tomorrow's Homecoming Weekend game against Villanova (3–3, 3–2 in the A–10), a whole new perspective has been introduced to the Minutemen. In a home game against a struggling Wildcat squad, where all advantages appear to be swaying its way, a UMass victory over Villanova makes things a whole lot easier on the ultimate outcome of the season.

But that's what everyone said last week.

Tomorrow afternoon, as the Homecoming festivities begin, soon after most will roll out of bed, and a more serious tone will be built in the Minuteman locker room, where anger and revenge will be on the players' minds.

Last year, Villanova enjoyed a 49–27 win at home, a score that looks a lot less lopsided than the game actually was. Quarterback Chris Boden, who returns for the 'Cats, was taken out at halftime after leading his team to a 35–0 lead at the break.

"We just still haven't put it together on both sides," UMass coach Mark Whipple said after last week's loss. "Big teams really respond with a little adversity."

A year has passed since then, and a 4–2 record through six games would have looked rosy back then. With Whipple at the helm, though, UMass is thinking playoffs, conference titles, and national acclaim.

Villanova has had two weeks to think about their 28–17 loss to Northeastern. And there's no doubt Boden and Co. had a chance to look over the Minutemen's loss to UConn, one where the secondary allowed Husky quarterback Brian Hoffman to throw for 413 yards in his first career start.

"He just got a lot more confidence as the game went on," Whipple said, "and UConn made one more play than we did."

Last week, the Minutemen took advantage of the conference's worst rush defense, as Marcel Shipp found his way for 190 yards. This week, Villanova, second to only UConn for worst against the run, will have to deal with Shipp, who goes into tomorrow's game having rushed for more than 100 yards in four consecutive games.

"We're not that good. In this league, there isn't one dominating team," Whipple said. "I'm excited about coming back this week and seeing what our guys got."

The Wildcats looked to be bringing the same force that brought them to the Division 1–AA quarterfinals last season after defeating William & Mary 45–28 a month ago. But after losing two straight, 'Nova finds themselves struggling to stay in the top 25 with a 3–3 record overall.

UMass field hockey set to honor its seniors

By Aaron Saykin
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts field hockey team is going to have to put yesterday's tough 2–1 loss to Rhode Island behind them as soon as possible, especially with a date with No. 2 Connecticut looming on the horizon this weekend.

The Minutewomen fell to the Rams in Kingston, RI when Erica Coggins tallied the game–winner with 6:48 to play in overtime. UMass drops to 10–6, 4–1 in the Atlantic 10 with the loss.

Senior forward Kerry Lyons, one of the five UMass seniors who will play at Garber Field for the final time this weekend, scored the lone goal for the Minutewomen just under 10 minutes into the first half.

Vicky Browne

The Rams would eventually tie the game midway through the second half before Coggins' heroics.

Even though one may have a difficult job finding a rivalry more intense than the annual UMass–UConn clash, Massachusetts coach Patty Shea is attempting to keep her team focused on the basics, which have translated into recent success during the 1998 campaign. Despite the hype which will surround tomorrow's 1 p.m. clash against the Huskies at Richard F. Garber Field, the host Minutewomen will enter the contest with the same attitude that had guided them to seven consecutive victories before yesterday's loss.

"It's just another game. They're all important. There's no one [game] that's more important than another," Shea said. "It's at the end of the season. It's a UMass–UConn game, so its a typical rivalry, and the advantage we have is that they are a team that, as far as the rankings go, have had a great season. We're having a great season and we get the chance to play the spoiler."

Kate Putnam

UConn enters the contest with a overwhelming record of 14–2, including their most recent 2–1 victory over No. 3 Princeton. The only two defeats suffered by the Huskies came at the hands of highly touted opponents such as No. 2 Old Dominion and No. 10 Boston College, who also topped the Minutewomen on Sept. 9.

In what has been a UMass tradition for the final home game for every season, five Minutewomen will be honored tomorrow during

Turn to FIELD, page 8

Thompson and Lecot set to take final kicks at Totman

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

Oh, how quickly time flies when you are having fun.

It only seems like yesterday when senior co–captains Amanda Thompson and Sophie Lecot first took to the field for the Massachusetts women's soccer team. Now it's pretty hard to believe that Sunday will be their final home game for the Minutewomen.

Hard to believe, yes. But it's also an unfortunate reality.

"I never thought the day would come when I'd be playing my last home game," Thompson said. "It's kind of sad. Time has just been flying by. I can't imagine what it's going to be like not going to play soccer or go to practice every day."

One thing is for sure for both Thompson and Lecot. Four wins over the next two weekends will guarantee UMass a bid in the Atlantic 10 tournament. Then, who knows what might happen when they get there.

"I know how it feels [to be in their shoes]. I remember my senior year of college and I knew that after every game that I had one less game left to go," Massachusetts women's soccer coach Jim Rudy said. "We just want It [their collegiate careers] to end on the most positive note that it can. Our goal is no less then making the A–10 tournament."

The Commander–In–Chief

There is a reason why Thompson has started in 57 of 58 games during her three–plus seasons here in Amherst: she is not only one of the best pure defenders in the region, but in the nation.

When the Minutewomen need a big defensive play, more often then not, it will be Thompson who makes it.

Need to stop a key offensive threat for the opposition? Just call on No. 9. Need someone to take charge and lead by example out on the field? The Houston native will always be up to the challenge.

Take for example a matchup with Rhode Island earlier in the season. UMass needed to beat the Rams in order to head in the right direction in the Atlantic 10, and Thompson went out and put on a showcase defensively, stopping URI freshman sensation Shannon Kittelson dead in her tracks on several occasions.

However, the senior co–captain had a few more tricks up her sleeve on that cold October night. She also tallied the game–winning goal on a free kick early in the second half to propel the Minutewomen to a much–needed 3–1 win over the Rams.

"She [Thompson] could have gone to a lot of places, but we're just really pleased that she decided to come here," Rudy said. "She's started just about every game here and the one game that she didn't was a tactical decision. Then, about 18 minutes in we realized that we really needed her out there."

Thompson is also satisfied with

Turn to CAPTAINS, page 8

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Senior co–captain Sophie Lecot has been a powerful offensive presence for the Massachusetts women's soccer team during her two years at Amherst.

The backbone of the defensive unit for the Massachusetts women's soccer team, Amanda Thompson will play her final home game on Sunday versus Fordham.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CIV Issue 1 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Monday, October 26, 1998

"Music for the Masses"

The evolution of 80's revolutionaries Depeche Mode is captured with their release of Singles 86>98 and a new tour. Check out our review (see Arts & Living, page 6).

Killing those Owls

Junior outside hitter, Kari Hogancamp collected yet another double–double en route to defeating A–10 foe Temple in rousing style (see Sports, page 14).

WORLD

Netanyahu returns with possible land deal

OFRA, West Bank (AP) — Jewish settlers demonstrated across the West Bank yesterday, vowing to scuttle a new Mideast peace deal that gives more land to Palestinians.

The protests came hours before Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu returned to Israel, hoping to convince hard–liners that the deal he made with Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat was the best possible. Netanyahu is expected to face a no–confidence motion teday in parliament.

Arriving back in Israel to a red–carpet welcome, the Israeli leader said security concessions won from the Palestinians during the nine–day summit outside Washington would justify ceding more West Bank land.

"We are returning after a long and difficult effort to bring ...security and peace to Israel," he said. "We achieved such a deal — we achieved the best deal."

Arafat, meanwhile, said in Cairo that he hoped the new accord would be "accurately and faithfully" implemented.

NATION

Memorial work begins at Okla. bombing site

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Thousands came to the site of the Oklahoma City bombing yesterday to break ground for a memorial to the 168 people who died, with Vice President Al Gore digging the first scoop of dirt.

"The people who died here were victims of one of the cruelest visitations of evil this nation has ever seen," Gore said. "But we offer them today not pity but honor, for as much as any soldier who ever fought in any war, they paid the price of our freedom." After speeches by Gore, Attorney General Janet Reno and other officials, Gore took a shiny shovel and dug it into the ground where the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building once stood.

He handed the shovel to young Clint Seidl, who was in the second grade when his mother died in the 1995 bombing. She worked for the Secret Service, and Clint said he wants to do the same. Gore said several agents wanted to talk with Clint after the ceremony. Gore told those who have ever wanted to demean the work of federal workers to "come here and be silent and remember."

EXTENDED FORECAST

Monday	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 57	HIGH: 54	HIGH: 62
LOW: 27	LOW: 37	LOW: 38

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 12
Comics .....page 13
Crossword .....page 13
Editorial .....page 4
FYI .....page 12
News .....page 1
Sports .....page 14

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Crime incidents low, alcohol ban seen as effective

By Lorraine Kennedy
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts police department reported that Homecoming weekend was relatively quiet, with the exception of a few incidents, including arrests for alcohol–related charges, vandalism and disturbing the peace.

University of Massachusetts Police Chief John Luippold was pleased with the success of the weekend's events, as well as with the overall cooperation with the recently–amended alcohol policy, prohibiting alcohol during tailgating and other outdoor events.

"Homecoming was well attended," Luippold said. "Individuals were there to watch the [UMass vs. Villanova football] game and were very cooperative."

Very few people took part in tailgating outside of the game, Luippold said.

Some stayed in the parking lot "to have a hamburger or a hotdog" and nearly everyone left the stadium area by 5 p.m.

"From my point of view, it was a very safe weekend," Luippold said. "Everyone was in good spirits."

There were eight arrests made by the UMass police department over the weekend.

Two individuals were arrested on Friday — one was charged with being a minor in possession of alcohol; the other was charged with operating a vehicle under the influence of alcohol.

Six arrests were made by the UMass police on Saturday, the day of the Homecoming football game.

One individual was charged with disturbing the peace as a result of a noise violation at his residence; two were charged with being minors in possession of alcohol; three others were charged with breaking and entering into vehicles in Lot 32.

Luippold said, however, there were "a number of requests for medical assistance" that were attended to over the weekend, including one individual who suffered cardiac arrest.

In addition, he said, there were "four or five reports of vandalism" and also a report that someone tried to steal some band members' hats; however, they were later recovered.

KARA STORLEY / COLLEGIAN

Go UMass!

The floats of the homecoming parade reflect the more joyous events of homecoming weekend.

Chicken Soup for the UMass soul: Canfield comes home

By Kevin Donoghue
Collegian Correspondent

Jack Canfield said that when he was attending the University of Massachusetts in the early 1970s he was not that different from other students.

"I was dancing with all the other hippies and drinking a lot of beer," Canfield said.

The co–author of the best–selling series "Chicken Soup for the Soul" spoke at Friday's Homecoming Festival Convocation, and related personal stories to the Bowker Auditorium audience.

"When I came to UMass, I was in the School of Education and in the attic of this building we used to have this class that was for all intents and purposes a Gestalt therapy group," Canfield said. "And I remember I got in touch with all this anger I had towards my father who was a raging alcoholic and was quite abusive, and I remember working on that for almost an hour in that class and being totally emotionally exhausted, because I had never before addressed my feelings."

Canfield said he was from the "John Wayne school of dealing with your emotions" before he came to UMass and was surprised when his education professor called to check on him.

"He said 'Jack I'm just checking on you; I want to make sure you're okay,'" Canfield said. "I had never had a teacher call me in my life and ask 'are you alright?'"

Flanked by UMass President William Bulger, Chancellor David K. Scott presented Canfield with one of eleven Chancellor's Medals awarded during the third annual ceremony. While giving the medal, which is the highest official honor given to those who have served the University, Scott was touched by the weight of the ceremony.

"I cannot help but feel worthy of something," Scott said.

Others who received medals are: Andrew F. Brimmer for Social and Behavioral Sciences; Thomas and May Carhart for Nursing; Helen Curtis Cole, at large; Constantine Gilgut, Patricia (Gilgut) Johnson and Weldon Johnson for Natural Sciences and Mathematics; Mary A. Carney for Humanities and Fine Arts; Robert C. Gunness for Engineering; Eugene M. Isenberg for Management; Barry Y. Weiner, at large; Dennis M. Cell for Food and Natural Resources; and Titleist & Footjoy Worldwide for Public Health & Health Services.

Following the ceremony, Canfield signed copies of his books, including "Chicken Soup for the Teenage Soul."

"I usually try to personalize it, but sometimes I'm in a hurry and I just have to write 'love to you' very quick," Canfield said. "But that's the message I really want to convey."

Thursday afternoon, Canfield signed several hundred copies.

"About half of the people who came to the Campus Center had more than one copy," he said.

Canfield said new "Chicken Soup for the Soul" books are in the works, including editions for the couple's soul, laughing soul, golfer's soul and Jewish soul "because there's already one for the Christian soul." Canfield is also planning the release of "Chicken Soup for the College Soul" sometime next year.

"It will deal with all the things that a college student is forced to deal with like relationships, being in a new environment, feeling alone, and people working together to do more than just going to class," Canfield said.

Many performers paid tribute to Betty Shabazz at the unveiling of the mural Friday afternoon.

KARA STORLEY / COLLEGIAN

Dr. Shabazz honored; mural unveiled Friday at Campus Center

By Elizabeth Johnson
Collegian Correspondent

In the basement of the Campus Center Friday the Black Student Union (BSU) presented the dedication of a mural in celebration of the life of Dr. Betty Shabazz and the great works and wonders she achieved.

The BSU organized the Shabazz Mural Competition to find an artist who could depict Dr. Shabazz's life with true passion and beauty. The mural painted by graduate student Shamek–Imin Weddle, now hanging in the Campus Center, is described in the program as "a masterpiece illustration of 'Betty.'" Shamek graduated from Virginia State University and went on to earn a master of education degree at the University of Massachusetts. He is currently pursuing a master of fine arts degree.

The unveiling occurred following numerous speakers and live performances Friday. Stephanie Hope, a 1998 graduate of UMass and a former member of the BSU, planned and organized the celebration. She began by referring to Dr. Shabazz as "a beacon for all of us."

The next person to speak, Dr. Norma Jean Anderson, Chairperson of Shabazz's Dissertation, was also her advisor and academic mentor.

Anderson shared many experiences with Dr. Shabazz and is convinced, "As I was her mentor, she was a mentor to me."

Anderson hopes her outlook on life is as positive as Shabazz's and believes, "It can be a great time, all we have to do is name it and claim it."

Dr. Alexandrina Deschamps, from the women's studies department, followed suit, declaring that what stood out for her concerning the life of Dr. Shabazz was "the inner strength she had, and the reflections of finding such an inner peace." She stressed her own concept of "movement culture," being involved with everyone, and finished with the idea that "if only we can co–exist, we can be more than just comfortable strangers."

Dr. John H. Bracey Jr., of the Afro–American studies department, presented another facet of the life of Dr. Betty Shabazz, her relationship with Malcolm X. Bracey declared that "Malcolm had eyes only for Dr. Betty, his love for her was staggering." Bracey continued by describing the love and support she received after her husband was assassinated. "She was the one that stood there like the rock," he said, and quoted her in response to all the protection she was given as having said, "I've been through it...just bring it on!"

The BSU was recognized for planning and publicizing the event by Dr. Elizabeth Dale, Campus Center Director, Business and Facilities Services. While thanking the Alumni Association for its financial support in making the celebration possible, she explained how together, they planned the unveiling of the mural on this homecoming weekend In honor of all alumni.

Chancellor David K. Scott focused on Shabazz's work as a civil rights leader and referred often during his speech to the famous quote by physicist Sir Isaac Newton, "If I have been able to see farther than the other scientists, it's because I stand on the shoulder of giants." Scott declared "Betty Shabazz was a giant in her own work and the work she did with Malcolm X...this Mural will ensure that parents, alumni by the thousands will have a chance to see this memorial to such a giant of civil rights."

Following the speakers, various live performers, including the vocal group Premium, continued the celebration until the unveiling.

Abuses at church school revealed

CLEVELAND (AP) — Children of American missionaries were subject to repeated physical and sexual abuse at a church-run boarding school in western Africa between 1950 and 1971, The Plain Dealer reported yesterday, citing internal church reports.

The newspaper obtained copies of the reports detailing the alleged abuse at the Mamou Alliance Academy in Guinea, which served 200 children whose parents were Christian missionaries. The school closed in 1971.

The commission's report found that seven former staff members and two former students physically, sexually or psychologically abused children at Mamou, and says that that a "significant number of children" were involved. Among the allegations:

• Floyd Bowman, houseparent during the late 1940s and early 1950s, forced children to eat their own vomit. In one instance, the commission said, he punched a child in the first- and second-grade class in the face, leaving a black eye. Bowman was deceased at the time of the inquiry.

• The Rev. Dellmer Smith, the housefather at Mamou from 1955 to 1957, sexually abused at least five girls during post-bedtime "tummy rubs" in the girls' dormitory. Based on witness testimony, the panel also concluded he used part of a heavy rubber tire to inflict regular, frequent and bloody beatings.

The commission reported Smith "categorically" denied the charges. He refused to comment to The Plain Dealer.

• Dorothy Wormley Bortel, the first- and second-grade teacher from 1958 through 1966, was found by the independent panel to have engaged in an "ongoing reign of terror and sadistic behavior." The abuses included shaking, slapping, hitting and pulling them from the desks by their hair.

In a letter from her attorney, Wormley said she had "a clear conscience" about her work at Mamou Academy. She did not respond to a request for an interview made through her attorney.

The reports followed a two-year inquiry by an independent commission appointed by the Christian and Missionary Alliance, which ran the school. Included by the commission were interviews and written testimony from more than 70 Mamou alumni, several missionary parents and former Mamou staff.

Dianne Darr Coats, a schoolteacher from Akron, and her brothers, Richard, John and David, all Akron natives who attended Mamou, spoke out about the abuse and played a role in seeking the church inquiry.

Retired missionary Ralph Shellrude of Bremerton, Wash., who sent a son and two daughters to the missionary school, told The Plain Dealer he had no idea Mamou was not a safe place.

"This is unbelievable, I realize," he said. "The letters home revealed nothing, absolutely nothing."

Parents thought signs of unhappiness they picked up in their children were the parents' fault, the newspaper said.

In all, the school served about 200 children of missionaries from the U.S.-based Missionary Alliance, Gospel Missionary Union and other missionary organizations.

Hurricane Mitch threatens Caribbean; Jamaica and Cuba keeping a close watch

By Lloyd Williams
Associated Press

KINGSTON, Jamaica — Driving rain squalls spawned by Hurricane Mitch forced churches to cancel Sunday services, flooded streets in the Jamaican capital of Kingston, and sent residents scurrying for provisions.

Under dark, menacing skies, seaports closed and buses and taxis stayed off Kingston's streets as Mitch, the 13th named storm of the Atlantic hurricane season, swirled in the western Caribbean Sea south of Jamaica.

Packing 145-mph winds, Mitch was a powerful Category Four hurricane that could also threaten the Cayman Islands, Cuba, Honduras and Colombia's tiny islands off Central America, the U.S. National Hurricane Center said.

Hurricane warnings were posted for Jamaica and eastern Cuba, and a hurricane watch was in effect for the tourist islands of the Caymans.

At 4 p.m. EST yesterday, Mitch was about 190 miles south-southwest of Grand Cayman. Crawling westnorthwest at 8 mph, its hurricane-force winds of at least 74 mph extended 70 miles from the center. Sheets of rain reduced visibility to a few yards while squalls pelted Kingston and Jamaica's eastern districts. With rain expected at least through today, authorities warned of mudslides and flash floods, especially in the mountains.

As Prime Minister P.J. Patterson appealed for calm, shelters opened and Jamaica's defense forces went on alert. Residents cleared shelves of bakers items, batteries and other goods at the few Kingston markets open yesterday.

Several airlines canceled flights, although the Kingston and Montego Bay airports remained open.

In Cuba, civil defense authorities began warning citizens in the eastern part of the island yesterday. Cuba's eastern half was battered by Hurricane Georges a month ago.

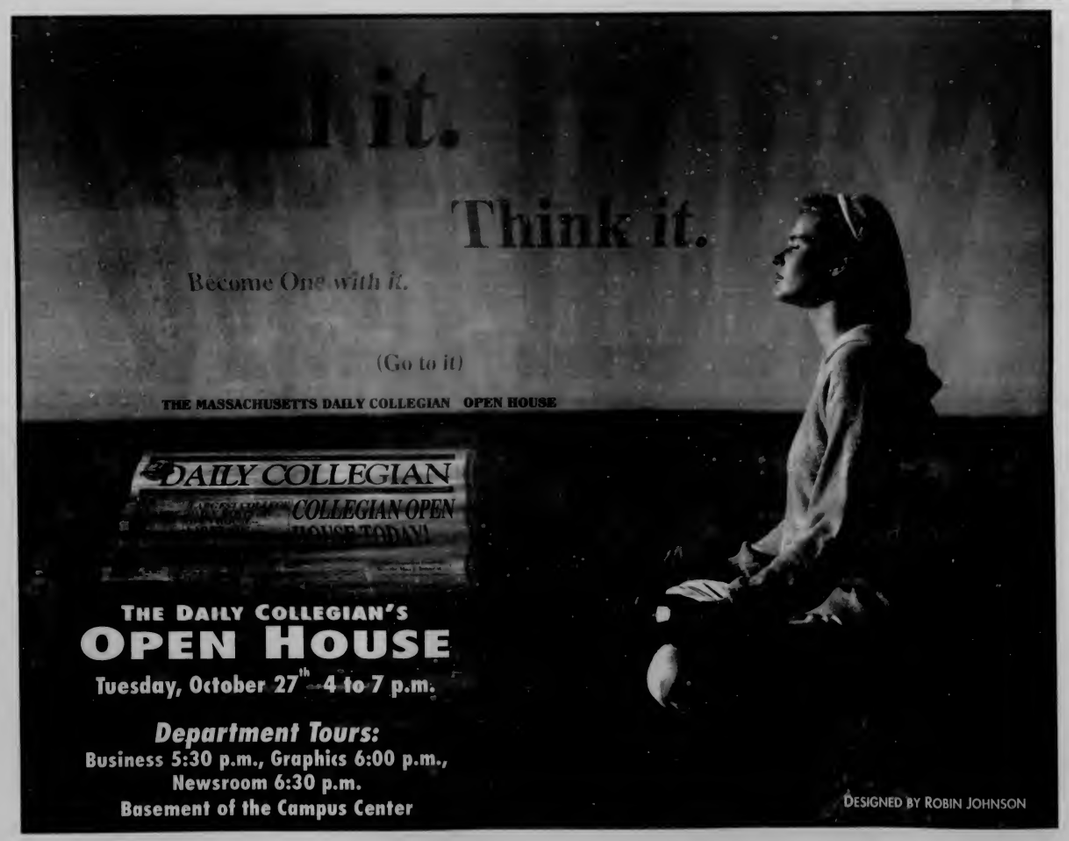
Forecasters were keeping close watch on the storm. Jose Rubiera of the Cuban Meteorological Institute told the Cuban news agency Prensa Latina.

In western Jamaica, hoteliers and tourists kept a wary eye on the storm's progress.

"It's not a very good beach day," said Rohan Watson, a manager at the Negril Inn in the western resort of Negril. Employees stockpiled food, and plywood to board windows in case Mitch threatened, he said.

"People are still coming in. I think most people think the weather's going to pass," said an optimistic Marcia Tomlinson, a receptionist at the Montego Bay hotel in the northwestern coastal resort of Montego Bay.

In 1988, Hurricane Gilbert killed 45 people in Jamaica. The island was spared, however, by Hurricane Georges, which killed more than 500 people in the northeast Caribbean last month.



In the Cayman Islands, a British colony of about 28,000, some boat owners secured their vessels and residents stocked up on essentials. The government allowed markets — normally closed by law on Sundays — to open.

KARA STOKES / COLLEGIAN

The best seat in the house

Amherst locals look on as the UMass homecoming parade makes it way through the center of town.

KARA STOKES / COLLEGIAN

And the beat goes on...

The UMass marching band leads the homecoming parade through town Saturday morning.

Pinochet in British custody amid protest

By Mara D. Bella
Associated Press

LONDON — A delegation of right-wing Chilean senators arrived yesterday to warn that the arrest of former Chilean dictator Augusto Pinochet could destroy democracy in Chile and "seriously imperil" relations with Britain.

Outside the London Clinic where Pinochet is under police guard, scuffles broke out when a visitor, reportedly Chilean Sen. Ignacio Perez Walker, left after seeing Pinochet and made taunting gestures toward protesters yelling for a trial.

Several demonstrators climbed over barriers but were blocked by police. Others were held back by fellow protesters. Police reported no arrests.

"We have come to represent to the British authorities that as long as they keep their hands in Chilean affairs, they are seriously damaging the process of transition in Chile," said Carlos Bombal, a right-wing senator who arrived with six other senators seeking Pinochet's release.

Pinochet, 82, was arrested Oct. 16 on a warrant from a Spanish magistrate seeking to extradite him on charges of genocide, terrorism and torture during his 17-year rule. Thousands disappeared during his 1973-90 dictatorship, including some Spanish citizens.

The Chilean government has urged Britain to release Pinochet on humanitarian grounds, arguing he is entitled to diplomatic immunity because he is a senator. Britain says he does not have immunity and the government cannot intervene.

"Once you start to say to the Metropolitan Police as politicians: 'Look, we don't want you to carry out that warrant for arrest that has been given by the magistrates,' you are only one step away from politicians telling the police who you do want to have arrested," Foreign Secretary Robin Cook said in a BBC interview yesterday.

British Prime Minister Tony Blair and Spanish Prime Minister Jose Maria Aznar also said yesterday that Pinochet's fate was in the hands of their judicial authorities and they will not interfere. "Both myself and Mr. Aznar agree this is not a matter for us to discuss," said Blair. "I've avoided commenting on that judicial process, and I don't intend to do so."

Pinochet's lawyers were scheduled to go to High Court today to try to get the arrest ruled invalid.

London's Observer newspaper reported yesterday that Pinochet's aides had planned to "spirit him secretly" back to Chile on Oct. 17. But a Pinochet ally, Miguel Schweitzer, a former ambassador to Britain, said the Foreign Office had been told Pinochet had planned to leave Oct. 20 after recovering from spinal surgery he underwent on Oct. 9.

Yesterday in the Chilean capital, Santiago, about 5,000 anti-Pinochet demonstrators gathered peacefully in a park. On Saturday, a rally by more than 20,000 Pinochet supporters ended in scattered clashes with police.

In Stockholm, a group of Chilean immigrants who lost family members during Pinochet's rule sought yesterday to have the former dictator charged with murder and kidnapping in Sweden.

Iranian Assembly elections held; conservatives dominate results

By Scheherezade Faramarz
Associated Press

TEHRAN, Iran — Even the losers praised the election for an assembly of Iran's ruling clergy, calling it a triumph for democracy.

However, the victory for hard-liners announced yesterday could set back the reforms made by moderate President Mohammad Khatami's.

Conservatives won at least 54 places on the 86-seat Assembly of Experts in Friday's vote. Moderates won only 13 seats in the assembly, which oversees the country's supreme leader.

Sixteen seats went to candidates whose affiliation was unclear — but who probably lean toward the hard-line camp, and three others went to independents who are believed closer to the moderates. "We took a step, however small, toward the democratization of Iranian society in a reformist manner," said Saeid Laylaz, of the Executives of Construction party, which supports Khatami.

Yesterday's results came as no surprise because most moderate candidates had been dropped from the ballot in advance by the Council of Guardians, which determines eligibility and is dominated by hard-liners.

Even with just 15 percent of the seats, Laylaz said the moderates will still have a substantial say in the oversight of the supreme leader, Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, and the choice of his eventual successor.

The moderates will form "a powerful faction" to make sure the assembly works harder and better than before, Laylaz told The Associated Press.

Assadollah Badamchian, a leader of the ultra-conservative Islamic Coalition Group, saw the vote itself as the real success. He said the Assembly of Experts always has functioned according to the country's constitution.

"The elections showed that democracy in Islam exists in the true sense," said Badamchian, whose faction wants to maintain the absolute powers of Ali Khamenei, the country's top Shiite Muslim cleric.

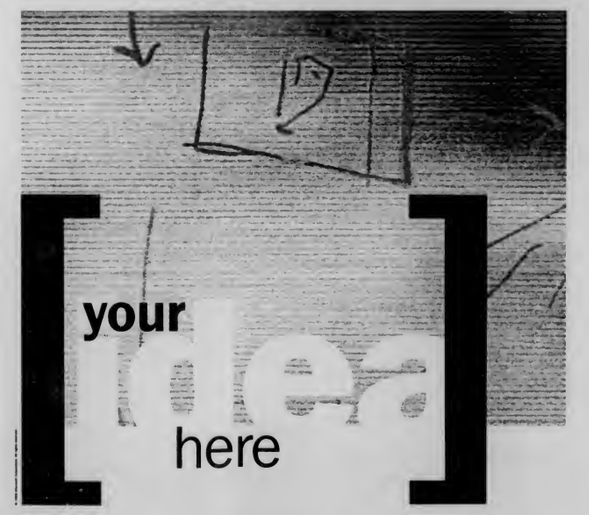
"It proved that Iran is the most democratic country in the region."

In recent months, hard-liners like Badamchian have fought Khatami's popular efforts to grant more freedom to the press and the arts and reduce Islamic strictures on the average citizen. Khatami's tenure has posed the biggest challenge to conservatives since Iran's 1979 Islamic revolution.

Nationwide, about 18 million, or 47 percent, of the 38.5 million eligible voters cast ballots in Friday's vote.

Many Iranians were skeptical of the numbers, even though there was no significant indication of vote rigging.

In Tehran, the capital, only 1.68 million of the district's 7.1 million eligible voters cast ballots, official figures showed. Voters in Tehran could choose up to 16 candidates. Hashemi Rafsanjani, the former president who remains influential and has sided with moderates, had 1,682,882 votes, the most of any candidate.



But hard-liners grabbed 11 of the 16 seats in Tehran, and moderates only five.

KARA STOKES / COLLEGIAN

Waiting quietly for halftime

Instruments and hats line the outer wall of the stadium prior to the start of the homecoming game.

Interested in full-time or internship opportunities?
Microsoft Company Presentation
11:30 am, Thurs., October 29, in the Career Development Center Workshop Room at Mount Holyoke College
and
5:30 pm, Thurs., October 29th in the Neilson Library Browsing Room at Smith College
Bring Your Resume - Free Pizza
Win a free Palm-Sized PC running Windows CE
www.microsoft.com/college/

Microsoft®

Sinners repent

The violence of the slogans make me nervous.

The hellfire-and-brimstone people who recently paid us a visit elicited quite a response. The Sinners repent! stuff shouldn't be news. This great Commonwealth was colonized by zealots who thought the Church of England was too soft on sin.

Threats of eternal perdition stand out among the nasty epithets which form the monotonous background noise of nastiness to which we are accustomed.

A sign declares, "Swift is pregnant with Harshbarger's baby." Come on, kids. Is that nice?

On the front page of the Collegian, an article makes the inane statement that the Constitution of the United States was inspired by the government of a Native American confederation. Yeah, right. This is a line that gets repeated by people who care nothing about the truth. The suggestion, of course, is that this nation was conceived in one big ripoff — and shouldn't exist.

Martin Reddy

One of my fellow students writes of his dream of a great empire, inhabited only by members of one race — his race. Freedom and justice can only exist in his pure society.

No reasonable person disputes the plain fact that black people got screwed in this country for a long time. To claim conditions are anything like they used to be, however, is an insult to those who suffered through slavery and three hundred years of real oppression — as well as an insult to the courageous people who simply refused to take it anymore.

The worst of the dark side of humanity is ascribed to one or another group of people based upon skin color or economic status. Nonsense such as "genetic memory" is discussed with a straight face, and the word "genocide" is bandied about so gratuitously as to be an insult to the dead as well as survivors of crimes against humanity.

People claiming special victim status can be outright murderous. Wasn't National Socialist Germany a response to all the abuse the poor Germans suffered because everybody else was always ganging up and picking on them?

A political club puts up flyers advertising a speaker. Somebody else goes around slashing the speaker's picture on the flyers.

The first thing I noticed when I shook hands with the young man at the "Maoist" table was the lack of either firmness or callous in his grip. This was not the hand of a "worker." it was the hand of a middle-class college pudding. Not that there is anything wrong with that. The pamphlets on his table contained the most virulent anti-American rubbish. I read some of it. I was astonished to learn that American workers are an elite and are, as such, unsuitable for recruitment into the forces for revolution. Convicted felons — the antisocial hardcore — now they're got the Right Stuff. Give 'em all a beret and they'll tear down this rotten world and build a better one. They espouse "armed struggle" — as if they could fight their way out of a wet paper bag. Their ideal is the Cultural Revolution which took place in China in the sixties, the imbecility of which has no equal.

For comic relief we have the Marxist professors. These yuppies are sometimes amusing--always pathetic. Their villains are "corporations," "the rich," and "world capitalism." Wait a minute. Professors are rich. (They sure aren't "workers.") They denigrate our society and pretend not to be part of it. They collect status symbols and fat paychecks from the rotten system they claim to be "fighting." Is there a conflict of interest here? If their recent contract requirements are any indication, they are greedy little rascals. Still, they long for a better world and occasionally trundle off in their Volvos or jet away to Marxist conferences, where they can relax over cocktails and perhaps pick up the latest in bumper stickers.

African art souvenirs used to be de rigueur, but I hear nowadays that anything Cuban will do. These folks talk about "restructuring." Presumably, they see themselves as occupying space around the top of the new structure. We pay these yardbirds for this.

So when I look around, I notice more lunatics than just the Repent now — the end is nigh! bunch. The messages of the partisans, reduced to the simplest terms are: I wanna boss people around! and/or Give me a dollar!

I guess all these "activists" have their self-awareness and their lives together enough to qualify them to run around telling the rest of us how everything should be and how we should live.

I would rather live and let live — with the emphasis on live. I'm not about to climb up on a soapbox or a pulpit. I want freedom, but I'm not screaming for justice because I'm afraid that I just may get it. I would rather have mercy.

Martin Reddy is a UMass student.

We could be heroes...

Did your mother ever tell you that there are heroes all around you? (If she didn't, then pretend that she did, because otherwise this introduction won't be nearly as quaint as it could be.)

I always questioned the logic of this. If mom were to tell me how teachers and garbagemen are anywhere close to Superman or the Flash, I might have believed her, but to me, one must do something extra special to be considered a "hero." Let's face it, the little things that make people unique aren't enough to make them "heroes."

Seth Koenig

I was always told that, because Mr. Hockenschmoss woke up early every morning to get a class plan ready and wasn't paid much for it, that he was a "hero."

As an eight-year-old, I disagreed. I thought that It merely reflected the immoral displacement of social values and financial disbursement among first world powers (I was a complex child).

As time went on, I began to see what she was saying (don't you hate it when your parents are right after all). Sure enough, there are heroes all around us. You just have to be extra creative to see them for all they're worth. Alas, the bush has been beaten around long enough.

I think I can help you all realize how heroic everyday people really are:

BursarMan — This savvy hero, dressed in a suit, deftly attacks bad guys by stripping them of every cent they have and forcing them to take up six jobs to stay out of bankruptcy. BursarMan leaves his technologically advanced version of the Batcave, known as the "Whitmore Administration Building," only to track down those villains who have managed to enroll in classes without being completely broke. BursarMan has the unique ability to make $2,000 charges appear on tuition bills.

The Weed — This hero makes sure that all the genile citizens on a given floor of a dormitory has a substantial supply of grass (not lawnmower clippings, either). The Weed possesses the power to disappear when police are near, and no matter how much smoke seems to be around, never obviously reeks of marijuana. His costume consists of a long trenchcoat, and a tightly rolled ball-cap, so that no one can ever see what he's looking at.

Hawkeye — Hawkeye is male, yet he always manages to end up in the women's bathroom. He seems to able to walk through walls and view showering classmates without getting caught. In some cities known as "The Perve" or "Homo Erectus," Hawkeye is always standing at attention (I think you know what I mean by that).

> "Sure enough, there are heroes all around us. You just have to be extra creative to see them for all they're worth."

The Vacuum — Disguised as mild-mannered White House intern, Monica Lewinsky, this heroine... Do I really have to go on? I think we all know where this is going.

OlderMan — You see him everyday, and he lives in your building. but whether or not he is a hero to you depends on how old you are. OlderMan looks like a normal guy, but he has a super-power not many people may realize: he is over 21. OlderMan can purchase alcohol without being harassed by police officers, and thus, is an invaluable resource to the minors around him. He always has enough beer for everyone, and is always willing to go on a packy run as long as he gets free liquor out of it.

The Rod — The Rod is someone that every male looks up to. This hero has the ability to be sleeping with a different gorgeous woman every night of the week. We all know someone like this, so don't claim otherwise. The Rod doesn't look all that good, isn't all that smart, and is downright rude most of the time, but is always in bed with someone envious. Enemies of the Rod are frustrated into submission, as they can only imagine what he gets to do.

The Burger King — One of the many people that work in fast food restaurants who believe that, although they're working at a fast food restaurant, they're better than you. The King will stand himself above his coworkers by being particularly frank with you when you ask for fries, making it seem like you're putting him out of his way. Blessed with a remarkable sense of self-worth, the Burger King will boss around all the other employees in the store just for the sake of hearing his own voice.

> "Sure enough, there are heroes all around us. You just have to be extra creative to see them for all they're worth."

He's also known to viciously defend the cheap, greasy product he's selling and tell you that it's healthier than you might think. He seems to have the uncanny ability to recount exact statistics to back up his claims, like, "Only two-thirds of Brazil was clear-cut for our burgers, not all of it!"

The Columnist — This devilishly handsome and ravishing hero writes a weekly column and makes the time during which you're eating indigestible food seem a little better. By day, the Columnist sits at the Collegian and toils away at a computer. By night, the Columnist, well, sleeps. Up, up, and away!

Seth Koenig is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Mendese article had right idea

To the editor:

This letter is in response to an editorial written by Gary Mendese in the Wednesday, Oct. 21 Collegian entitled "The Other Side." It's about time somebody gave our society's ridiculous politically correct ideas the boot. Society's definition of discrimination needs to be redefined and Gary explained it perfectly by saying: "Discrimination is ignorant behavior of any group or person toward another group or person." Many minority groups are crying out against white supremacy and oppression, when they themselves are guilty of discrimination. The PC standards that have been created to classify peoples' specific origins are hypocritical. How can "blacks" be put into a broad category of "African-Americans" when they don't all come from Africa. We have to stop using an exclusive terms if we are going to be free of discrimination.

Mr. Mendese also brings up a good point about terms like "nigger" and "chink" being taboo while "redneck" and "white boy" are perfectly acceptable. These terms should all be eliminated if we are to rid our society of discrimination. In the bathroom today I witnessed a black individual yell the obscenity "bitch ass nigger" out the window very loudly to a friend. Why is this behavior acceptable? I think the term "nigger" is horrible and should never be used. But blacks utilize the word in their everyday language as if it's perfectly acceptable. I resent the use of this word by anybody and feel its use is very ignorant. I also resent the fact that minority groups automatically assume that I am racist. I am not racist and I believe strongly in the struggle of oppressed groups. I don't agree with the horrible things my ancestors did but I had no control over their actions. Making progress towards a unified nation means we have to raise awareness about the beliefs that currently exist. Putting the past behind us does not mean forgetting what happened, but seeking higher ground. I don't think it helps anyone to dwell on their ancestors' actions with constant guilt and shame.

Danielle Wheeler's response to Mr. Mendese's article lacked insight into issues that were presented in his article. She never mentioned anything about the true definition of discrimination because she was too busy calling him ignorant. Gary made some very intelligent and insightful points. We need to call attention to both sides of the issue of discrimination if we are going to reach any level of unity in this country.

Brett Lindholm
Chadborne

Debates did no justice

To the editor:

When we first learn about politics and government most of us are made to think that it's about issues. Some people maintain this idealistic view and others become much more cynical, thinking that politics is about image. Personally, I've maintained a middle-of-the-road view of politics. I believe that issues are, or should be, still important, but the way the issues are presented has become just as important. The second Cellucci/Harshbarger debate on Wednesday, Oct. 14 proved the cynics right.

I was lucky enough to attend the debate and my plan was to learn where each candidate stands on the issues. What I learned was that "raising taxes is in [Harshbarger's] blood" and that Cellucci "is a liar." These were statements people in middle school might make in an argument, not adults in a debate. I became totally uninterested in both candidates as the debate went on. It is impossible to take seriously two men who continuously call one another names. Occasional mudslinging has become a part of most campaigns, but this campaign seems based on nothing else.

The media, of course, seems to be of little help on the issue. Most newspapers and TV stations cover what each candidate has said about the other, or how each felt about the debate. It is rare to read about how a candidate answered an issue in question. I, as a reader, am not interested in their opinions of each other or themselves. I want to know their opinions on government and society. I am a political science major who no longer wants to vote because I am having trouble electing someone who has the debating skills of a seventh grader in an argument.

So, when I'm asked who I think won the debate, my answer is that they both lost... my vote.

Elana Schaffer
Amherst

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor.

But please remember:

- Letters must be typed
- No more* than 400 words long
- They must include name, address, and phone number for confirmation purposes.
- The Collegian reserves the right to edit letters for length, clarity, and style.

They can be submitted by mail to Ed/Op Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst MA 01003; by email to our new account at: letters@oitunix.oit.umass.edu; or by fax to (413) 545-1592.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor-in-Chief Position Vacant Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
Steve Salerno Jr. Advertising Manager David Parmenter Advertising Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Laura Forster Developing Nations Editor
Mike Mesnaros Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Co-Jewish Affairs Editor
Morgan Tobor Co-Jewish Affairs Editor
Heather Lei Guzzetta Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jill Carroll News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylarnki Sports Editor
Allana E. Todman Women's Issues Editor
Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Prentes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Shabazz mural unveiled

By Edgar A. Barros
Collegian Staff

On Friday, Oct. 23 the Black Student Union (BSU), in conjunction with Campus Center Administration, unveiled and dedicated a mural in memory of University of Massachusetts alumnus, Dr. Betty Shabazz. The mural project had been in the works since the autumn of 1997.

A recent interview with the current president of BSU, UMass sophomore Jeff Belizaire, provided some background information about the immense mural project.

Many people may wonder how the idea for the mural came about. UMass alumnus and former BSU executive board member, Jaime "Shaggy" Flores, was in New York City last fall at the time Dr. Betty Shabazz was in the hospital. Before he left New York, Dr. Shabazz passed away.

"When 'Shaggy' got back to UMass, we (BSU executive board) decided that we have to do something in memory of Dr. Shabazz. A mural project turned out to be a great idea," Belizaire said.

The planning behind the project involved long hours and plenty of meetings.

During the spring of 1998, the BSU ran a "Betty Shabazz Mural Contest."

A $200 award and the honor of painting the mural was awarded to the winner. Shameek Weddle, a UMass graduate student, won the contest.

The original plan was to have the mural erected in the Malcolm X Cultural Center.

"It was the most appropriate place for it," Belizaire said. "But due to miscommunication between [BSU] and Campus Activities Office, the proposal was denied."

BSU then explored other options. Through Elizabeth Dale, Campus Center Administration not only joined with BSU in the planning and organization of the project, but also provided complete funding.

"The contract agreement signed between [BSU] and Campus Center Administration last May states that the mural would go up in the Campus Center, and will not be moved without the expressed written consent of the 1997-1998 BSU executive board members," Belizaire said.

> "When people see the mural, they should first realize that Dr. Betty Shabazz was not only a mother to her children, but a mother to her husband's movement."
> – Jeff Belizaire

The continuous one-year planning behind this project is an accomplishment in itself.

Even with the challenge of working with a new executive board this semester, BSU did not lose focus on the importance of the Dr. Betty Shabazz Mural Project.

"The current BSU executive board and its members have done a tremendous job in picking up and continuing the project after many of last year's board members graduated," Belizaire said.

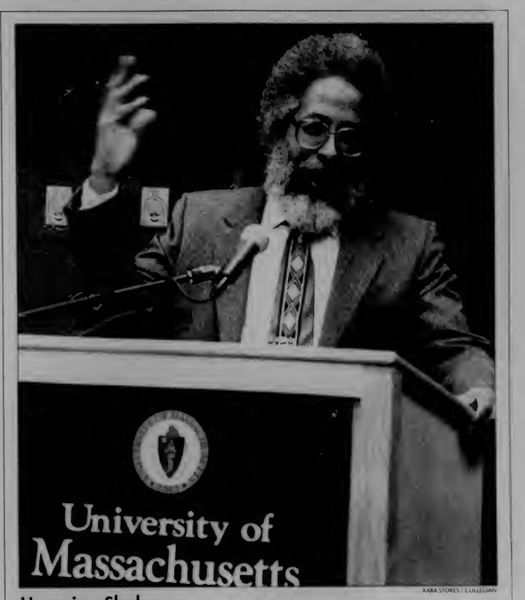
"Without the current executive board and current members, this project would not have been a success. They should be credited for their patience, tolerance, and diligence," Belizaire added.

The purpose and meaning behind the mural could be different for different people.

As with all pieces of art, each individual can get a different vibe from the same piece. Belizaire expressed his belief that at the core of all these different reactions and feelings should lie a common core vibe.

"First off, this could not have been done without God. When people see the mural, they should first realize that Dr. Betty Shabazz was not only a mother to her children, but a mother to her husband's movement. Malcolm X could have never accomplished what he did without Sister Betty Shabazz. Second, they should recognize that she was the backbone of the Shabazz family and all that they stood for. Finally, people should look at this mural and see a positive, strong black woman — someone we can all look up to."

The mural has been erected, the dedication ceremony has taken place, so where do we go from here?



Like so many positive projects and movements that take place here at UMass, the question of "what now?" always comes to the minds of students.

"We now have an organization on campus which is organizing effective and positive events and projects. What we as a student body have to do is work on planning and organizing many more projects and events, that depict various segments of our black identity," Belizaire said.

Belizaire adamantly believes that without a continuous growth in BSU's membership, future projects like the Shabazz mural will not be successful.

"We cannot successfully put on programs and projects such as the Dr. Betty Shabazz mural dedication, without an active and growing membership-body."

The next BSU meeting is tonight at 7:30 p.m. in the Colonial Lounge, located in the Student Union Building.

KARA STONES / COLLEGIAN

Honoring Shabazz
Professor John Bracey speaks at the Dr. Betty Shabazz Mural Dedication.

KARA STONES / COLLEGIAN

The mural unveiled
The long-anticipated Dr. Betty Shabazz mural.

KARA STONES / COLLEGIAN

In awe...
The crowd looks up in awe as the mural of Dr. Betty Shabazz is unveiled.

Greek informational

By Cassandra I. Carty
Collegian Correspondent

The National Pan-Hellenic Council (NPHC) at the University of Massachusetts will host "Meet the Greeks" on Wednesday, Oct. 28, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. in the Malcolm X Cultural Center. A panel discussion and a question-and-answer session will address issues and concerns relevant to black and Latino Greeks.

The National Pan-Hellenic Council is a Registered Student Organization (RSO) comprised of historically black and Latino fraternities and sororities.

The panel discussion will provide the ALANA community and other UMass students the opportunity to meet representatives of the black and Latino fraternities and sororities present on campus. It will also help students understand what a Black and/or Latino Greek is, learn the history and purpose of the individual organizations, as well as discuss the purpose of the National Pan-Hellenic Council as a whole.

The question-and-answer session will be a great opportunity for people to present questions they want answered concerning an individual fraternity or sorority.

"This is a chance to bring the ALANA community together to understand fraternities and sororities from a historical perspective, and clear up misconceptions. One must not believe everything he hears," said NPHC Graduate Advisor Douglas Greer.

"I hope this Wednesday's event provides useful and helpful information about ethnic Greek organizations. In addition to that, I also hope this helps motivate students in attendance to get involved," said Diana Estrada, president of Lambda Pi Chi, Sorority Inc.

Greek fraternities and sororities which will be in attendance are: Alpha Phi Alpha, Alpha Kappa Alpha, Kappa Alpha Psi, Omega Psi Phi, Delta Sigma Theta, Phi Beta Sigma, Zeta Phi Beta, Sigma Gamma Rho, Iota Phi Theta, Gamma Phi Sigma, Beta Kappa Psi, Lambda Upsilon Lambda, and Lambda Pi Chi.

Each organization will present historical and current information about their organizations. Information on upcoming events and programs hosted by black and Latino organizations will also be available.

Refreshments will be served and everyone is strongly encouraged to attend.

For more information on this event, please contact the Greek Affairs Office at 545-2711.

Letters to the Editor

ONE nation dream shared by others

To the editor:

This is in response to your article that appeared in the paper on Monday, Oct. 19, entitled "Plight of a people: The dream of ONE nation." I was moved by this article. I found it very thought-provoking and poignant.

As a black woman, I share in your dream of living under ONE nation. Since attending UMass, I myself have been exposed to an unprecedented amount of racism. I have found myself making excuses for such ignorant behavior, often brushing it (racism) off as a part of the "real world."

As of late, mere excuses have failed to pacify my seething rage at the mediocre lie that is the "real world." Reading your article stirred all sorts of emotions from within me: anger, guilt, inspiration and hope. I find it comforting to know that there is someone out there whom "...shares the same dream..." and I thought you, too, might find solace In the knowledge that the dream is still alive in the hearts of many. I can see it. I can feel it.

I'm embarrassed to admit that my eyes swell with tears and I shake a little as I surrender myself to the visions and ideas implied under "true unlimited liberation." One day, your dream — our dream — will come true.

Tracy Syverain
Class of 2001

Black Quote of the Week

> "When you're a black woman, you seldom get to do what you just want to do; you always do what you have to do."
> -Dorothy I. Height

Travolta wins film award; Slater in Broadway show

CHICAGO (AP) — John Travolta, whose career began as Vinny Barbarino on "Welcome Back, Kotter" and moved on to movies ranging from Saturday Night Fever to Pulp Fiction, received a lifetime achievement award at the 34th Chicago International Film Festival.

In his acceptance speech Saturday, Travolta praised the festival for showing ambitious independent and foreign films.

"I think Chicago should be proud of that, for 34 years, it has cared enough to keep challenging us," Travolta said.

The two-time Academy Award nominee's many other credits include Get Shorty, Face/Off and Mad City. Past winners of the film festival award include Jodie Foster, Michael Douglas and Tom Cruise.

Quietly, R&B singer Faith Evans has moved beyond her unwanted role of hip hop's most famous widow with a new album and a new love.

Evans, wife of Notorious B.I.G. when he was gunned down in 1997, often found herself entangled in rap scene soap opera scenarios. Through it all, the 25-year-old mother of three kept her dignity.

She stayed silent when Tupac Shakur fueled the East-West hip hop feud by claiming he had sex with Evans in an effort to disrespect her husband, also known as Biggie Smalls.

"These were things that didn't have to do with me — Tupac, East Coast vs. West Coast. It was like, 'Leave me out,'" Evans says in the Nov. 12 issue of Rolling Stone.

COURTESY NEW LINE CINEMA

John Travolta takes home an award in the Windy City.

Her stormy marriage, aggravated when Smalls promoted the career of his lover, rapper Lil' Kim, over Evans' professional efforts, didn't make her bitter.

"I never felt I shouldn't make him seem like a good person, because he was, regardless of what we went through as a couple," Evans said. "The marriage thing wasn't for him — and we dealt with it accordingly. But it didn't make me not want to get married. In fact, I'm going to do it again."

Her new album, Keep the Faith, features a tune dedicated to her new love, a man she didn't identify.

"Caramel Kisses' is a song about a guy that I'm totally in love with — his complexion is like caramel," she said.

Christian Slater can admit he's been a wildman off-screen, now that he knows who he is.

"Nobody gets through life unscathed," Slater says in Sunday's Daily News. "I've been in the public eye for the past 20 years, so my life has been slightly more exposed, and dealing with some of that has been difficult, especially when you don't have an identity or foundation of your own."

Slater, currently starring on Broadway in Side Men, has had several run-ins with the law involving drugs and alcohol. In 1997 he was arrested during a drinking binge for roughing up his girlfriend, kicking a man in the stomach and trying to take an officer's gun during his arrest. He got a 90-day jail sentence and three years of probation.

Now 29, Slater says he's made peace with himself by discovering who he really is.

"I think I lacked a certain identity of my own and I spent a lot of time living up to a projected image that people would place on me," Slater said. "I lost myself."

Slater, whose credits include Pump Up The Volume, Heathers, True Romance and Broken Arrow, says devoting himself to acting as an art form rather than a ticket to fame has made the difference.

"I like to be loud in movies and I like to break things, and I like to have a good time," Slater said. "I have that side to me, and if I can express it in a creative manner, we're all a lot safer."

It's been more than a decade since Thomas Wolfe's last book, Bonfire of the Vanities. It's only natural that Wolfe thinks his latest, A Man in Full, was worth the wait.

"It's much better," Wolfe said before a reading Saturday at Duke University. "Of course, if you don't

Turn to Travolta page 9

Depeche Mode's evolution, on disc

COURTESY VANESSA CHAVEZ

Depeche Mode's new compilation disc marks the beginning of their world tour at the Worcester Centrum tomorrow night.

By Matthew Nixon
Collegian Correspondent

DEPECHE MODE
Singles 86>98
Reprise

A funny thing happened last summer when For The Masses, a collection of songs recorded by such mainstream acts as Smashing Pumpkins and Dishwalla as a tribute to the talents of Depeche Mode, was released.

The hype that swirled around this album centered around telling potential listeners that they had really always been fans of the band and these groups' interpretations of Depeche Mode songs meant that it was alright to admit being a fan of Depeche Mode.

I admitted it long ago — back in the day when the bands du jour were Guns 'N' Roses and Whitesnake. It was a time when two French words led to blank stares and the realization that Depeche Mode was a tongue twister for many. A bunch of pale faced, British guys dressed in black just didn't cut it.

Times have changed and Depeche Mode get cited as influential as often as albums get released. Was It the radio airplay "Personal Jesus" received or lead singer Dave Gahan's near-death experience with heroine that led to the masses' identification with the band? The thing is, this band has made it through a lot. Down to a trio in 1998, Depeche Mode continues to create groundbreaking sounds.

As singles collections go, this is excellent. For true fans, it is not a necessary addition to one's Depeche Mode CD collection. For those who discovered the band through their last album, Ultra, this and the band's first singles collection, 1995's Catching Up With Depeche Mode, are the perfect ways to experience the highlights of the band's career since forming in 1981.

The timing of Singles 86>98 is perfect. The band opens the U.S. leg of their world tour at the Worcester Centrum tomorrow night.

Turn to Depeche page 9

安城中國飯店
AMHERST
CHINESE FOOD
we do not use MSG
253-7835 or 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst

Write for Arts...
Just because we love you.

amc
Hampshire 6 • 584-7550
Hampshire Mall
There is a Difference!
Silence is Golden. No child under 8 to any PG-13 or R rated film after 6pm.
Mt. Farms 4 • 584-9153
Mt. Farms Mall
WHAT DREAMS MAY COME (PG-13) Today at 8:10
Soldier (R) *Today at (6:00 @ 52.50) *8:30
PRACTICAL MAGIC (PG-13) Today at (5:50 @ 52.50) 8:20
BELOVED (R) Today at (4:00 @ 52.50) 7:30
ROMIN (R) Today at (5:40 @ 52.50)
RUSH HOUR (PG-13) Today at (5:30 @ 52.50) 8:10
URBAN LEGEND (R) Today at 8:10
APT Pupil (R) *Today at (5:40 @ 2.50) *8:00
Pleasantville (PG-13) *Today at (5:20 @ 52.50) *8:00
ANTZ (PG) Today at (5:50 @ 52.50) 8:30
BRIDE of CHUCKY (R) Today at (4:00 @ 52.50) 8:40
Night at the ROXBURY (PG-13) Today at (6:00 @ 2.50)
* Special Engagement, no Passes or Coupons
$2.50 (Tot-Lite) Show Daily

AEROBICS
CARDIO-KICKBOXING • YOGA
• Classes Daily
• Certified Instructors
• Suspended Wood Floor
• Area's Largest Room
www.amherstathletic.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
460 West Street
South Amherst. 256-0080

Calculus Tutor
• Friendly & Helpful
• Affordable
• Available Anytime
(at your campus bookstore)
www.wizpower.com

PIZZA RAMA
356 College Street
253-3808
"25th Anniversary"
(Next to Spirit Haus Liquors)
Call Delivery Express → 599-0077
BYOB

UMASS STUDENT TICKET PICK-UP FOR MEN'S BASKETBALL GAMES AGAINST NIAGARA (PRESEASON CHASE NIT), UCONN (MASSMUTUAL U-GAME) AND BOSTON COLLEGE

10:00 AM – 2:00 PM – CAMPUS CENTER CONCOURSE
9:00 AM – 4:00 PM – CURRY HICKS CAGE

Available	Cost	Location	Opponent	Date
Nov. 2	$5.00	Mullins Center	Preseason Chase NIT v Niagara	Nov. 16
Nov. 2	$5.00	Mullins Center	MassMutual U-Game v UConn	Dec. 9
Nov. 2	$10.00	Worcester Centrum	Boston College	Dec. 12

STUDENTS MUST PRESENT A VALID UMASS STUDENT ID CARD IN ORDER TO PURCHASE TICKETS. EACH STUDENT IS LIMITED TO TWO TICKETS PER EVENT.

UNIVERSITY STORE'S Textbook Annex UMASS AMHERST
Please buy the textbooks you need today!
We will return unsold books to the publishers!
Be sure you have the books you need.
University Store BOOKS BOOKS BOOKS
TEXTBOOK ANNEX
9AM-4PM Mon.-Fri.
545-3570

OPEN HOUSE!

Because we want you to know as much about how the news gets to you as what's in the news itself, we're opening our doors to you. Come down and see where it all happens.

To make things easier, we're giving a few tours of the different departments: Business at 5:30PM, Graphics at 6:00PM, and the Newsroom at 6:30PM.

But remember, this is a one-time engagement. We're only offering it on Tuesday, October 27th from 4 to 7PM, so be there. Miss it and you'll regret it.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967

Big Y® WORLD CLASS MARKET™
175 University Drive

LOOK HERE
FOR EVERYTHING YOU NEED!

WE'VE GOT PHONE CARDS!

Any Size, All Varieties Keebler Cookies or Crackers
SAVE 50% (Does Not Include Pie Crust or Ice Cream Cones)
ON UP TO 5

Prince Macaroni & Cheese Dinner
7.25 oz
4 for $1
ON UP TO 5

Chicken of the Sea Solid White Tuna
6 oz Can, In Water
88¢
ON UP TO 5

Fresh To Go SALAD BAR
249 lb

IN OUR PRODUCE DEPT.
Fresh Pressed Apple Cider
HALF GALLON, PASTEURIZED
BUY 1 GET 1 FREE
ON UP TO 5

BIG Y Premium Orange Juice or Grapefruit Juice, Half Gallon
2 for $3
ON UP TO 10

Made From Scratch!
World Class Donuts
All Varieties
3 for 99¢

PART TIME HELP WANTED
COME JOIN Big Y®
COMPETITIVE WAGES
EXCELLENT TRAINING
FLEXIBLE SCHEDULES
Apply in person at the Customer Service Desk at any Big Y Store.
As a family of quality minded people, we are a committed equal opportunity employer.

PRICES EFFECTIVE OCT. 26 THRU NOV. 2, 1998 IN OUR AMHERST AND NORTHAMPTON STORES ONLY

French band Air wears thin

By Kevin Monahan
Collegian Staff

AIR
Kumma Club
Oct. 22

BOSTON — With the release of Moon Safari earlier this year, France's Air established a strong following in the States. "Kelly Watch the Stars" and "La Femme d' Argent" currently receive a good deal of airplay, and the "Moon Safari tour" was eagerly awaited when it came to Boston last Thursday.

So, what went wrong?

To say that Air's performance Thursday night was disappointing is an understatement. While the show had its bright points, the overall effect was one of confusion. The extremely short set and lack of material was Air's downfall. Trying to turn a pop band into a jam band was a trick that did not quite work its magic.

"Kelly Watch the Stars" being an early highlight, Air went on to stretch a few of their four to five minute songs into nine-minute epic "Interstellar Overdrive"-esque numbers that dole out entertainment value too little of the time and too far between. As they appear on Moon Safari, some of Air's songs come perilously close to going on too long. It may be a fun concept, but an extended version of "Sexy Boy" is not necessary.

Enough hints are dropped on Moon Safari to Air's fancy for space-rock (song titles, the album title, etc.), but abandoning the Euro-pop stylings that characterized their album for synths and sound effects may be considered to be a bit cocky. The moogs and harmonizers were in full effect, creating an atmospheric sound that was lost in the shadows of early Pink Floyd.

Their set lasted approximately 50 minutes, including one encore.

After producing one of the best albums of the year, Air fouled up by deciding not to play very much of it. A bold move, but one that forced them to rely on something to keep us entertained — something that they just didn't come up with. Air saved some face, but managed to further disappoint the crowd by adhering to a certain philosophy: When all else fails, cut the set short.

■ Travolta

continued from page 6

believe the last book's your best, you're in trouble."

Wolfe's reading was part of "Duke Moms and Dads Read," part of the school's parents weekend. The writer appeared dressed in his trademark double-breasted white suit and tie, striped shirt and two-toned shoes, accompanied by his daughter Alexandra, a Duke freshman.

Wolfe's daughter told the crowd Bonfire of the Vanities was published when she was just 7.

"I started asking him when his next book would be published, and each year, my father would tell me next fall, and that fall, he'd tell me next spring," she said. "I said, 'I bet it won't be published until I'm in college,' and everyone laughed at me."

A Man in Full is a 700-page novel set in Atlanta salons of power and Georgia plantation retreats.

King Juan Carlos of Spain and Queen Beatrix of the Netherlands topped a list of royalty and heads of state from across Europe at a weekend celebration marking the 350th anniversary of the Treaty of Westphalia, which ended the Thirty Years War.

They walked up a red carpet Saturday to the Muenster City Hall, where the treaty was settled on Oct. 24, 1648. Representatives from 20 European nations signed a guest book before eating lunch and hearing speeches.

Outside, people paraded in the streets in celebration. Horse-drawn carriages rolled over cobblestone streets. Children dressed as gnomes pulled a wagon carrying a garden gnome. One parade group dressed as cows in black-and-white spotted suits with pink rubber gloves as udders.

The Treaty of Westphalia ended an era of religious war between Roman Catholics and Protestants, fought mostly in Germany. It also recognized for the first time the sovereignty of the German states, the Netherlands and the Swiss confederation.

■ Depeche

continued from page 6

The two-disc affair continues where Catching Up... left off and presents the singles in chronological order. Disc one runs from 1986's "Stripped" to 1990's "World In My Eyes." Disc two runs from 1993's "I Feel You" to this year's "Only When I Lose Myself" before the inclusion of "Little 15" from 1988 which was released as a single only in France. A live version of "Everything Counts" from 1989's live collection 101 closes out the disc and the album.

The three tracks from 1986's Black Celebration ("Stripped," "A Question of Lust," and "A Question of Time") document the original dark and clanging sound of the band and serve to highlight how much the band's sound has evolved in the last decade.

Changes began to occur with the release of Music For The Masses in 1988. The album's first single, "Strangelove," was a massive club hit and the band grabbed more fans. The concert documentary and live album, 101, followed in 1989 prior to the release of Violator in 1990. Guitars were introduced to the band's trademark synthesizer sound and "Personal Jesus" seemed to be everywhere. The album gave us two classics: "Enjoy The Silence" and "Policy of Truth."

Disc two documents a shaky period in Depeche Mode's history. The group returned to the scene in 1993 with Songs of Faith and Devotion. The band toyed with a heavier sound and tested the loyalty of fans with flops like the gospel- influenced "Condemnation" and the dull "In Your Room." The Devotional Tour wound its way around the world. A live album followed which was soon found in record store cut-out bins.

Depeche Mode seemed to have vanished by 1995. Suddenly, headlines appeared declaring Gahan to be near-death after overdosing on heroin in Los Angeles. Songs... looked as if it would become known as the band's last album.

Instead, the incredible happened and the band came back with Ultra, one of the highlights of 1997. Martin Gore wrote lyrics that seemed to mirror the experiences of Gahan and the band through the tough times. It yielded another classic, "It's No Good" and gave us the hauntingly beautiful "Home," sung by Gore in his customary falsetto, both included here.

Singles 86>98 is not essential for the true Depeche Mode fan. Initial pressings feature a bonus third disc of four tracks that makes this set definitely desirable: a 15-minute version of "Enjoy The Silence" is a highlight. True fans would be served well by obtaining the two mavi-singles for the new song "Only When I Lose Myself." The song is a minimalist composition on Singles, but it gives some life by Gas Gas on the single, in the form of a bubbly beat. The two bonus tracks, "Painkiller" and "Surrender," are new. Depeche Mode songs and those who discover "Surrender" will experience one of the band's best tunes. A–

COURTESY SMITH'S VILLAGE

Bringing up baby
Smith College presented Christopher Durang's Baby with the Bathwater over the weekend, and will perform again October 28–31 in the Hallie Flanagan Studio Theater

Amherst Barbers
Tel. 253-1722
The Right Place to Be!
- 5 Barbers Every day-
40 Main St. Amherst, MA
(Next to Newbury Comics)
Guys & Gals • Razor Cuts • Fades
• Clipper Cuts • Kids Cuts • Layer Cuts
$9 & up. Hrs: Mon.-Fri., 8-5:15 p.m. • Sat. 8-2:45
Servicing the Amherst, Belchertown Area

Arts wants you!
To write for the Daily Collegian.

Western New England College School of Law
Challenging Intellects Changing Perspectives
Pursuing a law degree is a major commitment. The school you choose must offer a philosophy, an environment, and a faculty that will ensure success throughout your education and beyond. Western New England College School of Law has a first-rate, accessible faculty and the resources you will need to ensure a successful legal education. We will have a representative on campus to answer your questions. Please stop by and visit with him. If the time is not convenient, call for information about our series of open houses.
CAMPUS VISIT
for prospective law students
Wednesday, October 28
10:00am-3:00pm
Please call us at 800-782-6665 for information about the campus location.
Western New England College
School of Law
Springfield, Massachusetts
Visit our Website at http://www.law.wnec.edu

BEEN THERE. DONE THAT? Take Credit!
Earn college credit for what you already know! The College-Level Examination Program (CLEP®) lets you earn between 3 and 6 college credits for each satisfactory test score. Study and review can help you prepare. Then show what you know at $44 per exam. Do the math. You'll come out ahead at both graduation and the bank.
To find out about your college's CLEP policy, contact your admission officer.
To register for a CLEP exam, contact your campus testing center. To learn more about CLEP, visit us on-line at www.collegeboard.org
Building confidence. Building careers.
clep

Hello.
Would you like to write for the fine world of Arts?
Do you get all aflutter at the idea of theatre and film?
Come by and speak to Brian McAllister, Arts & Living Editor
113 Campus Center Basement

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE
- DISCOUNT OIL -
NORTHAMPTON HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888
• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

Shear Bliss
HOLISTIC DAY SPA
478 West st. Amherst
• organic colors & perms
• body waxing & sugaring
• facials, pedi, & manicures
$5.00 off w/ Ad
253-2322

Student Affairs Review Committee Community Meetings

Tuesday, October 27	Thursday, November 5
9-11 a.m.	4-6 p.m.
Room 917	Room 917
Campus Center	Campus Center

Over the summer, a committee was formed to review the current structure of Student Affairs at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst. Chancellor David Scott has requested that the committee engage in a broad exploration of programs and services for students and prepare suggestions for organizational configurations which will support the high quality of the total student experience.

To provide an opportunity for community input in the review process, the Student Affairs Review Committee is holding two community meetings. The first meeting will be held on Tuesday, October 27, from 9-11 a.m. in Room 917 of the Campus Center. The second will be held from 4-6 p.m. on Thursday, November 5, also in Room 917 of the Campus Center.

The committee expects to focus its exploration on five general categories: enrollment services, judicial system, academic support and advising and related affinity groups, campus life, and student programs and auxiliary support. Members of the Review Committee will be present at the community meetings for discussion.

All members of the UMass community are invited to attend the community meetings and offer their insight

Seniors leave it all on the field against UC

By Aaron Saykin
Collegian Staff

In the end, it didn't really matter that they lost. It didn't matter that the officials incorrectly disallowed their game- winning goal. It didn't even matter that the traveling fans of their opponent, UConn, seemed to be extremely hostile both during and after the game. None of these could ever taint their accomplishments.

What did matter to the Massachusetts field hockey team and its coach, Patty Shea, was the class and inspiring performance delivered by her five seniors during their last home game on the friendly turf of Richard F. Garber Field — regardless of the game's outcome.

By the end of regulation, many of the Minutewomen were visibly exhausted, yet they somehow managed to muster enough adrenaline and fight to force two overtime periods against the No. 3 team in the nation (the first of which was forced by a Kerry Lyons goal with no time remaining in the second half).

"They played a great game and need to hold their heads up high. I'm very proud of them," said Shea of her team, who battled back from a one–goal deficit before falling in double overtime. "After Connecticut scored that first goal they could have very easily dropped their heads, but they didn't. They kept going. With 20 seconds left, we were still going hard to the goal and [the players] made something happen... in the score book it goes down as a loss, but it's really a huge win for us."

It was obvious from the onset that their final home performance could potentially be their most memorable. The UMass seniors embodied the campus motto of "Refuse to Lose," competing to the point of exhaustion. They walked off the field bleeding from the knees and elbows after diving across the turf, constantly turning away what appeared to be a routine Huskie goal. Nothing would be routine for Connecticut on Saturday, not as long as there was an ounce of fight left in the Minutewomen bodies.

On one occasion in the first overtime period, UMass senior midfielder Vicky Browne seemed drained after sprinting up the field to aid a Minutewomen scoring chance. When the Huskies quickly regained control of the ball, it appeared they were going to have a clear two–on–one break toward the UMass goal. Despite absolute exhaustion, Browne sprinted back on defense, catching the Huskie forward before a shot was fired toward Minutewoman goalie Zowie Tucker.

Although one instance in a 92-minute game may seem insignificant, Browne, as well as her fellow seniors, relied on the intangibles, and the smaller aspects of the game such as hustle and fight — aspects which left many Huskie players and fans in disbelief when the Minutewomen had forced overtime.

Senior back Laura Phelan also delivered a memorable performance, laying out her body countless times while diving across the abrasive turf to stop the ball. As the unsung hero and vocal leader of the defense, she constantly challenged her younger teammates to match the senior level of intensity.

"It's so important. You don't know what's going to happen tomorrow," said Phelan of her need to play as hard as she possibly could in her home finale. "This is the end of my career, these last few games. I've been doing this for a long time, and all of a sudden I realize it's going to end. We knew we really had to step up our performance for this team. I think this is the best we've played against them since I've been here. It's been the best game."

In what was undoubtably the most exciting game in the brief two–year history of Garber Field, those in attendance knew they had witnessed something special — not necessarily because of the rivalry — but because of the way each member of the senior class seemed to shine at moments — moments such as when Kate Putnam amazed everyone by coming through traffic with a loose ball that no one thought she could come up with, or moments such as when Erica Johnston stunned the Huskies by gracefully hopping through defenders and creating a scoring chance which only a brilliant save could stop.

And then there are moments such as the one which senior forward Kerry Lyons has forever etched in the minds of her teammates, coaches, and fans. As a walk–on in 1995, she defied the odds by making the team and playing in four games. By her junior season, she continued to defy the odds by earning the reputation of a clutch player after scoring two game–winning overtime goals. And in her emotional home finale, she erased the odds and scored the game–tying goal to force overtime with no time left in regulation. That's why moments such as this one allow the Minutewomen players, fans and coaches to forget about the loss. Although they may not have won the game, player histories such as that of Kerry Lyons prove that they were only slowed, not defeated.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Senior midfielder, Kate Putnam fought tough in her last match at Garber Field, but suffered a double ov ,time loss to No. 3 UConn.

■ football

continued from page 14

Minuteman safety Brian Smith. He returned it 41 yards to the Villanova 25 where UMass would milk the clock to end the game.

"We've played in three big games and we played well enough to win," coach Mark Whipple said, "but just didn't find a way to win, and today we found a way to win. They were the defending champions and they weren't going to die easy, so to win by ten points, we're ecstatic."

Wildcats' quarterback, Boden, was not enjoying Saturday's Homecoming festivities. Not at all, in fact. The junior did not have the rejuvenating performance he had hoped for, the kind he had in last year's throttling of the Minutemen.

His quarterback colleague, Bankhead, would be smiling at day's end, after the junior college transfer threw for 283 yards on 25 for 37 passing, including three touchdown passes. By hitting Moore from 19 yards out for a touchdown — his second connection of the day and 21st of the year — he broke Noel Reebenacker's 46–year–old single season touchdown passing mark.

"The only record I care about is that we're 5–2," Bankhead said. Bankhead would find Zullo to break the game open at 16–10 with two minutes to play in the third quarter. It was Zullo's fourth TD of the year and first since beating Hofstra three weeks ago.

Villanova's struggles continue as the season progresses.By losing on Saturday, the Wildcats, last year's conference champions, dropped their third straight game after getting a pre–season ranking of three from both Sports Network and ESPN/USA.

"We're a team that's obviously in transition," Coach Talley said. "We're in transition from a great football team to try and become a good football team, but I think we probably had high expectations from our early season romp."

Next weekend, the Minutemen will hope to keep the momentum as they travel to Durham, N.H. to take on the New Hampshire Wildcats. UNH is a team everyone is trying to figure out, standing in at only 3–5, but yet having upended conference rivals Connecticut, and most recently, William & Mary, on Saturday, 31–19.

FREE
FIMO
WORKSHOP
BY VISITING ARTIST
Evan Gerber

AT THE
STUDENT UNION CRAFT CENTER
THE NUMBER OF HANDS ON PARTICIPANTS IS LIMITED TO THIRTY
BUT ALL ARE WELCOME TO COME AND WATCH
THURSDAY OCTOBER 29
6:00 - 8:00 PM
UMASS NOTES
MADE POSSIBLE BY A GRANT FROM THE UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
FOR MORE INFO CALL 545-2096 OR STOP BY THE CRAFT CENTER

Munchie Madness 3-6PM
MONDAY-FRIDAY
Nachos Especial 7.75 3.88
Potato Skins Supreme 7.75 3.88
Shrimp Cocktail 5.45 2.98
1/2 PRICE!
Judie's
OCMP WELCOME HERE
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

NEW AEROBICS NEW
CARDIO-KICKBOXING • YOGA
* Classes Daily
* Certified Instructors
* Suspended Wood Floor
* Area's Largest Room
www.amherstathletic.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
460 West Street
South Amherst, 256-0060

Worn correctly, it can prevent unintended pregnancy, AIDS, and abortion.

We believe the bishop's mitre should be the symbol of justice and mercy, not a rigid rejection of human sexuality.

It's time for the Catholic bishops to acknowledge that every couple can, in good conscience, arrive at their own safe, effective and moral choices on family planning and contraception.

It is not the Catholic people who oppose contraception. In fact, Catholics both use and approve of contraception. Most polls show that four out of five Catholics disagree with the official church position, which forbids the use of contraception under all circumstances.

Having failed to convince Catholics that contraception is wrong, church leaders are now trying to make contraceptives less available—for Catholics and non-Catholics alike.

From Cuba to Mexico the Pope preaches against contraception. In Africa he rails against condoms that prevent the spread of AIDS. And in the U.S., mergers between Catholic and non-Catholic hospitals result in fewer family planning clinics for poor women.

The bishops endorse policy that has resulted in thousands of unintended pregnancies, dangerous abortions, and maternal deaths in our hemisphere alone.

It is time for justice and mercy. It is time for change.

If you agree, please contact us to learn how you can support this campaign.

Millions of women worldwide need access to safe and effective contraception. Their survival depends on it.

Catholics for Contraception
A Project of Catholics for a Free Choice
1436 U Street, NW, Suite 301, Washington, DC 20009
Phone: 202•986•6093 Fax: 202•332•7995 Email: c4c@fgc.apc.org
YES: I support access to family planning.
☐ Send me information about joining the Catholics for Contraception campaign.
Name
Address City State Zip
Email Phone

Harold Kushner
Author of numerous award winning books including the international best seller When Bad Things

Good Do We Have to Be?"

UMass

Other sponsors include: UMass Amherst Alumni Association, The Hillel House, Hillel Jewish Student Union, School of Management, Office of Jewish affairs, Chancellors Council, Community Diversity & Social Justice Council, Cultural Enrichment Fund.

Co-Sponsored by Class of 2001 and the Hillel/Jewish Student Union

■ volleyball

continued from page 14

a game, instead they had stolen the momentum from mighty Temple without them knowing.

UMass jumped all over Temple in the second game opening up a 10–2 lead. Temple would recover a little, but UMass refused to give up this game, or any other, for that matter. They stayed focused and won game two, 15–9.

Pivotal game three was just that. UMass stayed with Temple long enough to get the crowd at Curry Hicks Cage rocking. The Minutewomen seemed to feed off of this energy, as they once again went on a streak to open up a 12–6 lead, another lead they would not relinquish.

"The homecourt advantage was amazing, and we were blocking and passing better. The fans helped out so much," freshman setter Heather Holtsberg said.

After winning the second game, the newly formed UMass juggernaut seemed invincible. No matter how many times the Owls got a side out, UMass would match their intensity.

"I don't think Temple was used to someone else being the aggressor, and we were so aggressive tonight," Kenny said.

The Minutewomen held their composure and went on another big run en route to beating Temple in game four, 15–6.

For the Minutewomen everything went right. Hogancamp came up with yet another double–double. She tallied 20 kills and 21 digs. Meyers also had a double–double to go along with her five blocks.

The surprise outstanding contributions included Demarte's strong hitting performance. The El Paso native collected a double–double of her own, with 13 kills and 17 digs.

Lymarie Llovet was also a force. She tallied 15 kills, but they all seemed to be at the most crucial of moments.

The master of the great hitting performance was Holtsberg. Holtsberg finished up with sixty assists, en route to leading UMass to their best hitting performance of the season.

"Give the credit tonight to Heather. She sat here before the game all by herself studying the playbook, and she made great decisions," Kenny said. "Lymarie also terminated tonight and that was great."

The Minutewomen take their newfound momentum on the road for two crucial A–10 matches this weekend against Duquesne and Virginia Tech.

■ field hockey

continued from page 14

Senior Laura Phelan, who provided an emotional spark from the back line, knew the corner, which was called with :16.5 on the clock, would provide UMass one more scoring chance.

A rule change from last year mandates that penalty corners be played even if no time remains on the clock.

"We practiced the corner [Friday]," Phelan said. "Corners are a team's best scoring opportunity. We brought the whole team down to the circle to look at variations. [We] told them they played a great game. We refused to hold their heads up high. After Connecticut scored, they didn't have a run on our defense. And with 20 seconds left, we were still going hard to the goal. In overtime, we took it to them."

While Phelan described the game as "the best we've played against [UConn] since the seniors have been here," Schmidt agreed that UMass had been the better team.

That bodes well for the Minutewomen, whose next trip will be to Philadelphia for the Atlantic 10 conference tournament. UMass will be the No. 1 seed in the tourney.

■ side

continued from page 14

Safety Brian Smith led the play of the defensive backs with his third straight outstanding game. Smith thwarted Villanova's final, last gasp attempt to get back into the game by stepping in front of a Boden bullet late in the fourth quarter and returned it from the UMass 34 to the Wildcat 25, where quarterback Todd Bankhead and Shipp proceeded to run out the clock.

"I was blitzing from the outside," Dawson said. "I think I got to the quarterback and made him hurry a little bit. I just heard the crowd go nuts and I saw this mob of people coming at me, so I figured he picked it off."

Cornerbacks Mike Smith and Jerard White contributed with great coverage on the talented Villanova wide receivers, each breaking up a pass and making two tackles. In the place of standout Jeremy Robinson, Lance Overby stepped up to make six total tackles.

A team effort like the one given Saturday proves to the nation that Massachusetts must be a school to reckon with, as no longer can opponents count on being able to out–shoot the Minuteman offense without contesting with the defense.

"Nothing's going to be easy in this league," Whipple said. "Nothing's going to come easy this way, and I think it was fitting that defense finished the game today."

■ soccer

continued from page 14

after firing a left–footed shot into the far corner of the net. Cindy Garceau and Sarah Cook assisted on the goal.

It was then Lecot who struck for the second goal just over four minutes into the second half, as she headed a shot past La Salle keeper Katelin Glass for a 2–0 UMass lead. Green and Katelyn Jones each assisted on Lecot's goal.

Jones was once again the play maker just over four minutes later, as she set up Green in the box en route to the third UMass goal of the afternoon.

The Explorers would tally a late goal, but it would be too little, too late, in a 3–1 win for the Minutewomen. The win also happened to be the first win of the season on a Friday for UMass.

UMass is now sitting pretty for a berth in the A–10 tournament that will be held on Nov. 6–8 in Dayton. The Minutewomen will round out their regular next weekend with road games at Duquesne and St. Bonaventure, and will be assured of a spot with a pair of wins.

Seniors come up big; UMass on hot streak

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

Sophie Lecot and Amanda Thompson made the most out of their final two home games at Totman Field this weekend.

With the Minutewomen needing two wins over La Salle and Fordham in the weekend couplet, the senior co–captains did their part in completing that sweep. Lecot scored a goal in each contest, while Thompson anchored a UMass defensive unit that helped to shut down both teams.

"Coming into the weekend we knew that we had to win both games, and every Atlantic 10 game the rest of the season for that matter," Thompson said. "This win [on Sunday versus Fordham] was just another important game going into the final weekend. It's good to be back up [to .500] and hopefully we'll end up with a winning season."

"It was definitely nice [to win on Senior Day]. It feels good to be back at .500 and I'm confident that we'll play good next weekend and make A–10's," Lecot added.

Sunday, however, was just another example of this duo coming through in big games for the Minutewomen.

• Head back to Sept. 27 in Boulder, Colo. With UMass sitting at 2–6 and in a major state of confusion, Lecot came through with a pair of goals to lead the Minutewomen to a 4–1 win over Texas.

The ship remained afloat for the time being, but it was slowly sinking again thanks to a 2–1 loss to Temple on Oct. 2 at Totman.

• A 2–1 double–overtime win over St. Joe's two days later made things a little smoother, but both Lecot and Thompson proved that UMass was still the same traditionally strong team two days after that in Kingston, RI. An upstart Rhode Island squad entered that game with a 7–2 record and was ready to take the next step towards the top by defeating the defending A–10 champs.

However, Lecot and Thompson weren't going to allow that to happen.

After Lecot scored the first UMass goal, her partner in crime tallied the game–winner on a free kick midway through the second half. The Minutewomen left that game with a 3–1 win and were back on the road to recovery.

• UMass would then go out and split a pair of games the following weekend to move to 6–8, 3–2 in the A–10, but seemed to be down for the count during their trip to Ohio. After losing to Xavier 3–2 in overtime on Friday night, the Minutewomen were in 20 minutes seeing any post–season hopes fade right before their very eyes.

Faced with the proposition of falling to 6–10, 3–4 in the A–10, UMass needed someone to step up. First it was Emma Kurowski, who tied the game with 18 minutes to play, but then Lecot may have scored the goal that turned the season around for the Minutewomen a minute later, as she netted the game–winner in the 2–1 win over the Flyers. Thompson then held together the defensive unit in that final 17 minutes to escape with a one–goal victory and a new lease on post– season life.

UMass (9–9, 6–3 in the A–10) hasn't looked back since that rainy Sunday afternoon in Dayton. Winners of three in a row, and six of their last nine, the Minutewomen have a head of steam behind them as they enter the final weekend of the regular season.

And you can give Lecot and Thompson most of the credit for leading the charge and keeping together what was once a snake–bitten unit.

"I think we're more focused now," said Thompson, reflecting back on the early season struggles. "We're eating right and preparing well for all of the games. Now hopefully we can come out with two more wins next weekend."

A very likely scenario, indeed, with this red–hot Minutewomen squad. After all, they are the defending A–10 champs. Did you think they would go down without a fight?

Neither did I.

KARA STONE / COLLEGIAN

UMass soccer forward, Kara Green scored five goals and two assists in leading UMass to a sweep on La Salle and Fordham.

Sports writers wanted. If you like sports and would like to improve your writing skills and have a lot of fun, stop down at the Collegian offices, located in the basement of the Campus Center. Or contact sports editor Michael Kobylanski at 545-3500.

McMurphy's
Uptown Tavern
$5.00 Icehouse Pitchers
ALL WEEK!
Icehouse Prize Night Thurs.
37 North Pleasant St.

Mia.

ZANNA
downtown Amherst

LIFT YOUR SPIRITS
Regency Hairstylists
164 N. Pleasant St.
253-9526

OOPS!
• Free Estimates
• Lifetime Warranty
• Auto Glass Replacement
• Car & Truck Rental
North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center (On bus route - one mile from UMass)
78 Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA 549-2880

Live and Work in Japan Next Year on
The JET Program
Come to an information session on Wednesday, October 28
4:30 pm at Smith College (Seelye Hall Room 207) or 7:30 pm at Amherst College (Converse Hall, Porter Lounge)
The Japan Exchange and Teaching (Jet) Programseeks candidates who will hold at least a Bachelor's degree by June 30, 1999, to live and work in Japan for one year as Assistant Language Teachers (ALTs) in public schools or Coordinators for International Relations (CIRs) in local government offices in Japan. Japanese language ability is not required for ALT positons. The application deadline for the next program session, which begins in July 1999 is December 8, 1998. For further information, contact the New England JET Office at (617) 973-9772 x122

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE
50% Off!!
Of Basic Program with valid college Student I.D.
Free Info Session
Wednesday, Oct. 14th
7:00 pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst
Now Accepting Visa, M/C, AMEX & Discover
1 800 U CAN MIX

To get ahead in today's economy, you need education beyond a college degree. More and more people are realizing the wide ranging benefits of a Juris Doctor degree from Massachusetts School of Law. A JD degree can give you the edge you need to succeed in business, health care, law enforcement, government and law.
Massachusetts School of Law
• LSAT not required
• Financial Aid and Tuition Plans available
ON-CAMPUS
Wednesday, October 28, 1998
See our booth at the Graduate and Professional Career Fair between 10:00 a.m. - 3:00 p.m.
Day & Evening classes available
500 Federal Street
Woodland Park
Andover, MA 01810
(978) 681-0800
www.mslaw.edu

PIZZA SUBS GYROS
the SUB
Pizza
Subs
Calzones
and more...
Are You Ready For Some Football?
Monday Night Football
Pizza Special
Large Cheese Pizza for only
$5.25
Free delivery
Offer Valid Mondays only 7pm - 11pm
Sept. 7 - Dec 21
Price does not include 5% Mass meals tax
Hours: 11am - 2am
549-3160
member O.C.M.P.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take Over My Lease 1 bedroom at Puffton Village. On bus line. Suitable for two. Call 549-6434. Sabriya or Jamila.

AUTO FOR SALE

College Carl Pontiac Sunbird. Runs perfect! $800/BO. 259-1915.

93 Geo Metro 60,000 miles. Great gas mileage. Good condition. $1000. Call Kirsten 548-6941.

88 Dodge Colt Wgn 127K miles. $900. Runs good. 549-1010.

94 Honda Passport 2x4, 80K miles. Excellent condition. $7950. 367-9813.

CARS $100-$500 Police Impounds. Hondas, Chevys, Jeeps, & Sport Utilities. MUST SELL! 1-800-522-2730 x4554

WANTED: Toyotas, Novas, Prizms, Sentras. Any condition. Cash paid everyday. 1-800-649-4795.

COMPUTERS

Macintosh Printer Color StyleWriter 1500 $100 or B/O. Call Tony @ 549-5514.

486 Computer Great For Student Works Good $100. Color VGA $50. (413)584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

EARN CASH Flexible Hours Now Hiring At Sbarros Hampshire Mall

Paid Marketing Internship Campus Street Reps Wanted: to market and promote animalhouse.com, the ultimate online college community. E-mail us at campus@animalhouse.com or call 800-254-8433.

EMPLOYMENT

CHILDRENS HEALTH RESEARCH

Abt Associates is recruiting Research Interviewers to participate on a Federally sponsored national survey of the immunization status of children. Interested applicants should be able to work a minimum of 20 hours per week evenings including 1 weekend shift. The position requires good communication skills and some computer experience. Hourly wages start at $6.25/hour, $6.88/hour weekends, with regular merit increases. Health and Dental Insurance is available. For further information, or to arrange a personal interview contact: 1-800-792-4514. Abt Associates is an equal opportunity employer.

Kai Chi Restaurant hiring waitstaff/drivers. Apply in person after 5pm.

INSURANCE SALES

Earn $35,000+ in your 1 year as a personal lines account exec. If you have the drive and ambition to succeed, are well organized and have exceptional interpersonal skills, start your career in homeowner/auto insurance sales. We will train the right individual to sell our highly competitive insurance products and provide you with unlimited qualified leads. Candidate must be willing to work evening. We offer a competitive base + commission and complete benefits package. Send resume to WD Grimmell, Webber and Grimmell Insurance Agency, P.O.Box 58, Northampton, MA

WEBBER & GRIMMELL INSURANCE

EMPLOYMENT

Legal Assistants Wanted Spring 1999 Internships with Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary— training provided. Deadline to begin the application process is Nov 13, 1998— Contact The Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Wanted 98 People We'll pay you to lose up to 29+ lbs. Expires 11/11/98. 1-703-817-1071

Waitress Part-Time Make $400 & work 2 or 3 nights. Flexible hours. Dancers For Upscale Gentleman's Club No experience necessary. Unlimited $$$ Potential. Bikini, Topless, or Nude! Call 413-536-0502

Drivers Wanted Pays $9 to $15 per hour. Inside help wanted too. Flexible hours. Call Dominos 256-8911

ENTERTAINMENT

Lights and Sound: Rave to Dorm Party. Your DJ's or ours. Call BARR Productions (413)737-8561.

FOR RENT

Take Over Our Lease 2 bedrooms. On bus line. Call 549-5318.

Fridge Rentals Free delivery. 253-9742.

FOR SALE

Must sell Millennium high quality 150 watt house speakers. Brand new, in the box. Retail $800. Asking $400 or B/O for the pair. Comes with warranty. Call 549-6592.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy Birthday Donna Have a great day. Love, Kira and Jess!

HEALTH & BEAUTY

We're here to pump... YOU UP! Creatine Monohydrate, Creatine Surge, DHEA, Whey Protein and more from Fitness Workshop delivered right to your door. 1-877-FIT-WORK. www.fitnessworkshop.com

INSTRUCTION

KICKBOXING INSTRUCTION Personal training. Workouts customized to meet your fitness goals. Joe 548-8979. Leave message.

CARDIO KICKBOXING Amherst Athletic Club. Train with the pros! 256-0080.

ROOM FOR RENT

Quiet setting, kitchen privileges. Laundry, parking, nonsmoking. $350. 549-4853.

Looking to fill 2 rooms in a 3 bedroom Puffton apt. Available either Dec 1 or Jan 1. Must commit till June 1. Call 549-7076.

SERVICES

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst Area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TO SUBLET

3 bedroom apt for sublet. $875 per month, all utilities included. On bus route. Cliffside Apt. For more info call (413)665-0052.

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK '99 CANCUN & BAHAMAS: SIGN UP NOW AND GET FREE MEALS/DRINKS! FLORIDA, JAMAICA, AND SOUTH PADRE AVAILABLE! SELL TRIPS AND TRAVEL FREE! CALL FOR FREE BROCHURE 1(888)777-4642

SPRING BREAK 99! Cancun * Nassau * Jamaica * Mazatlan * Acapulco * Bahamas Cruise * Florida * South Padre Travel Free and make lots of Cash! Top reps are offered full time staff jobs. Lowest Price Guaranteed. Call now for details! www.classtravel.com 800-838-6411 930 Comm Ave South On BU's West Campus

SPRING BREAK '99 Largest selection of Spring Break Destinations, including Cruises! Foam Parties, Drink Specials, and Club Admissions. Group Discounts. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-FUN

WANTED

NOTICE

If anyone saw the incident at Pruddy's on Friday, Oct 16, involving a student and bouncers please call me- A.J. 256-7075

Active Women Needed For Nutritional Study Graduate Research Study in Zinc Supplementation. 18 to 40 years old and exercising 3 times a week. Call Christy at 532-2733.

WANTED TO RENT

Seeking a 2 bedroom lease to take over mid-December or Jan 1st. Close to campus. 665-8521.

Are you tired of riding the bus?

Do you feel like getting off campus sometimes?

Even if it is just to go to the supermarket.

Well...Now that you have a job and have some money, you can buy a car!

Check out The Classifieds today and see the possibilities!

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, OCT. 26

Awards — Cashin Residence Life Staff presents the Fall 1998 Academic Awards/Leadership Reception at 8 p.m. in Lewis Basement. There will be free food.

Community — Anyone interested in going to Israel is welcome to attend Israel Opportunities Day from 3-5 p.m. at the Hillel House.

Lecture — A speech entitled "Meritocracy and Affirmative Action in Employment: Illusions and Realities" will be given by Barbara Reskin, a Harvard sociology professor, in the ninth floor conference room in Thompson Hall at 2 p.m.

Lecture — A lecture entitled "Don't Touch Me: The Rhetoric of Relinquaries" will be given at 4:15 p.m. in Hillyer 117 at Smith college.

Workshop — A workshop on contraception and safer sex will be held at 3 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

TUESDAY, OCT. 27

Colloquium — A colloquium entitled "Girlz II Men: Gender at Play in Japanese Popular Culture" will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Dickinson House Living Room of the Five College Women's Studies Research Center on the Mount Holyoke College Campus.

Speech — Harold Kushner will give a speech entitled "How Good Do You Have to Be?" at 7:30 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium. Doors open at 6:30 p.m. Sponsored by Class of 2001 and Hillel/Jewish Student Union.

Workshop — A workshop on contraception and safer sex will be held at 7 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 28

Meeting — The UMass Student Film Society will hold its first meeting of the year at 8 p.m. in the Colonial Lounge in the Student Union. For more information, contact Anna at 545-3659.

Open House — UVC-TV 19, UMass's student-run television station will hold an open house in the studio, room 216 in the Student Union, from 1-5 p.m. For more information, contact Jessica at 545-1336.

NOTICES

Community — Official Mail-In Voter Registration Forms are available at the Registrar's Office, and Commuter Services in the Student Union. Voting is on November 3.

Exhibit — "Equal Partners" is being shown at the Smith College Museum of Art from September 25-December 13. This exhibit showcases the work of 15 American firms founded by female/male partners.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Next time, try US first. New Ustore Not like a mall... Closer.

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 26, 1998

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEOH	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Antiques Roadshow (In Stereo)		Masterpiece Theatre 'A Respectable Trade'				Nova (In Stereo)
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Cosby	King	Raymond	Raymond	L.A. Doctors "Classic Evan"		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Political Debate: Governor's		Cosby	King	Raymond	Raymond	L.A. Doctors "Classic Evan"		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Political Debate: Gubernatorial		NFL Football: Pittsburgh Steelers at Kansas City Chiefs (In Stereo Live)						News
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny	Friends	7th Heaven (R) (In Stereo)		Hyperion Bay (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Political Debate: Gubernatorial		Sudden Susan	Conrad Bloom	Caroline	Will & Grace	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Married...With	Home Imp.	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Guys Like Us	DiResta	Malcolm-Eddie	Desmond P.	News		Newsradio	LAPD
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Sudden Susan	Conrad Bloom	Caroline	Will & Grace	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Frasier	Melrose Place (In Stereo)		Caroline	Will & Grace	Ally McBeal "Story of Love"		News	Mad Abt. You
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	"Wheel-Fortune Jeopardy!		Sudden Susan	Conrad Bloom	Caroline	Will & Grace	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Legendary Lighthouses		Masterpiece Theatre 'A Respectable Trade'				Political Debate: Gubernatorial
WGGB	40	Simpsons	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	NFL Football: Pittsburgh Steelers at Kansas City Chiefs (In Stereo Live)						News
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	Guys Like Us	DiResta	Malcolm-Eddie	Desmond P.	Med Abt. You	Mad Abt. You	Frasier	Cheers
WTBS	49	Family Matters	Family Matters	Roseanne	Roseanne	"Fatal Vision" (1984, Drama) Karl Malden, Eva Marie Saint
A&E	42	Northern Exposure		Law & Order 'Parano		Biography: Joan of Arc		Investigative Reports		Polrot		Law & Order "Good Girl"
CNN	20	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand: Time (R)		Sports	Moneyline
COM	26	Liberals	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	"Clue" (1985, Comedy) Madeline Kahn, Eileen Brennan,				Dr. Katz Pro.	Bob-Margaret	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	60	New House	Fix-It-Line	Gimme Shelter		Return to Orbit: John Glenn		Return to Orbit		Return to Orbit: Space Shuttle		Justice Files "Cops Under Fire
ESPN	43	Sportscenter	Monday Night Countdown			Figure Skating: Halloween on Ice				Cheerleading	Cheerleading	ESPNews	Sportscenter
LIFE	59	Ellen	Ellen	Party of Five (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope "Higher Powers"		"Eye of the Stalker: A Moment of Truth Movie" (1995, Drama)				New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	45	(5:30) Jams Countdown		Biorhythm (R)	Beavis-Butt.	Eyt Spy Video	All Saints	Total Request Live (In Stereo)		Road Rules	Daria (R)	Cut (In Stereo)	Loveline
NICK	44	Figure It Out	Secret of Alex	Doug	Rugrats	Angry Beavers	Allen Strange	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Happy Days	Laverne	I Love Lucy	Bewitched
SCIFI	62	(4:00)	Amaz. Stories	Mystery	Star Trek: Voyager	"Friday's Child"		Sliders "Asylum" (In Stereo)		Welcome to Paradox	Options	Mystery	Star Trek
TLC	26	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours "Perfect Specimen"		Storm of the Century (R)		Doomsday Asteroid (R)		Killer Viruses (R)		Storm of the Century (R)
TNT	63	Babylon 5 "Babylon Squared"		ER "True Lies" (In Stereo)		WCW Monday Nitro (In Stereo Live)						Mortal Kombat: Conquest
USA	41	Hercules: Legendary Journ.		Xena: Warrior Princess		Walker, Texas Ranger "Bounty"		WWF Raw (In Stereo)				New York Undercover
HBO	8	"Teen Wolf" (1985, Comedy) Michael J. Fox				"The Fifth Element" (1997) Bruce Willis.						"2 Days in the Valley" (1996, Comedy/Drama) Danny Aiello,
MAX	64	"So I Married an Axe Murderer" (1993) Mike Myers.				"Creepshow" (1982, Horror) Adrienne Barbeau.						"The Assignment" (1997, Suspense) Aidan Quinn.
SHOW	9	"Warriors of Virtue" (1997, Fantasy) Angus MacFadyen.				"Basic Instinct" (1992, Suspense) Michael Douglas.				Masters		"The Swimmer" (1975, Drama)

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	18	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	19	UVC-TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	21	Gavel to Gavel
6	PBS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
8	UMass Channel	23	CSpan
9	UPN/20 Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
10	Weather Channel	25	CTN
11	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
12	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
14	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
15	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
16	International	31	Comedy Central
17	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
18	WB/New Havn	33	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Liberty Meadows By Frank Cho

Rose Is Rose By Pat Brady

Liberty Meadows By Frank Cho

Rose Is Rose By Pat Brady

Spunk By Mike LaRiccia

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You are in no mood to deal with those who hold the point of view strictly in terms of practicality. You want to be more experimental today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — Your principles may be assailed briefly today by someone who does not understand your steadfastness. Stay true to your beliefs.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You may feel as though it is unnecessary to do what is asked of you today. However, it is best to avoid that strategy.

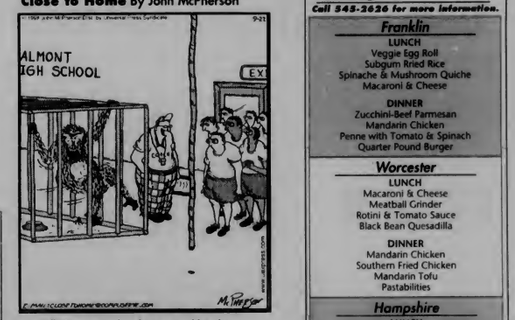
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — You are after something more secure today, and a Pisces native will not be able to provide. But do not turn your back.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You may be unusually demanding today, even for your standards! Do not drive away someone you are counting on at this time to come through for you.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — Take care that you don't let yourself or anyone else go to extremes today. Balance is the key for harmony and happiness.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — Now is the time for you to seek solutions rather than problems. It is a good day to break that old habit of making things more difficult than they actually are.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — There is no point in striving for perfection today. Do the best you can, and realize that making mistakes also means that progress is being made.



CANCER (June 21–July 22) — Learn to relax and let things happen naturally. You can still enjoy the day without always putting in your two cents.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — You may be quite volatile during the first part of the day, but later you will benefit from a discovery that will bring about calm.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — You want to feel safe and secure, and yet you claim to want adventure. Which is it going to be? One will have to be sacrificed for the other.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — You can avoid heartache today simply by being honest about your feelings with a loved one. the truth is you're both feeling nearly the same thing.

Close to Home By John McPherson

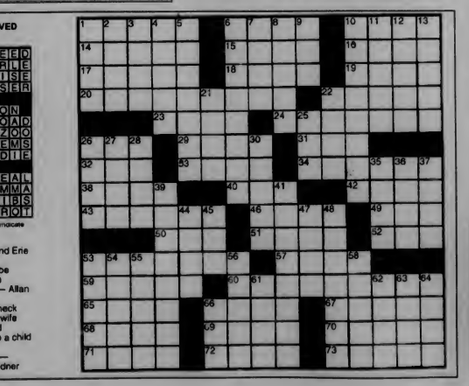
Quote of the Day

"Please tell me that you didn't do what I heard you did in the tower library..." -Overheard

I'll give you each a three second headstart, then I'll send Choonga up after you. If he catches you before you reach the top, you owe me 20 laps.

ACROSS

1 Orchard product
6 Sleep rock
10 Present
14 Wall painting
15 Opera set in Egypt
16 Not in use
17 Overact
18 Object on radar
19 Entree meat
20 Capital of Tennessee
22 Oyster find?
23 Soothe
24 James Joyce book
26 The girl
29 Spasms
31 Glold, in Guadalajara
32 Cook's need
33 Isaac's son
34 Ancient German
36 Goddess of discord
40 Snag
42 Small group
43 Fabric measures
46 Hints
49 Big Ten sch.
50 — Grande
51 Beige
52 Craving
53 French explorer of N.A.
57 Cans
59 Spy
60 Pharmacy
65 Ruler
66 Seaweed product
67 Did a road job
68 Otherwise
69 Windmill part
70 Mountain nymph
71 Fortuneteller
72 Parched
73 Quarterback Bradshaw



DOWN

1 Hymn ending
2 Mountain lion
3 Experts
4 Shop machine
5 Lift
6 San Francisco sight
7 Creek
8 French farewell
9 Spacin
10 Distributes
11 Brainstorms
12 Stranded motorist's need
13 Divulges
21 Egyptian goddess
22 Ceremonial fire
25 Fortune
26 Erupt
27 Garbo film
28 Oklahoma city
30 Hilton offering
35 Helen of —
36 French river
37 It could be proper
39 Foreigner
41 Imagined
44 Sword handle
45 Costa del —
47 Overly proper one
48 Telescope
53 Huron and Erie
54 Spry
55 It could be common
56 Author — Allan Poe
58 Rubbernack
61 Rajah's wife
62 Finished
63 Bring up a child
64 Singer Nelson —
66 Ms. Gardner

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

LAMA WORN NEED
OLIN ANNA BERLE
LONG GEAR RAISE
AUDUBON COARSER
HANDS AWE
OCEANIS TURNSON
WHAPF JANE TORAH
LEG FLORIDA ZOO
SEES LILT POEMS
PROPANE RADDLE
BUM THIRD
ARSENAL OATMEAL
BEARD AMAN EMMA BALLS RARA NIBS
ARTY KEYIS TROT

10-26-98 © 1998, United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Veggie Egg Roll
Subgum Fried Rice
Spinache & Mushroom Quiche
Macaroni & Cheese

DINNER
Zucchini-Beef Parmesan
Mandarin Chicken
Penne with Tomato & Spinach
Quarter Pound Burger

Worcester

LUNCH
Macaroni & Cheese
Meatball Grinder
Rotini & Tomato Sauce
Black Bean Quesadilla

DINNER
Mandarin Chicken
Southern Fried Chicken
Mandarin Tofu
Pastabilities

Hampshire

LUNCH
Hamburger
Chicken Cutlet
Turkey Bacon Swiss Folded Pita
Grilled Cheese Sandwhich

DINNER
Mandarin Chicken
Manicotti in Sauce

Berkshire

LUNCH
Macaroni & Cheese
Hamburger
American Grill Burger

DINNER
Mandarin Chicken
Pineapple Ham Steak
Mandarin Tofu
Meatball Grinder

Night Editor: Erin Murphy
Photo Editor: Kara Stokes
Copy Editor: Nicole Racicot
Production Supervisor: Jeremy Brothers
Production Staff: Stephen Mackey, Lisa Metcalf

SPORTS weekend

Monday, October 26, 1998 — The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

UMass wins big on homecoming day, 36–26

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

Well, that sure was easy. And sweet, too, like revenge should be.

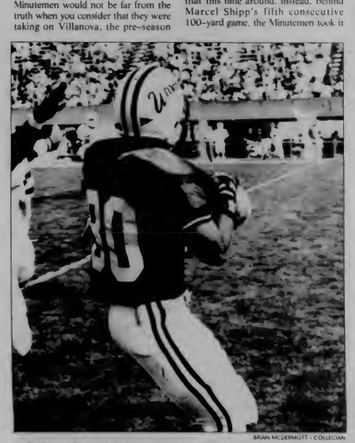
The Massachusetts football team on Saturday had something to prove to themselves. The bottom line is that calling Saturday a "must–win" for the Minutemen would not be far from the truth when you consider that they were taking on Villanova, the pre–season favorite to win the conference, following a loss, and before a two–game road swing.

Massachusetts	36
Villanova	28

And, of course, barely grazing the surface of the players' minds, a humiliating 49–27 loss in last year's battle with the 'Cats.

But the crowd of over ten thousand would see none of that this time around. Instead, behind Marcel Shipp's fifth consecutive 100–yard game, the Minutemen took it to the Wildcats, opening up a 26–point lead late in the third quarter, and coasting to a 36–26 victory.

Shipp was the story for the Minutemen (5–2, 3–1 in the A–10)...again. Week after week, defenses watch more tapes of the sophomore tailback, but he consistently seems to weasel his way through microscopic holes, this time for 195 total yards and three scores. On his 18th carry, Shipp went into the record books as the sixth Minuteman ever to surpass 1,000 yards rushing in one season.



The Minutemen used a Chris Boden fumble on the opening drive to put themselves in great field position at the Villanova 36. Six plays later, Todd Bankhead found Shipp on a screen, and the back found his way into the end zone for the game's first score.

After another Shipp score with four minutes to go in the first quarter, UMass wasn't quite finished. Coach Mark Whipple called a timeout with two seconds remaining in the quarter to keep the wind going his way. Bankhead then found Jimmy Moore, or more fittingly, Moore found the ball. Moore's one–handed highlight–reel special, as the gun sounded the end of the first stanza, gave the Minutemen a 20–point lead before anyone could say "blowout."

The Wildcats had held opponents to 13 total points in the first quarter this season. Villanova coach Andy Talley could only watch as his offense stumbled out of the gates. As a result, it took the 'Cats 12 minutes in getting their first set of new downs. The offense, as a unit, would muster only 99 total yards in the first half, and more importantly, with only a Casey Hannon 35–yard field goal to their credit on the scoreboard.

But, like every UMass game thus far in the season, save the Buffalo rout, the defense let Villanova (3–4, 3–3 in the A–10) back into the contest late, as the Wildcats stood at midfield with three minutes to play and only down ten points. It was then that the door was shut when Boden threw a ball across the middle that landed in the arms of

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 10

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Senior wide receiver Jimmy Moore helped the UMass football team defeat incumbent conference champ Villanova on Homecoming weekend.

UM Football finishes Villanova with stellar defense performance

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

Everybody knew the Massachusetts football team could put points on the board. The real test would come once UMass runner Marcel Shipp sliced into the end zone for a three– yard touchdown with 3:58 remaining in the first quarter to put the Minutemen 13 points ahead of visiting Villanova, who are the reigning conference champions.

In past weeks, UMass could always score early in the ball game, but could never put their opponents away. In Connecticut one week ago, the Minutemen were on top 14–0 before the Huskies scored to cut the lead in half. By the end of the second quarter of that game, UConn was being defeated 27–14, but when the final gun sounded, were reveling in a 44–41 victory.

"The importance of (this game) was great because we had a heart–breaker last week, and we didn't play to our ability," senior co–captain Khari Samuel said.

In fact, out of their four wins coming into this weekend's homecoming matchup, only one, a 51–27 thrashing of Buffalo, was over before the fourth quarter. Of the first six games of the season, five were decided in either the closing minute or overtime. The Wildcats looked to be no different, as their offensive attack featured many weapons, including scatback Brian Westbrook, who entered the game leading the Atlantic 10 in receptions, with over nine a game.

"They're just so dangerous when they get the ball, and Westbrook is such a great football player that no lead is really safe," UMass coach Mark Whipple said.

So the challenge was on the defense. This time, the lead was safe, as the Minutemen held on to win, 36–26.

Villanova quarterback Chris Boden, who guided the Wildcats to a 49–27 drubbing of UMass a year ago, couldn't find his rhythm in the face of a constant Minuteman rush. Blitzing linebackers Khari Samuel and Kole Ayi, despite sacking Boden only once, unloaded on him time and time again, forcing many passes to miss their mark by embarrassing distances.

Boden completed a dismal 15 out of 49 attempts, and was held to 183 yards while throwing two interceptions.

Linebacker Matt Dawson completed the stellar play of the defensive trio with a fumble recovery and an interception, while almost picking off two more passes.

Turn to SIDE, page 11

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Quarterback Todd Bankhead lead the offensive charger as he passed for over 300 yards in a 10–point win over the VU Wildcats.

UM volleyball stuns VU

By Paul Teves
Collegian Staff

As the Massachusetts volleyball team started the second half of their Atlantic 10 Conference schedule, the goal was to not lose any more conference games.

They really emphasized that goal when they swept the competition this weekend. They defeated both La Salle and Temple 3–1.

UMass	3
La Salle	1

"We said that we didn't want to lose a game in the second half of our conference schedule, and we were fired up and really came out and performed tonight," Junior co–captain Kari Hogancamp said in reference to the Temple win.

UMass	3
Temple	1

"We decided before the Temple game that we just weren't going to lose anymore," outside hitter Janeen Demarte said.

The Minutewomen (10–12, 7–5 in the A–10) began the weekend by playing the La Salle explorers, who they had beaten 3–0 in their first match. But according to UMass coach Bonnie Kenny, La Salle had improved its game and its timing.

The Explorers showed it to an extent, but UMass came through on the big points, and was able to get out of Curry Hicks Cage on Friday night with a 15–5, 7–15, 15–5, 15–9 win.

"We won, but I don't like the fact that I'm still calling offense from the sideline, and our block needs to get better," Kenny said, "We're just not touching anything at the net."

Coach Kenny's sentiments must have been heard loud and clear, because the very next night the Minutewomen came out and took the highly powered and almost invincible Temple team right out of their game.

They hit the ball better then they had all season. The Minutewomen as a team had a .329 attack percentage, collecting 70 kills among them. They also picked up their blocking game. The Minutewomen deflected several balls at the net, which allowed them to handle the high–powered Temple hitters in the back court.

The Minutewomen also had a season high in blocks, including five for both middle blockers Jill Meyers and freshman Celia Wiste.

"Blocking before was too mental for me. I was watching the ball, and I'd get there late. Tonight I watched the setter which gave me a headstart to make blocks," Meyers said. "Celia was also huge for us."

Wiste had previously not had much experience, but when thrown into the fire (of the Temple match) she performed like an experienced veteran.

"Celia was great for us off the bench, she touched everything for us tonight," Kenny said.

The Minutewomen started the night by falling behind to Temple 10–4 early in the first game, but began what would quietly equal the story of David slaying Goliath. They made a charge late in the first game, but fell short 15–12.

This was a repeating theme for the Minutewomen throughout the season, but tonight it was different. They didn't just come back and lose

Turn to VOLLEYBALL, page 11

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

Freshman outsider hitter, Janeen Demarte had 13 kills and 17 digs in the Minutewomen's shocking win over first–place A–10 foe, Temple.

Minutewomen earn two wins over the weekend; La Salle, Fordham prove to be no big challenge

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

On a weekend that was supposed to be a final showcase for the two seniors on the Massachusetts women's soccer team, Sophie Lecot and Amanda Thompson, it turned out to be sophomore forward Kara Green who put on an offensive display of her own.

The Poughkeepsie, NY native scored five goals over the weekend and added two assists to lead the Minutewomen to a pair of Atlantic 10 wins over La Salle and Fordham.

Green had been held without a goal since a 2–1 win over St. Joseph's on Oct. 4, but picked a pretty good time to break out of her scoring funk. She netted a pair of goals and an assist in a 3–1 win over the Explorers on Friday, and threw in a hat trick and an assist for good measure in a 4–1 victory against Fordham on Sunday afternoon.

"I've been in a little slump over the past few weeks," said Green, whose 12 points in the two games catapulted her into a tie for the team lead in points with 31. "I was feeling a little sluggish, but I busted out this weekend. Now I'm feeling pretty good about myself."

The Minutewomen (9–9, 6–3 in the Atlantic 10) closed out their weekend with the win over Fordham on Senior Day at Totman Field. After coming up empty in the opening 30 minutes of the contest, UMass broke out for four goals in the final 12:43 of the half to distance themselves from the Rams.

Lecot tallied the first goal of the afternoon for the Minutewomen when she took a feed from Green, blew by two Fordham defenders, and let loose a shot that found the back of the net. Tarah Tokarchik also assisted on Lecot's goal.

Green increased the UMass advantage to two goals about four minutes later. Rams keeper Kim Kasper strayed from her net to try to clear a loose ball, but instead booted the pill off of one of her own defenders and right to Green, who tucked the ball into an empty net for a 2–0 lead.

The scoring barrage continued at the 36:06 mark of the opening stanza, as Green's corner kick was juggled by Kasper before crossing the goal line. UMass then finished up its scoring when Kristi Robicheau decked two Fordham defenders before crossing a ball to Green, who completed the hat trick with another blast past Kasper.

That would be more than enough for the stingy UMass defense and keeper Angie Napoli, who made nine saves for the Minutewomen.

"The key for today was that our defense really ratcheted down and tightened up on them [Fordham's offense]," UMass women's soccer coach Jim Rudy said. "The other was the work of our frontrunners. When we get our front two players [Lecot and Green] working together and with our midfielders that makes us only better."

La Salle didn't really prove to be much of a roadblock on Friday afternoon, as UMass easily disposed of the Explorers 3–1.

Green opened the scoring on Friday at 10:04 of the first half,

Turn to SOCCER page 11

Field hockey edged in double OT despite gritty effort vs. UConn

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

Kristen Schmidt probably had the best view of anyone on the field, except perhaps the Connecticut goalie. Given the circumstances, the goalie herself might not have even seen the ball.

In the first period of sudden death overtime against regional rival UConn (15–2), the No. 3 team in the nation, several members of the Massachusetts field hockey team thought they had finally waged a winning battle against their rivals.

Instead, an apparent goal was called back because the official decided it had not hit off the stick of a UMass player.

Back on the field to continue the OT, the Minutewomen (10–7) eventually fell to the Huskies, 2–1, in the second overtime session on Senior Day at Richard F. Garber Field.

"It was a goal," said Schmidt, a sophomore forward. "Kate [Putnam] had a free hit in and it deflected off my stick. I wouldn't lie. It went off my stick."

Putnam, the senior midfielder who sent the ball on target to the UConn cage, agreed that Schmidt had made contact with the ball.

"It was most definitely a goal," she said. "I stood there and watched it go in."

Unfortunately for the Minutewomen, the officials in the game did not have the same line of sight. The ball was ruled out of bounds off Connecticut goaltender Danielle Vile and UMass went back to work from the sideline.

With 8:18 remaining in the second of two six–on–six sudden death periods, Amy Herz put an end to the collective nailbiting with a hard shot from outside the circle that found its way past UMass goalie Zowie Tucker.

UConn's Laura Klein opened the day's scoring with 19:28 left in the second half.

UCONN	2
Massachusetts	1

The Minutewomen found their way into overtime courtesy of a clutch goal from senior Kerry Lyons. A forward with a flair for the dramatic on the field, Lyons put away the game–tying goal on a second–try shot on a penalty corner. Last year, Lyons came up with a pair of game–winners in overtime.

This time around, the former walk–on, who was honored with her senior teammates before their final home game at Garber Field, knotted the score. After Vile made a stop of the initial hit on the corner, Lyons came in from the circle to lift the ball over the outstretched UConn goalie.

"You can't get any more clutch than that," UMass coach Patty Shea said. "That's what you dream about when you play–act as a kid in your backyard."

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 11

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 35 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Tuesday, October 27, 1998

"Should we give baby NyQuil?"

Smith College presents us with a dose of mental illness as Christopher Durang's Baby With the Bathwater is brought to stage (see Arts and Living, page 6).

Keeping up morale

Junior midfielder James Redmond contributed in the Massachusetts men's soccer team's win over La Salle this past weekend (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Peru, Ecuador sign peace treaty

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — Peru and Ecuador signed a peace treaty today, ending a half–century dispute over a slice of Amazon jungle the neighboring countries fought two wars to control.

Foreign Ministers Jose Ayala of Ecuador and Fernando Trazegnies of Peru signed the accord at a ceremony in Brazil's capital, where most of the peace talks took place.

The United States, Brazil, Argentina and Chile brokered the treaty, which demarcates the border in a 48–mile section of the Andean foothills. Peru and Ecuador both claimed the area, which was left undefined in the Rio de Janeiro Protocol that set territorial limits after a 1941 border war.

The agreement laid "the cement of peace," said Peruvian President Alberto Fujimori.

"Now we should start to build the building, beautiful and inhabitable," he said at the signing ceremony.

In a gesture of reconciliation, Ecuadoran President Jamil Mahuad gave Fujimori a canteen used by Ecuadoran soldiers during the 1941 war.

"The Amazon could have been destroyed by a war. Now we preserve it with a peace accord," Mahuad said.

NATION

Manslaughter trial ends as MIT frat disbands

BOSTON (AP)— The manslaughter case against an MIT fraternity in the drinking death of a freshman effectively ended yesterday because the frat has disbanded and there is no one to answer the charges.

Last month, prosecutors took the extraordinary step of bringing manslaughter charges against Phi Gamma Delta — the organization, not its members— in the case of 18–year-old Scott Krueger, who drank himself into a coma at a party and died.

Since no individual members were named in the indictment, the case quickly unraveled when the fraternity disbanded.

Yesterday, the Superior Court magistrate who had issued a warrant against Phi Gamma Delta tiled it away in case the fraternity tries to reorganize at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Pamela Wechsler, assistant district attorney, conceded the case is over for now but said it wasn't all for naught: The charges drove the fraternity oft campus and prompted MIT to change its alcohol and disciplinary policies.

"A lot of things have happened as a result of the investigation and indictment," she said.

Boston defense attorney J. Albert Johnson, who was not involved in the case, called the charges silly, saying a fraternity is simply an association of people with no legal standing in criminal law.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 56	HIGH: 63	HIGH: 58
LOW: 39	LOW: 43	LOW: 34

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword .....page 8
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News .....page 3
Sports .....page 10

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Police looking for male in realtion to altercation

By Lorraine Kennedy
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Police Department responded to a report of an assault and battery with a dangerous weapon in the early hours of Oct. 25.

UMass Police Chief John Luippold said that the incident is under investigation.

Luippold said police are looking for a suspect described as "a Caucasian male, approximately 5–foot–7, college–aged, possible goatee on chin area with short, buzzed black hair, wearing a gray sweatshirt and jeans."

According to Luippold, the victim reported that during a one–on–one altercation in Lot 49 late Saturday night, an unknown suspect used a small pocket knife to cut him on his face, across his check.

Following the altercation, Luippold said the victim and the person he was with ran back to a residence hall and, after informing a friend of the altercation, he and the friend went back to Lot 49 in an attempt to find the suspect.

According to Luippold, police began investigating the incident after receiving a call concerning a possible disturbance. The caller observed that two individuals were leaving a residence hall; one of the individuals was carrying a bat.

Luippold declined to name which residence hall the individuals were leaving from.

The caller reported to police that the individuals were supposedly en route to finishing a fight, Luippold said.

Officers were dispatched to Lot 49 and discovered two men, one carrying a baseball bat. Upon interviewing them, police found out that one of the men — the man without the bat — had previously been involved in an altercation in or around Lot 49, Luippold said.

The victim later received treatment at University Health Services for a knife wound to his face, Luippold said.

Recommendation made for change in tuition

By Christie Vincent
Collegian Staff

Two weeks ago, the Massachusetts Board of Higher Education (BHE) announced recommendations for a decrease in in–state tuition and an increase in out–of–state tuition.

The Board recommended a 2 percent decrease in the amount payed by Massachusetts residents, about $90 and a 6 percent increase in tuition for non–state residents, about $720. According to the Board, 3,000 non–resident undergraduate students would be affected by this.

The Board said that tuition for non–residents was increased because of a state statute saying that "non–residents are to be assessed for 100 percent of the cost" of what is needed to pay for their education, while residents of Massachusetts do not. This is a benefit of being a resident of Massachusetts.

A representative from the Board said that the recommendations go to the Massachusetts Board of Trustees for final approval.

Bob Connely, associate vice president of the University of Massachusetts said that since the Board meets every other month they may look at the recommendations from the BHE at the December meeting, but they will not be debated and voted upon until February.

He said that UMass President Bulger considers the BHE recommendations when making his own recomendations to the Massachusetts Board of Trustees, but he looks at other considerations as well.

Turn to TUITION, page 3

Petition calls for increased UM housing

By Julie Fialkow
Collegian Staff

At last night's Amherst Select Board meeting, members discussed a petition which called for 50 new family apartment units to be constructed at the University of Massachusetts.

Richard McPalmer, treasurer of the Graduate Student Senate, who filed the petition, is asking the township to bring this petition to the state legislature.

University Apartments, which has been vacant since 1993, used to serve as one of three family housing complexes at the University. Currently, there are only 345 University– owned family housing units available.

According to McPalmer, the housing shortage would be alleviated if the University either renovated University Apartments, or constructed an entirely new complex.

"The University is opposed. They said it is too costly," Mc Palmer said. "There is a vague reference to plans, but as all students know, the administration can talk about promises, but they haven't acted yet."

Hill Boss, a select board member, said the University is not doing an adequate job in solving this matter.

"[The housing shortage] impacts the town: it's increasing rent, more children of graduate students are going into the public schools. There is an obvious impact," he said.

According to an information sheet written by the Graduate Student Senate, there are 2,320 households in need of housing assistance in Amherst; 50 percent of those are one and two parent family households. Over 28 percent of those that needed assistance were UMass–affiliated families.

Turn to MEETING, page 3

DANIELLE R. GILARDI / COLLEGIAN

Mike and Pete
Mike Starrett, a junior business management major, chills with his iguana, Pete, yesterday afternoon.

SGA safety walk to highlight new and old issues

By Stacey Shackford
Collegian Staff

Tonight, students, administrators and University of Massachusetts staff members will gather for the "Walk for Light," sponsored by the Student Government Association (SGA) and the Vice Chancellor's Summit on Safety. Students are encouraged to join the walk, which will begin at 6 p.m. from the Student Union steps.

The "Walk for Light" was a student initiative begun in the spring of 1997 by members of the SGA Committee of Women's Issues and Public Safety. As a result of that walk, a five–year plan was submitted to the University highlighting areas that needed improvement.

Many of these proposals have already been implemented, including the addition of three call boxes and lighting and shrubbery maintenance across campus.

"We're going to walk around and review the changes that have been made," said Jodi Bailey, associate speaker of the SGA and former chair of the committee on women's issues and public safety. "We want to make sure that the problems addressed in the first safety walk are being taken care of."

Members of the SGA and the Summit on Safety will lead participants on five routes covering the majority of campus. Routes cover all residential areas, commuter parking lots and Mather Career Center and the academic center.

Participants will note any safety problems they discover on their respective routes, such as lack of lighting or call boxes, unmarked obstructions on pathways or overgrown shrubbery.

These observations will be reviewed by the SGA and the Simmit for Safety, and recommendations will be made to the appropriate departments on campus.

Emilie Codega, commuter senator for the SGA and participant of the original safety walk, encourages students to participate in tonight's walk.

"It gives students and staff the opportunity to voice their concerns about unsafe areas on campus," she said. "Some of the recommendations suggested after the first walk have actually been done. It really has made a difference."

Cellucci and Harshbarger battle in Boston

Mud flies once again, in final confrontation; voters will determine outcome in one week

By Paul Teves
Collegian Staff

BOSTON — Historic Faneuil Hall was the site of the third and final televised gubernatorial debate between candidates Republican acting Governor Paul Cellucci and Democrat Attorney General Scott Harshbarger last night.

The candidates knew this was their last chance to present their issues, yet both failed to debate major points. Instead, both made the same attacks they had used throughout the campaign period.

In the Oct. 14 debate at the University of Massachusetts' William D. Mullins Center, Harshbarger mentioned firing Chairman of the Board of Education, John Silber. When the first question of the night was asked it was in regards to that comment and what experience Harshbarger had to take over that role.

"I'm prepared to be held responsible as governor for education policy," Harshbarger said. "Paul, you've spent $7 million on education reform, but test scores are down."

Cellucci defended Silber.

"I know you want to fire John Silber. He's for higher standards and teacher testing," Cellucci said.

"I appointed the first ever black justice to the Commonwealth," he said, "I will also continue to appoint justices that uphold the law."

Harshbarger butted by saying he would appoint the very best judges, which reflect the diversity of the state.

The panelists also questioned the personal attacks during the campaign.

"I wanted to run a campaign based on education, health care and child care, and I have run that kind of campaign," Harshbarger said.

The attack on Cellucci referred to his personal finances. Cellucci commented to the crowd in Boston about his situation.

"I provided more information about my finances. I do have

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Paul Cellucci

Scott Harshbarger

Cellucci was questioned about justices he appointed and their diversity and how representative they are of the state.

Turn to DEBATE, page 3

News Analysis

By Jill Carroll
Collegian Staff

BOSTON — The mudslinging that has been the hallmark of this years governor's race appeared less often during last night's debate in Boston, but still dominated the event.

The Faneuil Hall debate between Attorney General Scott Harshbarger and acting Governor Paul Cellucci included interrupting, finger pointing and name calling.

The hour–long debate addressed various issues but reached a crescendo when the issue of judicial appointments was touched upon.

Harshbarger attacked Cellucci for appointing his "cronies" as justices. Cellucci refuted the statement with the argument on Harshbarger.

"All of judicial appointments are determined by trial court. You should know that as chief law enforcement officer in the state," Cellucci said.

Harshbarger interrupted Cellucci to rebut the comment.

"Tell the truth. Try that for a change," Harshbarger yelled as some audience members cheered "Let's have a real debate."

"Scott, you can't handle the truth," Cellucci said, as the crowd roared.

But the issue of mudslinging and negative campaigning was addressed in a question from the panel of journalists addressing the candidates.

"When I had the honor to run as Democratic candidate, I asked him [Cellucci] to run a clean campaign like we had during the Democratic primary," Harshbarger said. "I never attacked Paul Cellucci's family. I know what they [Harshbarger's family] felt like when I was called a sleeze bag by Paul Cellucci."

Harshbarger continued, saying he ran negative ads as a response to attacks on him. "I had to reply to false claims, they dish it out but you can't take it."

Cellucci responded to being questioned about negative campaigns about Harshbarger's policies, including not allowing Christmas decora–

Turn to FIGHT, page 3

DANIELLE R. GIARDI / COLLEGIAN

Wire cowboy

A funky sculpture frames freshman fine arts major April Brackett at the FAC yesterday.

Police Log

Accident/Leaving the Scene
Oct. 24
A parked vehicle in Lot 32 on Massachusetts Avenue was struck by an unknown vehicle.

Accident/Personal Injury
Oct. 23
A three-vehicle accident was reported on Commonwealth Avenue. One individual complained of minor injuries. Amherst Fire Department was called to the scene.

Accident/Property Damage
Oct. 23
A two-vehicle accident was reported on University Drive. One operator was cited.
Oct. 22
A bus and a vehicle were involved in an accident on Massachusetts Avenue. No injuries were reported. One operator was cited.
A two-vehicle accident was reported on University Drive.
A two-vehicle accident was reported in Lot 22 on University Drive.

Annoying Behavior
Oct. 25
Police checked on an unauthorized individual in a Campus Center store room.
An individual in Webster Residence Hall was threatened during a telephone conversation.
Oct. 24
Police were called to disperse a group at a bus facility on Holdsworth Way.
Fireworks were shot from windows in John Adams Residence Hall. The responsible party was identified.
An individual was involved in a dispute over parking regulations on Stadium Drive.
Oct. 23
Bottles were thrown from the windows in Cashin Residence Hall.

B&E/Burglary
Oct. 23
A vehicle in Lot 13 on Authority Way was broken into and speakers were stolen.
Oct. 22
An office door in the Cashin Residence Hall basement was kicked in and damaged.

Disabled Motor Vehicle
Oct. 22
Tyrone D. Tugwell, 22, of 122 North Village, Amherst, was arrested on two warrants on Commonwealth Avenue.

Disturbance
Oct. 25
There was a report of a large fight in progress at Southwest Mall.

Health/Safety Hazard
Oct. 25
A dumpster fire was reported in a fraternity parking lot in the academic mall. The Amherst Fire and Police Departments were notified.
Oct. 24
A trash can fire was reported in Lot 34 on Massachusetts Avenue.

Larceny
Oct. 25
A parking permit was stolen from a vehicle in Lot 22 on University Drive.
Oct. 24
An individual in North Village Apartments reported two bicycles, valued at $400, stolen.
Personal property was stolen from a band member at the stadium.
A U-Card was reported stolen from a room in Brown Residence Hall.
Hats were stolen from band members on Stadium Drive. The responsible parties were identified.
There was a past report of a wallet and calculator stolen from Wilder Hall.
Oct. 23
A bicycle, valued at $600, was stolen from a rack at Arnold House.
Oct. 22
A case of frozen scallops, valued at $300, were stolen from Franklin Dining Hall.
An individual came to the UMass Police Department to report U-Card stolen.
A bicycle was stolen from a North Village Apartment porch.

Liquor Law Violations
Oct. 24
Chad Seewagen, 19, of Highland Lake, NY, was arrested for illegal possession of alcohol.

Noise Complaint
Oct. 25
Seth D. Bailey, 19, of 26 Lawrence St., Norfolk, was arrested at Van Meter Residence Hall for disturbing the peace.

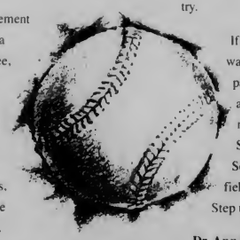
Suspicious Person/Activity
Oct. 25
Matthew F. Melo, 19, of 25 Lakeshore Dr., North Attleboro, Joshua C. Sabato, 17, of 160 Abbott St., Springfield and Christopher T. Spring, 19, of 74 Meadow Rd., East Longmeadow were arrested on Massachusetts Avenue for nighttime breaking and entering for felony, larceny over $250 and attempting to commit a crime.
Oct. 23
Jeffrey B. Young, 19, of 455 Tappan Ave., North Plainfield, N.J., was arrested on Massachusetts Avenue for illegal possession of alcohol, misuse of a false license or liquor ID card.
Oct. 22
Dennis W. Pekkala, 38, of 121 A E. Walnut St., Belchertown, was arrested in Herter Hall for trespassing.

Traffic Stop
Oct. 25
William F. Lacey, 19, of 7 Princeton St., Westfield, was arrested for illegal possession of alcohol, unsafe operation of a motor vehicle and miscellaneous motor vehicle equipment violation.
Oct. 24
John R. McElroy, 26, of 340 Centre Ave., Rockland, was arrested on North Pleasant Street on a second offense of operating a motor vehicle under the influence of alcohol, miscellaneous motor vehicle equipment violation, not being in possession of a license or registration and speeding.

Vandalism
Oct. 26
Two vehicles were reported damaged in Lot 32 on Massachusetts Avenue.
Oct. 24
A vehicle window was smashed in Lot 79 on North Pleasant Street.
A vehicle window was smashed in Lot 32 on Massachusetts Avenue.
Individuals were causing damage at a construction site at the Fine Arts Center.
Oct. 23
An outside mirror was torn from a vehicle in Lot 49 on Clark Hill Road.
A vehicle was discovered with a flat tire in North Village Apartments.

NEW AEROBICS NEW
CARDIO-KICKBOXING • YOGA
• Classes Daily
• Certified Instructors
• Suspended Wood Floor
• Area's Largest Room
www.amherstathletic.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
460 West Street
South Amherst, 256-0080

Write for News



The Collegian news department is always looking for writers. No experience is necessary, any major is accepted and schedules are flexible.
Interested writers are invited to attend the Collegian open house today, 4–7 p.m., in our offices at 113 Campus Center basement.
Or contact News Editor Jill Carroll @
545-1762

LEARN TO PLAY HARD-BALL IN THE BUSINESS OF SPORTS.

Today, the world of sports is no game. It is a $125 billion industry that needs well-trained business professionals to run it. That is why the W. Paul Stillman School of Business at Seton Hall University has established The Center for Sports Management.

Offering sports management concentrations leading to a Bachelor of Science degree, an M.B.A. a joint J.D./M.B.A., or an Advanced Certificate, Seton Hall can prepare you for a wide world of sports career opportunities, giving you the competitive edge you need to succeed. Courses include law, marketing, economics and finance as they pertain to the sports industry. And, you can design a portion of the curriculum to fit your interests in sports-related public relations, broadcasting, advertising, corporate sponsorships, licensingand more.

Highly regarded for its business school and its athletic successes, Seton Hall University, in south Orange, NJ, is just 20 minutes from New York City, offering you a unique educational opportunity and internships in the heart of the global sports industry.

If you have always wanted to combine your passion for sports with a great career in business, The Center for Sports Management at Seton Hall offers the field of your dreams. Step up to the plate now!

Dr. Ann Mayo, Director of the Center for sports Management will be available to discuss the MBA in Sports Management and other graduate programs at Seton Hall, at the Graduate and Professional Schools Information Day, October 28, 1998 at the Murray D. Lincoln Campus Center.

College of Arts and Sciences
College of Education and Human Services
College of Nursing
School of Law
Stillman School of Business

SETON HALL UNIVERSITY
The Catholic University in New Jersey
Founded in 1856
400 South Orange Avenue
South Orange, NJ 07079
http://www.shu.edu
Seton Hall is an equal opportunity/affirmative action institution

School of Diplomacy and International Relations
School of Graduate Medical Education
School of Theology
University College

The Center for Sports Management at Seton Hall

Bookworks™
SEMINAR
DAVE ELLIS Author of BECOMING A MASTER STUDENT
and
CREATING YOUR FUTURE
Today!
Tues. Oct. 27
7 to 9 pm
Bluewall Coffeehouse
Save 10% or More on nearly Every Book! Every Day.
Bookworks is a division of:

■ debate

continued from page 1

a mortgage and a daughter in college. We have substantial financial commercial real estate in Hudson," he said. "If that's politically damaging, that's the right decision for my family."

The panel, which included John Henning from WBZ in Boston and Caroline Ryan of the Boston Herald, then questioned the ad from Cellucci which trashed Harshbarger's stand on Salem witches, Christmas and Easter.

"I was poking fact at the fun he put Salem witches and Christmas ornaments in his own publication," Cellucci said.

"I stand up for everybody and the fact that you think that's funny is sad," Harshbarger said.

The next issue challenge raised by the panelists regarded Cellucci's tax raising in the 1980s when he was a state senator and his position reversal on major issues such as the death penalty.

"Spending was out of control then, and then I took the no new taxes pledge," Cellucci said. "We now have $1.7 million in the unemployment trust fund, just in case the economy weakens.

"Me and (former Governor) Bill Weld chose fiscal discipline. My opponent is incapable of being fiscally responsible."

In his response, Cellucci did not comment on the death penalty.

Harshbarger was also questioned on the No New Taxes Pledge.

"I'll stand up against the NRA, casinos and tobacco," he said. "I've protected consumers and all elderly people. I'll tax big tobacco if it helps sick children. Cellucci's No New Taxes Pledge isn't worth the paper it's printed on."

Finally, one of the media panelists asked the candidates to focus on new ideas for the governor's office.

"I've managed this state in good times and in bad times," Cellucci said. "We have also built the Rainy Day Fund and the unemployment trust fund in order to be ready for possible economic trouble."

Harshbarger spoke of economic security and education.

"He has no plans, and he's coasting on a good economy," Harshbarger said.

The second half of the debate was when the candidates were allowed to directly question one another.

Harshbarger began the session by asking Cellucci why he stayed with big tobacco when he had the chance to deal with health care.

"We have expanded health care for low income children," Cellucci said.

Harshbarger retorted by saying that Ted Kennedy and the Democratic legislature were responsible for the health care expansion and Patient Bill of Rights.

Cellucci finished the argument by saying that "raising taxes is in your blood," referring to Harshbarger.

Still on the topic of taxes, Cellucci asked his opponent what tax projects Harshbarger would veto.

"I'll veto jobs for your political cronies, like [State Senator] Tom Norton from Fall River," Harshbarger said. "[I'll] veto the Big Dig."

Cellucci responded by saying that he had only mentioned $2 million in cuts and the Harshbarger was incapable of being fiscally responsible.

"The people of this state deserve more from Paul Cellucci then they've seen in the last six weeks," Harshbarger said.

The final set of questions involved projects that Cellucci vetoed, including a library in Springfield and a job training facility in Fall River, among others listed by Harshbarger.

"We've been able to save $200 million in capital projects," Cellucci said.

But Harshbarger interrupted, saying "you sold out on kids and to Tom Norton."

"You're not only fiscally disciplined, you want to out spend the legislature," Cellucci responded.

Harshbarger said Cellucci was lying and asked him to tell the truth.

"You can't handle the truth," Cellucci answered back.

Finally, Harshbarger questioned Cellucci on whether or not he has sacrificed certain programs, such as child care. Cellucci responded by saying that child care has been doubled during the Weld-Cellucci administration.

"It's time to invest in education, child care and let the educated build the Massachusetts economy," Harshbarger said.

Education was claimed by both candidates to be the top priority. Harshbarger questioned Cellucci on his education platform.

"Isn't it true that your administration failed," Harshbarger said.

Cellucci responded with comments from his record.

"We've fully funded every reform. We've built 300 new schools and I'm the first governor ever to test teachers," Cellucci said. "We've gone from $1.5 billion to 3.2 billion in school spending. We've spent money in school systems such as Lynn, Worcester and Springfield. Test scores continue to go up, look at what's going on, Scott."

"You didn't test a teacher for seven years," Harshbarger said. "The fact is he has failed to track the best teachers we are going to track the best teachers and make education job one."

"Education is job one," Cellucci said as well. "But I have focused since 1992 on giving parents a choice on where their kids are sent to school and on listing caps on charter schools."

Cellucci then asked why Harshbarger testified against keeping a cap for charter schools.

"I don't believe that's our only concern. And besides, you abandoned charter schools as well as public schools till this election year," Harshbarger said.

Cellucci retorted by saying that charter schools had been his top priority since 1992.

"In 1995, Paul, you wanted to get rid of charter schools all together," Harshbarger said. "I want to create a healthy competition between students in different schools."

In closing arguments, the two candidates reiterated the same ideas they had established during the Amherst debate.

"My mother was a teacher, my father was a fireman, and I want to provide a new energy and new vision with old time values," Harshbarger said in his closing statements.

Cellucci closed by going to his record.

"We are in much better shape now than we were during the late '80s and early '90s. When Bill Weld and I took over in 1991, we took on the deficit and we brought this state back to fiscal stability," he said. "I want to do everything I can for this state."

After the candidates repeated their closing statements from the second debate, they were questioned by members of the media.

"I think we won the debate and I don't feel he made a strong enough of a case why he should be governor," Cellucci said.

Harshbarger finished the night by criticizing his opponent.

"He has no new ideas. I also made some points I wanted to make."

Democratic running mate Warren Tolman, a state senator, agreed with Harshbarger.

"Cellucci lacks vision and is coasting along. We're doing great now, and we've got the momentum."

Republican candidate for Lieutenant Governor Jane Swift was not present at the debate, having given birth less than a week before this debate. According to the Cellucci camp, Swift will return to the campaign soon.

The candidates will not meet in a regulated public setting again before the Nov. 3 election.

■ tuition

continued from page 1

"He wants [the cost of education] to be affordable as possible, but also he knows that you have to look at the full financial picture," Connely said.

Last year, the state discussed the BHE recommendations and the state allocations in one month. State allocations include how much money from the state (via taxes) will go to the schools and where in the schools it will go. By submitting them one month earlier, more time is alloted for discussion, the board said.

Charles Ng's murder trial finally begins

By Larry Gerber
Associated Press

SANTA ANA, Calif. — The long-delayed mass murder trial of Charles Ng began yesterday with prosecutors playing a videotape of the defendant cutting away the shirt and bra of a bound woman, one of 12 alleged victims.

The defense countered with a videotape of its own, in which Ng's friend Leonard Lake tells of plans to build a cell for a sex slave. In his opening statement, attorney William Kelley blamed the killings on Lake, who committed suicide in 1985 by taking cyanide while in police custody in South San Francisco.

Ng, 37, is accused of torturing and murdering people he helped lure to Lake's cabin at Wilseyville, in the Sierra Nevada foothills, in 1984 and 1985.

Ng was arrested in Canada and fought extradition for six years. After further defense delays, the case was moved to Orange County on grounds that news coverage negated a fair hearing in Calaveras County.

"For 13 1/2 years we've waited so see it come to trial," said Dwight Stapley, whose son Scott's body was found near the cabin. "I usually don't have any emotions about it, but this morning, I'm close to tears."

Prosecutor Sharlene Honnaka said San Francisco police helped break open the case in 1985 when Ng was arrested for shoplifting and Lake offered to pay for the merchandise. On June 4, of that year, authorities searched the cabin grounds and found pounds of human remains, mostly teeth and bones, she said.

"They discovered that property had been used as a killing field and a mass graveyard," Honnaka said. A hidden door in a cinder-block "workshop" led to a cell about 3 1/2 feet wide and 6 1/2 feet long, she said.

One wall held a one-way mirror, Honnaka said; inside was a bucket of water and a roll of toilet paper.

The prosecution also played portions of videotapes seized at Ng's apartment. One segment shows Ng cutting away the shirt and bra of a woman identified as Brenda O'Connor.

Lake, off camera, is heard telling her she has a choice: cooperate by cleaning, cooking and having sex with the two, or be raped and shot immediately.

■ fight

continued from page 1

tions.

"It was to make fun of the attorney general for listing this in one of his brochures. It was poking fun at the fact he is publishing it in his literature. I'm not going to send a letter and say no 'Christmas decorations,'" Cellucci said.

Harshbarger charged Cellucci with making light of diversity.

"I stand up for everybody and the fact you think that's funny is sad," Harshbarger said.

Cellucci pointed out in a rebuttle that he has a female chief of staff and press secretary and he said he has appointed black judges.

"My record is in support of tolerance. I chaired the domestic violence committee," Cellucci retorted.

After the debate, Warren Tolman, a candidate for lieutenant governor running with Harshbarger, said negative attacks by Harshbarger are a response to being attacked.

"They were a response to being attacked. You have to respond, you can't just sit on your hands," Tolman said.

The issue of education caused the candidates to go several bouts.

Harshbarger was questioned by the panel about his ability to be both governor and chairman of the board of education if elected, referring to a comment by Harshbarger that he would fire current Board of Education Chairman John Silber and take over the position himself.

"If I want to be personally accountable [for education]," Harshbarger said. "I will have a manager, and people to help me."

Cellucci rebuited Harshbarger's criticism of Silber.

"John Silber is for higher standards and for teacher testing," Cellucci said.

Both candidates had sticking points that have been attacked throughout the campaign and again last night.

Cellucci targeted Harshbarger's reluctance to sign the No New Taxes pledge.

"I did not take the pledge until 1990, when I saw in 1989 and 1988 when I saw spending was out of control," Cellucci said. "We are in better shape fiscally and economically."

Harshbarger responded, saying he would spend responsibly.

"I won't spend one penny more than we can afford," Harshbarger said, reiterating points made in debates previous when faced with the same challenge. "I pledge I will raise taxes on tobacco if it means health care for kids."

Cellucci then challenged Harshbarger to sign the pledge, with the exception that it would not apply to the tobacco tax. But Harshbarger reiterated his pledge: Spend only what can fit in the budget.

But while the tension and voices rose on stage, the heated atmosphere spread to the audience.

One comment that they elicited a vocal response from the audience came during the discussion over schools.

"Why propose a pop quiz during election years," Harshbarger said of the "teacher testing" issue.

A chorus of booing arose while Cellucci responded. The debate, while quieter than previous ones, was particularly calm during closing arguments.

Both candidates repeated key points mentioned in closing statements made during previous debates.

■ meeting

continued from page 1

"The University is a public institution and should make attempts to attract non-traditional students," said McPalmer.

McPalmer added the proposed additional housing would serve mostly graduate families, but undergraduate families could have access to it as well.

A review of the article was on the agenda for the town meeting, however, due to time constraints, it will not be reviewed until the next town meeting.

Among the articles approved at the town meeting, were Article 6, which requests that the select board file a special act which if approved by the legislature and governor. It would allow permanent resident aliens to register and vote in local Amherst elections.

One hundred members of the town meeting voted to pass the article, while 58 voted it down.

Among those who felt the select board should not pass the article on to the state legislature was Amherst resident Judith Yeaton.

"It is unnecessary. It's reasonably easy to gain citizenship in this country. No, it's not free, but nothing of value is," Yeaton said.

Also in disagreement with the proposition were all the members of the select board.

"With citizenship, comes privilege of voting," said select board member Dolly Jolly at the select board meeting.

Supporters of the passed article included Amherst resident, Howard Ziff.

"Citizenship is not a simple process. For personal reasons, one might want to remain a citizen of their home country," he said. "These people, are truly part of the global community."

Vladimir Morales, an Amherst resident and proponent of Article 6, said in an information sheet given to township meeting attendees:

"Compared to other Massachusetts municipalities, Amherst has a large percentage of resident aliens. They own property, pay local state and federal taxes, send their children to public schools, belong to churches and clubs, and serve on the town boards and committees, including the planning board.

"Because of their interests, they deserve a meaningful voice, the right to vote on local issues that directly affect them, their families, their property and businesses."

"I remember one of my first impressions very well. It was during my interview. I was sitting across the table from an Assistant Vice President. He looked straight at me, put my resume aside, and said, 'I'd like to just talk'.

When he said he wanted to know about me as a person,

I couldn't believe it. When I left that office I knew one thing — this was definitely the company for me!"

As Jane will tell you, we're not just your average employer. We're The TJX Companies, Inc. — a $7.4 billion, off-price retail industry leader, parent company to T.J. Maxx, Marshalls, HomeGoods, A.J. Wright, Winner's Apparel Ltd. in Canada and T.K. Maxx in Europe — and a great place to take your career. Come find out about our Corporate Merchandise Training Program where you'll begin on a well-defined corporate career path that will prepare you to become a Merchandise Planning Manager and Buyer.

We will be conducting on-campus interviews on Tuesday, November 17th
For more information, visit your Career Services Office.

If unable to attend, candidates should forward their resumes to: College Recruiter, The TJX Companies, Inc., Dept: MA-98, 770 Cochituate Road, Framingham, MA 01701. Fax: (508) 390-2658. E-mail: jobs@TJX.com Visit our website at: www.TJX.com

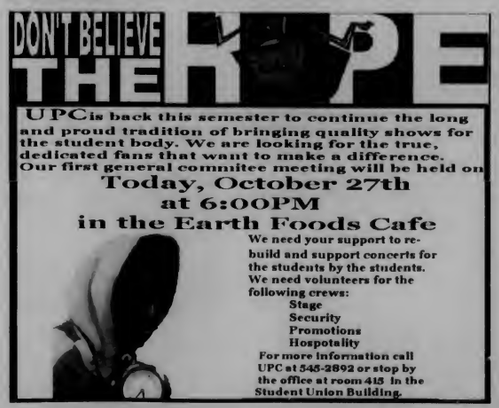
TJ MAXX Marshalls HomeGoods A.J. Wright

© The TJX Companies, Inc. 1998 We are an equal opportunity employer committed to workforce diversity

Hey! Need A Job !?
Why not be a Bartender !?

• Only professional school in Western MA
• Hands-on training in real bar/club setting
• National certification in alcohol awareness
• Lifetime refresher • ID Card • Resume
• Special U Mass student discount
• Conveniently located in West Springfield
Call TODAY! (413) 747-9888

Police seize drug stash



BOSTON (AP) — Police seized an estimated three kilos of cocaine and more than 400 grams of heroin in a drug bust on the Massachusetts Turnpike. The drugs had an estimated street value of $5.5 million. Three men who police say were bringing the drugs from New York to Boston were arrested Sunday near the Prudential Center exit of the turnpike. Boston police identified the three suspects as Fernando Eatista, 37, and Carlos Delmonte, 37 of New York City, and Eduvijies Reyes-Rivera, 37 of Allentown, Pa. The three pleaded innocent to drug trafficking charges yesterday at their arraignment in Roxbury District Court. Rivera was held on $50,000 cash bail, while Eatista and Delmonte were held on $25,000 cash bail.

FREE
FIMO WORKSHOP
BY VISITING ARTIST
Evan Gerber

AT THE
STUDENT UNION CRAFT CENTER
THE NUMBER OF HANDS ON PARTICIPANTS IS LIMITED TO THIRTY, BUT ALL ARE WELCOME TO COMP AND WATCH
THURSDAY OCTOBER 29
6:00 - 8:00 PM
UMASS VOTES!
MADE POSSIBLE BY A GRANT FROM THE UMASS ARTS COUNCIL
FOR MORE INFO CALL 545-2496 OR STOP BY THE CRAFT CENTER

DON'T BELIEVE THE HYPE

UPC is back this semester to continue the long and proud tradition of bringing quality shows for the student body. We are looking for the true, dedicated fans that want to make a difference. Our first general commitee meeting will be held on Today, October 27th
at 6:00PM
in the Earth Foods Cafe
We need your support to rebuild and support concerts for the students by the students. We need volunteers for the following crews:
Stage
Security
Promotions
Hospotality
For more information call UPC at 545-2892 or stop by the office at room 415 in the Student Union Building.

-- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian --

Good riddance, baseball

The weird, restless behavior of the kid sitting next to me in a late class last Wednesday aroused my attention to the point of asking him what was the matter. "Oh, the World Series," he said in a tired voice. "the Yankees, you know." The culmination of this year's baseball season has again left me confused and detached. I always knew something about the game, but never enough to even know who played against whom.

Not growing up in America has resulted in a permanent void for me when it comes to baseball. My earliest encounter of the game was at 13, when the American soldiers, brought by the Gulf War, came to Israel. They set up a dusty baseball field at the edge of the desert and played. We, and the rest of the curious neighborhood, looked on, and some even took part. At the end of the war, however, the soldiers left, and baseball didn't stick. We resorted to soccer and basketball.

> "Baseball came along with culture shock and all the subtle and not so subtle differences that I had to absorb and adjust to in a new world."
>
> Natty Yagudin

One thing about soccer: in my opinion, it is much more passionate than baseball. While baseball is constituted of numerous teams and divided neighborhoods, some even from the same city, soccer manages to unite countries, and sometimes even continents.

I remember the Israeli soccer team as being much more than a sports team — it is a national symbol of pride, enfolded with the flag and the anthem. When we lost, it was almost like a small death to the national ego. When we won, it was another point to our own survival, another explanation for the meaning of life. The crumbling soccer stadiums, packed with loud spectators, suggested a history much superior to our own existence. This was where 4,000 years ago people also held games of their own. The history of Fenway is the last hour of the last day in the history of my soccer field.

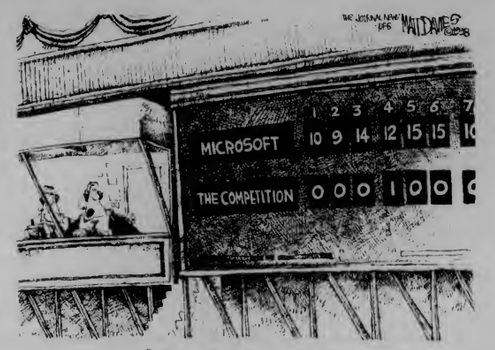
When there is a soccer game in Israel, stores close early and the streets of the cities jam up in mid-afternoon because everyone hurries home to see it. Even the old widows clear up the coffeehouses to go watch the game. My own grandmother was a self-proclaimed expert.

At 14, my life took an unexpected turn when I came to America and began middle school here. Baseball was a part of the physical education program at Sepulveda Junior High in suburban Los Angeles, and the gym teachers assumed that everyone knew baseball. I found myself being screamed at in a middle of a green field, not knowing what to do or how to do it.

A few years later, when the MTV cartoon "Daria" came on, its opening scene always featured Daria on a volleyball court, failing to act as the ball was thrown at her direction. The scene could not have described my embarrassment and lack of competency better.

Baseball came along with culture shock and all the subtle and not so subtle differences that I had to absorb and adjust to in a new world. Every map and globe in the U.S. centers on North and South America, and the world indeed looks from the maps as though there are no other continents and countries. It's almost as if my old identity had been erased.

My emergence as an American looked like long series of trial and error. I often misunderstood people and had to spend hours looking up the meaning of English words in the dictionary. Baseball, too, was hard to understand. With no goals to score and no apparent target to run to, I found it hard to understand how such a game engaged so many people and induced such bitter rivalries. The bat was heavy, and I could hardly hit the ball, not to mention trying to keep score. Baseball was almost like learning another language. On the baseball field during gym, I hid well enough to have to bat only once or twice through the entire season, and even then I struck out.



Slowly, I mastered the language and the culture, to the point where I could seemingly pass for an American. A few things, however, prevent me from becoming a "complete" American. One of them is probably baseball. I never bothered to keep up with the game, perhaps because of the horrific first experience I had.

Now I take my lack of knowledge of baseball as a certain advantage. What more arrogance can Americans have than calling their baseball games "The World Series?" Now not only is the other side of the globe not represented, it is completely erased.

My roommate says this article will probably result in hate mail from baseball fans in the next few weeks, but I still insist on saying it in view of the gloomy coverage of the World Cup this year. No, I don't think there is an all out war between soccer and baseball, but I think there is definite ignorance on part of many Americans in regards to soccer and other sports that are not labeled "American."

For my part, I keep trying to understand baseball, though I can bet with good odds that I will be estranged from it for the rest of my life. What I ask of you is not to forget the sport you love. Only remember that there is another globe that never knew a home run.

Natty Yagudin is a Collegian staff member.

...OOP LOOKS LIKE MICROSOFT'S IN TROUBLE...

My own great pumpkin

"Can I call you Bruce?"

"Sure. My kids do."

"Wow..."

And that's the way it would have gone, in a nutshell, if I had met the Boss, Bruce Springsteen. I was told, on good authority, that Mr. Springsteen hands out candy bars in front of his New Jersey house every Halloween. Big candy bars, too — not those mini Halloween sized ones. Getting an oversized Zagnut from the Boss — ahhh, I've achieved all I could.

Mike Messaros

Then tragedy struck. It came down to two things — driving down to New Jersey, trying to chase a little piece of the runaway American dream (and that's what Springsteen is all about, ~~isn't it?~~) or attending something that could be beneficial to what those on the outside call "my career." And before I knew it, that nagging voice in my head was not so foreign, but sounded like I do. I thought I was born to run, but I guess I was just born to sell out to "the Man."

No one believed me when I told them about Bruce's Halloween practice. "Why would Bruce Springsteen do that?" Because he lives to give, I reply; this is his hometown. Still no one would believe me.

> "There I am, in the pumpkin patch, sucking my thumb, holding my security blanket, singing 'Growing Up.'"

And then they would ask why I'd even want to go. He's the Boss, I'd reply. You don't get to be the boss by slacking off. In musical terms, you get to be the boss by bringing the rock each and every time. You can't leave it at home with your car keys. And I'm going to talk to the Boss, get some advice.

Meeting Bruce Springsteen, for me, is now my Great Pumpkin (a friend suggested that he's my Godot, but I prefer Schultz to Beckett on so many levels). There I am, in the pumpkin patch, sucking my thumb, holding my security blanket, singing "Growing Up."

"What are you doing in there, Blockhead?" everyone asks. "I'm waiting for Bruce Springsteen." I tell them, "He rises from his New Jersey estate every Halloween and gives all good boys and girls Zagnuts. Big ones!"

"Whatever, Blockhead," they snort. "You're going to miss Halloween."

Ah. Halloween. The paradigm of lost childhood. I get so excited about it up until the actual day, and then I find myself either upset, or doing something completely unrelated to the holiday. Last year I went and saw Boogie Nights. There's something about seeing an exposed "thing" (that is the scientific term for it — look it up) on Halloween that says "You're a big boy now. No more candy."

It used to be such a rush. Dressing up for school that day, sometimes as Strawberry Shortcake (not only was I secure in my sexuality back then, but I learned a harsh lesson about buying costumes at K-mart the day before Halloween), listening to the same announcement each year: "Be safe tonight, kids, and don't go to any house where you don't know the person who lives there." No one followed that advice, because you only really knew the people on your block, and what kind of haul did that get you? They told us all the stories about razor blades in apples, but who ate the apples? Our collective sugar-tooth was the best defense against razor-blade apples.

I always took it too far. I dressed up like a trash can in eighth grade. I was going to be the one all the parents commented on, and therefore got extra candy. But what ended up happening was my friends were more content to egg houses, and I ended up pulling up the rear, arms waving, knees kicking the inside of the plastic can I was wearing: "Wait for me, guys!"

Worse, when we did finally decide to go into a house and get some candy, I'd end up knocking something over, like Grandpa's urn, or some priceless china. "Oh, that's OK, hon, that's only... irreplaceable. But look at that — you're a trash can!"

By the end of the night I had taken it off, carrying the trash can around, wearing only sweatpants and a t-shirt, which wasn't half as impressive. "Yeah, I'm, uh... my dad after he gets home from the gym and he has to take out the trash. So, you going to give me an Oh Henry?"

But I seem to have digressed. Bruce Springsteen: that's what we were talking about. I had my heart set on Bruce, driving down to Jersey with multiple friends, each of us dressed as a member of the E Street Band (there were vicious fights over who was going to be Gary Talent) and talking to the man himself. And that dream fell apart, as they often do as you get older. (Oh, yawn — another lesson about growing up. Fantastic.)

To go back to my Peanuts analogy, I've officially fallen asleep in the pumpkin patch, sucking my thumb. They wake me up: "Did I miss the great pumpkin?"

"It's time to come home, Blockhead."

Hmm... it's time to come home. And I feel bad. What I've learned is, to quote the Boss himself, the door's open, but the ride, it ain't free. Or something like that. Whatever...

"Mike — I can call you Mike, can't I?"

"Of course you can, Bruce."

"Mike, you want to sing 'Bobby Jean' with me?"

I gasp. "That's one of my favorite songs."

"I know, son, I know."

Mike Messaros is a Collegian columnist.

Fashion statements

The first time I met my friend Jesse, I approached him to ask for a cigarette. I had noticed the spikey pink-haired boy with metal chains around his neck and wrists earlier as my hallmate, but this was the first time I talked to him. We chatted for a few minutes, and in response to my question, he said that he didn't smoke.

I was so obviously surprised that I was embarrassed for my lack of tactfulness later. I had presumptuously assumed that just because he dressed punk, Jesse had to smoke cigarettes, which has absolutely nothing to do with each other. I was ashamed of my ignorance, thoughtless as it was.

This incident caused me to think about how many stereotypes are based upon the way people choose to dress. It is assumed that clothes dictate personality. What you put on your body supposedly is an indicator for what is inside of it. For instance, a girl who goes to class in black pants and tight, little shirts is taken as a sorority member, or someone clad in tie-dyes, hemp jewelry and sandals is presumed to be a hippie. Sweatshirts and Adidas wind pants are often found on athletes, and outrageous threads are thought to reflect an artsy person. This is grossly unfair to the subject, yet just about everyone subconsciously or intentionally stereotypes others. In a school the size of UMass, it is a way of classifying people to remember them ("That's that Deadhead in my Drugs and Society class.")

> "Growing up, the most popular kids in junior high were those who owned the most Champion sweatshirts and Nike Airs."
>
> Christine Coco

These stereotypes are further broken down into groups of people who dress alike based upon their living area. When deciding which residential area to live at UMass as a freshman, had any upperclassman advised you which group of dorms to pick based upon which types of people lived there? Southwest is supposedly filled with athletes and sorority/fraternity members. Central is the reputed home of hippies and Deadheads. Northeast is thought to contain ethnic and artsy individuals. Sylvan's small population supposedly is comprised of earthy-crunchy people. And Orchard Hill is believed to be made up of brainiacs and honor students.

Now, I don't mean to offend anyone with my observations. I'm not saying that these stereotypes are true nor accurate. They are just the ignorant beliefs of people who don't know any better about those who don't dress or act like them. Change, so it is said, inspires fear.

Everyone is a little leery of people who seem to have nothing in common with them. And since first impressions are the most lasting, some people don't bother to look beyond the physical characteristics just because they may be thought to be "weird." With Halloween approaching, some students may not dress any differently since every other day they are in a costume get-up. But this is the point that needs to be kept in perspective: Clothes, jewelry, and hairstyles are only costumes that mask what's truly underneath. It's only a way of embellishing one's outer shell.

So how can we break out of these confines and return to the meniality of prehistoric times, when the sole purpose of clothing was to provide warmth and hide nudity? (You learn fun facts like this in a class at UMass called Costume History, which only proves my point — that clothes have been treated with such importance, it's officially become part of academia.)

One might say, "Live and let live," but this is unrealistic advice in a society in which growing up, the most popular kids in junior high were those who owned the most Champion sweatshirts and Nike Airs. It's sad how young kids are being taught that money and materialistic possessions buy status.

As long as it doesn't encourage outright discrimination or violence, it is unlikely that stereotyping will be brought to an end. The best way to make a point against it is to ignore the norms and to flaunt your individuality. Try to remember this the next time you meet someone who doesn't look exactly like you. They may end up surprising you. It happened to me.

Christine Coco is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

Real feminism misunderstood

To the editor:

As Carissa Hiltsley is offended by what she presumes stereotypical "feminists" think of her, so is her portrayal of feminists offensive and objectionable.

Hiltsley describes this "feminist" with unshaven legs and armpits, and a T-shirt that says in big red letters "GIRLS RULE!" She then infers that such women, and feminists in general, ridicule her for her appearance, choice of athletic activity and appreciation of men's "chivalrous acts." This proves how many feminists Hiltsley knows. I challenge her to find a self-described feminist that would dismiss her solely on the basis of this criteria.

Hiltsley also maintains that feminists dislike men holding doors and pulling out their chairs. I would be interested to know how she arrived at this conclusion. Did she pass out a survey to an upper-level women's studies class? Interview people on the street? Watch a lot of TV?

By the same token, how does she know what every man is thinking, intending and expecting when he performs a so-called chivalrous act? I am not suggesting that he is necessarily patronizing the woman, but I am not stating that he isn't, either.

When deciding how to evaluate any given act, one must consider its context.

To conclude, Hiltsley states that "It takes a strong, intelligent woman to appreciate and understand the difference between what is patronizing and what is chivalrous." I wish to thank her for the compliment, and to tell her not to tell me to "learn to just say thank you once in a while." I'll make that decision on my own.

Caroline Sunshine
Amherst

Have your voice heard.
Write!

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor-in-Chief Position Vacant Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
Steve Salerno Jr. Advertising Manager David Parmenter Advertising Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Laura Forster Developing Nations Editor
Mike Messaros Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Co-Jewish Affairs Editor
Morgan Tobor Co-Jewish Affairs Editor
Heather Lei Guzzetta Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jill Carroll News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylanski Sports Editor
Allana E. Todman Women's Issues Editor
Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn F. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

The state of the union of hip-hop

David Katzoff

As I continue my evaluation on the community of hip-hop, I am realizing that it is difficult to assume a firm position of criticism when considering all the aspects and puppeteers that control the rap music we listen to.

Addressing the state of hip-hop can be a delicate task if it threatens its union... disrupts its pulse, disturbs its troops and distrusts its creations. All things (and this applies to rap,) are relative and all perspectives we hear on was are the verbal manifestations of the individual. With these manifestations in mind we push forward.

Let me begin by stating that I understand the ideologies behind the overly-abused term "playa hating." So when I challenge the underachievement that runs rampid in rap music, I am not attempting to defame artists or insult their listeners. Nor do I resent the money these "rappers" make selling their image.

In my last installment I pointed the finger at Jay Z, Canibus and Rass Kass. In fairness, I would like to state that I am a fan of all of these lyricists, which is why I demand more than they are providing. Hip-hop music, as a collective unit, is still not providing standards that quench our thirst.

Rap is the best selling sound in the nation, and by this notion, the industry is flooded with "acts" attempting to become the next blase blah... commodity. I respect these young kids for getting a piece of the action, but this piece keeps getting bigger and bigger.

Over the last three years, materialism has grabbed rap music by the throat, applying pressure and setting trends. This trend has choked hip-hops most (and least) talented. As the dollar signs flashed, Tims were traded in for Alligators, Old English was replaced with Cristal and old neighborhoods were no longer the most common places to represent. (Peep the "What They Do" video by the Roots.)

And while we do have a number of devout emcees protesting tiresome topics, the actual content and execution of these protests are what differentiate their efforts. Lyricists have created an entire genre dedicated to ousting the "fake MC." Some shine, others just contribute to the array of tiresome topics.

For contrast, Jeru the Damaja has been an effective advocator of the anti-materialistic movement; but even he acknowledges that the righteousness he spits is packed and sold, certainly making him an extremely financially secure Rasta. Check the double meaning in his song "Can't Stop the Profit."

Recently, Black Star's efforts to engineer a spiritual– ethnocentric movement sputtered in their lack of head– nodding beats. (This was accomplished, but primarily unnoticed, by Digable Planets 1995 release, Blowout Comb.) Nowadays, heads are so beat–oriented it is nearly impossible to showcase your skill unless you have the proper production. This is where Canibus and Rass Kass can be called "underachievers."

As for Jay Z, his "jigga" persona cannot carry an album with c–rap (commercial–rap) production, regardless of how cleverly he presents himself. I single out these three MC's because we must recognize that our premier lyricists are dropping mediocre albums.

Consequently, I find myself listening to the likes of Fat Joe and M.O.P. even though I've grown tired of their lyrical content. So I pose the question: What constitutes a deft assault on the materialistic disease that infects today's lyrics?

In light of the subject, I have assembled the Five Most Flammable Songs of the Week that may provide further discussion: De La Soul's "Stakes Is High;" Jeru's "Me or the Papers (Rmx.);" Xibit's "Paparazzi;" Common's "1,2 Many;" and Kweli's "Manefesto" each contain relevance to today's criticisms of hip–hop.

Before I sign off, I want to instill the firm understanding that any negative connotations are simply to incite questioning the acceptance of mediocrity. The union of hip– hop is at a pivotal state and since we are the torch bearers of the next millennium, it lies in our hands to rectify its direction. Keep that ear to the ground y'all. Stay tuned...

David Katzoff is a Collegian columnist.

Baby is sick, twisted fun

COURTESY JOAN MORRIS

Helen (Jessica Morris) detests two loving parents (Julie Baber and Courtney Chusheim) in Christopher Durang's Baby With the Bathwater.

By Timothy Matos
Collegian Correspondent

BABY WITH THE BATHWATER
Hallie Flanagan Studio Theater—Smith College
Oct. 22–24, 28–31

NORTHAMPTON — Playwright Christopher Durang has captured the imagination of the Valley theater artists this season. Durang's Baby With the Bathwater opened last Thursday at Smith College's Hallie Flanagan Studio Theater and runs until Oct. 31.

It is the first of many Durang plays that are being done at the university level. The UMass Theater Department will be presenting two Durang one–acts later this semester.

Smith College's all–student–run production proved that Durang's ideas are urgent and immediate. It was a stunning production, showcasing the paranoia and inconsistency of family life, without losing the moments of quiet tenderness.

Baby With the Bathwater begins with a married couple, and loosely traces the life of their new baby. The clueless couple alternately coos and curses at the baby, hating it mostly for things that are truly reflective of their own defects. It is the classic blinding of usually rational people with the introduction of a 24–hour a day burden.

Except, we find that the characters are not really rational, and that in fact, they are really insane; consistently this happens in Durang's plays. John, the husband, has spent the last week hiding behind the refrigerator, drinking and reading Hegel, his wife, feeds the baby NyQuil so it will stop crying.

Durang reveals his characters in positions of limited control, and tricks the audience into identifying with the characters, and then, slowly at first, he reveals the cracks.

The play picks up speed and the deterioration of the characters accelerates exponentially until insanity is complete.

Although we were all laughing uncontrollably, secretly, or maybe not so secretly, we were all terrified. This sense of nervous, paranoid terror, hidden behind a grotesque facade, is the real genius of Durang's work. It is also the real challenge to the actors. Playing the comedy or the terror is easy enough, but synthesizing them into a cohesive whole, is infinitely more difficult.

The main actors stepped–up to this challenge and succeeded. Greg Egan (John) and Jessica Morris (Helen) were breathtaking. Egan and Morris helped to keep the production from being like a stand–up routine or situation comedy. They not only had the comedic timing, but a well–developed relationship as well.

Durang's characters do not have complete psychologies. They are more like semi–allegorical figures from

Turn to BATHWATER page 6

TRAVEL SMART!
BEST PRICES FROM BOSTON TO EUROPE, WITHIN THE U.S., AND DESTINATIONS AROUND THE WORLD
CALL 800-272-9676
E-MAIL sales@prismtours.com
OR VISIT US AT www.prismtours.com
Eurailpasses and Student ID cards available.
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Avenue
New York, NY 10017

amc
There Is A Difference!
Distance In Quabbin. No child under 8 in any PG-13 or R rated film after 6pm.
Mt. Farms 4 • 584-9153
Mt. Farms Mall
WHAT DREAMS MAY COME (PG-13) Today at 8:10
Soldier (R) *Today at (6:00 @ 52.50) 8:30
PRACTICAL MAGIC (PG-13) Today at (5:30 @ 52.50) 8:20
BELOVED (R) Today at (4:00 @ 52.50) 7:30
RONIN (R) Today at (5:40 @ 52.50)
Hampshire 6 • 584-7550
Hampshire Mall
RUSH HOUR (PG-13) Today at (5:30 @ 52.50) 8:10
URBAN LEGEND (R) Today at 8:10
APT Pupil (R) *Today at (5:00 @ 2.50) 7:20
Pleasantville (PG-13) *Today at (5:20 @ 52.50) 8:00
ANTZ (PG) Today at (5:50 @ 52.50) 8:30
BRIDE of CHUCKY (R) Today at (6:00 @ 52.50) 8:40
Night at the ROXBURY (PG-13) Today at (6:00 @ 2.50)
* Special Engagement, no Passes or Coupons
$2.50 (Twi-Lite) Show Daily

NEW AEROBICS NEW
CARDIO-KICKBOXING • YOGA
• Classes Daily
• Certified Instructors
• Suspended Wood Floor
• Area's Largest Room
www.amherstathletic.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
460 West Street
South Amherst, 256-0080

IN DEMAND
The world is turning to information. That's why employers turn to the University of Michigan School of Information to find top talent.
From archives to the World Wide Web, from next-generation librarianship to information economics, SI puts you in touch with the training, tools, and technology you'll need to excel. Students from diverse academic backgrounds — computers, humanities, math, and social sciences — gain direct access to our world-class faculty.
School of Information
University of Michigan
734.763.2285
The dynamic two-year master's program develops your intuition about how things will work in the future, then helps you employ your new insights in some of the most progressive organizations in the corporate and nonprofit sectors. Our innovative Ph.D. program prepares you for a research career in this growing field.
The information revolution is upon us. Prepare yourself to take a leading role.
Graduate Studies in Information
www.si.umich.edu
INFORMATION

Harold Kushner
Author of numerous award winning books including the international best-seller When Bad Things
Good Do We Have to Be?"
UMass
After the talk there will be a reception with refreshments and opportunity to by books.
Co-Sponsored by Class of 2001 and the Hillel/Jewish Student Union
Other sponsors include UMass Amherst Alumni Association, The Hillel House, Hillel Jewish Student Union, School of Management, Office of Jewish affairs, Chancellors Council, Community Diversity & Social Justice Council, Cultural Enrichment Fund.

Now Open....The Area's Best Fitness & Health Club
UltimateFitness
THE HEALTH AND FITNESS CENTER
Featuring the latest in Fitness Training & Equipment
"Everything You Need in a Gym and More!"
• Certified Personal Trainers
• Fitness Testing & Programming
• Nutritional Consultation
• Tanning
• Sauna
• Juice Bar & Supplements
•Full Aerobics Programs including:
-Cardio Kickboxing
-Sports Step
-Boot Camp
-and many more
Located in the Campus Plaza next to Liquors 44.
For more information call 253-7571
Cardiovascular Equipment
• Stairmasters
• Precor Treadmills
• Lifecycle Recumbent Bikes
• Lifecycle Upright Bikes
• Precor Crosstrainers
State-of-the-Art Strength Training Equipment
• Bodymasters & Icarian Free Weights
• Cybex Circuit Training Equipment

■ bathwater

continued from page 5

Freud's notebooks. Egan and Morris were able to develop more than just over-the-top parodies of the human psyche. Egan with his subtle, helplessness was correctly placed with Morris and her defiant, anxious rambling.

Credit must be given to director Erin E. Roberts for making sure that definite choices were made and cultivated. Roberts seemed to understand these two characters and Kaisy (played by Nick Keenan) completely.

Keenan had by far the most difficult part to play. Kaisy is an inanimate object throughout the breadth of the play, making his coming into action problematic. He must keep the sense of that total detached manner really set him apart form the other characters, and made him quite sympathetic to the audience.

However, while Roberts understood these characters, she seems to not have paid as much attention to the other characters. They were consistently not as effective. The failure of these scenes might be due to a lack of total understanding, but that could be only a small part of it.

It was not the acting, but the transitions. The show as bogged down by a number of long scenic changes, which in many cases coincided with the entrance of a new character. These delays really confused the pace of the show, and unfortunately, made one question the otherwise gorgeous set design. There were just too many props.

The play comes full circle to the exact beginning moment: a married couple standing in their living room cooing at their baby. Expecting the play to start all over again with the younger generation, Durang lays on the suspense, but delivers a shocking, yet satisfying ending.

JAY PREMACK / COLLEGIAN

Surrounded

Sophomore running back Marcel Shipp found his way into the record books in the Massachusetts football team's 36–26 win over Villanova. Shipp became the sixth Minuteman to rush for 1,000 yards in a season.

Call to arms for Mr. Cunningham; Elam a real kick

By Dave Goldberg
Associated Press

If Dennis Green and Wade Phillips are to be believed, in the next few weeks they'll bench Randall Cunningham and Doug Flutie, combined record 8-0, in favor of Brad and Rob Johnson.

Brad and Rob aren't related, but they have at least one thing in common: They're likely to be booed the minute they step back on the field.

No matter that Cunningham has become twice the quarterback as a pocket passer than he was in his salad days in Philadelphia. No matter that Flutie sells tickets and cereal, has won three straight and added off-beat magic to a traditional game.

The standard line from any coach about replacements is this: "No starter loses his job to injury."

The small print, in these days of the salary cap, reads: "Especially if he's just signed a $25 million-contract (Rob) or a $15 million-deal (Brad)."

It was all out there for everyone to see on Sunday.

Cunningham was 17-of-30 for 190 yards with two touchdowns as Minnesota kept pace with Denver at 7-0 by beating Detroit 31-13. OK, so he threw his first two interceptions of the season, but both were in garbage time and he now has 14 TDs to two interceptions for the season.

So Green is playing coy, with the help of Brad Johnson, who broke his ankle in the second week against the Rams.

"I'm ready to play," Johnson said after working out in Detroit before Sunday's game. "But I know Denny has a tough decision."

Green has the luxury. If doctors say Johnson is 90 percent ready — or 95 percent or 98 percent ready — the coach can reply, "I won't play him until he's 100 percent."

Give the nature of broken bones, he might not be 100 percent until next season.

Or until Cunningham falters, whichever comes first.

Alive and kicking: Jason Elam's 63-yard field goal for Denver on Sunday not only tied Tom Dempsey's record for the longest in NFL history, it also set a record of its own: It was the first to be kicked by a player from his own territory since the goal posts were moved from the goal line to the rear of the end zone in 1974.

Elam's kick came from his 47.

The only other 60-yarders, by Steve Cox and Morten Andersen, were exactly 60 yards, so they were kicked from the 50.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Sidestepping the defense

Senior midfielder Brad Kurowski and the Massachusetts men's soccer team will look to close out their regular season next weekend before heading into the Atlantic 10 championships.

Four elected to hall of fame

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Hurdler Greg Foster, high jumper Dwight Stones, distance runner Francie Larrieu-Smith and discus thrower Jay Silvester were elected today to the National Track and Field Hall of Fame.

The four combined for 12 world records, 47 American records and 47 U.S. titles.

Foster, 40, was one of the world's best hurdlers from 1977-1992. He won the 110-meter hurdles at the first three world championships, took the 1991 world indoor title and the silver medal at the 1984 Olympics. He set world indoor records in 1986 and 1987, and was world-ranked 15 times, reaching the No. 1 spot five times. Foster also won 10 national titles, indoors and outdoors.

Stones, 44, was among the world's best high jumpers from 1973-84. He set the world record three times, clearing 7-foot-6 1/2 in 1973, and 7-7 and 7-7 1/4 in 1977. Stones competed in three Olympics winning bronze medals in 1972 and 1976, and won 11 national titles. Larrieu-Smith, 45, set 35 American records at distances from 1,000 meters to two miles, and won 21 national titles during a career that spanned four decades — from 1969-1992.

She was a member of five Olympic teams, starting in 1972 when she ran the 1,500 meters. She ran the same distance at the 1976 Games and was a team member at 1,500 meters in 1980 when the United States did not compete. She ran the 10,000 at the 1988 Olympics and was the U.S. flag-bearer at the 1992 Games, where she ran the marathon.

Welcome back... NOW GO AWAY!
Travel accessories and backpacks sold here! European railpasses and international student ID cards issued on the spot!
Council Travel
CIEE: Council on International Educational Exchange
44 Main St., Amherst
(413) 256-1261
www.counciltravel.com

Arts and Sports.... What a good mix!
Win a Free trip to New Orleans and go on the Ann Rice Vampire Tour!
or Win Free tickets to:
Spike & Mike's Animation Festival
The Spooky World Cruise
or an Exciting Whale Watching Tour
(Courtesy of Mass Bay Lines)
Sign Up & Win Today, Check Out:
www.collegestudent.com

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS $10.
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256-0733
145 main st. northampton 586-0155

PIZZA RAMA
356 College Street
253-3808
"25th Anniversary"
(Next to Spirit Haus Liquors)
Call Delivery Express → 599-0077
BYOB

Campus Career Network
ALL STUDENTS!!
ANNUAL FIVE COLLEGES GRADUATE & PROFESSIONAL SCHOOLS INFORMATION DAY
Over 100 Schools including:
Wednesday, October 28, 1998
Student Union Ballroom
University of Massachusetts/Amherst
10:00 am - 3:00 pm

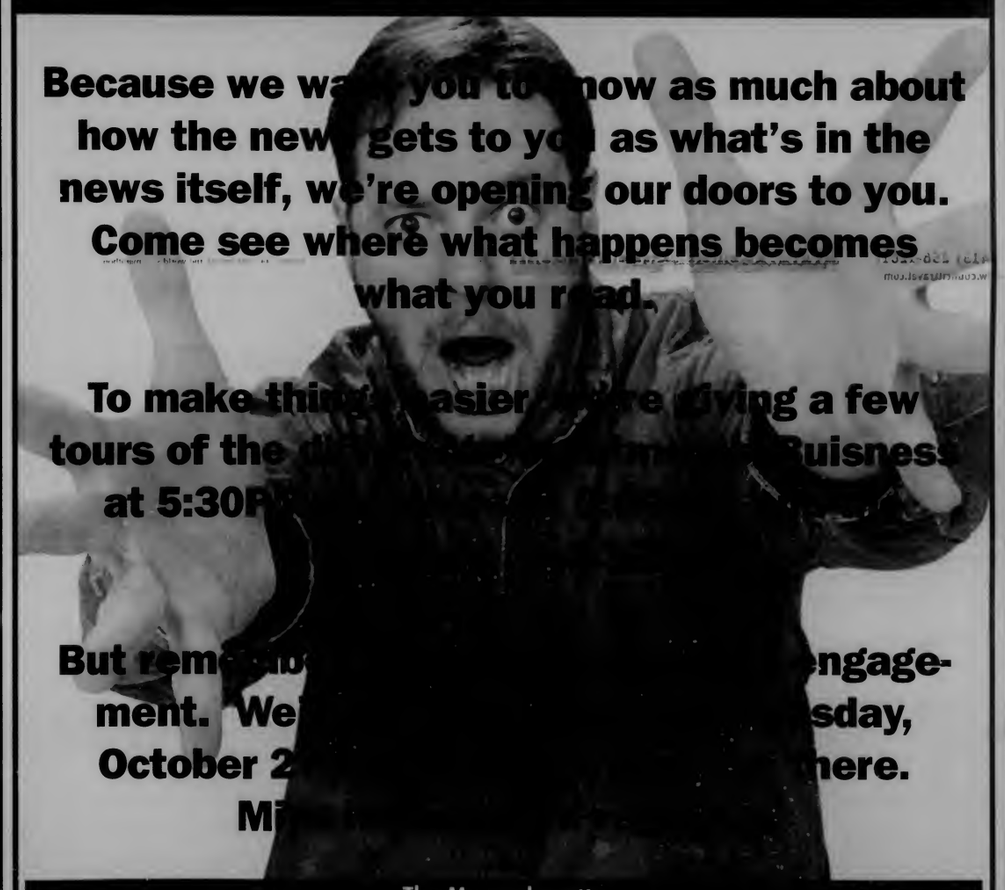
PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club
The Area's Most Complete Club
90 Gatehouse Rd. off Rt. 9.
2 miles East of Town Center
256-6446

Protect Yourself from the
S C A R Y
TERRIFYING
D E M O N S
Treat a Friend, Partner or Yourself to a
HALLOWEEN SURPRISE!
Pick up a Free condom at the
CAMPUS CENTER
October 27 & 28 10:30am to 3:00pm
Practice Safer sex
Compliments of the Peer Health Education

in Legal Education
To get ahead in today's economy, you need education beyond a college degree. More and more people are realizing the wide ranging benefits of a Juris Doctor degree from Massachusetts School of Law. A JD degree can give you the edge you need to succeed in business, health care, law enforcement, government and law.
Massachusetts School of Law
• LSAT not required
• Financial Aid and Tuition Plans available
ON-CAMPUS
Wednesday, October 28, 1998
See our booth at the Graduate and Professional Career Fair between 10:00 a.m. - 3:00 p.m.
Day & Evening classes available
500 Federal Street
Woodland Park
Andover, MA 01810
(978) 681-0800
www.mslaw.edu

GRADUATE SCHOOL OF INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS AND PACIFIC STUDIES
UNIVERSITY OF CALIFORNIA, SAN DIEGO
Prepare yourself for the career opportunities of the future with a Master of Pacific International Affairs (M.P.I.A.) or joint Ph.D. programs in Political Science and International Affairs and Economics and International Affairs.
The M.P.I.A. and Ph.D. degrees focus on business and policy issues facing the regions of the Pacific Rim especially the countries of Latin America, China, Japan, Korea, and Southeast Asia.
Students have the opportunity to specialize in such fields as:
International Management
Comparative Public Policy
International Relations
Applied Economics
International Technology Management
For further information contact:
Graduate School of International Relations & Pacific Studies
University of California, San Diego
9500 Gilman Drive
La Jolla, CA 92093-0520
Phone: (619) 534-5914 - Fax (619) 534-1135
Email: irps-apply@ucsd.edu
World Wide Web site: http://www-irps.ucsd.edu/

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE
50% Off!!
Of Basic Program with valid college Student I.D.
Free Info Session
Wednesday, Oct. 14th
7:00 pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst
Now Accepting Visa, M/C, AMEX & Discover
1-800 U CAN MIX



OPEN HOUSE!

Because we want you to know as much about how the news gets to you as what's in the news itself, we're opening our doors to you. Come see where what happens becomes what you read.

To make things easier, we're giving a few tours of the [illegible] Business at 5:30PM.

But remember [illegible] engagement. We [illegible] sday, October 2[illegible] here.

M[illegible]

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take Over My Lease 1 bedroom at Puffton Village. On bus line. Suitable for two. Call 549-6434. Sabriya or Jamila.

AUTO FOR SALE

College Car! Pontiac Sunbird. Runs perfect! $800/BO. 259-1915.

93 Geo Metro 60,000 miles. Great gas mileage. Good condition. $1000. Call Kirsten 548-6941.

88 Dodge Colt Wgn 127K miles $900. Runs good. 549-1010.

CARS $100-$500 Police Impounds. Hondas, Chevys, Jeeps, & Sport Utilities. MUST SELL! 1-800-522-2730 x4554

COMPUTERS

Macintosh Printer Color StyleWriter 1500 $100 or B/O. Call Tony @ 549-5514.

486 Computer Great For Student Works Good $100 Color VGA $50. (413)584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

The Magma Group is looking for student organizations and motivated student reps to assist with promotions on campus. This is an easy way to earn great money while working flexible hours. For more info please call (617)783-9700 ext 22.

EARN CASH Flexible Hours Now Hiring At Sbarros Hampshire Mall

Kai Chi Restaurant hiring waitstaff/drivers. Apply in person after 5pm.

Drivers Wanted Pays $9 to $15 per hour. Inside help wanted too. Flexible hours. Call Dominos 256-8911

EMPLOYMENT

INSURANCE SALES

Earn $35,000+ in your 1st year as a personal lines account exec. If you have the drive and ambition to succeed, are well organized and have exceptional interpersonal skills, start your career in homeowner/auto insurance sales. We will train the right individual to sell our highly competitive insurance products and provide you with unlimited qualified leads. Candidate must be willing to work evening. We offer a competitive base + commission and complete benefits package. Send resume to W.D. Grinnell, Webber and Grinnell Insurance Agency, PO Box 58, Northampton, MA

WEBBER & GRINNELL INSURANCE

Legal Assistants Wanted Spring 1999 Internships with Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary— training provided. Deadline to begin the application process is Nov 13, 1998— Contact The Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Paid Marketing Internship Campus Street Reps Wanted: to market and promote animalhouse.com, the ultimate online college community. E-mail us at campus@animalhouse.com or call 800-254-8433.

Wanted 98 People We'll pay you to lose up to 29+ lbs. Expires 11/11/98. 1-703-817-1071

EMPLOYMENT

Waitress Part-Time Make $400 & work 2 or 3 nights. Flexible hours. Dancers For Upscale Gentleman's Club No experience necessary. Unlimited $$$ Potential. Bikini, Topless, or Nude! Call 413-536-0502

ENTERTAINMENT

Lights and Sound: Rave to Dorm Party. Your DJ's or ours. Call BARR Productions (413)737-8561.

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Free delivery. 253-9742.

FOR SALE

Must sell Millennium high quality 150 watt house speakers. Brand new, in the box. Retail $800. Asking $400 or B/O for the pair. Comes with warranty. Call 549-6592.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

We're here to pump... YOU UP! Creatine Monohydrate, Creatine Surge, DHEA, Whey Protein and more from Fitness Workshop delivered right to your door. 1-877-FIT-WORK. www.fitnessworkshop.com

INSTRUCTION

KICKBOXING INSTRUCTION Personal training. Workouts customized to meet your fitness goals. Joe 548-8979. Leave message.

CARDIO KICKBOXING Amherst Athletic Club. Train with the pros! 256-0080.

LOST & FOUND

Thursday Night at The Pub- Lost my mother's engagement ring! Huge sentimental value! Call Jenn 256-0375.

MISCELLANEOUS

Think Different $500-$1000 part-time per month. No experience needed. Will train. Free information packet. 413-788-9838. cleanair@javanet.com

ROOM FOR RENT

Quiet setting, kitchen privileges. Laundry, parking, nonsmoking. $350. 549-4853.

SERVICES

Legal Questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst Area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SPORTS

Want to go to the FINAL FOUR FOR FREE? Play Wall Street Sports college hoops edition at http://collegehoops.wallstreetsports.com and WIN a trip to the FINAL FOUR!! It's FREE!!

TO SUBLET

3 bedroom apt for sublet. $875 per month, all utilities included. On bus route. Cliffside Apt. For more info call (413)665-0052.

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK 99! Cancun * Nassau * Jamaica * Mazatlan * Acapulco * Bahamas Cruise * Florida * South Padre. Travel Free and make lots of Cash! Top reps are offered full time staff jobs Lowest Price Guaranteed Call now for details! www.classtravel.com 800-838-6411 930 Comm Ave South On BU's West Campus

SPRING BREAK '99 Largest selection of Spring Break Destinations, including Cruises! Foam Parties, Drink Specials, and Club Admissions. Group Discounts. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-FUN

WANTED

NOTICE

If anyone saw the incident at Pruddy's on Friday, Oct 16, involving a student and bouncers please call me- A.J. 256-6075

Active Women Needed For Nutritional Study Graduate Research Study in Zinc Supplementation. 18 to 40 years old and exercising 3 times a week. Call Christy at 532-2733.

WANTED TO RENT

Looking to sublet from Jan 1-June 1, 2 or 3 bedrooms. Call 546-1747.

Seeking a 2 bedroom lease to take over mid-December or Jan 1st. Close to campus. 665-8521.

Do you have tickets you are trying to sell or give away?

There are tons of people on this campus that would love them!

Put an Ad in The Classifieds today and advertise!!

Have you ever found anything that doesn't belong to you and you want to find the owner?

Do you wish you could just give it back?

Put an Ad in The Classifieds today!

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, OCT. 27

Colloquium — A colloquium entitled "Gertz II Men: Gender at Play in Japanese Popular Culture" will be held at 7:30 p.m. in the Dickinson House Living Room of the Five College Women's Studies Research Center on the Mount Holyoke College Campus.

Concert — A concert entitled "Music in the Noon Hour" will be given at 12:30 p.m. in Sweeney's Concert Hall, Seelye Hall at Smith College.

Film — A documentary film exploring the lives of the African diaspora in Russia entitled "Black Russians" will be shown at 7 p.m. in the Main Lecture Hall in Franklin Patterson Hall at Hampshire College.

Meeting — There will be an Animal Rights Coalition meeting at 7 p.m. in the Student Union room 906.

Meeting — The Student Affairs Review Committee is holding its first community meeting from 9-11 a.m. in room 917 of the Campus Center. The meeting will review the current structure of Student Affairs at the University.

Speech — Harold Kushner will give a speech entitled "How Good Do You Have to Be?" at 7:30 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium. Doors open at 6:30 p.m. Sponsored by Class of 2001 and Hillel/Jewish Student Union.

Workshop — A workshop on contraception and safer sex will be held at 7 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 28

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will have a meeting at 7 p.m. in room 902 of the Campus Center. All are welcome.

Meeting — There will be a "student only" information and planning meeting for all Native American students at the White Eagle Cultural Center at 7 p.m.

Meeting — The University Student Film Society will hold its first meeting at 8 p.m. in the Colonial Lounge in the Student Union.

Open House — UVC-TV 19 will hold an open house from 1–5 p.m. in the UVC-TV studio located in room 216 of the Student Union.

Workshop — There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 7 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

NOTICES

Community — Official Mail-In Voter Registration Forms are available at the Registrar's Office, and Commuter Services in the Student Union. Voting is on November 3.

Exhibit — "Equal Partners" is being shown at the Smith College Museum of Art from September 25–December 13. This exhibit showcases the work of 15 American firms founded by female/male partners.

Submissions — The UMass Poetry Society is seeking submissions to its anthology. Call Joshua at 546-5823 for more details.

Workshop — A workshop for women survivors of childhood sexual abuse will take place on November 7. The workshop include writing, drawing, and movement. In the evening, participants are also invited to perform dances, music, and monologues about healing from abuse. Call 586-7390 for more information and to sign up.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

If you think that shopping a college store means having no choices... Think again. NEW Ustore Just like a mall... Better.

HSCN 24 Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Ch.
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WCCH & HSCN
14 International
15 UMass Academic TV
16 WB/New Haven
17 HSCN Programming
18 The Learning Channel
19 UVC-TV19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
21 Gavel to Gavel
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 Sundance
24 Bloomberg Financial
25 CTN
26 TBS
27 BET
28 TV Land
29 Univision
30 Comedy Central
31 Cartoon
32 Much Music

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 27, 1998

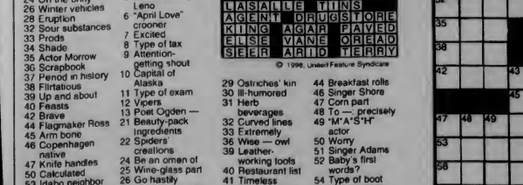
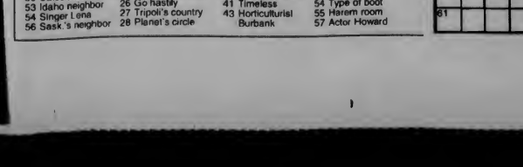
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEOH 2	12	Wishbone (R)	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		Nova "Terror in Space" (R)		Masterpiece Theatre "A Respectable Trade" (R)				Crown	Religion
WFSB 3	3	News (R)	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	ENT. Tonight		JAG "Act of Terror" (In Stereo)		"Carriers" (1998, Suspense) Judith Light. Premiere. (In Stereo) (R)		News (R)	Late Show (R)
WBZ 4	4	News (R)	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	ENT. Tonight		JAG "Act of Terror" (In Stereo)		"Carriers" (1998, Suspense) Judith Light. Premiere. (In Stereo) (R)		News (R)	Late Show (R)
WCVB 5	5	News (R)	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle (R)	Home Imp.	Hughleys (R)	Spin City (R)	Sports Night	NYPD Blue "Cop in a Bottle" (R)		News (R)	Nightline (R)
WLVI 56		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny (R)	Friends (R)	Buffy the Vampire Slayer (R)		Felicity "Spooked" (In Stereo)		News		Friends (R)	Nanny (R)
WHDH 7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	Mad Abt. You	Encore	Just Shoot Me	Working (R)	Dateline (In Stereo) (R)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	6	Married...With	Home Imp.	Judge Judy (R)	Judge Judy (R)	Moesha (R)	Clueless (R)	Greatest Pets	Reunited (R)	Dateline (In Stereo) (R)		Newsradio (R)	LAPD
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy (R)	Mad Abt. You	Encore	Just Shoot Me	Working (R)	Dateline (In Stereo) (R)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC 61	15	Simpsons (R)	Friends (R)	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	King of the Hill	King of the Hill	Guinness World Records		News		Friends (R)	Mad Abt. You
WWLP 61	22	News (R)	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	Mad Abt. You	Encore	Just Shoot Me	Working (R)	Dateline (In Stereo) (R)		News (R)	Tonight Show
WGBY 57	6	Crossfires	Buisness Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		Nova "Terror in Space" (R)		Frontline "The Child Terror" (R)		ALLU: A History (In Stereo) (R)		Charlie Rose (In Stereo) (R)
WGGB 40	20	News (R)	ABC News	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	Home Imp.	Hughleys (R)	Spin City (R)	Sports Night	NYPD Blue "Cop in a Bottle" (R)		News (R)	Nightline (R)
WSBK 38		Judge Judy (R)	Judge Judy (R)	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	Moesha (R)	Clueless (R)	Greatest Pets	Reunited (R)	Mad Abt. You	Mad Abt. You	Frasier (R)	Cheers (R)
WTBS 22		Family Matters	Family Matters	Roseanne (R)	Roseanne (R)	★★ "Neinfful Thorge" (1993, Horror) Max von Sydow, Ed Harris.
A&E 45		Northern Exposure (R)		Law & Order (R)	Homicide (R)	Biography: John Glenn		Inside Story (R)		"Inspector Morse-Sins"		Law & Order (R)
CNN 29	21	Worldview (R)	Moneyline	Newshour		Crossfire (R)		World Today (R)		Larry King Live (R)		Sports	Moneyline (R)
COM 53	36	1 Night Stand	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★★ "Throw Momma From the Train" (1987, Danny DeVito,				Perspectives (R)		Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC 27		New House	Fix-It-Line	Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery: Shark		New Detectives: Case Studies		Viva Variety (R) Pulp-III		FBI Files "Dead Paradise"	Justice Files "Fugitives" (R)
ESPN 43		Up Close	Sportscenter			NHL Hockey: Buffalo Sabres at New York Rangers. (Live) (R)						Boopers	Sportscenter (R)
LIFE 37		Ellen (R)	Ellen (R)	Party of Five "Not So Fast" (R)		Chicago Hope "A Time to Kill"		Any Day Now (In Stereo) (R)		Oh Baby (R)		Maggie (R)	New Attitudes Golden Girls
MTV 39		(5:30) Jams Countdown		Biorhythm (R)	Beavis-Butt.	Eye Spy Video	Say What?	Music Videos (In Stereo)					Cut (In Stereo) Loveline
NICK 42		Figure It Out	Secret of Alex	Doug (R)	Rugrats (R)	Thornberrys	Cousin	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Happy Days	Laverne		I Love Lucy (R) Bewitched
SCIFI 59		Quantum Leap (In Stereo) (R)		Sightings (R)	Star Trek: The Deadly Years (R)			★★★ "Hellraiser" (1987, Horror) Andrew Robinson, Clare Higgins,				Sightings (R)	Star Trek (R)
TLC 62	26	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours "In the Danger Zone"		Trauma: Life in the ER		Nature's Fury (R)		"Nuclear Holocaust" (R)		Trauma: Life in the ER (R)
TNT 54		Babylon 5 (In Stereo) (R)		ER "It's Not Easy Being Greene"		"CHiPs '99" (1998, Adventure) Erik Estrada, Larry Wilcox (R)				"CHiPs '99" (1998, Adventure) Erik Estrada (In Stereo) (R)
USA 60		Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Xena: Warrior Princess (R)		Walker, Texas Ranger (R)		★★½ "Tremors" (1990, Horror) Kevin Bacon (In Stereo) (R)				New York Undercover (R)
HBO 8		★ "Only the Strong" (1993, Drama) Mark Dacascos. PG-13 (R)				★★★½ "Eve's Bayou" (1997, Drama) Jurnee Smollett. (R)				China Rock (R)		Texas Chainsaw Massacre: Next Gen.
MAX 35		★★½ "Out to Sea" (1997, Comedy) Jack Lemmon. PG-13 (R)				★½ "Thinner" (1996, Horror) Robert John Burke. (R)		Making		★★ "Conspiracy Theory" (1997, Suspense) Mel Gibson. (R)		In Through the Out Door (R)	Of Love and Shadows" (1994)
SHOW 46		★★ "Overnight Delivery" (1996, Comedy) Paul Rudd. PG-13				★★★ "Matilda" (1996, Fantasy) Mara Wilson. (In Stereo) PG



Cathy By Cathy Guisewite



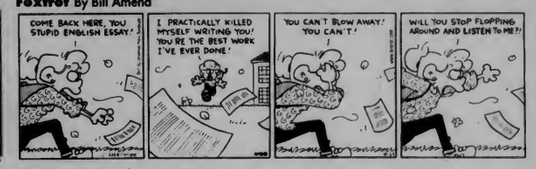
Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Rose Is Rose By Pat Brady

Non Sequitur By Wiley

Fiendish Fogiles By Brian D. Moses

Robotman By Jim Meddick



Dilbert By Scott Adams

Liberty Meadows By Frank Cho

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Non-Cents By John Zaccone Jr.

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — Change is never easy, but the time has come for you to take a chance on yourself. Opportunity is knocking on your door, and it won't wait!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — Find time today to do something special for yourself. You're in need of attention, and you are the best one to give it!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — Avoid making impulsive decisions today. Now more than ever, you need to take time to weigh big purchases or small changes.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — Slow down and take a breath today. You need to re-evaluate your current positions, and it's a good time to take stock.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — Be careful how you phrase things today. A misunderstanding lingers in the air, but can be avoided if you say what you mean.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — If you can't be honest with yourself, whom can you be honest with? You're avoiding something you need to face today.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — Confide in a close friend today. He or she will be there for you, no matter how serious a mistake you've made.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — Take a minute to tell someone exactly how you feel today. Everyone needs to hear that special something once in a while.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — Don't let someone's foul mood rub off on you today. Maintain your high spirits by remaining aloof.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — Now is a good time to write a letter you've been mulling over or to make that phone call you've been putting off. Make your move today!

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Be cautious today. You may feel you're not being yourself, but it might prevent a future misunderstanding.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — Don't take anything for granted today. Notice even the simplest of pleasures in your life- and you'll realize there are many of them!

Quote of the Day

"Dude looks like a Lady."

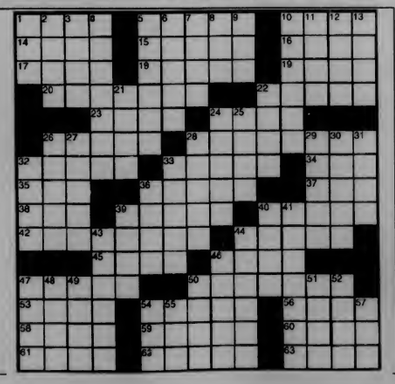
–Steven Tyler

Close to Home By John McPherson

"OK, you caught us. But admit it! You've been feeling a whole lot better since we hooked you up to the 'machine' two weeks ago

ACROSS

1 Outdoor area
5 Embarrass
10 Comic Rivers
14 Theater award
15 Stray calf
16 — Mayor: constellation
17 — over: ponder
18 Eccentric
19 Snoozes
20 Pouring
22 Type of corgi
23 Pool sight
24 On the briny
26 Winter vehicles
28 Eruption
32 Sour substances
33 Prods
34 Shade
35 Actor Morrow
36 Scrapbook
37 Period in history
38 Flirtatious
39 Up and about
40 Feasts
42 Brave
44 Flagmaker Ross
45 Arm bone
46 Copenhagen native
47 Knife handles
50 Calculated
53 Idaho neighbor
54 Singer Lena
56 Sask.'s neighbor
58 And
59 Perfect
60 — -de-camp
61 Actress Deborah —
62 Roules
63 Tilt



DOWN

1 — Kippur
2 Neighbor on
3 Vex
4 Used a computer key
5 Emulates Jay Leno
6 "April Love" crooner
7 Excited
8 Type of tax
9 Attention-getting shout
10 Capital of Alaska
11 Type of exam
12 Vipers
13 Poet Ogden —
21 Beauty-pack ingredients
22 Spiders' creations
24 Be an omen of
25 Wine-glass part
26 Go hastily
27 Tripoli's country
28 Planet's circle
29 Ostriches' kin
30 Ill-humored
31 Herb beverages
32 Curved lines
33 Extremely
36 Wise — owl
39 Leather-working tools
40 Restaurant list
41 Timeless
43 Horticulturist Burbank
44 Breakfast rolls
46 Singer Shore
47 Corn part
48 To — precisely
49 "M*A*S*H" actor
50 Worry
51 Singer Adams
52 Baby's first words?
54 Type of boot
55 Harem room
57 Actor Howard

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

APPLE CRAG GIFT
MURAL AIDA IDLE
EMOTE BLIP VEAL
NASHVILLE PEARL
EASIE ULYSSES
SHE MICS ORO
PAN ESAU TEUTON
ERIS RIP TRIO
WIDTHS TIPS OSU
RIO EGRU YEN
LASALLE TINS
AGENT DRUGSTORE
KING AGAR PAVED
ELSE VANS OREAD
SEER ARID TERRY

© 1998, United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
BBQ Pork on a Bun
Ginger Black Beans

DINNER
Chinese Beef & Peppers w/Snow Peas
Italian Tortellini Stir Fry
Sausage Grinder

Worcester

LUNCH
Grilled Chicken Sandwich
Spaghetti/Tomato/Meat Sauce
Spinach and Mushroom Quiche
American Grill Burger

DINNER
Chinese Beef & Peppers w/Snow Peas
Lemon Pepper Cod
Curried Chick Peas
Pastabilities

Hampshire

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
BBQ Style Pork Rib Sandwich

DINNER
Beef Strips w/Snow Peas and Mushrooms
Chicken Cacciatore

Berkshire

LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Chef's Grilled Chinese Sandwich
Hot Pastrami on Rye
Ziti/Tomato Sauce

DINNER
Chinese Beef & Peppers w/Snow Peas
Greek Style Lemon Chicken
Curried Chick Peas
Pastabilities

Night Editor: Casey Kane
Photo Technician: Danielle Gilardi
Copy Editor: Joseph D. Savitch
Production Supervisor: Angie Annese
Production Staff: Caren Figlarski, Karen Charles

SPORTS

Tuesday, October 27, 1998 — The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Men's soccer splits with A–10 foes

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

By splitting a weekend series with La Salle and Fordham, the Massachusetts men's soccer team has proclaimed it has not and will not give up the fight this season.

The Minutemen secured a hard fought 2–1 victory at La Salle on Friday afternoon before falling to Fordham 3–1 on Sunday in New York.

Massachusetts	2
La Salle	1

UMass was forced to compensate for injuries to I.R. Pouncey and Todd Baron, who both sat out this past weekend.

"This weekend was a good example of how we are able to play hard, work together and come up with a victory," Minuteman junior midfielder James Redmond said. "It also proved that we are still inconsistent as a team."

Fordham	3
Massachusetts	1

The Minutemen (2–12–2 overall, 2–5–1 A–10) notched the win over La Salle after trailing 1–0 at intermission. The Explorers captured the lead as Lou Danielle found the net unassisted at 23:10. The goal was Danielle's fourth of the season, as he became La Salle's point leader thus far.

The score remained iced at 1–0 for a considerable amount of the second half, until freshman Fred Kinateder broke through with his first collegiate tally for the Minutemen. The Wisconsin native slashed his way through the defense after he took a pass from Adam Black and beat Explorer keeper Don Tuohey for the game-tying score.

Kinateder had been playing very well over the last few weeks, so Massachusetts coach Sam Koch rewarded his play by inserting him into the starting lineup, a move which paid off on Friday.

Black, who assisted on the previous goal, gave UMass a much needed boost by drilling home the final goal of the day at 82:01.

From there UMass goalkeeper Todd Fowler kept La Salle at bay for his 11th career victory. Fowler made seven stops on the day to guide the Minutemen.

After basking in their second victory, UMass headed up to the Bronx to face a tough Fordham squad that held a 9–6–1 overall record this year. The Minutemen, as they have done several times this season, struck very early as Black scored his second goal of the weekend, and third of the season at 5:38.

The score came unassisted as Black knocked in the ball off a keeper deflection. Fordham keeper Jim Grandinetti gave Black a nice look after he batted the ball right at him, leaving a good portion of the net open.

UMass took the 1–0 lead into the half, but the Rams were ferocious in the second half, as they ran Fowler out of the game with two quick scores by John Wolyniec. Wolyniec continued his domination in the A–10 this year, as the goals were his 16th and 17th of the season.

Fowler had made five saves, but after the second goal he was lifted in favor of freshman Bryan O'Quinn, who played in his second contest of the season. O'Quinn made two saves, but gave up a clinching score to Wolyniec, who notched a hat trick at 85:37.

The Minutemen return home for the last two matches of the season, as they host Duquesne and St. Bonaventure.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Junior midfielder James Redmond and the Massachusetts men's soccer team were able to salvage another win over the weekend, a 2–1 thriller over La Salle.

NBA future hangs on week's meetings

NEW YORK (AP) — This is probably the week when it becomes clear if compromise or confrontation prevails in the NBA lockout. Commissioner David Stern, union director Billy Hunter and representatives from both sides were to meet today in New York to resume labor talks.

The sides met for 3 1/2 hours Saturday to conclude a contentious week that included arbitrator John Feerick's decision and the union's militant meeting in Las Vegas.

Now it may be time for both sides to move toward the middle. ESPN reported the owners made several new proposals to the players Sunday night, but NBA spokesman Chris Brienza called the report inaccurate.

Tomorrow, the league's Board of Governors is expected to meet with dozens, if not hundreds, of players. Plans for such an assembly are not yet complete, but both sides are talking as if they expect such a meeting to take place.

That could be Stern's best chance to make a bold move toward settlement of a dispute that has lasted nearly four months and forced the league to cancel games for the first time in its history.

The owners are seeking an absolute limit on player salaries, or a hard cap, to replace the soft cap that was exceeded last season by more than two-thirds of the teams. By the 2000-01 season the league wants to have the percentage of designated revenues devoted to salaries reduced from 57 percent to 52 percent.

Players, however, voted unanimously last week to never accept a hard salary cap such as the one the owners now have on the table. The next meeting between the sides will be just the seventh time the parties have met since the lockout was imposed by the owners July 1.

Barring a quick settlement, the rest of the November schedule — and perhaps some December games — will be canceled this week. By the time the week ends, fans should have a better idea of whether the sides have closed the gap. If they haven't, it increases the chances that the entire 1998-99 season will be scrapped — a possibility Stern hasn't ruled out.

At their Las Vegas meeting, the players heard baseball union chief Donald Fehr tell them to stick together no matter what tactics the owners employ, and football union director Gene Upshaw urged them to file for decertification.

Some proponents of decertification have said NBA owners may elect to declare an impasse, lift the lockout and impose new work rules, thereby forcing the players to go on strike. Owners could make such a move and not be liable for antitrust damages unless the union had decertified.

The owners' labor committee, which is to meet Tuesday, is composed of David Checketts (Knicks), Mickey Arison (Heat), Gordon Gund (Cavaliers), Les Alexander (Rockets), Jerry Colangelo (Suns), Peter Holt (Spurs), Larry Miller (Jazz), Jerry Buss (Lakers) and Abe Pollin (Wizards).

Women's tennis sweeps

By Jenn Gaylord
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's tennis team has a chance to receive a national ranking. The Minutewomen had one of their finest weekends of the year by sweeping their matches against Columbia, Army and Air Force.

"This has been one of the finest weekends in my tenure here," Massachusetts coach Judy Dixon said. "We have been competing well and have yet to play a bad match, even in our two losses."

"[UMass junior] Ola [Gerasimova] was the key," Dixon said. "If she won, then the momentum would carry through and help the rest of the team."

Gerasimova proved her mettle by winning all three of her singles matches and both of her doubles.

On Saturday, Oct. 24, at the U.S. Military Academy, the Minutewomen defeated Columbia by a score of 5–2. Gerasimova won at No. 1 singles (7–5, 6–0) and teamed with freshman Helena Horak to prevail at No. 1 doubles (9–7). Horak was also victorious at the No. 3 singles (6–2, 6–2).

Sophomore Robyn Lebovitz won at No. 5 singles (6–1, 6– 0) and teamed up with senior co–captain Jackie Braunstein to win at No. 3 doubles (8–6).

Freshman Alison Tross was victorious at No. 6 singles (6–2, 6–0) and teamed with freshman Annie Hamilton to win at No. 2 doubles (9–7).

On Sunday, the Minutewomen played an abbreviated match against Army winning by a score of 5–0. The match wasn't completed because UMass won the first five points and would have won the match regardless of the outcome of the rest of the singles and the doubles matches. Gerasimova led the way for the Minutewomen, winning at the No. 1 singles.

Hamilton was victorious at No. 2 singles, only losing one game to Army's Annie Weber. Braunstein continued her winning ways with a victory at No. 3 singles (6–2, 6–1). Horak and Lebovitz rounded out the scoring, winning at Nos. 4 and 5, respectively.

Also on Sunday, UMass defeated the Falcons of Air Force by a score of 7–2. Gerasimova won her third singles match of the weekend with a victory at No. 1 singles. Braunstein was victorious at No. 4 singles and teamed with Lebovitz to win at No. 3 doubles. Lebovitz was also a winner at No. 5 singles. Hamilton and Tross each won at Nos. 2 and 6 respectively.

The win against Air Force improved the Minutewomen's record to 8–2, and was their eighth consecutive victory. Next weekend, Gerasimova and Horak will go to the NCAA regionals.

Men's tennis to defend home record

By Matthew Frascella
Collegian Staff

At the start of its season, the Massachusetts men's tennis team listed its goals for this year. One of those goals was to earn a sectional ranking.

As UMass (4–2, 1–0 in the Atlantic 10) concludes the fall portion of its season this afternoon at 3 p.m. with a home contest against St. John's, the team finds itself within reach of that goal.

With a win, the Minutemen have a chance to knock off a squad that is currently ranked in its section. This would be an effective end to the first portion of the season.

"This is a very important match," Massachusetts coach Judy Dixon said. "In order to get a sectional ranking we have to beat a team with an existing ranking and this team does."

The match assumes more importance due to the fact that St. John's boasts an exceptional tennis player at its number one singles and doubles seed. The Minutemen have already caught a glimpse of him in an individual tournament earlier in the year.

"We have to try to win this match at every other place," Dixon said. "The match must be won at Nos. 2 and 3 doubles and at the lower part of our lineup in singles."

This puts the pressure on the shoulders of the lower seeds to win their matches.

Hoping to aid the Minutemen is senior Todd Cheney. Cheney will be inserted into the No. 3 singles position to help bolster the bottom part of the lineup, with Fabian Rabanal moving up to Cheney's usual No. 2 seed. Cheney has been playing extremely well of late, coming through with key victories for UMass.

"I think [Cheney] is looser partly because he is not playing at No. 1," Dixon said. "The burden of playing No. 1 has been lifted from his shoulders."

As the Minutemen close out the fall part of their season, they look to finish the way they began it, with two consecutive wins. This match may help the team forget about the struggles they encountered in the middle portion of the season this fall.

"We haven't had the fall that I wanted," Dixon said. "In order for us to take a step in the right direction we need to beat a team like this. This is the best team we have played all year."

Dixon wants her team to rise to the challenge of playing against a ranked team. The fact that UMass is undefeated this year at home may be an important factor in their fortunes this afternoon.

"I'm looking for their energy and intensity to be up," Dixon said. "But more importantly, I want them to play beyond what is expected."

Women's crew pulls out victories despite penalty

By Jimmy Chen
Collegian Correspondent

PHILADELPHIA, Penn. — Last Saturday, at the Head of the Schuylkill Regatta, the Massachusetts women's crew had yet another stellar performance.

In open fours, the Minutewomen displayed their strength as they posted a 16:32 and came in first of forty–four teams. UMass coach Jim Dietz was pleased.

"I was really happy with the race," Dietz said. "We put our four strongest women together and got the best result. This has to be our strongest lineup."

"It feels good," senior captain Neyle Leslie said. "It's a new lineup that was thrown together just three days before the competition. So it was a good race for us."

In quad action, the result was not as pretty. Even with senior captain Renee Domina on the crew, the Minutewomen could not escape the fate of a ninth–placed finish out of 10 teams.

Despite the results, the team felt that it was also a good race. They had tough competition with a couple of national teams in the race. Thus, they headed into the race just hoping to get the feel of other members on the crew.

In open eights, UMass finished fifth of 25 teams, but because of a controversial penalty by the officials, who said the Minutewomen did not yield to the passing boat, UMass dropped to eighth. Michigan would be the team that walked away with the crown. Dietz may file a complaint.

In club eights, the Minutewomen showed their team unity and came in fifth of 36 teams with a 15:47, 33 seconds behind champion William & Mary.

"Our team overall looks very impressive," said Dietz. "They rowed aggressively and they posted their best race for this fall."

In fact, all four lineups were thrown together in the last minutes before the competition and the outcome was a positive one. This might imply that they could have done better if the crews had held more practice with one another.

Dietz, who was obviously happy with the results, explained that these changes in the lineup had been done purposefully for this fall season. This women's squad is rather young and inexperienced in comparison to past teams.

By shifting the lineup, such as having the usual heavyweight rowers and lightweight rowers row together, Dietz thought he would get a better feel of the personnel. Ideally, by spring time, he will be able to choose his varsity lineup.

This coming Saturday, the Minutewomen will have their final meet of this season when they travel to Derby, Conn. to take part in the Demolition at Derby.

Kennedy makes return to hockey with Canadians

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Former Boston Bruin Sheldon Kennedy returned to the ice yesterday, practicing with the Canadian national team as he attempts to resume his interrupted NHL career.

"I felt pretty good out there," said Kennedy, who earlier this month inline skated across Canada to raise money for his proposed ranch to help sexually abused children. "For me, the eight years I played pro were never fun, I never enjoyed it.

"It was really weird [yesterday] because it was fun and I was enjoying it."

Kennedy, 29, went public early last year with his story of sexual abuse at the hands of his junior hockey coach, Graham James was convicted of abusing Kennedy and received a 3 1/2-year sentence. James was granted day parole last week.

Kennedy said yesterday he's enrolled in a substance abuse program to help him get back to the game he loves.

"I've joined the National Hockey League Players' Association health program," said Kennedy, who tearfully admitted last month to drinking seven or eight beers before being involved in a vehicle accident in Edmonton in late August.

"This is just another step. I'm looking forward to giving myself a good opportunity to get back [to the NHL]. There was never a problem with the tools, it was always the tool box and if we can straighten the tools in the tool box I'll be all right."

Kennedy said he was extremely nervous coming to the rink yesterday because he didn't know how the national team players would react to him practicing with them.

"It was good, but they were probably as nervous as I was," he said after the two-hour practice.

Kennedy last played in the NHL for the Boston Bruins in the 1996-97 season. He broke in with the Detroit Red Wings and then was traded to the Calgary Flames.

His career was derailed not only by the abuse trial but by breaking a leg in nine places when he flipped an all-terrain vehicle in the summer of 1997.

Earlier this month he completed his nearly 5,000-mile skate across Canada to raise money and awareness for Anaphe Ranch, a sexual abuse treatment center he hopes to build in central British Columbia.

"My whole career, ever since I ran into Graham James, people would say: 'Geez, Sheldon if you only took care of yourself you could be a great player,'" Kennedy said.

"People were always wondering why I didn't do anything to make myself better. If I take care of me, I know I can play."

Kennedy had 19 goals and 11 assists with Detroit in 1992-93, playing on the fourth line with tough guys Bob Probert and Joey Kocur.

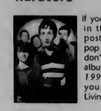
"I had quit drinking for four months that year. When I get spinny and get all worked up about [the James] issue I have to find other ways to deal with it, instead of running for a beer or a joint," he said.

Kennedy, who was also found with marijuana in the Edmonton crash, said he went through drug and alcohol rehabilitation programs on several occasions during his NHL career.

"But I wasn't ready, I had to deal with the big issue," he said.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Leading



Senior forward Sophie Lecot helped even the Massachusetts women's soccer team record to 9–9 this past weekend.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 36 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Wednesday, October 28, 1998

This is hardcore

If you are interested in the rise of the post–Beatles Brit–pop resurgence and don't own any Pulp albums, Countdown 1992–1983 is for you. (See Arts & Living, page 7.)

A final tuneup

Erica Johnston and the Massachusetts field hockey team will close out their regular season this afternoon when they travel to Dartmouth. (See Sports, page 12.)

WORLD

Russia expects record oil exports this year

MOSCOW (AP) — Desperate for cash to pay off huge foreign debts, Russia's government is driving oil exports to a record high, abandoning pledges to cut sales to reduce the oil surplus on world markets, an official said yesterday.

Russia will have to pay about $3 billion toward its foreign debt this year and some $18 billion next year.

To come up with the money, the government is driving up oil exports, Russia's top foreign-currency earner.

"This year will in fact be a record high," Energy Minister Sergei Generalov said, adding that the reason "is clear — lack of any other sources of cash."

Generalov gave no exact figures, but Russian news agencies said exports would be about 810 million barrels this year.

Last year, Russia experienced its first economic growth since the Soviet collapse, but hopes for more of the same were dashed when a new economic crisis erupted in August. Since then, the government's chronic cash-flow problems have grown even worse. Russia promised the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries earlier this year to cut oil exports, because surplus oil on world markets has kept prices low.

NATION

Consumer confidence falling to low levels

NEW YORK (AP) — Consumer confidence has fallen to its lowest level in nearly two years amid the economic turmoil spreading around the globe.

The Conference Board reported yesterday that its index of consumer confidence fell 9.1 points to 117.3 in October. The last time it was lower was in December 1996.

The decline was the fourth straight month of retreat and was much larger than Wall Street analysts expected. The index now is down 20.9 points from its 29-year high in June.

Consumer sentiment is an important economic indicator since consumer spending accounts for two-thirds of the nation's economic activity.

With the Christmas season just getting under way, the decline in confidence may mean trouble for the nation's retailers. Department stores make nearly half their profits in the last three months of the year.

"Growing anxiety about the financial markets, combined with political concerns and recent layoff announcements, have given consumers the jitters," said Lynn Franco, associate director at the Conference Board, a New York-based, business-financed private research group.

The report comes amid increasing evidence that the U.S. economy is slowing because of the financial crisis in Asia and Russia.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 60 LOW:42	HIGH: 56 LOW: 42	HIGH: 50 LOW: 34

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 7
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics .....page 11
Crossword .....page 11
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 10
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 12

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Walk calls for better lighting on campus

By Stacey Shackford
Collegian Staff

Sidewalks along East Pleasant Street and an appeal to the town of Amherst for more lighting were two of the suggestions Physical Plant staff member Pat Daly recorded on last night's "Walk for Light."

"I wouldn't recommend doing this walk," Daly said as a speeding car rushed by, barely missing him as he walked along East Pleasant Street on the way to the Mather Career Center.

He was later surprised to find out that many students do make the walk late at night on their way back from the yellow lot.

"Now I know why they cut across that dark path to Orchard Hill," he said.

Daly was one of many Physical Plant staff members who joined students and Public Safety officials in an effort to evaluate campus safety and lighting. Participants of the third "Walk for Light" were separated into four groups that covered different routes across campus. Each group was asked to fill out a survey sheet, noting areas that require improvement in the amount of lighting or call boxes, overgrown shrubbery, or obstructed pathways.

Besides the East Pleasant Street recommendations, participants said they were concerned about the path between Totman Gymnasium and the commuter parking lot, the "pitch black" darkness surrounding Alumni Stadium and the lighting situation south of the Boyden Gymnasium.

"Let me tell you something," said Jack Rigala from the Grounds Department, "take a walk down by the stadium and tell me you don't need any lights down there."

"It's a scary place," added Al Olsen, an electrician from the Physical Plant.

Some of the participants admitted they had never walked around campus at night. Others were surprised at the conditions of some of the areas they visited.

Many students, however, have known about these areas for some time now. Tom Lydon, a senior economics and Russian major, was quick to suggest the addition of sidewalks along East Pleasant Street.

"I found myself on the road one time and thought... I should have worn some light clothing or something," he said.

Lydon, unfortunately, did not participate in the walk. In fact, only two students attended the event. This, perhaps, was because many students were unaware the event was even taking place. Mali Lipchik, a junior history and bachelor's degree of individual concentration major, was studying in the Campus Center at the time of the walk.

"I wish there had been more publicity," she said. "I would be very interested in taking the walk in the future. I don't feel all that safe walking across campus at night. Fortunately, nothing has ever happened to me."

Jodi Bailey, associate speaker of the student government association (SGA) and one of the organizers of the event, attributed the lack of advertising to time constraints within the newly assembled SGA. She said they will select a date for an upcoming spring safety walk soon, in order to enable proper preparation and advertising.

"I really wish more students had come," she said after the walk. "It's so hard to get people to understand that it is a very important thing. A lot of the stuff suggested in the past has gotten done."

Many of the participants of last night's walk had attended the original "Walk For Light" in the spring of 1997. They pointed out some of the improvements made as a result of the original walk.

"They've done a lot of pruning," Daly said. "You can really see the difference."

His group also visited the newly constructed paths in the Sylvan Residential Area. In the past, questions had been raised about whether the University should encourage students to use common paths by paving and lighting them. However, the rape that occurred in the woods behind Sylvan at the beginning of the semester was a catalyst for immediate change.

"It's hard to block off student paths," Daly said. "Students just go around them. People always take the shortest route. We hope that these [newly constructed paths] will encourage students to start using lighted paths instead of unlighted ones."

STACY COHEN / COLLEGIAN

UMass Police Chief John Luippold led a safety walk last night.

Public safety newsletter reports on campus crime and safety statistics

By Lorraine Kennedy
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts Department of Public Safety recently released the fall 1998 issue of the Campus Safety News to inform the community of policies, programs and services at the University.

Universities are required by the Federal Crime Awareness and Campus Security Act of 1990 and the Higher Education Amendments of 1992 to release annual reports on campus safety.

The newsletter includes reported crime statistics from the years 1995 through 1997, which have generally remained consistent. While reported incidences of aggravated assault, burglary, weapons arrests and hate crimes have all declined, the number of reported larcenies and alcohol–related arrests have risen.

UMass Chief of Police John Luippold expressed concern over the amount of larcenies, which have escalated in the past three years from 497 in 1995 to 571 in 1996 to 648 in 1997.

"The number of larcenies and vandalisms on campus are very high," said Luippold, who emphasized a good rule for members of campus to protect their belongings. "Always lock up."

Alcohol–related arrests have wavered since 1995, drop-

Turn to CRIME, page 3

Campaign finances equalized on ballot

By Stacey Shackford
Collegian Staff

Question 2 on the Nov. 3 ballot is aimed at equalizing campaign financing and as a result, put all candidates on a level playing field.

Jack and Bill are hypothetical candidates that will illustrate what question 2 entails.

Jack and Bill are opponents in the race for governor of Massachusetts. Jack, the incumbent candidate, has been using his personal savings to raise an unprecedented $5 million. Bill, on the other hand, has only raised $2 million. He backs the personal funds and connections to match Jack's campaign finances.

Campaign finance law is supposed to help equalize the playing field for candidates like Bill. It provides limited public funds, in Bill's case $1.5 million for candidates who agree to abide by certain limitations. He is only allowed to receive individual contributions less than $500, and must adhere to campaign spending limits, which in his case is $3 million.

Jack decided not to accept public funding, therefore he does not have to adhere to the campaign spending limits. He does, however, have to declare his own self-imposed spending limit. Jack declares that he will limit himself to $10 million. The state then allows Bill to spend up to $10 million. Although Bill now has practically no spending limit for his campaign, he also has no way of financing his campaign to reach $10 million.

Although the race between Jack and Bill is a hypothetical situation, it closely resembles the current state of campaign financing.

Statistics released by the Center for Responsive Politics show that in 1996, the top-spending candidates won 92 percent of House races and 88 percent of Senate contests. It also shows that incumbents have an enormous fundraising advantage, especially in contributions from Political Action Committees (PACs), which gave 10 times more to incumbents than to challengers in the last election cycle. Incumbents who decide to run for re-election tend to win.

In fact, the typical success rate for incumbents in the House and Senate has hovered around 90 percent for the last five decades.

The Mass Voters for Clean Elections sympathize with the situation of Bill and countless other under-funded candidates like him. They recently drafted the question that enables candidates like Bill to receive an additional $1.5 million.

According to Jason Cohen, media director for Mass Voters for Clean Elections and one of the drafters of question 2, the proposed law allows

Turn to CAMPAIGN, page 2

STACY COHEN / COLLEGIAN

"All work and no play..."

Russ and Scott Determan study like dedicated students by the campus pond, even though they are no longer students.

Lack of students at debate raises questions of UMass organizations' intentions

By Julie Fiatkow
Collegian Staff

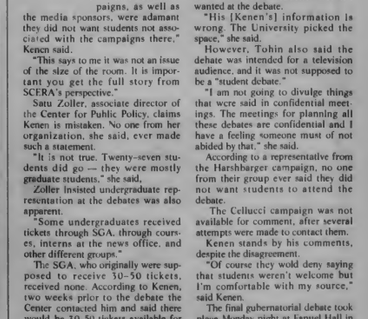
The reason tickets were not available to students for October 15's gubernatorial debate at the Mullins Center might not be solely due to the small size of the room.

According to Marc Kenen of Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA), the Springfield Media Consortium (co–sponsor of the event) and representatives of both campaign parties, said they did not want students at the debate.

Kenen said at last week's Student Government Association Senate meeting, that an anonymous source from the Center for Public Policy, campus co–sponsor of the event, told him in confidence why the original 30–50 tickets available to students, was revoked.

"There is one piece of information that was not publicly as clear. Someone from the Center for Public Policy told me privately that both campaigns, as well as the media sponsors, were adamant they did not want students not associated with the campaigns there," Kenen said.

"This says to me it was not an issue of the size of the room. It is important you get the full story from SCERA's perspective."



Satu Zoller, associate director of the Center for Public Policy, claims Kenen is mistaken. No one from her organization, she said, ever made such a statement.

"It is not true. Twenty–seven students did go — they were mostly graduate students," she said.

Zoller insisted undergraduate representation at the debates was also apparent.

"Some undergraduates received tickets through SGA, through courses, interns at the news office, and other different groups."

The SGA, who originally were supposed to receive 30–50 tickets, received none. According to Kenen, two weeks prior to the debate the Center contacted him and said there would be 30–50 tickets available for SCERA to distribute. SGA was to get first "dibs" on them, and then the rest would be made available to Registered Student Organizations.

On Monday morning, three days before the debate, Kenen got an e–mail from the Center which said there would be no tickets available. The message explained the shortage existed because the candidates took more tickets for themselves, than expected.

Zoller said the problem arose when they were forced to hold the event in the VIP room of the Mullins Center, which only holds 200 people. The campus center auditorium could not accommodate the security needed, said Zoller, and Bowker auditorium had been reserved months in advance.

Kathy Tobin, news director of News 40 and member of The Springfield Media Consortium, also said the reason more tickets weren't available was due to lack of space, and not because students weren't wanted at the debate.

"His [Kenen's] information is wrong. The University picked the space," she said.

However, Tobin also said the debate was intended for a television audience, and it was not supposed to be a "student debate."

"I am not going to divulge things that were said in confidential meetings. The meetings for planning all these debates are confidential and I have a feeling someone must of not abided by that," she said.

According to a representative from the Harshbarger campaign, no one from their group ever said they did not want students to attend the debate.

The Cellucci campaign was not available for comment, after several attempts were made to contact them.

Kenen stands by his comments, despite the disagreement.

"Of course they wold deny saying that students weren't welcome but I'm comfortable with my source," said Kenen.

The final gubernatorial debate took place Monday night at Faneuil Hall in Boston. On November 3 constituents in the Commonwealth will be able to cast their votes in the 1998 governor election.

■ campaign

continued from page 1

publicly financed candidates "to be able to keep pace" with privately financed candidates.

Is it enough?

In the case of the District One House of Representatives race between Democratic incumbent John Olver and Republican challenger Gregory Morgan, it would appear not. According to a report released by the Federal Election Commission on Oct. 22, Olver has raised $603,318. 56 percent of which was contributed by individuals, 42 percent by PACs.

Compared to $29,096 raised by Morgan, 84 percent of which come from individuals, and only 3.4 percent from PACs. In addition, Morgan has used $2,612 of his own money, whereas Olver has used none.

How much public money would it take to equalize the playing field?

For opponents of the bill, this is a very pertinent question. Currently, publicly financed political campaigns are funded by a one dollar tax check-off on state income tax returns.

A total of $1,753,463.00 was available this year. In addition to these funds, the proposed law requires additional funds through legislative appropriation. "These extra funds will amount to an estimated $14 million a year," Cohen said. "To put it in perspective, the state of Massachusetts spends that much in office supplies." But a report submitted by the majority of the Joint Committee on Ways and Means estimates the increase at $45 million.

It states: "This initiative will cause an enormous increase in taxpayer dollars being spent on private political campaigns... [We] believe that there are more effective methods and that there are more important uses of limited public money."

Paul Ferro, Chairman of the Massachusetts Alliance of College Republicans, agrees.

"To say that tax money which could go to support schools would go to support candidates you don't support is ludicrous and shameful," he said. "All of Cellucci's supporters would be unwillingly giving Harshbarger money. It's inherently unfair."

According to information published by Destination Democracy, in 1996 over $2 billion was spent on all campaigns in the United States.

To supporters of campaign finance reform, this figure is not exorbitant considering that Americans spend more each year on potato chips, deodorant, and Halloween decorations.

"It's sometimes frightening how money can sway people," Cohen said. "In Massachusetts, two thirds of the races are uncontested, yet the unopposed candidates raise just as much money as the candidates who were challenged. This clearly says something about why people are giving money to candidates — not for support, but for access."

Incumbent Democrat Richard Neal, Representative from District 2, is running unopposed, yet he has already raised $411,106.

Of this, 58 percent was contributed by PACs and 34 percent by individuals. The top contributors include Massachusetts Mutual Life Insurance, Liberty Mutual Insurance, Citigroup Inc, and John Hancock Mutual Life.

In an article printed in the Boston Globe on Oct. 21, director of the Massachusetts Money and Politics Program George Pillsbury was quoted.

"The small group of wealthy, well-connected donors who fund campaigns have a disproportionate influence on elections. Their money inevitably translates into access and influence," he said.

To counteract this, question 2 bans all money contributed from PACs, or so called "soft money." It also strives to "increase the accountability of elected officials to constituents who elect them" by keeping the individual contribution limits to $100, compelling candidates to collect money from a broader base of supporters.

"There's no evidence that shows that more people will give to campaigns when cap is low," Ferro said. "I think question 2 is well-intentioned, but it is ultimately a bad idea. It is undemocratic, unfair to tax payers and unfair to the political process."

Voters will be able to decide the passage of this legislation through referendum question 2 on the Nov. 3 ballot. For more information, check out the following websites: www.state.ma.us.ocpf, www.destinationdemocracy.org, www.crp.org, www.igc.org/massvoters.

Women's first heart attacks worse than men's

By Brenda C. Coleman
Associated Press

CHICAGO — Women suffer more severe first heart attacks than men, according to a study that suggests that the severity of the attacks — not older age or worse medical care — may explain why women die more often when stricken.

Though it has been known that women fare worse after heart attacks, many past studies have suggested the reason is that they tend to be older and sicker when they are stricken, with complicating illnesses such as diabetes.

Also, women usually have subtler symptoms, such as nausea instead of chest pain. Some critics have suggested that gender bias in medicine leads to women's heart complaints not being taken seriously, though studies have not backed that up.

The new study, published in today's Journal of the American Medical Association, found that the attacks themselves appear to be more severe, as evidenced by lethal elements such as severe rhythm problems or cardiac shock, when the heart fails to pump enough to keep up with the body's demands.

Such elements could account for the 70 percent higher death rate that women studied suffered in the first month after heart attacks, said researchers led by Dr. Jaume Marrugat of the Municipal Institute of Investigative Medicine in Spain.

The study involved 331 women and 1,129 men treated for heart attacks at four Spanish hospitals. U.S. experts said that despite some demographic differences, the results should generally be applicable to Americans.

However, they said the study does not prove women have worse heart attacks than men and more research will be needed.

Women arrived at the hospital an hour later after their heart attacks than men, on average, one expert noted. The difference may have caused women's higher rate of heart-rhythm disturbances and other dangerous traits, said Dr. Harlan M. Krumholz of Yale University School of Medicine.

"I think we're still waiting to really understand this," he said Monday.

Krumholz and colleagues led by Dr. Viola Vaccarino reported earlier this month that their study of Connecticut heart-attack patients found the higher female death rate occurred in women under 75. The Spanish study did not divide the women by age.

Krumholz theorized that younger women may be getting diagnosed and treated more slowly than men. Or they may have a more aggressive form of heart disease.

Dr. Elizabeth Ross, a cardiologist in Washington and a spokeswoman for the American Heart Association, said the study supports previous data indicating that women get as good treatment as men once their heart attacks are recognized. Diagnosis can be harder in women, she said.

"Women may have heart disease or even be having a heart attack and not have chest pain at all," said Ross, author of the book "Healing the Female Heart."

Women having heart attacks typically experience breathlessness, severe fatigue, nausea or pain elsewhere, such as the shoulder, jaw, arm or back, she said.

Almost 10,000 women younger than 45 die annually of heart disease in the United States, the vast majority from heart attacks, according to the American Heart Association.

KELLY FITZPATRICK / COLLEGIAN

An artist at work

Keith Frazier, a BFA major, works at the pottery wheel for an art class.

Microsoft accused of trying to divide Internet market

By Ted Bridis
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Government lawyers cited Microsoft's own documents yesterday to try to prove the company illegally offered to divide the market for Internet software with a rival.

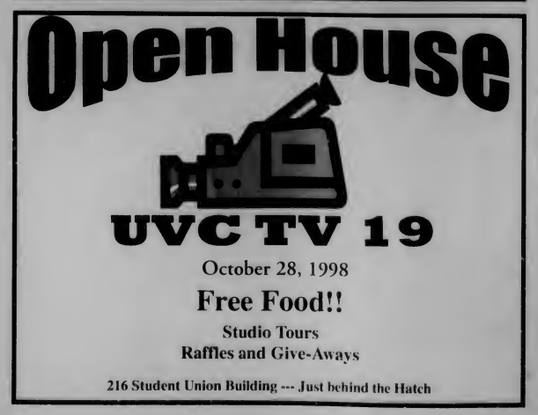
But the government had to postpone its plans to show in court portions of Bill Gates' videotaped testimony after Microsoft questioned how many hours the government can show without having to count Gates as a witness. The judge has allowed each side just 12 witnesses to limit how long the antitrust trial lasts.

In his effort to show Microsoft tried to divvy up a key market, government attorney David Boies presented a Microsoft executive's e-mail to Gates, which summarized a controversial June 21, 1995, meeting between Microsoft and Netscape Communications Corp. The most important priority at the meeting, according to the e-mail sent the next day by Microsoft's Dan Rosen, was to "establish Microsoft ownership of the Internet client (browser) platform for Win95."

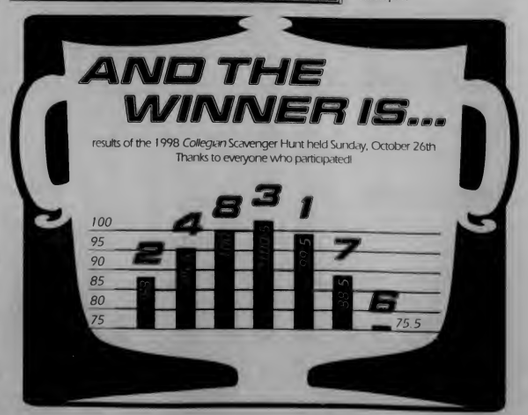
Rosen represented Microsoft at the meeting. Netscape's chief executive officer, James Barksdale, testified earlier in the trial that Microsoft proposed that "a line be drawn" to separate its Internet browser for Windows 95 from software that Netscape could sell for other types of computers. Browsers let people view information on the Internet.

"What Microsoft intended to do if we rejected the proposal was to, in essence, crush us in the marketplace," Netscape co-founder Marc Andreessen said in deposition testimony made public yesterday. "By virtue of its market weight and force and power and greater size, through a sustained assault, Microsoft felt, I believe, that they would be able to in fact render us irrelevant," Andreessen said.

Microsoft's lawyer, John Warden, has argued that Netscape either "imagined" or "concocted" the alleged offer, suggesting that Netscape believed it could help the government prosecute Microsoft. Gates, Microsoft's co-founder and top executive, is not scheduled to testify in person at the antitrust trial involving his company, but gave hours of testimony to the government in a deposition last summer. Microsoft has accused the government of trying to demonize its leader by planning to show the videotaped excerpts.



The government also sought yesterday to show that Microsoft refused to share important technical information about its Windows operating system, which Netscape needed to refine its browser. "Everybody is totally dependent on Microsoft for these things," Barksdale testified. "They were playing games with us... It wasn't right."



In the case, one of the most significant business trials this century, one important allegation is whether Microsoft illegally wields its industry influence to stifle competition.

Barksdale testified that Apple Computer Inc. agreed in August 1997 to distribute a version of Microsoft's Internet software for its Macintosh computers, rather than Netscape's.

■ crime

continued from page 1

Calendar Year	1995	1996	1997
Murder	0	0	0
Sex Offenses -Forcible*
Rape	14	12	11
Indecent Assault & Battery	11	8	8
Sex Offenses - Non-Forcible	0	0	0
Robbery	4	4	1
Aggravated Assault	5	8	4
Burglary	295	215	157
Larceny	497	571	648
Motor Vehicle Theft	32	15	16
Hate Crimes	2	4	1
ARRESTS	77	43	104
Alcohol	37	14	74
Drugs	34	28	30
Weapons	6	1	0

* Includes reports through campus agencies other than Public Safety, e.g., Everywoman's Center, Dean of Students Office, Mental Health Services, University Health Services, Housing Services, and Counseling and Assessment Services.

ping from 37 to 14 in 1996, then rising dramatically to 74 arrests last year.

"Incidents in which alcohol has been involved directly or indirectly are still high," Luippold said.

There have been three reported rapes at this point in the semester: by comparison, 11 rapes were reported in the 1997 school year.

"The numbers don't reflect the depth of the problem," Luippold said.

The rape statistics released by Public Safety also include reports from the Everywoman's Center, the Dean of Students Office, Mental Health Services, University Health Services, Housing Services and Counseling and Assessment Services.

Luippold also said the "number of incidents with dating/relationship violence" has been a major problem, referring to the preponderance of domestic violence reports on campus.

In order to evaluate the maintenance and effectiveness of campus lighting, help phones and general campus safety, the Student Government Association and the Vice Chancellor's Summit on Safety sponsored the "Walk for Light," which took place last night.

Three new help phones were installed since last semester's walk, bringing the total to 79 phones on campus, Luippold said in the newsletter.

While he said there are "not as many [help phones] as I would like... as buildings go up, more will be built."

Two more help phones are slated to be installed, Luippold said, one in the E Lot and another in the area of Durfee Range.

STACY COHEN / COLLEGIAN

Just for the art of it

Paul Cieplinski, a senior marketing major, sketches by the campus pond for an oil painting class.

STACY COHEN / COLLEGIAN

It's time to stop and smell the roses

Tancy Kelly, a junior English major, shows Tim Sawyer a junior history major the beautiful flowers of the fall season.

Calif. mass murder trial begins after 13 year wait

By Larry Gerber
Associated Press

SANTA ANA, Calif. — One of California's longest and costliest homicide cases is finally under way, more than 13 years after Charles Ng's arrest for shoplifting led to his prosecution for mass murder.

Ng, 37, is charged with 12 murders dating to 1984. Prosecutors allege he and Leonard Lake tortured and raped some of the victims, who were lured to Lake's cabin in the Sierra Nevada foothills in northern California.

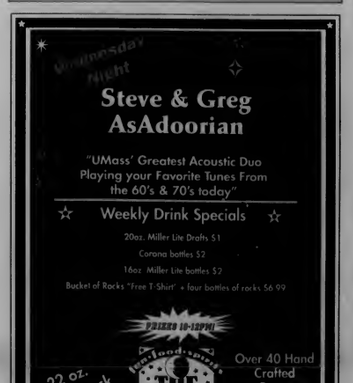
As the trial began Monday, prosecutors showed jurors a videotape of Ng cutting away the shirt and bra of a bound woman identified as Brenda O'Connor. O'Connor, 19, a neighbor of Ng's; her boyfriend, Lonnie Bond, 27; and their baby, Lonnie Bond Jr., 1, disappeared in May 1985 and are among the 12 people Ng is accused of killing.

Lake is heard off-camera giving her a choice: cooperate by cleaning, cooking and having sex with the two, or be raped and shot immediately.

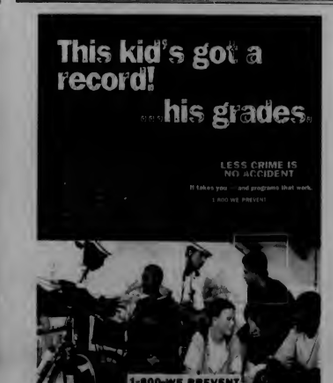
"You'd better believe us, Brenda, or you'll be dead," Lake says. "I believe you," the woman replies.

The trial was in recess today because a juror came down with the flu.

Lake committed suicide in 1985 by taking cyanide while in police custody in San Francisco. Ng was arrested in Canada, where he fought extradition for six years. He has fought with his court-appointed attorneys and at times acted as his own lawyer. The drawn-out case has cost the state a reported $9.6 million so far. Defense attorney William Kelley contends that Lake was the killer.



He played a videotape made by Lake in 1983 that shows his plans to build a cell for a sex slave. He also argued that authorities found only one of Ng's fingerprints — and that was on a table in the cabin, not the cell.



"It's a case built on circumstantial evidence," the defender said, with no witnesses linking Ng directly to the killings. Prosecutor Sharlene Honnaka said San Francisco police helped break the case in 1985 when Ng was arrested for shoplifting and Lake offered to pay for the merchandise. On June 4 that year, authorities searched the cabin grounds and found pounds of human remains, mostly teeth and bones.

"They discovered that that property had been used as a killing field and a mass graveyard," Honnaka said. A hidden door in a cinderblock "workshop" led to a cell about 3 1/2 feet wide and 6 1/2 feet long, she said.

One wall held a one-way mirror, Honnaka said; inside was a bucket of water and a roll of toilet paper.

Dwight Stapley of Garden Grove, whose son Scott's body was found near the cabin, said he and his wife Lola have traveled to about 80 hearings, including several in Canada.

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

The next Christmas

It's beginning to look a lot like Halloween, everywhere you go! That's right, no matter where you look, you'll see orange and black draped around pumpkins and the ceremonial Halloween Tree with Satan Claus and his eight tiny rabid wolves flying overhead.

Halloween is a special time of year for all of us, no matter what we decide to dress up as, be it a witch, a goblin, a drunk. (Easy costume, really. Just down some screwdrivers and jello shots, and then start moving. No assembly required!)

One pet peeve I've always had is that even though Halloween has wholesome traditions like defacing the property of others and downright destroying certain celebrated fruits, it has never had the social power of Christmas, an overrated holiday if I've ever known one (at least until I have to write a column about it).

We, as a group of students, unified as one, must make an effort to elevate "All Hallow's Eve" to the level of Christmas.

I will now do my part, by writing a Halloween song, a song better than a Christmas song. I'm going to write "The 13 Days of Halloween." Not only is 13 an unlucky number, but it's also one more than 12. Hah!

Seth Koenig

Sing to the tune of "12 Days of Christmas." Go nuts.

On the first day of Halloween, my true love gave to me: A vulture in a pine tree.

On the second day of Halloween, my true love gave to me: Two severed heads and a vulture in a pine tree.

On the third day of Halloween, my true love gave to me: Three cold Buds, two severed heads, and a vulture in a pine tree.

On the fourth day of Halloween, my true love gave to me: Four Jim Beams, three cold Buds, two severed heads, and a vulture in a — wait a minute... how did my true love get severed heads? How come she never talks about her ex– boyfriends?

On the fifth day of Halloween, my true love gave to me: Five headless horsemen! It must be awful to not get any — oh, wait. They don't have heads. I get it now. In that case we'll throw vodka melons in for "five."

On the sixth day of Halloween, my true love gave to me: Six pumpkins smashing, five vodka melons, four Jim Beams, three cold Buds, and a bunch of other stuff, like birds in trees or something.

On the seventh day of Halloween, my true love gave to me: Seven slurred words, six pumpkins smashing, five vodka melons, four Jim Beams, three cold Buds, two severed heads, and a vulture in a pine tree.

On the eighth day of Halloween, my true love gave to me: Eight great lays, seven slurred words, six pumpkins smashing, five vodka melons, four Jim Beams, three... ah, whatever. I got some!!!

On the ninth day of Halloween, my true love gave to me: Nine misdemeanors, eight great lays, seven slurred words, six pumpkins smashing, five vod... does breaking and entering and sex with eight minors constitute misdemeanors? Oh, wait, there were nine of them in that place...

On the tenth day of Halloween, my true love gave to me: 10 grand felonies, nine great lays, eight blank fillers (now that I've technically not committed any misdemeanors), seven slurred words, six pumpkins smashing, five vodka melons, four Jim Beams, three cold Buds, two severed heads, and a vulture in a pine tree.

On the 11th day of Halloween, my true love gave to me: 11 friends unconscious (or maybe that's what I did), 10 grand felonies, nine great lays, eight blank fillers, seven slurred words, six other things, and I'm getting tired of writing these other ones. Recall them for yourself this time.

On the 12th day of Halloween, my true love gave to me: 12 dilated pupils, 11 friends unconscious... Hey, we've officially tied Christmas! Drink to that!

On the 13th day of Halloween, my true love gave to me: 13 hours to remember my name, 12 dilated pupils, 11 friends unconscious, 10 grand felonies, nine great lays, eight blank fillers, seven slurred words, six pumpkins smashing, five vodka melons, four Jim Beams, three cold Buds, two severed heads, and a vulture in a pine tree!

Seth Koenig is a Collegian columnist.

The right stuff

Grandfathers, like all Old People, have an unfortunate stereotype: they're lazy, grumpy and obnoxious, and they love to heckle their wives with comments like, "We only got married because the flea market was closed."

Oh, and some of them fly into space, too.

John Glenn, at age 77, is one of our most famous grandfathers, and a consummate American — a senator, an astronaut, a vicious self promoter. Before Glenn talked NASA honcho Daniel Goldin into letting him "study the effects of aging in space," there were no plans to send anyone over 50 into the heavens on October 29, 1998. And yet, two days before Halloween, Glenn will don his own costume and reach the final frontier once again. NASA claims the mission is entirely scientific. We all know better.

Bryan McAllister

After all, what science experiment benefits from one participant? Now, granted, I don't know much about science. I'm still convinced that the sun really can't be that hot. But I know enough to point out that tests are usually conducted in groups.

Glenn is eating up the newspapers, creating a debate like we've seldom seen before. While the media criticize as they usually do, saying the mission is a hoax and a public relations trip, Glenn and NASA stand by their position. But even if it is mostly a bid to get the public to love NASA again, what's so wrong with that? At the same time, aren't we forgetting what a victory this is for Old People?

First, NASA has never been entirely about science. In its '60s glory days, it was about spectacle, about human discovery, about trumpeting ourselves. No one did that better than Glenn, who was the first to orbit the Earth, or Neil Armstrong, who gave us an unforgetable catch phrase. Science always took a backseat. For all we know, when Armstrong landed on the moon, he could have said, "Well, there are a lot of craters. But it's not made out of cheese. We were wrong about that."

The age of spectacle ended more than a decade ago, with the Challenger disaster. After a young, gifted teacher named Christa McAuliffe was killed in space along with her colleagues, NASA wasn't playing any more games. Until now.

The world is burning for a quick feat of heroism from the people who defined it. The Mars pathfinder mission, the Hubble telescope — these were all entirely too scientific. And when your president is stuck in the back room of a federal building with an intern and a pizza, you'd like to find someone, somehow, who can be a real hero. Who better than John Glenn, the man who has The Right Stuff? The guy even has his own action figure.

So when little kids pit G.I. Joe against the astronaut, he'll obviously lose (G.I. Joe has lasers. Glenn has an oxygen tank — c'mon), but at least NASA's cool again.

What's even more amazing is that their coolness has been resurrected by an Old Person.

Because when you think about it, Old People can't do much. They're bound not only by their physical and mental deteriorations, but by stereotypes we create for them. My first reaction to Glenn's flight was: Old people can hardly drive a car, and now they're sending one up into space?

Teen–agers are biased like this, though. For starters, we're in the prime of our lives, and they're shrinking. Second, Old People are the cause of all our problems — they give us bad grades, raise our insurance after car accidents and bother us when we're working at a supermarket check–out line.

Respect for our elders is a thing of past. In ancient times, it was considered the worst of offenses if one did not listen and look up to one's ancestors. Now, they merely populate the state of Florida.

It's a pleasure, then, to see a man almost 80–years–old defying his age in every way possible. The sports world has witnessed such feats — George Foreman and Joe Montana come to mind — but seldom do we get this from really, really Old People.

You can just imagine the elderly community sitting around, debating the aspects of Glenn's mission. They're proud because they've adjusted their pillow, taken out the trash, or went to the bathroom without falling asleep, and now one of their members has gone off and decided to launch off in a rocket. It's the type of thing that can really motivate you, and make you realize that adjusting your pillow, for all its difficulties, really doesn't compare much to space travel.

Think of the mission, then, as a change in everything that was wrong with public perception. Thanks to ballooning budgets, America's trust for NASA is minimal. Thanks to that "I've fallen, but I can't get up" commercial, our faith in old people is even worse.

With the creation of their International Space Station on the horizon, NASA is back, their legs rebuilt with new, old strength. Screw science.

Bryan McAllister is a Collegian staff member.

Don't park on me

During last Wednesday's undergraduate senate meeting, a motion was passed which compels Parking Services to begin construction of a new purple lot in Orchard Hill, within the next month. This new lot will add 50 parking spaces at a cost of $30,000. I would respectfully urge Chancellor Scott not to approve of this construction, which is an inappropriate use of limited resources, would destroy a recreational as well as scenic area, and would not solve the underlying problems which its supporters have used as rationale for its construction.

As pointed out during the senate debate, a price of $30,000 means that the cost to the University is $600 for every parking space it constructs in Orchard Hill. It would take 20 years for Parking Services to make this money back, at 30 dollars per purple sticker. It may be possible, as well as more cost effective, to reconfigure the existing purple lot by paving over islands or paving areas around the windmill to create additional parking.

The area proposed for paving is used as a recreational area for Orchard Hill. It is the only area that is level enough for a football game in Orchard Hill, or upper Central for that matter. In years past, people have played football or Frisbee on the hill behind Grayson/Field, but last year, the University planted trees on this hill, making the hill unsuitable for sports. The only area suited for playing football, Frisbee, or softball is the proposed parking area.

In addition, this area is also used for mountain biking, cross country running, and in the winter, cross country skiers have been known to pass through.

It was said in the senate meeting that the safety benefits of having a new parking lot in Orchard Hill outweigh recreational concerns. Indeed, safety is always more important than recreation, but the new purple lot would not solve the safety problems that its supporters claim that it will.

The Central Area Government and senators from Central who want this parking lot in Orchard Hill voiced concerns that there are not enough parking spaces in the purple lot for those who have purple stickers, and that these people are forced to walk from the Mather yellow lot at late hours of the night, creating a safety concern. However, constructing a new purple lot in Orchard Hill will not change the fact that the walk back from the yellow lot is not safe. If this proposed lot was constructed, there would still be hundreds of yellow sticker holders that would have to make the dark, dangerous walk back from yellow lot at night. The fact that the University spent $30,000 on a new purple lot instead of making their trip back from yellow lot safer would be cold comfort to them.

"Two years later, Parking Services has again over–issued purple stickers, and we are left with the same problem."

Jeff Welch

This money would be better spent on providing better lighting on the way between yellow lot and Orchard Hill. It would also be better spent on bringing back the Escort–on–Demand Service that existed in previous years, or at least running the vans on the same residential circuit the campus shuttle runs during the day. Running a van on this route at frequent intervals would provide a safe, secure means of transportation to and from the yellow lot for everyone.

Concerns about the overcrowding of the existing purple lots in Orchard Hill and Central have also been cited by proponents of the proposed new lot. The purple lot is overcrowded, but plowing over the proposed grassy area will not solve this problem: Parking Services will either issue 50 new purple stickers, or 50 more students with yellow stickers will park in the lots overnight, as these are only daytime enforcement lots. We will still have the same overcrowded lots, students will still be making the dangerous trek to and from yellow lot, and we will have destroyed open space and wasted $30,000.

Two years ago, Parking Services opened up the "Shack Lot" next to the Chancellor's house, in response to the same overcrowding concerns. Two years later, Parking Services has again over–issued purple stickers, and we are left with the same problem. As long as the current system of issuing parking stickers and the current system of parking enforcement exists, we will still have the same overcrowding problem. It would not matter if parking services built 50 or 500 new spaces, the result would be the same, overcrowding. If you build it, they will come.

Numerous student leaders in Orchard Hill have come out against the proposed lot. Against this lot are Senators Asif Sayani, Phillip Blue, and Ien Casavant representing Orchard Hill; Mo Reza, the governor of Orchard Hill; and Matt Reid and Amy Whitcher, the president and vice–president of the Grayson–Field House Council. In addition, the Woodsy Club RSO has collected several hundred signatures on a petition that opposes the proposed parking lot.

We would again ask Chancellor Scott and Parking Services to seriously consider alternatives to this wasteful, ineffective solution to a complex problem which requires a much more comprehensive solution than simply adding 50 spaces.

Jeff Welch is a UMass student.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545–3500 • Fax (413) 545–1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor–in–Chief Position Vacant Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
Steve Salerno Jr. Advertising Manager David Parmenter Advertising Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Laura Forster Developing Nations Editor
Mike Messaros Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Co–Jewish Affairs Editor
Morgan Tobor Co–Jewish Affairs Editor
Heather Lei Guzzetta Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jill Carroll News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylanski Sports Editor
Allana E. Todman Women's Issues Editor
Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn F. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley–Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri–Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545–3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Ed–Op is always looking for contributions. So don't just sit there, come down to the Collegian and make your voice heard. Contact Mike, Tanya or Alexis in the Campus Center Basement.

Scenes from a balcony

Living on a floor with 45 other residents, people gain a certain closeness to each other. You know when your neighbor is upset or happy, excited or tired. Because of this awareness, however large or small it is, we are subject to our floormates' moods, whims and desires. Even just an innocent walk out onto the balcony can leave us with a lot to think about.

Lighting up a cigarette, I contemplate the day's events. So engrossed in my own thoughts, I don't even notice Juliet walking out with a small container of bubbles in her hand. "I'm blowing bubbles," she said, startling me.

"It's 35 degrees out, and you're blowing bubbles?"

"Yeah, it reminds me of the summer. Plus I'm good at it. It's simple, easy. Here, try."

Dipping the little plastic stick with the circle at the end into the container of syrup–like soap, I think "Yeah, it's easy, easier than some other things."

And the little plastic stick with the bubble on it becomes a looking glass. Out on the hill it is quiet, dark, almost foreboding, but through the looking glass It is bright, colorful and lazy. Almost psychedelic, like one of those movies or TV shows that tries to demonstrate someone tripping on acid. Then blowing through the looking glass, in an attempt to free the bubble from its physical constraints, I pop it, and it drips onto the floor. "Not as easy as it looks," I proclaim. "I guess everything takes practice," I think to myself.

"Everything takes practice," she says. I agree.

"Simple enough, I guess," I say to the Bubble Queen.

Enter Will, with his instrument of choice, the guitar. "You mind?" he asks. Not at all. "I can play anything," says the Guitar King. He still can't blow a bubble to save his life, but his music fills my ears, and makes the cold autumn night a little more bearable. The smoke permeates the air and the bubbles permeate the sky.

"I play my music to make myself feel better when I'm sad, and to make everyone else feel better when I'm happy," says the self–healer, sharing his music with us. The world disappears to Will, as he creates another world for us. Juliet smiles, content with her bubbles, some of which have popped, leaving small, wet circles of soap on the cement floor. She is content because most of her bubbles have been lifted up by the wind to places that we will never see. But she sees these places through the looking glass. Smoke fills the air, and bubbles fill the sky. Music fills my ears.

Enter Edward, arms outstretched, reaching beyond the balcony towards the bubbles. "I'm learning how to fly," he says, holding his arms high above his head.

"It's 35 degrees out, and you're trying to fly?" I inquire.

"Yeah, it's simple enough. You see, some people flap their arms really fast to try to fly because they think the motion of their arms will lift them up. They aren't doing it right. Superman doesn't flap his arms when he flies. He just wills himself into the air with everything he has in him." Eddie, using his whole being, outstretches his arms towards the floating bubbles, and wills himself to a stationary position on the balcony. "Okay, today I didn't move any, but tomorrow I'm sure I'll get at least a few inches off the ground. And the day after that, who knows how far up I will get," says Edward, optimistically.

"Easy enough," says Will, between the bars of a rhymes.

"She is reading Ralph Waldo Emerson, who speaks of Universal Truths."

Mark Griffin

"Everything takes practice," says Juliet, pausing from her breath of bubbles. The King of Flying agrees. Edward's faith in himself fills my heart because he believes he can do anything.

Out walks Mary, with a book in her hand. She is reading Ralph Waldo Emerson, who speaks of Universal Truths. "Made any progress yet?" she asks Edward, unaware of his recent failure to reach the sky just moments earlier. Mary is patient. She believes in him, even if she knows deep down that he may never succeed. She has a peaceful happiness to her, as if she will be able to accept whatever fate deals to her in life. Today, she has accepted the fact that Eddie will never fly.

"Not yet, but I'm still trying," he responds.

"Good to hear," she says, returning to her Universal Truths.

We are all alone on the balcony, but our senses see, hear, and feel the world around us and the warmth of each other. Juliet puts her looking glass/bubble maker back into the container and gently screws on the cover. She is happy, because some of her bubbles have reached the sky. Will takes the guitar off of his lap and places it in the case. He has made himself feel better if he was sad, and he has made everyone else feel better if he was happy. Edward, done flying for the day, lands on his feet and smiles, proud of himself. He will be back again tomorrow in another attempt to reach the sky. Mary, closing her book, has found the Truth she has been looking for today, and puts Emerson in her back pocket, in case she needs his wisdom again some time.

I am happy because my cigarette is done, and the smoke has cleared. Universal truths fill my life. Faith fills my heart. Music fills my ears. And bubbles fill the air, lifted up by the wind to places that, upon opening our eyes, have become a little easier to see clearly on this cold autumn night.

Mark Griffin is a UMass student.

P.C. deficient

Do you ever notice that on occasion a good idea will catch on and then rapidly spiral out of control until it has reached outstanding proportions of absurdity?

I do.

Watching the weather report this weekend, I was anticipating the inevitable announcement informing me that the temperature was about to plummet into the nether regions of the thermometer. However, the brilliant weathercaster guy — and we know that being brilliant is a requirement for that job — chose to be particularly smart.

"Yes," he said in his contrived, authoritative and all too deep voice, "We will be seeing an end to this wonderful Native American summer that has passed over us this weekend."

Hold up.

Wait a minute.

Native American summer? Have we gotten so ridiculously politically correct that the old adage "Indian summer" cannot be uttered any longer? Does this mean that we will have to begin to alter all of those little phrases in our life that contain any sort of reference to... well, anything?

I pondered this for a moment and began to realize how unnecessarily wordy our daily life would become if we were required to abide by these politically correct ways. It may go something like this:

Let me tell you about my weekend, a very simple and ordinary UMass weekend.

The telephone rang. "Greetings" said my roommate. Upon hanging up the phone she informed us that there was a festive gathering that we had been invited to in the large housing complex know as Puffton. We decided to go.

In order to arrive at our destination we boarded the early American explorers place of low elevation transit authority. The bus was soon filled with students who were seniority challenged, and they gabbed incessantly about Hobart lane, a place of large gatherings.

"We procured some Taco Bell which is taste challenged and grade A meat deficient."

Elsa Allen

We arrived at the festive gathering and were offered a beverage, so we were no longer thirst impaired. We stayed for a while and listened to music at high decibels. We decided to leave.

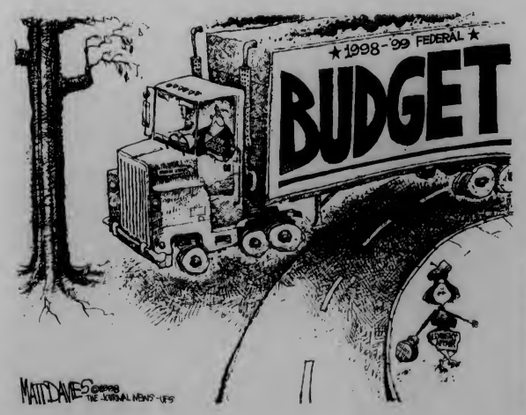
Our next destination was a house of Greek origin in which men live as brothers and enjoy the many benefits of large family life. Since we were vehicley deficient we were forced to walk.

Upon arriving at the festive gathering we saw many of the house siblings dressed in authentic clothing of Polynesian origin. Many of them were drinking beverages brewed of malt and hops and as a result had become sobriety challenged.

The dance floor was dryness challenged and space deficient as well. We chose to minimize our visit here and moved on quickly.

The next night my roommate spoke very excitedly about her recent birthday. We drank drinks of Spanish decent containing tequila and limes, with sodium applied generously on the rims of the glasses.

"I'm no longer legally challenged, I'm no longer legally challenged," she chanted as we headed up the street towards a business that specialized in the retail distribution of liquor. We sat at a long one–sided table, while a man on the other side poured drinks at our request. Many friends bought my roommate small doses of liquor which she drank quickly. Soon she was motor–skills challenged and had to be assisted home.



We procured some Taco Bell which is taste challenged and grade A meat deficient. The store was busy and there were many people who were sobriety challenged as well. The security engineers stood in the corner in order to prevent any disruption.

Another roommate sat at home upon our arrival. She was unable to come out with us because she is still legally challenged and false identification deficient. She had a good chuckle at our non–sober appearance and went off to bed.

We consumed our food with recipes originating from regions below the South American border and soon closed our eyes and unwillingly submitted to sleep.

I hope that none of you have been entertainment challenged upon reading this conglomeration of words.

Elsa Allen is a Collegian staff member.

MATT DAVIES Copyright THE JOURNAL NEWS - USA

Human violations

I have a pretty low tolerance for stupid drunken behavior to begin with, but last Saturday night was beyond any socially acceptable boundary I could have ever conceived of.

Maybe I ought to let the rest of the student body know what normally goes on between the side of Van Meter that faces campus and the non–campus facing sides of Greenough and Chadbourne nearly every single night. You see, there is an anonymous group of individuals who either reside or just party in Van Meter who feel justified in screaming very loud, obnoxious, and derogatory chants at Greenough and Chadbourne at night.

Lindsay McCarthy

In their intoxicated states of delusion, I assume they take great pleasure in these activities while being completely unaware of the reality of their blatant stupidity. Most of the hollering consists of such lyrical phrases as "Greenough, Greenough... you suck!" among other equally quaint little diddies. Of course there are a number of others with considerably more offensive language, but I will spare you.

I don't particularly appreciate being routinely insulted, even if I place absolutely no value on the words drunk people scream. However, I usually manage to tune them out. Sometimes it gets difficult though, since it occurs virtually every night starting at about 10:30 p.m. and often doesn't even begin to peter off until midnight. Once in a while, if I'm in a particularly feisty mood, I'll yell rude things back, but on the whole I try to ignore them. (I'm a big fan of the whole sticks and stones theory.) I figure hey, some students are here to get an education and others are here to drink themselves daily into a stupor. Fine with me, but this past weekend, Saturday night specifically, they sank to their lowest level yet.

These UMass students stooped to exposing their homophobic and misogynistic attitudes towards anyone they deemed "feminine." This included a list consisting of gay men as well as all women. For some reason these individuals felt as though they had the right to shout extremely hateful and horrifying epithets and threats at the residents of Greenough and Chadbourne from around 3 a.m. 'til well after 4 a.m. when the campus police finally arrived. For some reason the campus police cruise the Orchard Hill/Central loop religiously every fifteen minutes from about 9 p.m. on Saturday nights till 3 a.m. Sunday mornings and then they mysteriously disappear.

What bothers me isn't the fact that they were screaming obnoxiously for an hour and a half because I have learned how to deal with that. It was the fact that this group of people (and one very loud young man in particular who seemed to be the ring leader, probably of middle school bully fame) had crossed the line from irritating behavior into bigoted, horrifying behavior. I wish I could illustrate the situation more clearly by using the actual language they used, but those words are unfit to even be reiterated. I will say that they were so upsetting that when they woke me up (because I had been asleep for some time before the performance), I thought I was having some form of an extremely realistic nightmare.

We, the 600 or so students witnessing this jerk and his sidekicks, did very little. I haven't decided whether our reactions were good or bad. On one hand our mostly silent response gave little fuel to their fire, but somehow they managed to take what small, although heated, responses we gave and use them as ammunition. It was hard for me to be quiet, and eventually I became so angry that I did yell, even though I soon realized that my actions were futile. Then I thought that maybe if everyone ignored them, they would stop, but the periods of silence on our part did nothing to deter them.

On the other hand, I can't help but wonder that if everyone who was appalled at their behavior voiced their opinions, then we certainly could have drowned them out. We didn't though, so I wonder to myself if the silence was some form of acceptance or just shock. Maybe it was fear, and of course it could have been apathy. After a certain point (about 4 a.m.) I became sick of theorizing and called the campus police myself. I wasn't going to knock on my resident assistant's door at four in the morning, or on my resident director's door either, although I do wonder how many RAs and RDs were just as passive as the rest of us.

While the officer I had called was taking down the information, they were still screaming at the top of their lungs in the background. From my past experiences with people yelling from Van Meter, I remembered that when I'm talking on the phone, the person on the other end can hear very clearly what they yell, so I asked the officer, who was being so formal, if he could hear the offensive slurs and drunken threats being shouted. After a pause he reluctantly answered yes (maybe just because I was making him deviate from the routine), and I then asked him if he could make them stop. He said they would try.

I was deeply disturbed and infuriated by these people's behavior and hateful attitudes. I consider it much more than just a noise violation, but unfortunately that was the only classification. I'm not sure if I'm disturbed by the reactions, or the lack thereof, of the listeners. I didn't and still don't know what the appropriate reaction should have been. What I do know is that there shouldn't have been a reason to react in the first place and I hope my assumption that everyone who was there and who heard this person and his friends, was just as appalled and angry as I was.

Lindsay McCarthy is a UMass student.

It's Greek to me

We share with you here the exciting discovery of a heretofore unrecovered Platonic Dialogue.

Crito: Socrates, my good man, what is it you have there in your hand? Do you not shame the Oracle of Delphi and the gods, proving them false in their declaration that you are the wisest man in all of Athens?

Socrates: Greetings Crito. I wonder that you ask in such earnest what I hold in my hand when by the natural light it is clearly a can of Schlitz. As for your second question, what concern can it be to the gods whether I imbibe this beer or no?

Crito: My apologies Socrates. Allow me to explain myself. I had in mind your teaching on the subject of virtue. Do you not recall it? No man, you have said, can knowingly choose to do wrong. He who truly has knowledge of what is right and wrong must always select the right, for the right is, by definition, the better path. Do you not here defy your philosophy with your present choice? Is it not clear by the natural light of reason that among beers, Schlitz must certainly represent the lesser path? The worse course of action? What say you, Socrates?

"Does he love only some beers, or does he love the whole of them?"

Matt Burke

Socrates: My dear Crito, what you say is very convincing. But let me respond to your questions by asking one of my own: Do we consider the whole to be merely a certain number of its parts, or rather all of its parts?

Crito: Certainly the whole must contain all of its parts, Socrates.

Socrates: Then, Crito, we may say, for example, that the state is not only its buildings or only its citizens or only its laws. As a whole, it is all of these?

Crito: Yes, that much we can say.

Socrates: Would it be right, then, to say that a man loves the state who loves only its buildings, or only its citizens, or only its laws?

Crito: No Socrates. Such a man loves only certain of its parts.

Socrates: So, Crito, to love something truly is to love it as a whole, not merely certain of its parts.

Crito: I must admit this is true, Socrates.

Socrates: Well, Crito, what would we say of a man who professed to love numbers, but in reality loved only certain numbers, and not the whole of them?

Crito: I do not see your meaning, Socrates.

Socrates: Then let me state it thus: When we speak of numbers, do we speak of only some numbers, or of all numbers?

Crito: Why all numbers, Socrates.

Socrates: And when we speak in general of men, do we speak of all men or only certain of them?

Crito: Unless we say otherwise, we must be speaking of them all.

Socrates: Then to speak truly of loving numbers, we must love the whole of them. And to speak truly of loving men, we must love the whole of them. Is that not correct, Crito?

Crito: Indeed, I see now that it must be.

Socrates: And what, then, Crito of the true lover of beers? Does he love only some beers, or does he love the whole of them?

Crito: By our previous reasoning, Socrates, I should think he must love them all.

Socrates: And does the man who loves a thing seek to increase its presence so far as he is able? Or does he rather seek to avoid it and decrease its presence?

Crito: Most certainly one does not avoid, but seeks out that which he loves.

Socrates: Then Crito, it seems that the true lover of beers, so far as he is able, wishes to increase the presence of that which he loves, seeking the most of it that his drachma can buy?

Crito: Yes, Socrates. It is so.

Socrates: Then is not Schlitz, being the least costly of beers, and therefore the most amply acquired, also the only right and proper selection for the true lover of beers?

Crito: I suppose that must be so, Socrates. Perhaps I was wrong to suggest that the Oracle was in error. Or perhaps it is true what they say, that you are a scoundrel who seeks only to make the worse beer appear the better. I can hardly say I know anymore, Socrates.

Socrates: Good Crito, lend me your trust in this matter. I can tell you, In Athens they serve drinks far worse that Schlitz.

Matt Burke is a UMass student.

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor. But please remember, letters must:

 be typed.*

 be no more than 400 words long.*

 include name, address and phone number for confirmation purposes.*

The Collegian reserves the right to edit letters for length, clarity, and style.

They can be submitted by mail to Ed/Op Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst MA 01003; by e–mail to our new account at: letters@oitunix.oit.umass.edu; or by fax to (413) 545–1592.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Jewish Affairs

Wednesday, October 28, 1998

Kushner says to choose happiness over righteousness

By Chanel Dubofsky
Collegian Correspondent

How good do we have to be? How do we reason with our guilt at being imperfect human beings? How do our actions influence our life experiences?

In a speech presented by the University of Massachusetts Hillel and the Class of 2001 last night, Rabbi Harold Kushner attempted to answer some of our most troubling and thought provoking questions.

Kushner, who is best known for his book Why Bad Things Happen to Good People, addressed issues dealing with shame, guilt and imperfection.

Articulating the differences between shame and guilt, he also suggested how one might deal with these emotions.

"Guilt is feeling bad for what you've done, and shame is feeling bad about who you are," Kushner said.

Guilt is a sign of being a good person, since it signifies that one has a conscience. According to Kushner, the best way to resolve guilt is simply to perform good deeds.

Dealing with shame, on the other hand, is a different matter. According to Kushner, shame is an emotion that enters into the core of one's identity. He reconciled that a little bit of shame is easier to manage.

Feelings of shame can be cured simply by the opinion of one valued person. More profound shame, however, takes time and healing to overcome, and often involves intervention from others who have been in the same situation, such as in the case of organizations such as Overeater's Anonymous.

Kushner emphasized that some people find their most authentic religious experience was in a scenario where they could "take the armor off."

Kushner also discussed the realization that human beings, even the ones we love, are not perfect.

"Life is not a spelling bee where one mistake wipes out all we have done right," Kushner said.

He relayed the story of his encounter with a gay Episcopalian minister who was dying of AIDS.

"No matter how many wrong things you do in your life, God will still love you," the young man told him.

STACY COHEN / COLLEGIAN

Rabbi Harold Kushner stands with Beth Ajalat, Annette Ferran, Katie Allard, Naëema Arrastia, Anthon Fassio, Dan Friedman and Emily Fukuda last night before his speech

Kushner urged that this young man's statement is an important point to keep in mind. He dispelled the commonly held belief that one must be perfect in order to be loved.

"To love somebody is to say you know the flawed, incomplete person and to buy the package," Kushner said.

In the case of parents, it is vital that they not be perfect in order to set an example to their children — it is indeed possible to be a wonderful human being who makes mistakes.

Kushner's main thrust was the importance of forgiving oneself and those we love. He stressed that the point of forgiveness is not to excuse or condone the actions that have hurt and wronged us, but instead to assert that the anger and bitterness has no right to consume and transform one as a person. One has a choice to either put grievances on "life support," or to "choose happiness over righteousness" and let the anger go.

He clarified that forgiveness is a vital part of a satisfying life because "the only kind of people we'll ever know will hurt and disappoint us."

We have two options: either to forgive or to be lonely.

In his closing remarks, Kushner reiterated his opinion that God does not expect us to be perfect as we assume that He does. He cited biblical liturgy, specifically the story of the Garden of Eden.

Kushner believes that in this biblical situation, God was not so much punishing Adam and Eve as they were punishing themselves. By giving Adam the duty of work, He provided a source of "psychic income," as opposed to man remaining bored and idle.

In relation to Eve, Kushner pointed out that instead of regarding difficulty with sexuality and childbirth as a punishment, it would be much worse to have a world devoid of love, romance or the meaning to bearing children.

In response to the question, "How good do we have to be?" Kushner concludes that God urges all of humankind to not to try to disguise from God any flaws or imperfections, but to "Come before me in entirety."

Peace activists to speak about peace-building experiences in Balkans

FRIENDS OF BOSNIA / GLENN RUGA

The National Library in Sarajevo played a role similar to our Library of Congress until it was intentionally shelled with incendiary bombs in 1992.

By Elana Premack
Collegian Staff

In the wake of ethnic cleansing in the Balkan regions, three peace activists from the former Yugoslavia and a leader of the Jewish community of Sarajevo are acting as the light in the darkness of destruction.

Dragan Popadic, Mirha Kratina, Jakob Finci and Lidija Obad will speak about their peace building experiences in an Oct. 29 forum titled "Roads to Reconciliation: Peacebuilding in the Former Yugoslavia."

The presentation will be held in the Campus Center, room 163-C at 7:45 p.m.

The presenters will be visiting the Five-College community as Scholars-in-Residence Oct. 29 and 30. The presentation on Thursday is only part of their contribution during their stay. The Scholars will also be meeting with members of the local Bosnian and Yugoslav communities and visiting classes at the Five Colleges.

Americans are frequently exposed to Serbian president Slobodan Milosevic's actions, which have brought the Balkan region to "the brink of war," according to Larry Goldbaum, director of the Office of Jewish Affairs.

"But less well known are the efforts of the many courageous people — from all sides of that conflict and from every ethnic and religious community in the former Yugoslavia — who have taken great risks to stand up against the vicious nationalism of Milosevic and others like him," Goldbaum said.

"This is a chance for UMass students to hear the stories of those who seek healing and reconciliation, instead of the hate-mongers who have so dominated the news."

Each of the speakers has made a contribution to the goal of peace in the Balkans, either through taking part in programs aimed against war or by providing support for those affected by war.

Popadic, who is Serbian, is a professor of psychology at the University of Belgrade and a founding member of the Center for Antiwar Action in Belgrade, Serbia. The Center organizes civic actions and protests in the former Yugoslavia.

Kratina, a Bosnian Muslim, is a field facilitator and psychologist for Save the Children, Zenica, Bosnia Herzegovina. Save the Children is a community-based program designed to improve the well-being of preschool children affected by the war in Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Finci, a Bosnian Jew, is president of La Benevolencia, a Jewish educational, cultural and humanitarian society in Sarajevo, and director of Soros Foundation for Bosnia Herzegovina.

Obad, who is Croatian, is coordinator for the Center for Peace, Nonviolence and Human Rights in Osijek, Croatia. The Center works to protect human rights, provide peace education and psychological support to those affected by war, as well as to rebuild connections between Croats and Serbs.

"Roads to Reconciliation" is sponsored by the Office of Jewish Affairs, Karuna Center for Peacebuilding and Friends of Bosnia. For more information, contact the Office of Jewish Affairs, 545-9642.

FRIENDS OF BOSNIA / GLENN RUGA

This apartment building in Dobrinja, a suburb of Sarajevo, was destroyed by bombs. The apartments housed Olympic athletes during the 1984 Olympics.

NoHo film fest takes Jewish turn

By Morgan Tabor
Collegian Staff

The Northampton Annual Film Festival has a new venue added to its line up: The Jewish film and Special Event Series.

The first weekend in November will be host to this year's innovative showcase of independent films and videos from around the United States. In addition to movies, the festival features seminars, workshops, expositions, special tributes and presentations, celebrity guests, as well as Gala receptions and a Sunday morning brunch.

The Jewish series features premiere and award-winning films with a Jewish theme. A live stage reading of a new play, guest speakers and question-and-answer sessions with the filmmakers make up the series, which will run Nov. 4, 7 and 8.

The series begins on Wednesday, Nov. 4 with a matinee screening of Tickle in the Heart, a heart-warming, crowd- pleasing film about three octogenarian Epstein brothers. This film follows the King of Klezem, on their comeback tour through Eastern Europe to Brooklyn and Florida. Show time is at 2 p.m. at the Academy of Music in downtown Northampton.

Following this cinematic documentary at 7:30 p.m. is the showing of Blacks und Jews, an award-winning documentary exploring past and present relationships between the two groups. Group leader and Northampton resident, writer, performance artist, teacher and attorney Jyl Lynn Felman will mediate an open dialogue with the audience on intergroup cooperation and conflict with her colleague from the University of Rhode Island, Linda Randall.

A highlighted special presentation of Daniel Goldfarb's new comical play, Adam Muum and the Jew Movie is scheduled to open off-Broadway in the spring of 1999. The play is a comedy, featuring Judd Hirsch, about the traditional reluctance of the Jewish Hollywood movies moguls to make films about the Jewish experience. Hirsch is a two-time Tony award winner and two-time Drama Disc award recipient. He was nominated at the Academy Awards for his performance in Robert Redford's Ordinary People. The showing for this play is scheduled at 8:30 p.m. at the Northampton Academy of Music.

Mah-Jongg: The Tiles that Bind is a Western New England premiere that takes a look at the role of Mah-Jongg in the cultural lives of both the Jewish and Chinese communities.

Tickets for the Jewish film and Special Event Series are already on sale at the Northampton Box office located on the second floor of Thorne's Market Place in downtown Northampton. A series pass and tickets for all evening shows are available both in advance and at the door. A package deal is available for the Wednesday showing. The package includes a full-course luncheon at the Inn of Northampton. This deal is only available in advance and is not included in the series pass. The series pass is also attainable at Rags, 37 Harkness Ave, East Longmeadow, Ma.

For further information about the Jewish Film and Special Event series of the Northampton Film Festival call 413-586-3471.

Undergraduate senator to make motion on Saturday final exams

By Elana Premack
Collegian Staff

Saturday final exams should be eliminated from future final exam schedules, according to a motion that will be made tonight at a meeting of the undergraduate student senate.

Dan Friedman, commuter-at-large senator, will make the motion based on his belief that asking a student to work on Saturdays and go against Jewish law is a disrespectful request.

"It's just a matter of respect," Friedman said. We don't have finals on Sunday for a similar reason."

Eliminating final exams on Saturday would allow Jewish students to freely observe the Sabbath without having to make plans to make up missed exams.

"The argument against it is that it's easy for students to get out of finals," Friedman said. "We want to make it as easy as possible."

In the motion, Friedman states that "the University's Registrar's Office can make other arrangements to eliminate scheduling finals on a Saturday."

Friedman suggests "sliding back classes" and starting the reading period earlier. He also sees an economic benefit in eliminating Saturday finals. Facilities including lecture halls and classrooms will not have to be open during the weekend, and maintenance staff will not have to be paid for weekend work in these facilities.

The final exam schedule is set for the next three years, but Friedman does not see this fact as an impediment to his motion taking effect if it passes.

"There shouldn't be a reason why a student voice can't change three years of work," Friedman said.

If the motion passes in senate, Friedman and the upper leadership of the senate will meet to defend the bill to members of the administration. If the bill is successfully defended, it has to go through the University trustees and President William Bulger before taking effect.

Friedman hopes that the senate will continue to support issues relevant to ethnic and religious groups on campus.

"My goal is for the senate to come together as an organization to look into problems of diversity," Friedman said.

But he recognizes that student support plays a role in passing a motion and believes that "the student population recognizes that a problem exists."

"In the past, a visible population [of people affected by the motion] has led to the motion getting passed," Friedman said.

Netanyahu wins motion, faces challenges to Mideast peace plan

By Dafna Linzer
Associated Press

TEL AVIV, Israel — Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu won a no-confidence motion Monday in parliament, getting past the first of several political hurdles aimed at challenging a new Mideast peace deal.

But the threat of early elections loomed after legislators decided to present a bill to parliament calling for a spring vote. Selling the new land-for-peace deal to hard-liners in his coalition government has not been easy. The brutal killing of a Jewish settler, apparently by Palestinians, on Monday in the West Bank city of Hebron was likely to make the process even harder.

In a demonstration outside the premier's home later Monday, hundreds of right-wing Israelis carried torches and angry signs calling for Netanyahu's resignation. Many chanted "Bibi is a traitor," referring to the prime minister by his nickname. Some protesters scuffled with police and tried to break through a barrier. Police said 21 people were arrested.

Still, lawmakers from the dovish Labor party and its left-wing partners made good on a promise to back the premier in parliament, at least until the new accord signed Friday with Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat is implemented.

"We believe the prime minister should be removed from office and we believe in early elections... but we will not trade our principles for political gain. For the sake of peace, we will not allow" Netanyahu to fall, Labor lawmaker Eli Goldshmidt said.

The no-confidence motion brought by the tiny, extreme right-wing Moledet party failed to pass, with eight votes in favor, 21 against and 15 abstentions.

A majority of the 120 lawmakers, including Netanyahu, did not show up for the vote, which had almost no chance of passing. Labor's support in Israel's parliament, the Knesset, is key to Netanyahu, who faces growing opposition to the peace plan from within his own coalition government.

Hard-liners opposed to the West Bank withdrawal and opposition legislators hoping to bring down Netanyahu agreed Monday to join forces for early national elections.

In a first step toward toppling the Netanyahu government, the Knesset Law Committee voted to hold a first reading on a bill to disperse parliament and hold new elections within 100 days. A suggested date for the elections was March 16, after the current peace accord is to be implemented.

Committee chairman Hanan Porat said the first reading of the bill could be held within two weeks. A bill needs to be approved in three readings before it becomes law.

The early elections bill will need to be backed by 60 of the 120 legislators. Supporters of the bill said they were confident they could pass the legislation.

Museum trip scheduled

The University of Massachusetts Hillel's Jewish Student Union and The Office of Jewish Affairs are sponsoring a student trip to the Holocaust Memorial Museum in Washington D.C.

The trip begins on Sunday, Nov. 8 at 9 a.m. and continues until midnight the following day. The cost of the trip is $45 and $30 with a Hillel Activity Card. Transportation and lodging is inclusive with the costs; food will not be provided.

Students will stay at the Hotel Harrington, not far from downtown Washington D.C. There are 40 available seats open for students. Tickets are on sale now and will continue until Nov. 2. A final meeting will be held on Nov. 3 for all attendees. For further information or ticketing purcheses, please contact the Hillel House at 388 N. Pleasant St., 549-1710.

— Morgan Tobor

Write for Jewish Affairs Write for Jewish Affairs Write for Jewish Affairs Write for Jewish Affairs Write for Jewish Affairs

ARTS & LIVING

Vanilla Ice changes tune

COURTESY ALASTAIR INDGE

This gloomy bunch of guses recount their history, in reverse order, on Countdown 1992–1983.

COUNTDOWN 1992–1983
Pulp
Velvel

If you're only familiar with Different Class or the recently released This is Hardcore, this double CD set is absolutely essential. Assembled from the best materials off of Pulp's first four albums, It, Masters of the Universe, Freaks and Separations in reverse chronological order, Countdown 1992-1983 is the history of the Brit pop outfit, starting long before the genre exploded into widespread popularity. Back when Blur and The Verve were unknown to anyone.

Frontman Jarvis Cocker's crooning voice lends itself to Morrissey comparisons as Pulp's Smiths-influenced early work presents itself as separated from that of Different Class and even more so from that of This is Hardcore. The disco dance ambience of the later Pulp manifests itself in songs like "Countdown" and "Death Goes to the Disco" at the start of the album. "She's Dead," "I Want You," and "Down By the River" highlight the bleak, but somehow smirking attitude of the band. The second disc, opening with "Dogs are Everywhere" also manages to capture the darkly funny initial sound of Pulp.

Before ditching their original sound for This is Hardcore, Pulp helped to define the current state of British pop music. For those who are interested in the rise of the post-Beatles Brit-pop resurgence and don't own any Pulp albums, Countdown 1992-1983 is not just a nicety, it is a necessity. A (Kevin Monahan)

HARD TO SWALLOW
Vanilla Ice
Republic

At least this one has an appropriate title. Pseudo-rapper Vanilla Ice returns from being laughed off the face of the earth back in the early part of the decade (I think his next step back then was to claim that he, in fact, was the original author of "Under Pressure" and that Freddie Mercury and David Bowie traveled through time to steal it from him), with his latest jump on a bandwagon. After miserably trying to be a gangster rapper on his last effort, the world failed to take notice. This time it's the increasingly dull metal scene. Ice tries to find friends in, and if a heavy metal version of "Ice, Ice Baby" does not send you convulsing into laughter, then nothing else will.

Maybe I'm just biased. Maybe the lyrical profundity of songs like "Prozac," "Stompin' Through the Bayou" and the nine-second track, "Fuck Me" are just lost on me. Maybe Ice is making some bold statements to the world here. But I doubt that his inane lyrics are anything more than a desperate plea for help.

Producer Ross Robinson (Korn, Sepultura) gives the album a loud, obnoxious death metal sound intended to get the listener ready to go out and kill. No "Ahhh, yeahs" or "Word

Turn to TRAX, page 8

From paradise to brutal reality

By Rob Roensch
Collegian Staff

PLEASANTVILLE
Directed by Gary Ross
with Tobey Maguire, Reese Witherspoon, Joan Allen
Playing at Hampshire Mall Cinemas

Sometimes it seems like people on TV live in heaven: no arguments that cannot be resolved in a half an hour, no pain, a house and a family for everyone. But what would we have to give up to live in TV heaven?

Following in the footsteps of The Truman Show, Pleasantville is a visually attractive, easy-to-follow deconstruction of our relationship with the dreams that the media creates for us. Pleasantville's gentle media satire goes down smooth as ice cream, but its brilliant use of visual effects ensures that the anti-American-dream message sticks to your ribs.

The movie centers around a teenage dork (Tobey Maguire) who dreams of escaping from his life as a loser into the orderly happiness of a TV sitcom. With the help of mysterious TV repairman, the dork and his sexpot sister (Reese Witherspoon) are zapped from their messy '90s existence of dinnertime Doritos in a single-mother led household into a '50s version of perfect America, the fictional sitcom "Pleasantville," complete with Mom baking in the kitchen and white picket fences in front of every house. But all is not well in happyland: along with the perfect life comes crushing conformity and emotional deadness, symbolized here with black and white film. Almost despite themselves, the two intruders inject knowledge of sex and art into the community, and the town of Pleasantville begins the slow, beautiful fall from paradise.

The strongest part of the movie is the town members' gradual rejection of the bland, deadhearted, regulated version of the American dream. When they unearth their buried emotions and hearts, whether through anger or sex in the backseat of a car or in a book, their skin turns from gray into glowing full color. The visual effects are stunning, even ravishing. Your eyes are unavoidably pulled to the pools of color in the fields of gray. The power of the images reminds us of how interesting color is, how interesting the world is. Movies sometimes forget that. We sometimes forget.

In Pleasantville, with color and the apple of knowledge comes danger. It rains and thunders for the first time, a tree catches fire, scared black-and-white community leaders react violently to the new "coloreds," burning books and declaring color and music unlawful. The resolution of this "racism" is where the movie trips itself up.

First, the racism and violence last for all of two days. If the citizens of Pleasantville were supposed to be turned into "real" people, then prejudice and hate would not disappear so easily. Second, the movie gives the citizens of Pleasantville all the good things about being human: color, passion, art, but none of the bad things. By the movie's end, the town's citizens still live in a world without any real pain, without sickness, without death. Maybe the movie is just too short. In any case, the new Pleasantville is still a dream: a place of sexual freedom without racism or sexism. It's still a world seen through rose colored glasses. The glasses are just a different shade of rose.

Although Pleasantville ultimately fails to do anything other than replace a '50s dream with a '90s dream, that shift of dreams is important in itself. The change in the relationship between the dork and his mother is the movie's greatest victory. When the dork comes back to the real world he takes an active role in his mother's difficult life, where before he would have turned on the TV and ignored his less-than-ideal mother crying in the next room. The new dream, that by rejecting the classic American dream and loving the messy persons a family can be whole is humane and hopeful. The movie is a paradox: a product of the mass media telling us not to listen to the laws of happiness from other parts of the mass media. Pleasantville offers a different path to happiness.

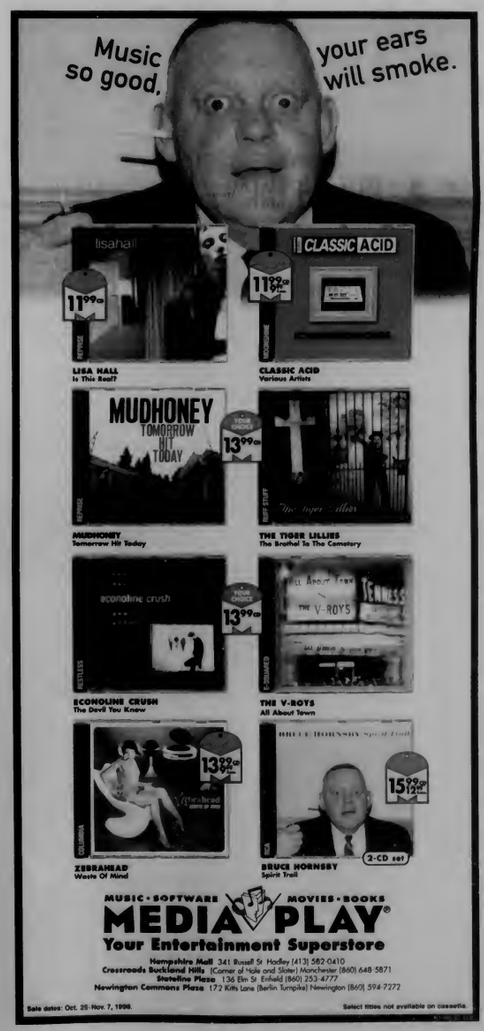
It's easy to get drunk on the colors of Pleasantville and the vision they create. What's important is that we do not let such visually lovely movies disarm our own imaginations. The movie is a beautiful dream, but there is much more work, and dreaming, to be done. B+

Campus Career Network

ALL STUDENTS!!



ANNUAL FIVE COLLEGES
GRADUATE & PROFESSIONAL SCHOOLS INFORMATION DAY

Over 100 Schools including:

MGH Institute of Health Professions
Albany Law School	Fidelity College
Assumption College	Boston University
New York University	Columbia University
Pace University	Emerson College
Simmons College	University of Hartford
Western New England College

Wednesday, October 28, 1998
Student Union Ballroom
University of Massachusetts/Amherst
10:00 am - 3:00 pm

For information and Directions to Admission Events at Other Colleges, contact the Campus Career Network Office at 545-0301. Co-operation with Amherst Hillel For Art Hillel and Graduate Fairs

Shakespeare's reincarnation

COURTESY ALABAMA SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL

Shakespeare with a twist of the south.

By Stephanie Hughes
Collegian Correspondent

TAMING OF THE SHREW
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall
Oct 26

Rowdy behavior, lewd comments and Shakespeare!

If you ignored the Shakespeare, this could be a description of a normal night out at UMass; but it was in fact an evening spent watching the Alabama Shakespeare Festival's (ASF) version of, "The Taming of the Shrew."

Last Sunday evening the ASF performed "The Taming of the Shrew" at the Fine Arts Center as part of their national tour. This was no ordinary production of Shakespeare. The traditional setting of Elizabethan Italy of the 1540s had metamorphosized into the America of the 1950s. The change of setting to the 1950s was not a random one but a well thought out decision. According to the director Kent Thompson, the American society of the 1950s was not rather surprisingly that far removed from that of Elizabethan Italy. They were both times when gender roles were clearly defined in patriarchal societies, and the woman's place was unquestionably in the home.

"The Taming of the Shrew" is one of Shakespeare's most controversial plays, judged by today's standards, where women are seen as equals. Its sexist content usually does not go over well with modern audiences. This production, however, managed to portray its female characters, particularly that of Catherine, as strong and capable, without losing the play's basic plot or language.

ASF is the fifth largest Shakespeare festival in the world and its productions have gained great critical acclaim. The company contained a talented cast whose energy and liveliness meant that this Shakespeare play was never dull. One actor who particularly stood out was David Furr, who vigorously played the part of Grumio. The cast brought out the humor in the play, using their body language. The actors used lots of physical jokes throughout the play, giving new and often suggestive interpretations to Shakespeare's words. The audience was constantly laughing.

The stage was cleverly thought out and the action took place on two levels. Set changes were swift and entertaining. When the reception tables were brought on for the scene of Bianca's wedding reception the prop changers danced around the stage to the music twirling the tables to the audience's delight. The costumes were faithful to the '50s and included original clothes from the period. The substitution of stage props were both inventive and effective; for example, instead of riding in on a horse Pertruchio, rides in on a motorcycle. The stage effects and music were thrilling to watch and complimented the action on stage.

After the play finished, several of the actors stayed for an informal question-and-answer period. This in itself was interesting, as the audience got to ask some of the stars of the show about their own interpretations of the text.

I was somewhat skeptical about going to see this production. My previous experience of Shakespeare had been productions by the Royal Shakespeare company, which tended to stick faithfully to Shakespeare's texts and was always performed in English accents. A version of the play that changed time and country and was to be performed unapologetically in strong American accents did not correspond to my expectations of Shakespeare. I was pleasantly surprised; the production was not conventional was excellent. I was not the only one to enjoy the performance; the cast received heartfelt applause from the almost full house. Through their productions, the ASF are helping to open up Shakespeare to a wider audience and dispel the image of Shakespeare as being dull and dated.

For more information about the Alabama Shakespeare Festival and future productions, you can visit the ASF website at www.asf.net.

■ trax

continued from page 7

to your mothers" here. Instead we have a cold ("Too Cold," in fact), ruthless and just generally pissed off Vanilla Ice. However, Ice's anger only fuels our amusement. The more he takes himself seriously, the more he turns into a figure of fun.

Little Robbie Van Winkle should avoid any further embarrassment and resume pumping gas at his local Shell station. Not only is it Hard to Swallow, but it certainly does suck. F (K.M.)

SABRINA THE TEENAGE WITCH
Various Artists
Geffen

This magical collection of songs transported me back in time and place. It contained the same kind of quality teeny-bopper tunes I rollarskated to when I was 11. The songs by Five, Robyn, and the Backstreet Boys reminded me of The Guys Next Door, Tiffany, and The New Kids on the Block. Five's "Slam Dunk (Da Funk)" was one of my personal favorites. My friend preferred the powerful lyrics of 'N Sync's "Giddy Up" ("Gotta giddy up giddy up giddy up giddy up now...). Does the fact that three of the five members of 'N Sync were in the Mickey Mouse Club tell you anything? In fact, yet another Mickey Mouse Club alum, Britney Spears, joins them on the album with equally unfortunate results.

I must say, I was looking forward to hearing Sugar Ray's rendition of the Steve Miller classic "Abracadabra" and "Sabrina" Melissa Joan Hart doing Blondie on "One Way or Another." Amazingly enough, both were pretty decent. As the press packet states, "Melissa Joan Hart can now list 'recording artist' on her resume among her many other achievements." Well, I wouldn't go that far.

Pure Sugar's cover of The Waitresses' "I Know What Boys Like" was a major disappointment, however, as was the Chumbawamba remix of "Amnesia." Even songs by promising groups like the Cardigans, Ben Folds Five, and Matthew Sweet suffered by the level of cheesiness of their colleagues on the album.

There were a few hidden gems, like the brilliant metaphor on Matthew Sweet's "Magnet and Steel." It featured "You are a magnet: I am steel," and low voices repeating "I am steel" over raging guitar riffs. The song "So I Fall Again" by the group Phantom Planet was surprisingly good. The album also featured my favorite of all favorite cheesy pop songs, "Doctor Jones" by Aqua in a previously unreleased remix. Boy, was I excited! (I'm serious! Have you ever seen their terrific video full of fake snakes and scary natives in masks speaking french and cooking up the band? Brilliant.)

I guess you could say, this compilation features something for everyone. Pick it up as a stocking stuffer for your favorite little cousin or as a secret teeny-bopper pleasure for yourself. Or even better, play it at your raging Halloween party this weekend. It's sure to scare some people. C- (Stacey Shackford)

THE HOLY FOOL
The Zen Tricksters
Zebra Tango

With a solid and entertaining piece of musicianship, The Zen Tricksters take a major step away from their Grateful Dead dependency and give us their first all original recording. The Holy Fool.

From starting in 1979 as the strictly Garcia-based cover band The Volunteers, lead singer Jeff Mattson has witnessed his band's creative maturation into The Zen Tricksters. Show after show, audiences found songs that sounded strangely familiar but whom no one could find on even the most obscure Dead collection. It was, of course, just Jeff and the band up to their tricks, incorporating their tricks, incorporation their own songs into the show. And if the Tricksters played anything like the songs off this new record, chances are the crowd didn't mind the occasional break from Jerry. Too much, at least.

The Holy Fool is the first collection of all these original pieces and the instant you pop the disc into your player, you can hear the influence these Zen-men have taken from being a successful Dead cover act for nearly the past 20 years. Yet, this music stands tall and has a feel entirely its own. The Holy Fool is a jazzy blues-based record that showcases some superb guitar and keyboard work, clean refreshing lyrics, and just enough of that Garcia groove to make a Dead disciple comfortable. And a few gems rise to the surface, some sounding as much as lost tracks on Terrapin Station as anything else. "Done is Done" is perhaps the most memorable track, with catchy grooves and a combination of solemn and carefree sounds that shows us the true "Zen" of the Trickster's creative energy. Other songs worth mention include the bouncy and innovative "Lay Your Love" and the bluesy and fierce "Hoodoo."

The Holy Fool shows the wisdom that The Zen Tricksters had in waiting so long to release an original recording. All of the songs feel polished and tight while seeming to keep a hint of that extemporaneous feel that made their live shows so popular. And I have a feeling that Jerry and the boys would approve. B- (Brian Surette)

FIRST LOVE, LAST RITES SOUNDTRACK
Shudder to Think (with very special guests)
Epic

The soundtrack to First Love, Last Rites is an interesting idea: Have one band score the whole album, using different singers to portray different musical periods.

The problem is cohesion. With all soundtracks you have to accept the good with the bad, but you'd think that with one band being the common factor in all the songs, there would be a sort of cohesion. The problem comes from the fact that they are aping so many different styles, this album resides in some limbo between compilation and regular album.

The soundtrack starts off with the late Jeff Buckley on "I Want Someone Badly," a swaying, prom theme based on Buckley's soaring voice. "Erecting a Movie Star," with Liz Phair on vocals, builds on interesting imagery ("Take off your right hand/ 'Cause you don't use it a lot") some catchy piano, and some "ooh-ooh-oooh" backing vocals by Shudder to Think vocalist Craig Wedren to make what is probably the best song on the album.

Later on, the band remakes their own wonderful "Day Ditty" ("I want to walk to the garden with you/ And spin dizzy circles) once again and recast it as a Velvet Underground rip-off. The only problem in the song is the vocals, by Angela McClusky, that don't nearly match the breathiness of Wedren's original vocals. She comes off more like a Nico clone, but that might be the point.

In between, guest vocalists Billy Corgan and Robin Zander glam it up on "When I was Born, I Was Bored" and "Automatic Soup," respectively, while the Cardigans' Nina Persson adds her lilting vocals to the soothing "Appalachian Lullaby."

All in all though, I wish Shudder to Think would just put out a real album, and stop scoring movies. B (Mike Messaros)

TEATRO
Willie Nelson
Island

We don't get to hear Willie Nelson's distinctive volce until the second track on his new album Teatro. The album opens with the instrumental "Ou Es-Ta, Mon Amour" (which I know means "Where Are You, My Love?" from my few weeks of French class, regardless of the fact that it translates it right on the album) before going into "I Never Cared For You." It's almost as if the album wants you to get used to the atmosphere — we know what Willie sounds like.

And atmosphere plays a huge role on this album. Produced by Daniel Lanios, who was behind Bob Dylan's Time Out Of Mind, Lusctous Jackson's Fever In/ Fever Out and U2's The Joshua Tree, Lanios has given Willie a comeback album, making a readily accessible listen for non-country fans. While Willie's voice takes front and center on almost all tracks (besides the two instrumentals), he is joined by Emmy Lou Harris on 10 tracks (she also contributed to Fever In/ Fever Out, making her Lanios' ringer).

Willie doesn't open up any new wounds for listeners, trading on familiar Willie themes like life on the road ("Home Motel") and lost love ("Somebody Pick Up My Pieces"). All in all, this is Lanios' album, with the drums cracking like whips and guitars gently strummed. Willie's voice floats above it all, creating a lovely crystallized feeling, beauty trapped in the moment. B (M.M.)

Eating Disorder Programs
Fall 1998
Sponsored by University Health Services

Eating Disorder Assessment Program
For individuals—with Nutritionists, Mental Health Clinician, Physician and/or Nurse Practitioner.
Confidentiality Assured.
Call 577-5314, General Medicine 2

Eating Disorder Informational Sessions
Facilitated by a UHS Nutritionist, these drop in sessions will include a video and discussion about eating disorders, where to go for help and learn how to help a friend. Registration is not required for these sessions that will meet on Sept. 23, Oct. 20, Nov. 4 and Dec 1. in Room 302 at University Health Services, 4:00 - 5:30 pm.

Residence Hall Workshops
Body Image and Understanding Eating Disorders
Workshops are available upon request. Contact your Resident Assistant to schedule a workshop.

TRAVEL SMART!
BEST PRICES FROM BOSTON TO EUROPE, WITHIN THE U.S., AND DESTINATIONS AROUND THE WORLD
CALL 800-272-9676
E-MAIL sales@prismtours.com
OR VISIT US AT www.prismtours.com
Eurailpasses and Student ID cards available.
PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Avenue
New York, NY 10017

U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
North Amherst Motors A Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd.
North Amherst, MA
549-RENT
Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday AM - Starting at $59.95
• Cars • Mini Vans
• Trucks
• Cargo Vans
• 15 Passenger Vans
• Low Daily/Weekly/ Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older
• Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
(On bus route - one mile from UMass)

NEW AEROBICS NEW
CARDIO-KICKBOXING • YOGA
• Classes Daily
• Certified Instructors
• Suspended Wood Floor
• Area's Largest Room
www.amherstathletic.com
AMHERST ATHLETIC CLUB
460 West Street
South Amherst, 256-0080

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students! 545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

AND THE WINNER IS...
results of the 1998 Collegian Scavenger Hunt held Sunday, October 26th
Thanks to everyone who participated!

Hurricanes head back to the promised land

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — The full impact of the Miami Hurricanes' triumph over West Virginia didn't hit defensive end Derrick Ham until somebody told him about the latest polls.

The Hurricanes, who hadn't received a vote the previous week, vaulted all the way to 25th on the strength of Saturday's 34-31 victory.

"I didn't expect a jump like that," Ham said yesterday. "I figured we'd make some kind of jump, but not like that."

Now that the Hurricanes have the attention of poll voters, there's the chance to do some serious climbing over the next month, beginning Saturday night when Boston College visits the Orange Bowl.

The game begins a four-week run in which the Hurricanes (4-2, 2-1 Big East) follow Boston College with Temple and Pittsburgh, none with more than three wins this season.

Sweeping that trio would put Miami at 7-2 before a tough final stretch featuring a trip to No. 17 Syracuse and its rescheduled showdown against No. 2 UCLA.

"If we keep winning, we could be in the top 15 going to Syracuse," said Ham, who has seven of Miami's 16 sacks this season.

But first things first. After finally turning the corner by showing the ability to beat a ranked opponent, the Hurricanes suddenly have to guard against complacency.

"I think this is a bigger week for myself and the other leaders on this team," quarterback Scott Covington said. "I'd hate to see what we accomplished in West Virginia go to waste. It's our job to get these guys to really focus."

Saturday's win ended a frustrating stretch of nearly two years in which the Hurricanes hadn't beaten a ranked opponent, a span of five games.

The Hurricanes led Virginia Tech before losing in overtime, then came away from a 26-14 loss to then-No. 8 Florida State feeling they had held their own. The win in Morgantown removed a huge mental barrier.

"It obviously validates what we've been telling them in practice and over the summer," coach Butch Davis said. "If you're willing to work and make the sacrifices, something good is going to happen. And something good did happen. But it can't stop there."

Boston College (3-4, 2-2) opened the season 3-0, including a 41-31 victory over No. 23 Georgia Tech, but hasn't won since. Mike Cloud leads the Big East in rushing at 164.6 yards per game, but the Eagles have given up at least 32 points in three of their past four outings.

"It looks like turnovers have been a part of it," Davis said. "They've moved the ball at will between the 20s, then they get in the red zone and struggle. Against Virginia Tech, they drove they length of the field and got to the 18-yard line, then threw an interception that was returned 94 yards for a touchdown."

The Hurricanes also are well aware of how Temple scored the year's biggest upset two weeks ago against Virginia Tech.

"It shows that any team can beat any other college team," linebacker Dan Morgan said. "We've got to play these games with discipline. If we don't, we've seen what can happen."

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Close, but no cigar

After dropping two tight contests to open the season, Nick Stephens and the Massachusetts hockey team will next head to the ice on Friday night at 7 p.m. when they host Merrimack.

Georgia looks to continue winning ways vs. UF

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — This used to be the most frightening game on Georgia's schedule. Not anymore.

The No. 11 Bulldogs finally have some first-hand experience when it comes to beating Florida, instead of relying on stories from the good ol' days about Vince Dooley and Herschel Walker.

"We go into this game knowing we can win," linebacker Orantes Grant said yesterday. "Now, everyone knows what we're capable of doing. People say we kind of snuck up on them last year, but they're not saying that anymore. They know we're here to compete for the Southeastern Conference championship every year."

Georgia (6-1, 4-1 SEC) ended a seven-year losing streak against No. 6 Florida (6-1, 4-1) last season in Jacksonville, turning the "World's Largest Outdoor Cocktail Party" into a mass catharsis for Bulldogs everywhere.

Robert Edwards scored four touchdowns and Georgia romped to a 37-17 victory.

"It was great to go back home," said cornerback Jeff Harris, a native of Jacksonville. "I had this big smile on my face the whole time. It's something that words can't describe. It felt so good."

Like most teams in the SEC, Georgia spent most of the 1990's serving as the whimpering nerd to Florida's schoolyard bully. The Gators won seven straight games over the Dawgs from 1990-96, a galling blow to Georgia fans who had gotten used to dominating the series during Dooley's 25-year tenure as coach.

The low point came in 1995 when Florida rolled to a 52-17 victory in Athens (the series went home-and-home for two years while a stadium was built in Jacksonville). The Gators salted the wounds by scoring a late touchdown because, as coach Steve Spurrier explained, he wanted to be the first visiting team to put up 50 points at Sanford Stadium.

"A lot of people approached me saying we have to do something about it," said Jim Donnan, who took over as the Georgia coach the following year.

The situation didn't improve in 1996 when a Florida team that would eventually claim the national championship routed the Bulldogs 47-7.

"Some of those teams that Florida had were so good, and we knew they were good," safety Kirby Smart said. "We knew if things didn't go exactly right, the game could get out of hand. I mean, they had five or six guys who are in the NFL right now."

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

The final countdown

Cindy Garceau and the Massachusetts women's soccer team will travel to Duquesne and St. Bonaventure this weekend with the hopes of qualifying for the A-10 tourney.

Live Music.. McMurphy's Uptown Tavern
EVERY WED.
GUITAR DUDES
31 North
Pleasant St.

Protect Yourself from the SCARY TERRIFYING DEMONS
Treat a Friend, Partner or Yourself to a
HALLOWEEN SURPRISE!
Pick up a free treat at our CAMPUS CRYPTS
Practice Safer sex
Compliments of the Peer Health Education

Inspired Minds Wanted
Where you work should be a place that inspires the mind.
Imagine that.
Visit www.EDS-Imagine-IT.com and ask yourself,
What Inspires You?
A more productive way of working
EDS
EDS & the EDS logo are registered marks of Electronic Data Systems Corporation
EDS is an equal opportunity employer, m/f/v/d. ©1998 Electronic Data Systems Corporation. All rights reserved.

amc
Hampshire 6 - 584-7560
Hampshire Mall
Mt. Farms 4 - 584-9383
Mt. Farms Mall
WHAT DREAMS MAY COME (PG-13) Today at 8:10
Soldier (R) *Today at (6:00 @ 52.50) *8:30
PRACTICAL MAGIC (PG-13) Today at (5:50 @ 52.50) 8:00
BELOVED (R) Today at (4:00 @ 52.50) 7:30
RONIN (R) Today at (5:40 @ 52.50)
RUSH HOUR (PG-13) Today at (5:30 @ 52.50) 8:10
URBAN LEGEND (R) Today at 8:10
APT Pupil (R) *Today at (5:40 @ 7.50) *8:20
Pleasantville (PG-13) *Today at (5:20 @ 52.50) *8:00
ANTZ (PG) Today at (5:50 @ 52.50) 8:30
BRIDE of CHUCKY (R) Today at (6:00 @ 52.50) 8:40
Night at the ROXBURY (PG-13) Today at (6:00 @ 7.50)
* Second Engagement no Passes or Coupons
$2.50 (Tue-Lite) Shows Quality

ALLISON L. KOLINS
ATTORNEY AT LAW
77 Prospect Street – Suite 6
Northampton, Massachusetts 01060
(413) 585-0690 • allisonk@javanet.com

UMass INTRAMURAL SPORTS GET THOSE FORMS IN BY
3 on 3 Basketball (M/W/C).....11/2
Holiday Basketball (M/W).....11/2
Spring Basketball(M/W/C).....12/7
Mandatory clinics for Spring Basketball officials are scheduled in two parts. A part #1 clinic for returning officials only is scheduled for 1/26/99 at 6pm. Call for clinic location.
Don't Miss The... ACTION
For entry forms and info
545-2693
545-0022
On the Web: http://www.umass.edu/umlm

Attention Seniors Looking For A Career And Juniors Interested In Summer Internships
Meet J.Kent McHose
Chairman of Filene's
Tomorrow
Thursday, October 29th
Memorial Hal
6:00pm - 8:00pm
Come Hear About Our Exit Career Opportunities. Resumes Will Be Accepted. Refreshments Will Be Served And Seating Is Limited. Enter To Win A $100 Filene's Gift Certificate www.maycompany.com e-mail: recruiting@filene's.com

What's he high on now?
Support
LESS CRIMES NO ACCIDENT
It takes you ... and programs that work.
1-800-WE PREVENT
Ad Council
CRIME

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

AUTO FOR SALE

86 Toyota Pick-Up 4x4 Runs great. $1900/BO. Call Mark 256-0416.

88 Honda Civic 5 speed, 166K, many new parts, well-maintained, runs great. $1100 or B/O. 268-0388.

College Carl Pontiac Sunbird. Runs perfect! $800/BO. 259-1915.

93 Geo Metro 60,000 miles. Great gas mileage. Good condition. $1000. Call Kirsten 548-6941.

88 Dodge Colt Wgn 127K miles. $900. Runs good. 549-1010.

CARS $100-$500 Police Impounds. Hondas, Chevys, Jeeps, & Sport Utilities. MUST SELL! 1-800-522-2730 x4554

COMPUTERS

Macintosh Printer Color StyleWriter 1500 $100 or B/O. Call Tony @ 549-5514.

486 Computer Great For Student Works Good $100. Color VGA $50. (413)584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Best Part-Time Job In The Valley

You don't have to wash dishes or flip burgers for the extra money you need. Become a Clean Water Action organizer and earn $7.30-$9.00/hr fighting air and water pollution. Paid training, flexible schedule, evening and weekend hours. 584-9830.

Looking for outgoing motivated students for campus spokesperson position. 10-15hrs/wk On-campus. Flexible hours. $10-$12/hr. Please contact Dan Wolman @ Campus Information Services. 800-922-5579.

EMPLOYMENT

INSURANCE SALES

Earn $35,000+ in your 1st year as a personal lines account exec. If you have the drive and ambition to succeed, are well organized and have exceptional interpersonal skills, start your career in homeowner/auto insurance sales. We will train the right individual to sell our highly competitive insurance products and provide you with unlimited qualified leads. Candidate must be willing to work evening. We offer a competitive base + commission and complete benefits package. Send resume to W.D. Grinnell, Webber and Grinnell Insurance Agency, PO Box 58, Northampton, MA

WEBBER & GRINNELL INSURANCE

CHILDREN'S HEALTH RESEARCH

Abt Associates is recruiting Research Interviewers to participate on a Federally sponsored national survey of the immunization status of children. Interested applicants should be able to work a minimum of 20 hours per week evenings including 1 weekend shift. The position requires good communication skills and some computer experience. Hourly wages start at $6.25/hour, $6.88/hour weekends, with regular merit increases. Health and Dental Insurance is available. For further information, or to arrange a personal interview contact: 1-800-792-4514. Abt Associates is an equal opportunity employer.

EARN CASH Flexible Hours Now Hiring At Sbarros Hampshire Mall

EMPLOYMENT

Kai Chi Restaurant hiring waitstaff/drivers. Apply in person after 5pm.

Legal Assistants Wanted Spring 1999 Internships with Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary— training provided. Deadline to begin the application process is Nov 13, 1998— Contact The Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Paid Marketing Internship Campus Street Reps Wanted: to market and promote animalhouse.com, the ultimate online college community. E-mail us at campus@animalhouse.com or call 800-254-8433.

Wanted 98 People We'll pay you to lose up to 29+ lbs. Expires 11/11/98. 1-703-817-1071

Waitress Part-Time Make $400 & work 2 or 3 nights. Flexible hours. Dancers For Upscale Gentleman's Club No experience necessary. Unlimited $$$ Potential. Bikini, Topless, or Nude! Call 413-536-0502

Drivers Wanted Pays $9 to $15 per hour. Inside help wanted too. Flexible hours. Call Dominos 256-8911

ENTERTAINMENT

Lights and Sound: Rave to Dorm Party. Your DJ's or ours. Call BARR Productions (413)737-8561.

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Free delivery. 253-9742.

FOR SALE

Must sell Millennium high quality 150 watt house speakers. Brand new, in the box. Retail $800. Asking $400 or B/O for the pair. Comes with warranty. Call 549-6592.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

We're here to pump... YOU UP! Creatine Monohydrate, Creatine Surge, DHEA, Whey Protein and more from Fitness Workshop delivered right to your door. 1-877-FIT-WORK. www.fitnessworkshop.com

HOUSE FOR RENT

Summer Rentals Cape Cod Group Summer Rentals. Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Call Diamond Real Estate 1-508-477-1900.

INSTRUCTION

KICKBOXING INSTRUCTION Personal training. Workouts customized to meet your fitness goals. Joe 548-8979. Leave message.

CARDIO KICKBOXING Amherst Athletic Club. Train with the pros! 256-0080.

LOST & FOUND

Ladies Watch Lost- Pay phones between Haigis Mall and Herter or entrance to Morrill Auditorium. 532-7730.

Thursday Night at The Pub- Lost my mother's engagement ring! Huge sentimental value! Call Jenn 256-0375.

MISCELLANEOUS

Think Different $500-$1000 part-time per month. No experience needed. Will train. Free information packet. 413-788-9838. cleanair@javanet.com

PERSONALS

Alumnus from Boston area looking for a pen pal. Any age O.K. Address: Rick Lewis 40 Hampton Rd. Sharon, MA 02067 Phone: 781-784-3470 Please Write To Me.

ROOM FOR RENT

1 bedroom in 3 bedroom apartment. 10 minutes from UMass campus. Big back yard, quiet area. Call Katie 256-5995.

Quiet setting, kitchen privileges. Laundry, parking, nonsmoking. $350. 549-4853.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst Area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TO SUBLET

4 bedroom apartment on Main St. Nicest place in Amherst. Walk to town. Available Jan 1st. Call 256-0416.

3 bedroom apt for sublet. $875 per month, all utilities included. On bus route. Cliffside Apt. For more info call (413)665-0052.

TRAVEL

#1 SPRING BREAK OPERATORI Check out our web-site for the best deals! www.vagabondtours.com Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica & Florida Group organizers EARN FREE TRIPS & CASH... Call Today! 800-700-0790

SPRING BREAK '99 Cancun & Bahamas: Sign up now and get free meals/drinks! Florida, Jamaica, and South Padre available! Sell Trips and Travel Free! Call for free brochure. 1-888-777-4642

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK '99 Largest selection of Spring Break Destinations, including Cruises! Foam Parties, Drink Specials, and Club Admissions. Group Discounts. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-FUN

WANTED

NOTICE

If anyone saw the incident at Pruddy's on Friday, Oct 16, involving a student and bouncers, please call me- A.J. 256-2075

Active Women Needed For Nutritional Study Graduate Research Study in Zinc Supplementation. 18 to 40 years old and exercising 3 times a week. Call Christy at 532-2733.

WANTED TO RENT

Looking to sublet from Jan 1-June 1. 2 or 3 bedrooms. Call 546-1747.

The Classifieds... Does a body GOOD!!!

ARE YOU LOW ON CASH?

ARE YOU LOOKING FOR A JOB?

CHECK OUT THE CLASSIFIEDS AND SEE WHAT OPPORTUNITIES ARE OUT THERE FOR YOU!

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 28

Meeting — The UMass Poetry Society will have a meeting at 7 p.m. in Campus Center room 902. All are welcome.

Meeting — There will be a "student only" information and planning meeting for all Native American students at the White Eagle Cultural Center at 7 p.m.

Meeting — The University Student Film Society will hold its first meeting at 8 p.m. in the Student Union Colonial Lounge.

Open House — UVC-TV 19 will hold an open house from 1-5 p.m. in the UVC-TV studio located in Student Union room 216.

Workshop — There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 7 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

THURSDAY, OCT. 29

Lecture — A lecture will be given by Dr. James Nestor at 7 p.m. in room 124 Hasbrouck. The lecture is sportsored by the UMass Arts Council, the SGA, and the GSS.

Lecture — A lecture entitled "Queer Identity, Feminist Fetishes, and Subversive Desire in the Sex Industry" will be held at 12:30 p.m. in Campus Center room 903.

Presentation — A presentation entitled "Reporting Under Fire: A Journalist in Caucasian War Zone" will be at 7 p.m. in the Executive Board Room at the Willis-Hallowell Conference Center at Mount Holyoke College.

Presentation — A slide presentation from The Passionate Camera: Photography and the Bodies of Desire will be shown at 7:30 p.m. in Campus Center room 168.

Reading — Jean Baker Miller and Irene Stiver will read from "The Healing Connection: How Women Form Relationships in Therapy and in Life" at 7:30 p.m. in the New York Room in Mary Woolley Hall at Mount Holyoke College.

Reception — A photo presentation by Kane Stewart will be shown in the Gallery of the Union. Hands-on participants is limited to 30, but everybody is welcome to watch.

The reception will be from 5-7 p.m. in the Gallery, and the exhibit runs until Nov. 15.

Speech — Peace activists from each of the major ethnic groups in the former Yugoslavia will talk about their experiences in a talk entitled "Roads to Reconciliation: Peacebuilding in the Former Yugoslavia." The speech begins at 7:45 p.m. in room 163C of the Campus Center.

Workshop — A workshop on contraception and safer sex will be held at 3 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

Workshop — A workshop by professional fimo artist Evan Gerher will be held from 6-8:30 p.m. in the Craft Center of the Student Union. Hands-on participants is limited to 30, but everybody is welcome to watch.

Workshop — A workshop for women survivors of childhood sexual abuse will take place on Nov. 7. The workshop includes writing, drawing, and movement. In the evening, participants are also invited to perform dances, music, and monologues about healing from abuse. Call 586-7190 for more information and to sign up.

NOTICES

Community — Official Mail-In Voter Registration Forms are available at the Registrar's Office, and Commuter Services in the Student Union. Voting is on Nov. 3.

Exhibit — "Equal Partners" is being shown at the Smith College Museum of Art from Sept. 25-Dec. 13. This exhibit showcases the work of 15 American firms founded by female/male partners.

Submissions — The UMass Poetry Society is seeking submissions to its anthology. Call Joshua at 546-5825 for more details.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Next time, try US first. NEW US Store Not like a mall... Closer.

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 28, 1998

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Wishbone (R)	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		John Glenn, American Hero (R)		Apollo 12: Uncensored		Leonard Bernstein: Reaching for the Note (In Stereo) (R)
WFSB	3	News (R)	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Nanny (R)	Maggie	To Have & to Hold (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope (In Stereo) (R)		News (R)	Late Show (R)
WBZ	4	News (R)	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Nanny (R)	Maggie	To Have & to Hold (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope (In Stereo) (R)		News	Late Show (R)
WCVB	5	News (R)	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle (R)	Dharma-Greg	Two Guys-Girl	Drew Carey (R)	Secret Lives	20/20 (R)		News (R)	Nightline (R)
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny (R)	Friends (R)	Dawson's Creek (In Stereo) (R)		Charmed "Deus Man Dating" (R)		News		Friends (R)	Nanny (R)
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	Dateline (In Stereo) (R)		3rd Rock-Sun	Newsradio (R)	Law & Order (R) (In Stereo) (R)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	20	Married...With	Home Imp.	Judge Judy (R)	Judge Judy (R)	7 Days "Vows" (In Stereo) (R)		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		News	Newsradio (R)	Newsradio (R)	LAPD
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy (R)	Dateline (In Stereo) (R)		3rd Rock-Sun	Newsradio (R)	Law & Order (R) (In Stereo) (R)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons (R)	Friends (R)	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Party of Five (In Stereo) (R)		News		Friends (R)	Med Attt. You
WWLP	22	News (R)	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	Dateline (In Stereo) (R)		3rd Rock-Sun	Newsradio (R)	Law & Order (R) (In Stereo) (R)		News (R)	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		John Glenn, American Hero (R)		Leonard Bernstein: Reaching for the Note (In Stereo) (R)				Charlie Rose (In Stereo) (R)
WGGB	40	News (R)	ABC News	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	Dharma-Greg	Two Guys-Girl	Drew Carey (R)	Secret Lives	20/20 (R)		News (R)	Nightline (R)
WSBK	38	Judge Judy (R)	Judge Judy (R)	NHL Hockey	Boston Bruins at Montreal Canadiens (Live)					Med Attt. You	Med Attt. You	Frasier (R)	Cheers (R)
WTBS	46	Family Matters	Family Matters	Roseanne (R)	Roseanne (R)	★★ "Hit by Davidson and the Marlboro Man" (1991, Adventure)				★★ "The Punisher" (1990, Adventure) Dolph Lundgren.
A&E	69	Northern Exposure (R)		Law & Order "Star Struck" (R)		Biography: Heidi Fleiss-Madam		American Justice		Sherlock Holmes Mysteries (R)		Law & Order "The Blue Wall" (R)
CNN	23	Worldview (R)	Moneyline	Newshour (R)	Crossfire (R)	World Today (R)		Larry King Live (R)		Newsstand: Fortune (R)		Sports	Moneyline (R)
COM	26	Comedy Hell	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	Kickin' Aspen: Comedy		Comedy Hell	Drew Carey	South Park	Friar's Club Roast		Daily Show
DISC	48	New House	Fix-It-Line	Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery: Rhinos		Discover Magazine (R)		Secrets of Alcatraz (R)		Justice Files (R)
ESPN	64	Up Close	Sportscenter		PBA Bowling	Bay City Classic (Live)		Wonderful World of Golf		NFL's Greatest		Sportscenter (R)
LIFE	32	Ellen (R)	Ellen (R)	Party of Five "Gimme Shelter"		Chicago Hope (In Stereo) (R)		"Stranger at My Home" (1997, Drama) Veronica Hamel.				New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	53	(5:30) Jams Countdown		Biorhythm (R)	Beavis-Butt.	Eye Spy Video	Say What?	Total Request Live (In Stereo)		True Life (R)	Revue	Cut (In Stereo)	Loveline
NICK	59	Figure It Out	Secret of Alex	Doug (R)	Rugrats (R)	Hey Arnold! (R)	Allen Strange	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Happy Days	Laverne	I Love Lucy (R)	Bewitched
SCIFI	63	Quantum Leap (In Stereo) (R)		Masters		Star Trek "Obsession" (R)		★★ "Nightbound: Hellraiser II" (1988, Horror) Clare Higgins.				Masters	Star Trek (R)
TLC	28	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours "Indecent Proposal"		Extreme Machines (R)		Climatic Catastrophe (R)		Crater of Death		Extreme Machines (R)
TNT	54	Babylon 5 "Chrysalis" (R)		ER "The Right Thing" (In Stereo)		★★ "Dracula: Dead and Loving It" (1995, Comedy) Leslie Nielsen.				Babylon 5 (R) (In Stereo) (R)		"Dracula: Dead and Loving It"
USA	55	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Xena: Warrior Princess (R)		Walker, Texas Ranger (R)		"The Fury Within" (1998, Horror) Kly Shawky, Costas Mandylor. (R)		New York Undercover (R)
HBO	33	(3:45) "Stevi"	"The Naked Gun 2 1/2: The Smell of Fear" (1991)			★★★ "Men in Black" (1997) Tommy Lee Jones. "PG-13" (R)				Oz "Plan B" (R) (In Stereo) (R)		Chris Rock (R)	Laugh Attack!
MAX	60	★★★ "That Thing You Do!" (1996) Tom Everett Scott. "PG" (R)				★★★ "The Dead Zone" (1983, Suspense) Christopher Walken. "R"				★★½ "Murder at 1600" (1997, Suspense) Wesley Snipes. "R" (R)
SHOW	65	★★ "Dreamer" (1979, Drama) Tim Matheson, Susan Blakely. "PG"				★★ "Stranger in Town" (1998, Drama) Harry Hamlin.		Seven Years		★ "Wishmaster" (1997) Tammy Lauren. "R" (R)			Compromising

HSCN 4 Hampshire Cablevision Network

HSCN	Bulletin Board	18	The Learning Channel
2	CBS/3 Hartford	19	UVC-TV19
3	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
4	ABC/5 Boston	21	Gavel to Gavel
5	MNS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
6	HSCN Movie Ch.	23	Syndance
7	UPN/20 Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
8	Weather Channel	25	CTN
9	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
10	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
11	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
12	WCCH & HSCN	30	Univision
13	Internacional	31	Comedy Central
14	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
15	WB/New Haven	33	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

Rose Is Rose By Pat Brady

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Non Sequitur By Wiley

Liberty Meadows By Frank Cho

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Sven By Stephen Higgins

Cathy By Cathy Guisewite

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Spunk By Mike LaRiccia

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — Understanding all sides is the key today. You must be willing to accept the notion that a different point of view can work for some people.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — What you observe today can prove to be quite insiructive for you. Later, carefully put what you've learned into practice.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You won't want to do many chores today, but there is none in particular that should get your full attention. Get it done!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb 18) — What appears easy for some people may be quite difficult for you today. However, you'll soon feel as though you can compete on the same level.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — Someone close to you is in for a surprise today. All you have to do is stick to your schedule and avoid drawing undue attention.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — You may be feeling unusually subdued today. Perhaps it's a change of heart, but it's more likely that you're resting up for an energy surge.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — This is a good day for you to feed your head with things that will enable you to pursue new goals with a more healthy attitude.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You won't be pleased with anything that seems gaudy or phony today. You only want the "real thing," no matter what the category.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — Decisionmaking is not likely to come easy for you today, and why should it? The fact is, you've got too much time to consider your options.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — You're in no mood to wait for others to make up their minds today, but you're going to have to be patient. Limiting others' choices is the wrong move.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — Your ability to see and appreciate both sides of every issue is sure to slow you down today. You'll have to make a decision sooner or later!

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — There's more to life than being "fair," and you may discover today that you're capable of taking action that proves to be somewhat controversial.

Quote of the Day

"My butt smells like sewage!!"

–Overheard in Southwest

Close to Home By John McPherson

In an effort to reduce injuries, many high school football conferences have adopted the two-handed tickle-tackling rule.

ACROSS

1 Janitorial needs
5 Protoundness
10 Robin Hood's Friar
14 "With," to Henri
15 Old cattle town
16 Pretty soon
17 First or reverse
18 Actress Streep
19 VIP's car
20 Certain confidentes
22 Group of eight
23 Not idle
24 Captain Kirk's navigator
26 Gobbled up
29 Rite
33 Wake
34 Regretting
35 Animal park
36 Prince Valiant's son
37 Potters' needs
38 Mork's home
39 Sault — Marie
40 Move in a sneaky way
41 Minister's home
43 Wages
45 Curved moldings
46 Sommer of films
47 Plateau
49 "Bolero" composer
52 Upright
56 Surrounded by 57 Await
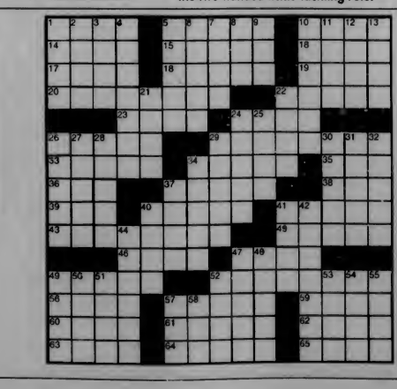
59 Variable star
60 Complete
61 Orchestra's output
62 Trudge
63 Spruce, e.g.
64 Pamphlet
65 Brown hues



DOWN

1 Wise Men
2 Bakery need
3 Pod items
4 Secretaries of ancient times
5 Round tops
6 Grinding material
7 Golf scores
8 Quaker pronoun
9 Actor Linden
10 Bath powder
11 Actress Moon — Zappa
12 Arrive
13 Granny, for one
21 Desert sight
22 Cassini of fashion
24 Fishing device
25 Vases
26 Use a pencil
27 Major artery
28 Piano fixer
29 Picks over
30 Lightning by-product
31 Scandinavian
32 Garment parts
34 Crest
37 Muscle problem
40 Window part
41 Nearly all
42 "— the Wind"
44 Sewing tool
47 Hospital worker
48 Construct
49 Huck's transport
50 China/Russia divider
51 Disgusting
52 Travel document
53 Soft drink
54 Bard's river
55 Falls behind
57 Oily
58 Prickly seedcase

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

Y	A	R	D		A	B	A	S	H		J	O	A	N
O	B	I	E		D	O	G	I	E		U	R	S	A
M	U	L	L		L	O	O	N	Y		N	A	P	S
T	E	E	M	I	N	G		W	E	L	S	H
			T	U	B	E		A	S	E	A
S	L	E	D	S		O	U	T	B	U	R	S	T
A	C	I	D	S		U	F	O	E	S		H	U	E
R	O	B		A	L	B	U	M		E	R	A
C	O	Y		A	S	T	I	R		M	E	A	L	S
S	T	A	L	M	A	R	T		B	E	T	S	E	Y
		U	N	A		D	A	N	E
H	A	P	T	S		F	I	G	U	R	E	D
U	T	A	H		H	O	R	N	E		N	O	A	K
S	E	R	E		I	D	E	A	L		A	I	D	E
K	E	R	R		P	A	T	H	S		D	E	A	N

10-28-98 © 1998, United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Turkey Bacon Swiss Folded Pita
Meatball Grinder
Spicy Black Bean Burger

DINNER
Turkey Tenderloin
Roast Beef with Black Pepper Crust
Beans and Rice
Grilled Chicken Sandwich

Worcester

LUNCH
Tacos
Hungarian Noodle Bake
Ziti/Tomato Sauce
Vegetable Tacos

DINNER
Turkey Fillet/Pesto Sauce
Stuffed Shells and Sauce
Roman Rice and Beans
Tri-Colored Tortellini

Hampshire

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Taco
Grilled Cheese Sandwich

DINNER
Roast Beef w/Black Pepper Crust
Turkey Tenderloin Fillet

Berkshire

LUNCH
Taco
Grilled Chicken Sandwich
Vegetable Taco

DINNER
Turkey Fillet/Sundried Tomato Pesto
Roast Top Round of Beef
Rotini w/Garden Vegetables
Pastabilities

Night Editor — Lorraine Kennedy
Photo Technician — Stacy Cohen
Copy Editor — Laura Portier
Production Supervisor — Jaylyn Lambard
Production Staff — Sably Am

SPORTS

Some key issues about class; plus some final tidbits

I know that I usually write about nonsense which has little to do with baseball, but since this is my last column, I thought I would actually do my job for a change...

Believe it or not, there is a decent guy beneath the tough exterior of New York Mets' catcher Mike Piazza.

When he signed the richest contract in baseball history on Monday, he did so with the utmost class. Instead of filing for free agency and salivating from high bidders lined up in both leagues, he waited for a reasonable offer from NY and took the hometown discount... and trust me, it was a discount.

Aaron Saykin

As this trend of outrageous salary inflation continues, Piazza could have demanded anywhere from over $15 million per year (his new average salary) up to and including $20 million. But, the Mets came to him with this bargain deal and he took it without shopping elsewhere.

Why did he do this? Because he likes playing in New York, because he became a fan favorite by season's end with his clutch hitting, and because he was sick of being shipped across the country.

• Why won't Mo Vaughn do this? Well that's an entirely different story. Boston management isn't exactly creating an atmosphere conducive for keeping and/or attracting players (... you know what I mean, John Harrington). Vaughn wasted no time filing for free agency, and most Sox fans don't blame him for doing so.

Unfortunately, this is the only way Vaughn can extract any respect or closure from the Boston front office, whose members are literally forcing him out of Beantown in favor of finding another bargain player (need I remind them of the recent Jack Clark, Rob Deer, Wes Chamberlain, Kevin Mitchell, and Otis Nixon experiments). The sad tune of penny pitching on Yawkey Way plays on ...

• Although personal bias leads me to think that all Yankee players are jerks, I do feel that Bernie Williams is leaving New York with the same amount of class that Piazza showed when he decided to stay. Instead of jumping at the first opportunity to file for free agency, Bernie waited until after the celebratory parade to do so, hoping he would not tarnish his farewell to the Yankee fans.

And now that I have established that Bernie is a nice guy and that he has no desire to stay in New York, I can begin to speculate about the possibility of him wearing a Red Sox uniform. Why not?

Mo doesn't want to stay, centerfield regular Darren Lewis is likely to leave, and Sox GM Dan Duquette is looking for a power bat to hit in the third spot. Suspend your disbelief for a few days Boston fans. If Mo leaves, look for the Duke to enter the Williams bidding war.

• Also up for grabs in the off-season is Astro ace Randy Johnson, for whom the Sox will also offer a modest (very, very modest) bid. Although he may be 36 years old, Duquette ought to realize that older pitchers still have good stuff (e.g. — the Roger Clemens faux pas).

The Duke also passed Al Leiter's name in the free-agent-to-look-at mix, but according to reports, Leiter has agreed in principle to resign with the Mets.

• Alright, enough with this boring news. I can't take it anymore. Here are some one-line baseball blurbs.

... Padre relief pitching criteria: no pulse after the seventh inning in World Series play.

... I bet former Philly John Kruk misses playing with a ball more than most other retired guys do.

... Did you see Mark McGwire bare-hand that ball in the stands? He looked like David Wells at a buffet.

... George Steinbrenner wasn't crying after the World Series. He's so fat, he was sweating out of his eyes.

... No one knows croquet like Bill Buckner.

... With a nose as big as his, I bet Nomar Garciaparra can smell another playoff berth next year (I have a big nose too, Nomar, so don't feel bad.)

... Roquine worked for Karl Malone, so why doesn't it work for Cal Ripken, Matt Williams and Will Clark. Try Propecia guys!

... And finally, today's trivia: Who has more paternity suits, Shawn Kemp or Gary Sheffield?

... Answer: "I didn't committ paternity, your honor," Sheffield said. "I thought I was here because I'm someone's father."

Before I forget, since this is my last baseball column I would like to thank all of you for reading my weekly junk. 1998 was one of the best seasons I have ever seen since I started watching baseball as a pudgy little lad in Holyoke. I hope you enjoyed it as much as I did.

Aaron Saykin is a Collegian columnist.

Field hockey turns focus to Big Green

Dartmouth last opportunity for pre–tournament tune–up

By Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

In a week and a half, the Massachusetts field hockey team will travel to Philadelphia to play in the Atlantic 10 championships, a tournament in which the Minutewomen will be the No. 1 seed.

Four days ago, UMass left its collective heart on the turf of Richard F. Garber Field, after playing arch rival Connecticut to a 2–1 double–overtime loss.

Today, however, the Minutewomen must focus on their final regular season game, when they travel to Dartmouth for a 2 p.m. contest at Chase Field.

"We don't know that much about Dartmouth," UMass coach Patty Shea said. "They play in a competitive league, the Big East, and they play a grass game."

Playing on grass, as opposed to the home field AstroTurf, should not pose much of a problem for the Minutewomen. They have already played in several grass field contests this season, and they practiced on the intramural fields next to the William D. Mullins Center this afternoon.

"You have to be prepared for everything," Shea said. "This is our fourth grass game this season, so we know that the game is a little slower. But you still have to put the ball in the net."

Despite the fact UMass came out with a loss in last Saturday's hard–fought tilt against UConn, Shea is not concerned about an emotional letdown when her team faces the Big Green.

"I think they realize the potential within themselves," Shea said. "They need to come out with the exact same emotion and desire and drive. They know this is the last opportunity to step up before we go to the conference tournament."

The Minutewomen will have two weeks off before heading to A-10s, which will be hosted by Temple University. UMass, the two–time defending champs, have already locked up the No. 1 seed for the weekend event.

The rest of the tournament field has not yet been decided because several games remain on the conference slate for the other Atlantic 10 schools.

"We really had no choice in [the schedule]," Shea said. "We ended up with a bye week during the last week of the regular season. And it's hard to get other teams to play [at this time] because they are also playing their conference games. We would like to have another competitive game, instead we'll go hard tomorrow and in practice."

The Minutewomen are currently led by several players, including senior Erica Johnston and freshman Anke Bruemmer. Bruemmer, who plays defense, leads the team with 19 points. She has scored nine goals and tallied an assist on Kerry Lyons' game-tying goal against UConn.

Johnston, an All–America candidate, recently broke the 100 career points mark with a goal two weeks ago against Temple. She currently stands fourth on the career points list and third on the career goals scored list.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Kate Putnam has been a consistent offensive threat for the Massachusetts field hockey team this season.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Vicky Browne will look to add to her team leading 12 assists this afternoon when the Minutewomen head north to face Dartmouth.

Upsets in NFL send league into tailspin

Well the entire National Football League has gone haywire.

The Jacksonville Jaguars (5–2), and the New England Patriots (4–3) have each lost two in a row since starting the season off well. The Miami Dolphins (5–2) are in first place of the AFC East. The Buffalo Bills (4–3) are good again (are you kidding me). Finally the Oakland Raiders (5–2) are in second place behind only the undefeated defending Super Bowl Champs, the Denver Broncos (7–0), and that's only referring to the AFC.

In the NFC, the pesky Aints (4–3) are still around having defeated the Tampa Bay Bucs (3–4) in a 9–5 win on Sunday. Dallas (4–3) is still leading the worst division in football. The Minnesota Vikings (7–0) are still undefeated and will probably challenge the 1972 Miami Dolphins for the only undefeated season in NFL history, why not? Oh yeah that's right, the 49ers (6–1) are leading the NFC West but are not running away with it — things that make you hmmm.

Paul Teves

My only question is when do the Carolina Panthers (0–7) get to play the Washington Redskins (0–7), so that they can tie?

Let's talk good news. First there is the Buffalo Bills, who have won four in a row behind Doug Flutie. The bad news for them is that they paid a ridiculous amount of money for Rob Johnson.

Then their is the Denver Broncos who aren't likely to lose a game for the rest of the season, after all who's going to beat them. The only game their in danger of losing is the Super Bowl, when John Elway takes on an even older quarterback named Randall Cunningham, and his Vikings club.

Jimmy Johnson is happy, his team is 5–2 and alone at the top of the division having just beaten a physically undermanned Patriot team 12–9 in overtime. The only bad news for Johnson's Dolphins is that they have to play the Bills this week, and that the second place Patriots despite injuries should beat Peyton Manning and the unable Colts (1–6).

Kansas City (4–3) is struggling to get wins lately, but the good thing for them is that the New York Jets (4–3) and the Tuna are coming to town, and probably aren't ready to face an Arrowhead crowd.

The good news for NFL fans is that no one in the NFC East was in action this week and we didn't have to watch the Redskins play.

The Chicago Bears (3–5) are the surprise team of the year, having won three out of eight games, most recently a 23–20 win over the Tennessee Oilers (3–4).

Now that we have discussed all the good news in the NFL, lets talk about my personal bad news. I have picked eight games this season, in a season of upsets, and have only nailed two. This is the week though, I can feel it.

So let's get to it with this weeks five picks to boost that record. Lets stick with the two winners. We have to go with the Broncos who will dispose of an otherwise up and down team the Cincinnati Bengals this week by more than 11.

The other gimme is the Vikings by six over the Bucs. Let's face it the Bucs are not even a shade of the team they were last year, and this week isn't the week they will turn it around.

The names of the week are Detroit Lions (2–5) quarterback Charlie Batch and running backs, Barry Sanders. Yes they have struggled, but their at home and Sanders has recently picked it up and expect them to win by six over the Arizona Cardinals (3–4).

What ever you do this week take the New York Giants (3–4) over the ailing Redskins by 2 1/2 it's got to be the biggest gimme of the week.

Some of you might say these are the easy picks, well that's the point. I want to win just like the Redskins, hopefully I have a better chance.

Finally, I'm going to select the game the toughest game to call. There's a tough game that is to be played in Green Bay this week between the Packers and the 49ers. The Niners are getting three points, and yes it is in Lambeau Field, but the tundra is not yet frozen, so expect Steve Young, Jerry Rice, Terrell Owens and J.J. Stokes to be throwing all over the place on a really weak secondary.

The Niners will win this game there is no need for the points but take them anyway.

Last word: Expect the Bills and the amazing Doug Flutie to expose the Dolphins for the mediocre team that they are, and remember the Patriots almost beat them without their entire receiving core. The Dolphins are a could–be–but– really–aren't team.

Paul Teves is a Collegian Columnist

UM men's tennis beat by St. John's, 5-2 in final home match of season

By Michael Kabylanski
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's tennis team fell to 4–3 this fall season thanks to a 5–2 loss at the hands of St. John's yesterday afternoon at Upper Boyden Courts.

The Minutemen could only muster victories from Fabian Rabanal and Parsi Samii in falling to the Red Storm.

Rabanal defeated Andre Vainer 6–2, 5–5 (retired) in the No. 2 singles spot, while Samii was a 6–1 winner over Christian Covere in the No. 5 singles position.

Yesterday's match was the first time Rabanal had played as high as the No. 2 seed, who plays out of the No. 3 slot most of the time. The win over Vainer also improved Rabanal's individual mark on the year to 8–5.

Samii's win evened out his singles record on the year at 4–4.

Other winners for the Minutemen included the doubles team of Josh Bainton and Todd Champeau, who were 8–6 winners over Covere and Nikhil Teppara in the No. 3 doubles position. The two are now 4–1 as a team in action on the courts this season.

Erik Scharf of St. John's downed UMass' Rob Manchester 6–0, 6–3 in the No. 1 singles spot, while Todd Cheney was downed by laideep Shetty in the No. 5 singles position.

Cameron Lore disposed of Bo Navarro 6–1, 6–2 in the No. 4 singles matchup, while Eric Reblin fell to Teppara 6–4, 6–2 in the final singles contest.

On the doubles side of things, it was Scharf and Schetty teaming up to beat Manchester and Navarro 8–4 in the No. 1 position, while Vainer and Lore combined to take care of Cheney and Reblin 8–6 in the No. 2 doubles match.

Yesterday's match was also the final home match of the season for the Minutemen, who were on a roll before the setback at the hands of the Red Storm.

However, the Minutemen bounced back quickly from a tough loss against regional rival Connecticut a few weeks back. They will now look to do the same thing next week when they travel to Princeton, NJ for the Rolex Championships.

That tournament will feature various teams from throughout the region and will run from Thursday, November 5 through Sunday, November 8.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts men's tennis team lost to St. John's 5–2 yesterday afternoon at Upper Boyden Courts.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 37 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Thursday, October 29, 1998

Fright night

It's that time of year again as Halloween hits UMass. Check our guide to how to make that party just right (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Three for three, all for one

Senior midfielder Vicky Browne had an assist on all of the goals by freshman back Anke Bruemmer, whose hat-trick led the way in Minutewomen's victory over Dartmouth yesterday (see Sports, page 16).

WORLD

English boy dies from deodorant abuse

MANCHESTER, England (AP) — A 16-year-old boy obsessed with smelling nice died after months of repeatedly spraying his entire body with deodorant, a coroner ruled yesterday.

Jonathan Capewell had 10 times the lethal dosage of propane and butane in his blood when he suffered a heart attack and died July 29, coroner Barrie Williams said.

It is believed the fumes built up in his body following months of "high" deodorant use, Williams said.

"His personal hygiene led him to use more than was normal in a confined space, which limits ventilation," said the coroner, who recorded the death as accidental. Jonathan's father, Keith Capewell, said his son would cover his entire body with deodorant at least twice a day.

"When we told him he was using too much, he said he just wanted to smell good," Capewell said.

"Even when we were in a room downstairs we couldn't just smell it, we could taste it," the father said.

NATION

Gymnast Moceanu declared legal adult

HOUSTON (AP) — Seventeen-year-old Dominique Moceanu entered the adult world yesterday after a judge approved a settlement to give the Olympic gymnast independence from her parents.

The high school senior and 1996 gold medalist was declared a legal adult without any challenge from her parents.

The deal allows her to demand information about trust fund money that she claims her father has squandered. State judge John Montgomery also dropped a court order keeping Dumitru and Camilia Moceanu away from their daughter.

Jimmy Phillips Jr., an attorney for the gymnast's parents, declined comment on why they dropped their challenge.

Moceanu ran away from home more than a week ago and sued to be declared an adult. She claimed earnings in her trust fund bankrolled unauthorized risky investments and a $4 million gym bearing her name.

Her attorney, Roy Moore, believes the trust is structured so she won't obtain control over the assets until she turns 35. It's unclear how much money remains in her trust.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 53 LOW: 31	HIGH: 54 LOW: 33	HIGH: 53 LOW: 33

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 14
Comics page15
Crossword .....page 15
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 14
News.....page 2
Sports .....page 16

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

SGA discusses position move

By Julie Fialkow
Collegian Staff

A motion was passed at last night's University of Massachusetts Student Government Association (SGA) concerning the position of Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs.

The faculty senate passed a motion last Thursday which would move student affairs under the position of the provost. This would allow faculty affairs control over student concerns such as University Health Services and Housing Services.

ROBERTO DELGADO / COLLEGIAN

Salwa Shamapande

"There is some indication that the chancellor might vote in this direction. [It's] important to make a statement about this, we need to do this as soon as possible," said Resa Singleton, student coordinator for the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA.)

The SGA motion asks that the status of the Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs not be determined until the Chancellor's Student Affairs Restructuring Committee releases its report.

Senator Vivian Onuoha (Central at–large) wrote the motion and urged the senate to vote on it tonight, as opposed to bringing it first to a committee, and voting on it next week.

"We could lose integrity and power as a senate," said Onuoha.

SGA President Salwa Shamapande also commented on the urgency of the motion.

"We need to vote on this today. The chancellor could vote on their recommendation without our input tomorrow. It's possible," he said.

The senate allowed the motion to be considered even though it had not been reviewed under committee, and passed it unanimously. Now Chancellor David K. Scott must vote on the two motions.

Senator Daniel Friedman (commuter area,) also tried to get a motion heard before the senate that had not been brought to commitee, but failed.

The motion called for the elimination of Saturday final exams because of its conflict with the Jewish Sabbath. Friedman argued in his motion that finals are not scheduled on Sundays for similar reasons.

He adds asking a Jewish student to break a religious law is disrespectful, and that the University's registrar's office can make other arrangements to eliminate scheduling Saturday exams.

Senator Brandon Beane (commuter area) spoke before the senate as to why the motion should not be included in the meeting's agenda.

"There is a process we must adhere to as a body. Especially when bills are not urgent like this," said Beane. "It is not a good idea."

Beane asked if there was any other reason to do this besides public relations.

Freidman said because no other motions were being discussed at tonight's meeting, he felt it would be a good time to talk about it.

"It would be nice to talk about a motion, rather than just talk about the committees," he said. "We have nothing else to do."

Friedman emphasized senate's purpose: to benefit the student body through action.

"I don't think any student on campus cares about committee appointments," he said.

Senator Paul Ferro (commuter area) commented on Onuoha's motion being passed without going before a committee, while Friedman's motion was rejected for the same reason.

"Why should we slap Senator Friedman in the face?" Ferro asked.

Onuoha responded, "I don't know Senator Friedman and I'm not trying to slap him in the face."

Senator Ari Molovinsky (Central at-large) questioned the nature of the debating that took place throughout the meeting.

"Do you feel all the time we spend discussing whether or not something should be discussed, could be spent doing something?"

University administration considers grouping honors student together

ROBERTO DELGADO / COLLEGIAN

Orchard Hill Residential Area.

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts has proposed to arrange for all incoming honors freshmen to live in designated educational or honor residential areas starting the fall of 1999.

Some of the areas that would currently fit under this description include Grayson-Field honor floors in Orchard Hill, TAP programs, and the Foreign Language Program.

However, to meet the increasing number of honors students and those wanting to live in an honors designated area, the University has proposed to increase the Orchard Hill residential space for honors students.

Therese Pasquale, associate director of residential academic programs (RAP), feels that these changes would make the honors college seem more of a concept.

"Unlike before, where a honors student could choose where they wanted to live, the University will expect honors students to live on the hill," Pasquale said. "The intention of Orchard Hill was to provide an area to house honors students together."

The new policy is a concern for Orchard Hill residents who feel that their housing space is at the risk of being taken over by honors students. Communications major Linda Reid, a resident of Field Residence Hall, feels that the new proposition is not in the overall favor of residents in Orchard Hill.

"I think it's a good idea to place honors students together in an area," Reid said. "However, I don't think it's fair to limit their experiences by forcing them to live in a particular area while forcing others out."

Deputy Provost Norman Aitken feels that these changes to the honors area would instill a more academic focus for all students and residents, while minimizing the number of residents having to leave the hill.

"We do not want to displace any residents from the Orchard Hill Residential Area," Aitken said. "Our commitment would be to keep students on the hill, while allowing incoming freshman to become part of a more cohesive program at the University."

However, Pasquale feels that the process would considerably mean more students having to move out of Orchard Hill.

"Unlike before, upperclassmen will not be able to live on the hill for all four years," Pasquale said, "Grayson-Field will become a little different, but I don't see this affecting Webster-zDickinson."

According to the University, one third of Orchard Hill would still be available for upperclassmen.

ROBERTO DELGADO / COLLEGIAN

What are these?

The sculptures adjacent to the Marshall Annex building are mysteriously unfolding.

Welfare cutoff looms

Thousands to be affected by state legislation

By Robin Estrin
Associated Press

BOSTON — Little more than a month away, Dec. 1 looms large in the eyes of thousands of Massachusetts residents whose welfare benefits stand to be cut.

Since the state's welfare reform law was signed in 1996, Dec. 1 has been the cutoff date for the first group of people — virtually all of them women with children — whose benefits would be terminated.

Now, however, the state says the cutoff date is being delayed, albeit slightly. Welfare recipients will likely receive at least another check in December.

But state welfare officials deny it's a campaign of holiday cheer.

Christmas spirit "has nothing to do with it," said Dick Powers, spokesman for the Department of Transitional Assistance. "It's an operational thing."

The department plans to evaluate each of the estimated 6,000 families who stand to lose their benefits to see if any qualify for extensions, Powers said.

Since welfare recipients are guaranteed benefits until Nov. 30, it would be impossible for the department to analyze every case in just a day.

"We will enforce the two-year time limit," acting Gov. Paul Cellucci said yesterday. "The Department of Transitional Assistance wants to make sure we do it right."

Under state welfare reform law, able-bodied welfare recipients whose children are older than 2 will lose their cash assistance after two years unless the state qualifies them for exemptions. In December 1996, there were 41,037 families who would be subject to the two-year time limits. Since then, some 34,000 families have left the rolls. Some got jobs, others left the state, still others moved in with relatives.

As of last month, there were 7,148 families preparing for the Dec. 1 cutoff, although Powers anticipates the actual number will be around 6,000 by the deadline.

Powers said most welfare recipients will likely receive an additional benefit check in the first two weeks of December. That's consistent with the 10-day grace period the department provides when it closes any welfare case.

"We just don't close anybody willynilly because a computer says it closes on this date," he said. "We give them an opportunity to reverse that decision."

So far, only about 300 families have applied for extensions, although the department expects that number to grow to as many as 3,000.

The department has not yet decided whether officials will close cases as they are completed, or continue to pay benefits to everyone until all

Local students to trick or treat in Northeast

Holyoke, Springfield kids expected for celebration

By Molly Cahill
Collegian Correspondent

Residents of Sylvan and Northeast will be getting into the Halloween spirit tonight as they host an evening of spooky fun for area children.

Beginning at 4:30 p.m., approximately 150 little witches, ghosts and goblins will be arriving on the University of Massachusetts campus to tour Hamlin, Dwight, Leach, Crabtree, Thatcher and Lewis dormitories.

The dormitory hallways will be decorated by residents in full Halloween style. The children will trick–or–treat door–to–door in the halls and residents will be passing out candy.

In addition to collecting goodies, the costumed kids will be treated to a spooky experience in the Haunted House (Leach Basement).

The Haunted House will be open until the activities end at 8 p.m. A pizza party is scheduled for after the tours.

Angela Chu, a resident assistant in Leach, said a lot of work has gone into preparing for the evening.

"We were helped out a lot by community stores... the Halloween Express, the Campus Center Hotel, which gave us white sheets to make ghost costumes," Chu said.

"The Hatch donated 100 pizzas for the party, and Stop & Shop let us buy our soda in bulk at sale prices."

Three community centers have worked with UMass to make this Halloween special.

The children, most of whom are from Springfield and Holyoke, belong to the Holyoke YMCA, The South End Community Center of Springfield, and The Springfield Boys and Girls Club.

Chu said anyone interested in volunteering is welcome to join the fun.

There will be tour guide meetings in the basement of Leach at 4 p.m., 5 p.m., 6 p.m. and 8 p.m. Additionally, individuals are needed to help staff the pizza area.

For more information call the Leach Cluster Office at 545- 2034. All are invited to volunteer, but there is one requirement, bring a costume.

Ballot question will determine if Northampton High School receives funds for renovations

By Stacey Shackford
Collegian Staff

Northampton mayor Mary Ford has faith in the ability of student voters to make a difference at the polls Nov. 3.

She is counting on the student vote next Tuesday to ensure a victory on a Northampton ballot proposition authorizing the city to borrow $6.8 million from tax payers to fund a $22 million renovation of Northampton High School.

"Students have a fairly recent memory of what it like to be in a building where physical conditions negatively affect the learning environment," she said after comparing the disrepair at Northampton High School to the crumbling state of some University of Massachusetts lecture halls.

She explained that Ward 3, the area spanning from downtown Northampton to the Coolidge Bridge, is heavily populated by students.

"In that area there is a giant pendulum swing depending on whether students come to the polls," Ford said.

Northampton High School has not undergone a major renovation since it was rebuilt 60 years ago. According to Ford, the current physical environment is not creating a supportive atmosphere for the application of modern teaching methods and technology.

Due to limited funds in the past, the city was forced to skip maintenance. The result is floor tile worn down to concrete in the stairwells, an outdated electric and heating system, poor air quality, and a plumbing system that is "totally beyond repair."

Renovation of existing facilities is the heart of the Northampton High School proposal.

A new addition is also planned, as well as site improvements that would introduce the high school to the cutting edge of technology and provide student athletes adequate sports facilities.

These improvements are meant to benefit all students, whether their plans for the future are entering college or the work force. The renovation is also titled to bring the high school up to modern standards for an accreditation review that will take place in two years.

"When you have chemistry assignments stopped because the breakers trip and the teachers have to leave the room to reset them, that's a problem," said Susan Drzewianowski, owner of Harlow Leather and Luggage in downtown Northampton.

Drzewianowski proudly displays a sign that reads "Yes for NHS" in her store window. She has two sons who currently attend the high school, and is representative of a large number of parents and teachers who are supporting the renovation.

"My sons won't benefit from this, but I'm happy to see it being done," she said. "This comes from a person whose property tax and business tax will be affected [by the proposal] but I'm all in favor of it."

Although reaction on the streets of Northampton was overwhelmingly supportive, there will certainly be a number of "No" votes cast on the Nov. 3 ballot.

Approximately $16 million, of the $22 million project, will be contributed by the state, leaving a $6 million direct cost to Northampton tax payers. This factors out to an average property tax increase of $45 a year for a median house assessed at $132,000.

"People on a fixed income are going to weigh carefully the requirement to vote up their own taxes," Ford said. "Some people will also vote no because they assume we are not handling the budget right."

Ford said the town's education system is still reeling from a $3 million cut in the annual budget from 1992. Northampton has received few benefits from the state's education basic aid formula. She stressed that the town was forced to appeal to voters because it would not be able to pay off the $22 million project within its budget.

This is not the first time Northampton has been forced to appeal to voters. In fact, this is the third time in five years. The first appeal was the refurbishment of the middle school, the second was the rebuilding of the fire house.

"I'm worried the voters will say no to more taxes," Ford said. "But I feel it's a cost effective proposal, and a reasonable amount to ask. It is critical that it passes."

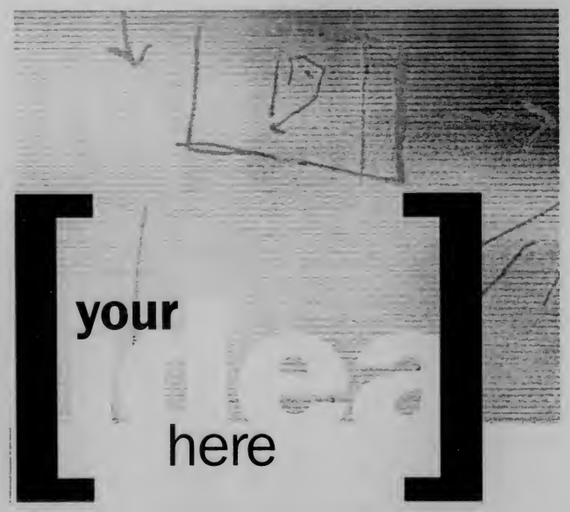
The question as it will appear on the ballot:

"Shall the city of Northampton be allowed to exempt from the provisions of proposition two and one-half, so-called, the amounts required to pay for the bond issued in order to finance the planning, remodeling, reconstructing, and making extraordinary repairs to the High School, and for constructing, originally equipping and furnishing an addition thereto, including the acquisition of land necessary therefor?"

ROBERTO DELGADO / COLLEGIAN

Du Bois in the distance

A student walks up the pathway behind Bartlett Hall yesterday afternoon.



~NEWS IS HIRING!~

The Daily Collegian's News Department is hiring News Associate Editors.

News associates get to cover exciting events on-campus and in Amherst and other local areas. Reporting meetings, breaking news, and scandals are all part of a day's work for a News Associate.

So don't wait! Come down to the Collegian and ask for Jill Carroll, news editor. You'll be glad you did.

But wait! Sound a little overwhelming? Well then be a Collegian correspondent and write at your pace and level.

Interested in full-time or internship opportunities?
Microsoft Company Presentation
11:30 am, Thurs., October 29, in the Career Development Center Workshop Room at Mount Holyoke College
and
5:30 pm, Thurs., October 29th in the Neilson Library Browsing Room at Smith College
Bring Your Resume - Free Pizza
Win a free Palm-Sized PC running Windows CE
www.microsoft.com/college/

Microsoft®

Historians say impeachment unjustified

By Mike Feinsilber
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Former Rep. Peter Rodino, who presided over the impeachment hearings of President Nixon, says President Clinton's behavior does not justify impeaching him.

In a petition to the nation, more than 400 historians agree and say the impeachment of Clinton would cripple future presidents.

Rodino, an 89-year-old Democrat, said the charges against Clinton — of lying under oath about his sexual affair with a former intern — do not reach the level "where we have to consider it to be a ground to remove from office the president of the United States."

His comments were made in an interview Tuesday with New Jersey Network's "Caucus NJ" public television program and quoted in his hometown newspaper, The Star-Ledger of Newark. Previously, Rodino had little to say about the Clinton matter.

The House, which authorized an impeachment inquiry three weeks ago on a 258-176 vote, is expected to start the inquiry after next week's elections. The historians said the House's actions are "extremely ominous for the future of our political institutions."

"If carried forward, they will leave the presidency permanently disfigured and diminished, at the mercy as never before of the caprices of any Congress. The presidency... will be crippled in meeting the inevitable challenges of the future," they said.

The decision to gather signatures and make a public statement grew out of a conversation between Sean Wilentz of Princeton and Arthur M. Schlesinger Jr., a historian who served in President Kennedy's White House. Both were dismayed about the implications of an attempt to impeach Clinton, Wilentz said.

He said he sent e-mails to 30 or 40 historians who might share their view and within three days 300 historians agreed to sign the statement.

"We touched a nerve," he said. Schlesinger called the reaction "astonishing."

Among the signers were some of the nation's best-known historians: Doris Kearns Goodwin, biographer of Franklin and Eleanor Roosevelt and Lyndon Johnson; Stephen Ambrose, who writes about World War II; Civil War historian James McPherson of Princeton; Henry Louis Gates of Harvard; civil rights leader Julian Bond of the University of Virginia; Lincoln biographer David Henry Donald of Harvard; journalist and author Garry Wills of Northwestern; Taylor Branch of Goucher College, historian of the civil rights movement; Douglas Brinkley of the University of New Orleans; Alan Brinkley of Columbia; James MacGregor Burns of the University of Maryland; and John Hope Franklin of Duke.

ROBERTO DELGADO / COLLEGIAN

Just passing by

Students walk by the rest area adjacent to Bartlett Hall yesterday afternoon, perhaps reminiscing about the long gone summer days.

32 believed dead after hurricane batters Honduras

By Victor R. Caivano
Associated Press

LA CEIBA, Honduras — Hurricane Mitch paused in its whirl through the western Caribbean yesterday to punish Honduras with 120 mph winds, sweeping away bridges, flooding neighborhoods and killing at least 32 people.

Mitch was drifting west at only 2 mph over the Bay Islands, a Honduras tourist area popular with American scuba divers and beachcombers.

The storm was only 30 miles off the coast, and hurricane-force winds stretched 105 miles from the storm's center. That meant the Honduran coast and a good portion of the interior was under hurricane conditions for more than a day.

"The hurricane has destroyed almost everything," said Mike Brown, a resident of Guanaja Island who was within miles of the eye of the hurricane. "Few houses have remained standing."

At its peak Tuesday, Mitch was classified as the fourth-strongest Caribbean hurricane this century with 180 mph winds. By yesterday afternoon, the 350-mile-wide storm still packed a punch, but its sustained winds were down to 120 mph.

The U.S. National Weather Service said only three Atlantic storms were stronger than Mitch at its peak: Gilbert in 1988, Allen in 1980 and the Labor Day hurricane of 1935.

The rainfall — up to 25 inches in mountain areas — began to take a toll. More than 50 rivers had overran their banks, and the government evacuated more than 45,000 people from low-lying areas, according to Col. Guillermo Pinel, chief of the National Emergency Committee.

Many towns were cut off by washed-out roads and downed bridges, and severed phone lines on the Bay Islands, making it difficult to gauge the extent of the damage. The government said 72,000 people were forced to flee their homes.

President Carlos Flores Facusse declared the Caribbean coast a disaster zone, and officials said 23 people had died in Honduras alone, including 14 on Guanaja.

Five people were killed in La Ceiba, including three police officers swept into a river in their car, said regional police chief Maria Lisa Borjas.

Glenn ready for takeoff

By Marica Dunn
Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The stakes are higher than ever for NASA as it counts down the final hours to John Glenn's heralded return to orbit on "Today," and the man in charge of spaceflight knows it.

"As a person responsible for this mission, I feel an awesome responsibility and apprehension that everything goes well. This is special," Joe Rothenberg said after having lunch with the 77-year-old Glenn yesterday.

As always, Rothenberg said, NASA has done everything possible to ensure the safety of space shuttle Discovery and its seven-member crew. But the fact that one of them is Glenn, the first American to orbit the Earth and a senator for the past 24 years, has upped the ante if anything goes wrong.

"Would it be any different from any mission? Sure," Rothenberg said. "Because like having a teacher on board, it really has got very high visibility and an awful lot of people would look at it as something happening to an American hero and we were part of the process. There's no question about that."

Glenn was so beloved by America after his 1962 flight, in fact, that President Kennedy reportedly instructed NASA not to fly him again — he didn't want to risk the astronaut's life. Glenn never got to ask Kennedy if this was true; the president was dead by the time Glenn heard about it.

Schoolchildren around the country will be watching Glenn's return to space, just as youngsters watched on Jan. 28, 1986, when schoolteacher Christa McAuliffe soared aboard Challenger. She and the six others on board were killed when the shuttle blew up 73 seconds into flight.

Up to a quarter-million people are expected to converge on the area for a glimpse of the launch. That doesn't count the 3,000 reporters expected for liftoff, or the 70 members of Congress, or President Clinton and his entourage.

Everything seemed to be in NASA's favor heading into the final hours — the countdown was humming along and perfect launch weather was forecast.

"It looks like Mother Nature wants John Glenn to return to space as much as the rest of us," said Air Force Capt. Clif Stargardt, a meteorologist.

Glenn spent yesterday, his last day on Earth for the next 1 1/2 weeks, reviewing flight plans and greeting well-wishers from afar. The seven astronauts stood near their launch pad, waving and shouting to relatives and friends kept 20 feet away to prevent the crew from catching a cold.

"A little different trip this time," Glenn called out in response to a question. Then: "Oh, don't worry, I'll get some window time." On his five-hour Mercury flight, Glenn had almost no time for sightseeing.

Fourteen busloads of people traveled to the pad to wave goodbye and take pictures of the crew. It took longer than planned to get all those people where they needed to be, and it delayed the crew's training-jet session. Glenn opted out of the jet flight once it was postponed.

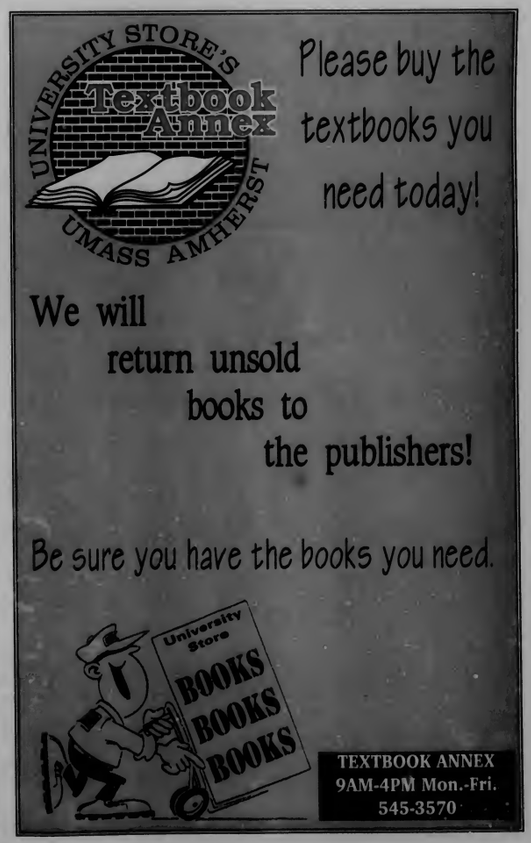
Glenn left the crowd in the front passenger seat of a sporty convertible driven by his commander, Curtis Brown Jr. "Hey, buckle up!" Brown shouted, and everyone did.

AG meets with pro-choice group

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some abortion rights supporters said they came away encouraged by a meeting with Attorney General Janet Reno on violence directed at doctors and clinics that perform abortions.

About 20 representatives of several groups — from service providers to activists who protect clinics — met with Reno for about an hour yesterday, days after a Buffalo, N.Y.-area doctor, Barnett Slepian, was shot to death in his kitchen by a sniper.

"It was an extremely productive meeting. We came away from it very optimistic that the attorney general, who has always been very responsive, is going to be even more so and is prepared to take on some vigorous and coordinated work," said Gloria Feldt, president of Planned Parenthood, which lobbies for abortion rights.



"She understands the urgency and the fact that although we have freedom of access and that the Justice Department has certainly stepped up its activities, she clearly understands how dire the situation is right now," Feldt said.

Feldt said Reno listened carefully to the suggestions the representatives offered and agreed to study them.

"We expect we will have another meeting and continue to pursue various action — both prevention and apprehension," Feldt said.

The suggestions included taking steps to make sure that different law enforcement agencies share what information they have on suspects.

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

More candy for me

I've always been competitive. Just ask my best friend, although she doesn't go to school here. She'll tell you about Halloweens when we were kids, dressed as lumpy ballerinas with so many layers under our skimpy leotards that we were turned away from porches with whispered comments like, "Those girls don't need any candy. We should send all these Reese's cups to children in Africa."

We'd try every house anyway. We'd run up to each porch, but I was the fastest because, well, my best friend was wimpy when we were kids, and I was older and bigger than her sister and her sister's best friend.

I ignored our dads who would yell out, "Slow down, Alexis. No more chocolate for you! Ever." But I was on a mission — I'd reach a walkway, and I'd start sprinting at "Chariots of Fire" played in the background. My technique was that of a field hockey player-to-be: I ran with my elbows turned out so that no one could fight their way ahead of me.

Yes, I led the pack of giggly girls, high on chocolate and sugar, to each and every porch. When the door opened, I'd thrust my plastic pumpkin forward and grab fistfuls of bite-sized Hershey bars. Sometimes my best friend would protest: "You got seven chocolate bars and Caroline only got one grape with a razor in it." But usually they wouldn't complain. They just weren't as competitive as I was.

At the end of the night, we'd count how many pieces we had, and when we were little, I usually had the most. Of course, after I had been home for 10 minutes, half of it was usually in my tummy, razor blades and all. But it was the bellyache of the truly victorious.

My competitive edge has died away somewhat in recent years. I suppose I realized that I can't be the best at everything, so why bother competing? In elementary school, being the best was easy because half the kids didn't get that there was more to life than picking their noses. In the adult world, people still pick their noses, but they spend less time doing that and more time trying to do something useful that they're good at.

Our society places a lot of emphasis on "the best." As a nation we are concerned about being the best in the world, and thus we want the best economy, the best standard of living, the best health care, the best military, and so on. Our economy is heavily focused on productivity and having the best products to compete in the global marketplace, and this obsession with being the best becomes a part of the way that we think as a society.

Alexis Pushkar

We want the best of everything, including the best bodies and the best minds. We derive pleasure from people saying things about us like, "She has the best legs," or, "He is the best at chemistry."

However, not everyone can be the best at something on an objective scale, and there is nothing wrong with being average. For many people, competing to be the best on an objective scale is a lost cause, but this should not be a source of discouragement because an objective scale has little merit, in my opinion. It's nice if someone is the world's expert on radish mold, but I don't think that makes him or her better than me, even though I am the world's expert on nothing.

> "In the adult world, people still pick their noses, but they spend less time doing that and more time trying to do something useful that they're good at."

My friend "Sabrina" says that the important thing is that you are the best at being you. I think she has been watching too much Mr. Rogers lately, but the point is valid. Why waste time comparing yourself to people who are completely different from you? What do you gain if you decide that your eyebrows are the best? Your eyebrows are determined by your genes and the way that you view them is determined by the environment in which you were raised.

No two people have the same genes or the same environment, so if you try to compare your eyebrows to somebody else's, no valid comparison can be made since this person must have different genes and be from a different environment.

Sometimes comparisons are useful. For example, if you receive the best grade in a class on an exam, you know that you did better than the rest of the class. Whether that has meaning for you or anyone else depends entirely on perspective, however.

Competitive people always want to be the best, but in college and in the adult world, judging a person to be the best at something is not really a useful assessment. Society does not need a collection of people who are the best at something on some arbitrary scale, but rather society needs people who are the best at being who they are and thinking the way that they think. Therefore, in college people do not need to compete against their classmates so much as they need to compete against themselves. Competing against ourselves is the only type of competition that truly has merit.

So this weekend when my best friend and her little sister and her little sister's best friend and I go trick-or-treating around the old neighborhood dressed as obese ballerinas with tumors, things will be different. I'll probably still get high on sugar and run around the neighborhood like a nutcase.

This time I'll be doing it not to beat everyone else, but to achieve my personal best. I'll be the best lumpy ballerina who makes it to the porch first and takes all the candy for myself. That's the best that I can do.

Alexis Pushkar is a Collegian columnist.

Y2K BUG.

Wedding bells at UMass

This past week has been a pretty crazy one for me. I got engaged. I know that I am young and I'm not really on my feet in life yet, but my girlfriend, I mean fiance and I are truly in love.

Our bliss was abruptly ended however, when we told our parents of our plans for matrimony. When we divulged our information to them they all grew quite angry. My mother began throwing candy corn wildly around the house and then became even more enraged when I stepped on one and ground it into the carpet. My fiance's father fainted and fell through their bay window. He had to get 27 stitches in his forehead.

After all the arguing and crying was over our parents decided to disown us and not to pay a dime for the wedding. So now on top of a rug cleaning bill and however much my future father-in-law's stitches cost, we are going to have to pay for our wedding.

This was a big blow for us. We had envisioned a dream wedding in a palace of God with zero gravity. It was going to be the wedding of a lifetime, but why torture myself by thinking about it. We thought of maybe waiting a few years and maybe trying to gain our parents' trust back, but we realized that we were meant for each other. We knew that our love was too strong to wait any longer. So I came up with my best idea yet.

We would be married right on this gloriously beautiful campus. We could not pick a better time of year. Most of the trees are almost barren, showing the beautiful and ever consistent designs of the architectural masterpieces that we pass by everyday; the construction season in full swing. And pretty soon the wind will be cold and strong enough to rip the chaptstick right off your lips.

I figured that with a little planning and with a little help from the UMass community, I could have the greatest wedding this campus has ever seen. My fiance and I went back to the drawing board and this is what we came up with.

The Ceremony.

Our first choice was of course the good old chapel that is on every piece of UMass paraphernalia in order to give the illusion that this is a good-looking campus. However, it is under construction.

Our second choice was the Newman Center. It does have a small church inside and one hell of a snack-bar downstairs. The big drawback to this is that in my three years here I've seen about 100 cars towed from there and it wouldn't be very fitting for our guests to have to pay $85 to retrieve their cars on top of buying us a gift.

Dan Viens

Our third choice and the one we finally settled on is quite unorthodox, but we are really excited about it. It is one of the coolest places on campus that a lot of people don't know about. The sight of my wedding ceremony will be the maze way out behind the football stadium.

For those of you who don't know what it is, it's a chain- link maze that spirals towards the center. We figured that all of our guests could sit outside the perimeter of it and the priest and I could be in the center. Then my fiancee could make her way through the maze until she got to the center. It would be like a test of our love for her to make it all the way through to me.

The Wedding Party.

Of course we will not be able to afford dresses and tuxedos for all of the bridesmaids and ushers. Therefore we will look to the cheerleading squad to donate their uniforms for the bridesmaids and hopefully the band would let us borrow some uniforms for the ushers.

> "I figured that with a little planning and with a little help from the UMass community I could have the greatest wedding this campus has ever seen."

Transportation:

We obviously cannot afford a limousine so we will decorate and take one of those old fashioned-looking PVTA buses to our reception. That is unless the UMass police have a paddy wagon that they are willing to let us use.

The Reception (Dinner):

The dinner could be in the Hampshire Dining Commons because a lot of kids from my hometown work there and one of my friend's dad kind of runs the place. I figured that all of my friends that I invite who are on the meal plan could use their guest meals. Then all of my wedding guests could eat.

Hopefully that day they would have glasses out instead of Styrofoam cups. That way we could do that thing where everyone taps their glass with a knife and then my wife and I would kiss.

Then for dessert we would all go over to what used to be Antonio's and get some of that frozen yogurt that I always see girls eating, even in the middle of December.

The Reception (Dancing):

Next we would jump back into our PVTA that would say "Just Married" on the back and head over to the Cage. There would be balloons and streamers everywhere and of course there would be drinks. We would definitely put aside money for drinks.

Of course we would have to worry about a band. Then I said, "Hey no matter how much we spend on a band it will be better than the one at last year's spring concert!"

The Wedding Night:

After all of the festivities were over, we newlyweds would head over to our room atop the Campus Center Hotel. We would gaze out at the moon glistening off the Campus Pond. We would try to figure out if the Fine Arts Center is really shaped like a piano and we would probably see someone being attacked by a swan. However, it we had no money left maybe I could just convince my roommate to stay at his girlfriend's.

I would like to take this opportunity to extend an invitation to the entire UMass community. This includes alumni. So if anyone like Dr. J, Bill Cosby or Richard Gere is reading, feel free to make an appearance.

I know that my wedding doesn't sound like the typical glamorous wedding, but love is love and UMass is a beautiful place.

Dan Viens is a Collegian columnist.

Don't feel guilty

The other day I sat in Antonio's and eavesdropped. Two average-looking female students were having a discussion over pizza and Coke. The discussion bothered me, but I couldn't at first put my finger on why.

"Ooh, this pizza is so good, I really shouldn't, it's so fattening. (she pauses) Oh yeah, I had soup for lunch, so that's not so bad."

"No, that's OK then. We're being so naughty."

Then it hit me: the word "naughty." If they were talking about their Halloween costumes, then maybe that word would be right. But these were grown women, commiserating about "being bad."

What was so "naughty" about them? Nothing about eating fattening food is naughty, unless perhaps it's one of those "adult-shaped chocolates."

Tanya Mannes

So why do women, and sometimes men, act ashamed of eating? Why do they have to justify every morsel?

It's like people who admit they don't exercise — they act embarrassed, like it's a dirty secret. But why does it matter?

Another example comes to mind. The doctor's office has patients fill in forms before their appointment. I'd be willing to bet most of them lie on the "drinks per day" tally.

But it's not necessary to lie. Drinking alcohol is a traditional, perfectly respectable past-time.

Whiskey is known as "aqua vitae," or water of life. The Bible says, "A little wine is good for the stomach."

In any case, even if I drink a bit much, I'm not hurting anyone — I'm having a good time. It's a social lubricant.

Smoking doesn't offend me either. Why should it? It's obvious that smokers are now social pariahs.

If I ask someone if he smokes, he might put on a guilty face and say he is trying to quit.

If he doesn't smoke, he will self- righteously say, "Smoking — yuck! I would never. It's filthy. You don't, do you?" It's very annoying. I asked someone if he smoked the other day, and he cringed.

"Yeah, but I'm trying really hard to quit. I know it's a disgusting habit."

Maybe it isn't the nicest habit, but I can think of plenty of moral faults in a person that far outweigh any such petty, annoying quirks.

I'd rather be friends with a smoker than a liar, for instance. Let's admit it: a bit of lingering smoke in someone's clothes is not a big deal. I don't care who has allergies.

These days, it's not true morality but regular exercise and low-fat food that constitute 'clean living.' A beer belly or cellulite doesn't offend me — it's none of my business.

The Monica Lewinsky saga offends me, but her weight certainly doesn't. I am angry at the media for putting down her appearance, dismissing her because she was "fat," and by some leap, therefore lazy and immoral.

Likewise, self-righteous health nuts dismiss the pleasure in many not-good-for-you things. They make it hard for the rest of us to have fun. We're guilty if we're not sober, healthy, celibate and in shape.

This is a world in which we are protected from the desires of our own bodies. If we don't take good care of ourselves, if we can just relax and enjoy something good, we are looked at with suspicion. We are not to be trusted.

Since when did the American body become a temple of purity?

Perhaps we invent new "sins" as our concept of religion shrinks. It's related to Puritanical self-control; working out becomes a sort of ritual, purification through pain.

People frown upon pleasure. Fat people are seen as "lazy," and smokers are "filthy." People who like sex are "sex addicts." Social drinkers are "borderline alcoholics."

Now that it's Halloween, it's time to indulge in some debauchery, some pretend sin. But there are no real sins anymore.

We don't need to wait for Halloween to indulge ourselves by eating lots of candy, or drinking to excess, or "gettin' down."

As a nation, I wish we could get rid of our body-obsessed guilt, and start worrying about more important things.

There is nothing wrong with pleasure. We work hard, and we should play hard, too, unapologetically.

It's not necessary to share in guilt to get our friends' approval. It's better to share, for instance, some really fattening dessert.

Let's hear it for hedonism, and for the pleasures of the flesh.

Tanya Mannes is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor-in-Chief  Position Vacant Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
Steve Salerno Jr. Advertising Manager David Parmenter Advertising Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Laura Forster Developing Nations Editor
Mike Messaros Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Co-Jewish Affairs Editor
Morgan Tobor Co-Jewish Affairs Editor
Heather Lei Guzzetta Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jill Carroll News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylanski Sports Editor
Allana E. Todman Women's Issues Editor
Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Prentes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

"What's your favorite scary movie?"

We're spoiled. Hauntingly so. Each year, we (being American audiences) are treated to a bevy of new horror films from Hollywood, mostly coming from the hip mind of one man, Kevin Williamson.

Williamson's Scream informed studios that they once again could mass-produce low-budget scare flicks and make back their money (and then some) with the paychecks of the teenage, shock-loving crowd.

So then came Scream 2, I Know What You Did Last Summer, Halloween H20, Disturbing Behavior and Urban Legend. Next comes I Still Know What You Did Last Summer, The Faculty, Killing Mrs. Tingle and Scream 3. Seven of these were either written or co-written by Williamson.

The style of these films is of the traditional slasher pic inspired by B-movies and John Carpenter's classic Halloween. But this time, the teens are more knowledgeable, prettier, and have a disturbingly vocabulary. Williamson is, after all, the creator of Dawson's Creek," where 15-year-olds look and talk like arvard graduates.

Bryan McAllister

Unfortunately, despite the pleasure of Williamson's tewering of the horror genre, Hollywood seems to have icked, in recent years, the traditional Halloween elements — ghosts, witches, the supernatural — which made some of their earlier movies so deliciously scary.

Now, while this problem may be traced back directly to Billy Crabby's Ghost Dad, it still doesn't explain why a genre so fruitful in the past can't be resurrected. Old movies like The Ghost and Mrs. Muir and old literature like Hamlet have provided us with a taste of what the other-world can offer.

Luckily, with the release of Beloved, ghosts are slightly back in fashion. Of course, Beloved isn't exactly a ghost movie, and it's not really something you'd go see for a good time either.

But there once was a time when ghost

Turn to MOVIES, page 9

Haunting music for your Halloween Party

I have no costume, and have no idea what I will be doing Halloween night, but I do know that I want to do (Alien Sex Fiend at MonRay!). Halloween came up unexpectedly for me, which is unusual because Halloween is undoubtedly my favorite holiday. Even as a child I tried to be as outlandish with my costumes as possible, although I was afraid that people in other countries would see our "trick or treating" rituals as begging for food door to door, wearing costumes because we're too embarrassed.

With nothing to wear and no definite plans, I am left envisioning what the ultimate Halloween party would be. And the first thing that pops into mind is what type of music to play. If you're planning a Halloween party, please toss your "Monster Mash" albums and try something that is a bit more ambient. Here's a few of my picks for the ultimate Halloween music. Good luck finding some of this stuff.

Kevin Monahan

Alien Sex Fiend — This band will be playing at MonRay in Cambridge Saturday night (I hope to be there). Britain's post-Industrial techno-fiends came to fruition, although no major label ever caught on to their freak in the 80s. Their intense and introspective work remains underrated and more than satisfying.

Baudaut — Okay, this guy's a goon. "Bela Lugosi's Dead" is a classic, and some people's favorite Bauhaus song by default. Try something off of the Burning from the Inside album. "She's in Parties" is excellent. Peter Murphy's solo work is also appropriate, especially Cascade. "I'll Fall With Your Knife" is a youthful song.

Christian Death — If this isn't a cool name for a band, then I don't know what is. Their stuff with Rozz Williams among their best and Only Theatre of Pain is a spectacular album.

Concrete Blonde — The Bloodletting album is also essential. "Bloodletting" and "Vampire Song"). "The Sky Is Poisonous Garden" and "Friendly Fire" are the best picks from the newer. The only [illegible] Blonde can't even spell Siouxsie and the Banshees Siouxsie Sioux, who [illegible] when it comes to [illegible] never asked [illegible]

Turn to MUSIC, page 9

Treat or treat, sucker

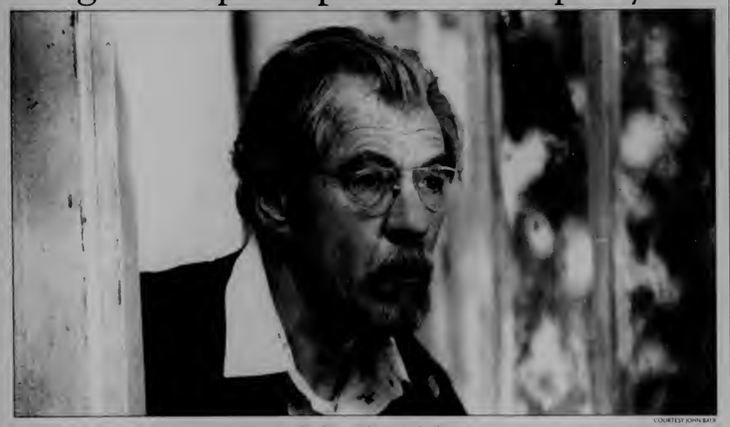
I never liked Almond Joy.

Who does really? When it comes down to it, no one really does. Almond Joy is the red-headed stepchild of candy bars. Because sometimes you feel like a nut, and sometimes you don't. Most of the time you don't.

There was one Halloween, also known as the saddest Halloween ever, when my dog ate all my candy. He spit out the Almond Joy, of course, but he ate everything else. Even the raisins. Even the pennies! That dog got such a beatin'.

And as I sat there and cried (this was last year) over all those slimy, saliva-covered wrappers, I made a mental list of all the sweet emoty that would hold me over until Christmas. "Oh, my poor Mary Janes! Oh, my poor PayDays!" My mom told me to go to sleep and it would be all better.

So being a giddy 20-year-old, I went off to slumberland, dreaming of the morning when all of my candy would be returned to me. I dreamt of mountains of candy, all for me. I dreamt of swimming in pools of chocolate. I dreamt of swimming in mountains of candy bars, like Scrooge McDuck swimming through his money at the beginning of DuckTales. I was going to be Scrooge McDuck. It was going to be a sweet morning. It was going to be all better.



Mike Messaros

And I woke up that glorious morning and ran down the stairs. I looked in the living room. I looked in the kitchen. I woke my mom up: "Where's all the candy mommy?" "The dog ate it, Mike, don't you remember?"

My eyes misted up, remembering the night of my dad force feeding my dog grass, so he wouldn't die of lactose poisoning or [illegible]. "Do you want something to eat, honey?" my mom asked. "Ye," I choked out. "Well, there's some Grapefruits down in the pantry. Or some bananas or [illegible]."

Turn to Page 7, column 2

Singer's Pupil explores evil Apt–ly

COURTESY JOHN BAER

Nazi war criminal Kurt Dussander (Ian McKellen) haunts the life of a young boy in Apt Pupil..

By Adam Martignetti
Collegian Correspondent

APT PUPIL
Directed By Bryan Singer
with Ian McKellen, Brad Renfro, David Schwimmer
Playing at the Hampshire Six Theaters

After The Usual Suspects, Bryan Singer could have directed a bowl of fruit and I would have been excited about it. When he chose the big screen adaptation of Stephen King's novella, Apt Pupil, as his next project, I think everyone began looking forward to an eerie, somewhat twisted introspective of an evil, evil world.

For the most part, Apt Pupil resoundingly meets and surpasses these expectations. The movie tightly melds the dark characters of Stephen King, horror master, with Singer's loose aerial shots and dizzying close–ups, creating an intriguing blend of hatred, amazement, fear and tension.

Todd Bowden is an over–intellectualized high school student who is obsessed with the Holocaust. One day, he discovers that Kurt Dussander, an elderly gentleman in his neighborhood, is an ex–Nazi, who participated in the atrocities of the war. Blackmailing the old man, Todd makes him retell the stories of the crimes committed in exchange for not revealing his true identity to the police.

The movie centers on this love/hate relationship between the boy and the old man, as both are half–haunted and half– exhilarated by their subject matter. Soon the movie becomes a struggle for power in the relationship, a struggle for understanding an evil realm, and a struggle for controlling the power and the evil simultaneously.

Apt Pupil is undoubtedly a character movie — a movie that explores the effect of evil and dementia on two apparently normal minds. Ian McKellen gives incredible depth to his German character, showing not only his hopeless resignation to the boy's demands, but also a certain sadistic delight in meeting these demands. McKellen convincingly conveys the sense of buildup inside him. From his first tale to the boy and throughout their relationship, we see his festering inner darkness gradually mount from a slow simmer to a boiling point.

Brad Renfro is equally good at portraying the white– bread, withdrawn teenager. Renfro's blank stares and dangerously acute curiosity match McKellen step for step. We can see his terror as the images of evil begin to haunt him and his desperation as he realizes that he has entered a world which he can not easily leave.

Watching the two characters transform and be transformed by their forbidden relationship is a pleasure, sadistic perhaps, that maintains a certain exciting intensity level throughout the film. We are likely frightened by their subject matter, but nonetheless intrigued by how the two will handle it. Evil might not make for uplifting or enriching conversation; however, it is almost always fascinating in a morose way. This fascination drives Apt Pupil.

All the meanwhile, Bryan Singer is in the background masterfully puppeteering the characters and the settings. It's amazing how much about the two characters is revealed just through his shots of their eyes. McKellen always has that certain twinkle in his eyes that seems to say "I know more than you do. You don't want to know what I do."

We can see through him, into his being — his mystery, his torment, and his fear. The same is true for the often dazed, power–hungry glances of Renfro. We understand what it's like for him to experience a forbidden pleasure — the guilt, the excitement, and the fear.

The settings are as deep and as enriching as the characters. We never see Todd act as a normal teenager: he is always alone and isolated. Similarly, the German's house is never shown in relation to the rest of the neighborhood, but always standing by itself. Thereby, we come to understand that both live in forlorn worlds and that, in some way, they understand and need each other.

Singer adds so much to a scene with simple details that convey powerful ideas like the old victrola always playing next to the old man while he speaks. There is another beautifully disturbing scene on a basketball court where the sound of the bouncing ball is assimilated to marching troops. The sound and the scene just seem to grow and rise to a painful and cringe–worthy climax before a crash back to reality.

Unfortunately, that is the most disappointing part of Apt Pupil — the ending. Then again, what can one expect after perhaps the best Hollywood ending ever in The Usual Suspects? The final scenes are not as explosive and as shocking as Singer's last project, but I think they are appropriate and powerful nonetheless. Rather than escalate the tension to a thunderous realization, Singer chooses the more haunting idea of continued evil in the world — disappointing maybe, but still well done.

With the occasionally snappy dialogue, interestingly dark premise, fabulous acting and intriguing characters, Apt Pupil is a great chance to see Singer in action again. B+

Love affairs heat up recent daytime TV

Hi soap fans. Lately the focus of my column has been to inform you soap fiends (of which I am proudly one) as to what's going on in the wonderful world of soaps.

This week, however, I've decided to reflect on a few issues that have been swirling around inside this lovely head of mine. That and I just feel the need to complain. Hence, I'm dedicating his week's column to that thing we call "Sink or Swim".

Swim:

•

Katherine and Nik's smooch on "General Hospital." After a whopping two years without any action (ignoring his fling with Sarah) Nikolas finally got some booty, and with Katherine no less. Better her than Emily.

Let's not forget, this isn't the first time the two of them have locked lips, but it is the first time Katherine's been so willing to return his affections. Incestuous overtones aside, (she was only a few days shy of becoming his stepmother, a la Stefan) the scene was surprisingly sweet and, dare I say it, hot. There's definitely some chemistry there.

Maybe this will finally give Tyler Christopher a chance to flex his acting muscles (among others) because this teen fiasco, and others before it, certainly haven't. A little bird told me that out of spite for Stefan, Katherine eventually beds him. You know what that means ladies. Lots of shots of Tyler in the buff. Hope for Katherine's sake there aren't any statutory rape laws in Port Charles.

• Kate vs. Sami on "Days of Our Lives." What a battle! Just last week. Kate gave Sami the boot from Titan despite the tortured vixen's cry for help. You'd think Kate would feel even the slightest twinge of sympathy or guilt, but nope. She ripped into her like there was no tomorrow.

I always love a good catfght and this one's been especially yummy to watch. This week promises to be even friskier as Sami smacks Kate during a heated argument. Let the games begin.

• Brooke's confession on "Bold & the Beautiful". For the first time in years Brooke actually did something selfless. She confessed to Pierce that Taylor's feelings for him were the result of Bailey's sketchy machinations (long and complicated story). She even confessed her involvement in the scheme. How very unlike Brooke.

• Erica and Brooke's confrontation on "All My Children." Did you see last week's little tiff between good pals Erica and Brooke? It was a hoot. Erica blasted Brooke for shying away from Dimitri's advances, telling her that she'd end up a "lonely shrew" if she didn't snap out of her anti-men phase. Brooke, on the other hand, ripped into Erica about her out of control libido.

The scene was beautifully written and surprisingly witty for a show who's dialogue has been a little "numbing on the brain" as of late. Bravo!

• Tad and Dixie's "Affair to Remember" on "AMC." I just adore the two of them together. Last week they had a biting confrontation over Tad's past indiscretions that was just laced with a plethora of emotions. The two pondered whether or not they could put the past behind them and give their relationship one last shot.

The scene ended with Dixie telling Tad that if she was willing to give it another go, she would meet him at the top of the tower (a la "Sleepless in Seattle"). If she didn't show, they would move on and the subject would never be breached again. All I have to say is that if she doesn't get up there I'll throw her sorry but off the tower myself.

• Ali on "Days." Turns out Salem's sweetheart isn't quite

Turn to SOAP, page 10

★★★★★
—Morningstar ratings for the CREF Global Equities Account, CREF Equity Index Account, and CREF Growth Account*

"...America's Top Pension Fund."
—Money Magazine, January 1998

AAA
—S&P and Moody's rating for TIAA

Your service bowled me over!
—William Ravdin, TIAA-CREF Participant

HIGH MARKS FROM MORNINGSTAR, S&P, MOODY'S, MONEY MAGAZINE AND BILL.

We take a lot of pride in gaining high marks from the major rating services. But the fact is, we're equally proud of the ratings we get every day from our participants. Because at TIAA-CREF, ensuring the financial futures of the education and research community is something that goes beyond stars and numbers.

We became the world's largest retirement organization* by offering people a wide range of sound investments, a commitment to superior service, and operating expenses that are among the lowest in the insurance and mutual fund industries.

With TIAA-CREF, you'll get the right choices—and the dedication—to help you achieve a lifetime of financial goals. The leading experts agree. So does Bill.

Find out how TIAA-CREF can help you build a comfortable, financially secure tomorrow.

Visit our Web site at www.tiaa-cref.org or call us at 1 800 842-2776.

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.

*Source: Morningstar, Inc., July 31, 1998. Morningstar is an independent service that rates mutual funds and...

Period	CREF Stock Account Star Rating / Number of Domestic Equity Accts Ranked	CREF Global Equities Account Star Rating / Number of International Equity Accounts Ranked	CREF Equity Index Account Star Rating / Number of Domestic Equity Accounts Ranked	CREF Growth Account Star Rating / Number of Domestic Equity Accounts Ranked	CREF Bond Market Account Star Rating / Number of Fixed Income Accounts Ranked	CREF Social Choice Account Star Rating / Number of Domestic Equity Accounts Ranked
3 Year	4/2,120	4/459	5/2,120	5/2,120	4/709	4/2,120
5 Year	4/1,363	5/210	N/A	N/A	4/487	4/1,363
10 Year	4/676	N/A	N/A	N/A	N/A	N/A

These top ratings are based on TIAA's exceptional financial strength, claims-paying ability and overall operating performance. Based on assets under management. "Standard & Poor's Investment Rating Analysis & Review," 1998. "Lipper Analytical Services, Inc., "Lipper Domestic Analytical Data, 1998. Quarterly CREF contributions and interest in the TIAA Real Estate Account are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services, Inc. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800 842-2733 for current CREF, for the CREF and TIAA Real Estate Account prospectuses. Read them carefully before you invest or send money.

©1998 TIAA-CREF 730 Third Avenue, New York, NY

Spirit Haus

LIQUOR SPECIALS
SAMBUCA 1 LITER $23.99
SMIRNOFF VODKA 1 LITER $10.99
CANADIAN CLUB 1 LITER $16.99
PARROT BAY RUM 750 ML $10.99

WINE SPECIALS
LAUREL GLEN'S REDS $8.99 EACH 2/$14.99 LIMIT
10% DISCOUNT ON REG. PRICE WINE WITH GRAD STUDENT ID

BEER SPECIALS
HEINEKEN 24 PK LOOSE BTLS $18.99 +DEP
BODDINGTON'S PUB ALE 4 PK CANS $4.99 +DEP
BUD/BUD LIGHT 20 PK BTLS $12.99 +DEP
KEYSTONE LIGHT 30 PK CANS $10.99 +DEP

"Fantastic Selection of Kegs"

MICRO BREW SPECIALS
WACHUSETT 6 PK BTLS (VICTORY'S ALT, HOT BROWN, IPA, PORTER, OCTOBERFEST) LASTING 1ST., OCT. 30TH! 7:30-9:30 PM $5.99 +DEP
NUTFIELD MIXED NUTS 12 PK BTLS $8.99 +DEP
MAGIC HAT 6 PK BTLS (ALL BLIND FAITH, #9, JACK) $6.99 +DEP
BLACKENED VOODOO 6 PK BTLS (CRIMSON, LAGER) $6.99 +DEP
(COLD PLATES, CO-TANKS, BULK ICE, GLASSES AVAILABLE)

SPIRIT HAUS ALSO FEATURES A FULL REDEMPTION CENTER !

OCTOBERFEST SPECIALS
SAM ADAMS OCTOBERFEST $4.99 +DEP 6 PK BTLS
PAULANER OCTOBERFEST $5.99 +DEP 6 PK BTLS

ALL PRICES GOOD OCT. 29 -NOV. 4

MAJOR CREDIT CARDS ACCEPTED - OPEN 9am to 11pm
338 COLLEGE ST (RTE 9) 1 MILE EAST OF AMHERST CENTER ON RTE 9
PHONE (413) 253-5384 • FAX 256-8433

A myriad of Halloween specials

The time of year that networks feel the need to scare viewers into watching their shows has arrived. In the span of a week and a half, almost every night there will be something to watch to get you into the Halloween spirit. Every year, there is always a mix of new Halloween treats mixed with classic traditions that always keep audiences tuned in on or around Oct. 31st.

Here are some of the top choices to watch this Halloween season.

One of the classic Halloween specials that will be aired tomorrow night at 8 p.m. on CBS is "Garfield's Halloween Adventure." The cartoon was made in 1985, and has been rerun almost every year since then. It's just one of those shows that will be seen that is geared toward the younger viewers, but enjoyable for us, too.

Last Sunday, "The Simpsons" had their annual Halloween special, and it proved to be no disappointment with guest stars like Regis, Kathy Lee and Jerry Springer. Every year, the popular FOX extravaganza brings in huge audiences and proves to be the highest rated "Simpsons" of the year. Though the new special has already aired, FOX is showing past "Simpson's Halloween Specials" starting tonight at 8 p.m.

Tube Notes with Ryan Benharris

Two more popular shows among the teenage group are "Buffy, the Vampire Slayer" and "Sabrina, the Teenage Witch." Since they're both based on supernatural beings, Halloween is a great opportunity for the shows to manipulate viewers, and boost the ratings.

"Buffy" aired last Tuesday with an episode that involved teenagers that took the identities of the costumes they were wearing, and was a cause for mass hysteria since there were a lot of monsters running around.

"Sabrina," which airs tomorrow at 8 p.m., is running an episode entitled "Good Will Haunting."

Last year around this time, Comedy Central was just starting to pick up viewers for a much talked about cartoon that has become a huge success. Of course you all know I'm talking about "South Park."

Instead of showing a re–run of last year's Halloween episode for two weeks in a row, Comedy

Turn to TUBE, page 9

Ending saves Parkening's act

By Imogen Lillywhite
Collegian Correspondent

"Andres Segovia once said that flamenco and classical style guitar are from opposite sides of the mountain, and they never look at each other." — Christopher Parkening

Considering he had just performed a concert that consisted at least partly classical, flamenco–influenced guitar music, this seemed an odd statement for guitarist Christopher Parkening to make.

Tuesday night's concert at the Bowker Auditorium was dedicated to the memory of Maestro Segovia, and began with a short film about his life and work, and was comprised of some of the most famous music from his fantastically varied repertoire.

The concert began with Segovia's transcription of two movements from a Bach Cello Suite. Having studied music practically for a good 12 years now, I've had to reluctantly come to terms with the fact that Bach is a definitive composer when it comes to true mastery of technique and melodic and harmonic color.

I did wonder during the Gavotte if the guitar is really a suitable instrument to sustain the ringing authority of the numerous technically demanding chords that would arguably be more suited to a bowed instrument. The immediacy of the plucking motion of the guitar did provide more mobility to the piece, and altered the perspective to invoke a more lute–like mood.

The mood soon changed to music by the Spanish guitarist and composer Gaspar Sanz, where the lilting, Spanish style began to show it's face for the first time. I can't help but profess how obvious it was that this style was so much better suited to the instrument.

Music by Fernando Sor, caused the post–grad music student sitting next to me to exclaim out loud during the final stages of "Variation on a theme of Mozart." Such was his rapture at the skill involved in executing the final variations.

The second half of the concert continued the Spanish influence. Parkening explained before Terrega's Capricho Arabe, serenara that the instrument he was using that evening was one that once belonged to Segovia, and was particularly lovely in the high range.

It was not surprising then, that the Capricho began with a passage that focused on the high notes. I really felt at this stage that I was being primed into concentrating on aspects of music borrowed from Segovia, so that I wouldn't notice the occasional missed or slipped notes that occurred in the otherwise impressively executed fast moving passage work.

The audience seemed to be one that was familiar and in some cases fanatical about both Segovia and Parkening, and I think this ploy to detract from his own (very rare) shortcomings worked very well indeed, as Parkening performed two encores.

The first was a Catalan folk song, rumored to be the last piece that Segovia ever played on the guitar. The

Turn to GUITAR, page 8

Calendar of Events

November 1, 1998

The University of Massachusetts Chamber Choir and Madrigal Singers will perform classics of the choral repertoire at 4 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium on the UMass campus. For tickets or information call 413–545–2511.

Performing at the Wallfish Memorial Concert will be Elizabeth Shanmash, mezzo soprano, Lory Wallfish, piano, and Philipp Naegele, viola. The concert will be presented at the Sweeney Concert Hall at 4 p.m.

Visiting pianist Lora Deahl will perform works for solo piano by American Women Composers at 8 p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall. The concert is free and the public is invited to attend.

Nov. 3, 1998

Professors Salvatore Macchia, performing on the contrabass, and Dorothy Ornest, on the piano, have composed and will present a program of Italian Music from the 14th through the 20th century. The concert will take place at 8 p.m. in the Bezanson Recital Hall.

Nov. 4, 1998

Michael Sussman, clarinetist, John van Buskirk, pianist, and Warren Lash, cellist, will present a concert at 8:15 p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall. For tickets or information call 413–545–2511.

The Augusta Savage Gallery at UMass will present a demonstration of Cambodian classical and folk dance by the Angkor Dance Troupe at 7 p.m. The event is free and open to the public.

Nov. 5, 1998

Producer Alexandra Juhasz's new film The Watermelon Woman will be presented by the Stonewall Center and the UMass Arts Council. This event will be held at UMass at 7:30 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium.

The University of Massachusetts Jazz Lab Band and Chamber Jazz Ensemble will perform under the direction of Adam Kolker in Bezanson Recital Hall at 8 p.m. The concert is free and the public is invited to attend.

Producer Alexandra Juhasz's new film The Watermelon Woman will be presented by the Stonewall Center and the UMass Arts Council. This event will be held at UMass at 7:30 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium.

The Amherst College Department of Theater and Dance production's of The Children's Hour, by Lillian Hellman, directed by Michelle Dvoskin will be performed at 8 p.m. in the Marsch House Ballroom at Amherst College. Admission is free, reservations are suggested. Call the box office, 542– 2277, between 1–4:30 p.m. weekdays and until 8 p.m. on performance night.

The Insular Choice Film Series will present Das Boot, directed by Wolfgang Petersen. The film will be shown in Herter 227 at the University of Massachusetts at 7:30.

The University of Massachusetts Theatre Guild's fall production of The Wiz will open at 8 p.m. in Fine Arts Concert Hall. The show will run through Nov. 7.

Of Mice and Men, a student production of Steinbeck's classic will run Thursday through Saturday in the Curtain Theater at UMass. For information call 1–800–999–UMass.

Nov. 6, 1998

Jane Bryden, soprano, and Sally Pinkas, piano, will be performing works of Copland, Pinkham, Wheelock, Child, Ives, MacDowell and Beach at 8 p.m. at Sweeney Concert Hall in Sage Hall, Green Street, Smith College, Northampton. The concert is free and open to the public. For information call 413–585–ARTS.

The Birthday Party, by Harold Pinter, directed by David Moldawer, will be performed at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center Frontroom. Admission is free, reservations are suggested. Call 542–2277.

Nov. 7, 1998

Eliane Elias and her band will perform in Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. as a continuation of the Fine Arts Center and WFCR's Jazz a la Mode Series. For information or tickets call 413–545–2511 or 1–800–999–UMAS.

The Children's Hour by Lillian Hellman at Amherst College.

The Wiz at the UMass Fine Arts Concert Hall at 2 p.m.

COURTESY FINE ARTS CENTER

Golden boy Christopher Parkening brought classical guitar to life in the Fine Arts Center last night.

Thanks for reading the Collegian!!!

Roads to Reconciliation

Peacebuilding in the former Yugoslavia and the Middle East
Defying the hatred and enmity so prevalent in their countries, these six courageous activists have taken extraordinary risks to speak out against intolerance and build community with visionaries across "enemy" lines.

Peacebuilding in the former Yugoslavia
Thursday
October 29, 7:45 p.m.
Campus Center Room 163 C
UMass/Amherst

Speakers
Jakob Finci President of La Benevolencia, a Jewish educational, cultural, and humanitarian society in Sarajevo.

Mirha Kratina: Field facilitator and psychologist for Save the Children, Zenica, Bosnia Herzegovina

Lidija Obad: Coordinator for the Center for Peace, Nonviolence and Human Rights, Osijek, Croatia

Dragan Popadiac: Professor of Psychology, University of Belgrade; Founding member of the Center for Antiwar Action, Belgrade, Serbia

Sponsored By: UMass Office of Jewish Affairs, The Kaufman Center for Peace Building, and Friends of Bosnia

Speak to an alum in the U.K. as Brandeis University International Fellows program.

For information contact the UMass Office Jewish Affairs, 413–545–3542

Peacebuilding in the Middle East
Monday
November 9, 7:30 p.m.
Campus Center Room 101
UMass/Amherst

Speakers
Judith Green: Founder of Rapprochement Dialogue Center (Jerusalem) and Nablus–West Jerusalem Dialogue for Peace.

Zoughbi Zoughbi: Director of the Wi'am Palestinian Conflict Resolution Center; participant in the Jerusalem arbitration center.

Why Should You Do An Internship or Co-Op?

Let the Employers Tell You Why!

Upcoming Field Experience Presentations

...ers from ...Hangen ...Solutia ...Whitney ...Compaq
Engineering and Computer Science Presentation
Monday, November 2
at 4pm in Hasbrouck 126

...ers from ...Anderson ...McNeil ...Electric ...IBM ...Bank ...Filene's
School of Management, Economics, and Apparel Marketing Presentation
Wednesday, November 4
at 4pm in SOM 120

Employers will be talking about Co-Op and Internship Opportunities for spring and summer!

Social & Behavioral Sciences	Jeff Silver	545-6267
Humanities & Fine Arts	Dianna Dunn	545-6266
School of Management	Cori Ashworth	577-0418
Engineering & Computer Science	Deborah Pace	577-0419
Education/Public Health/Nursing	Gloria DiFulvio	577-0427

CALVIN

Theatre and Performing Arts Center

Friday, October 30 • 8 pm
judas priest
plus Moon Dog Mane

Thursday, November 5 • 8 pm
Paul Taylor Dance Company
Presented by the New England Foundation for the Arts and the Northampton Center for the Arts

Saturday, November 7 • 8 pm
moe
plus Moonboot Lover

Tuesday November 17 8 pm
Widespread Panic

10/30	Judas Priest plus Moon Dog Mane	1/1/99	Cry, Cry, Cry: Dar Williams, Richard Shindell & Lucy Kaplansky plus Buddy & Julie Miller
11/5	Northampton Center for the Arts and the New England Foundation for the Arts Present: The Paul Taylor Dance Company	1/2	Noche Flamenca
11/6	Lyle Lovett	1/13	The Kronos Quartet
11/7	moe. plus Moonboot Lover	1/14	Philip Glass & Ensemble
11/12	David Sedaris WFCR benefit	1/23	Charlotte's Web Presented by Theatreworks U.S.A.
11/15	Mary Black St. Pat's Parade benefit	2/6	Chick Corea & Gary Burton
11/17	Widespread Panic	2/7	The Northampton Arts Council's Silver Chord Bowl
11/20 & 11/22	Commonwealth Opera: "The Magic Flute"	2/11	Ladysmith Black Mambazo
12/4	Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra with Wynton Marsalis	3/6	Cirque Eloize
12/6	Pilobolus Dance Theatre	3/7	Arcadia Players: George Washington After Hours
12/18	John McDermott: Christmas Memories

Coming soon: James Galway, Kai-Hi Chen Dance Company, The Wizard of Oz, Bill T. Jones/Arnie Zane Dance Co.

CALVIN THEATRE - 19 KING STREET, NORTHAMPTON, MA 413-584-0610
Tickets for the Calvin Theatre are available at the Northampton Box Office, Thornes Marketplace in Northampton.
To charge by phone call 586-0600 or 1-800-THE-TICK. Visit www.masslive.com for more information.

all shows all ages!
Pearl Street Nightclub

Friday, October 30 • 8:30 pm • Ballroom
HATEBREED plus Shadows Fall
Friday, October 30 • 8:30 pm • Clubroom
DUKE ROBILLARD
Saturday, October 31 • 8:30 pm • Ballroom
MAX CREEK plus Electric Blue & the Kozmik Truth
Saturday, October 31 • 8:30 pm • Clubroom
STASH
Sunday, November 1 • 8:30 pm • Ballroom
NEW MORTY SHOW
Tuesday, November 3 • 8:30 pm • Ballroom
MIXMASTER MIKE plus M.O.P.
Wednesday, November 4 • 7 pm • Ballroom
UNITY TOUR: AGNOSTIC FRONT, DROPKICK MURPHYS, U.S. BOMBS AND MAXIMUM PENALTY
Friday, November 6 • 8:30 pm • Ballroom
BEAUSOLEIL AVEC MICHAEL DOUCET
Saturday, November 7 • 8:30 pm • Clubroom
SKAVOOVIE & THE EPITONES plus Longshot and Take 5
Sunday, November 8 • 7 pm • Clubroom
SAM BLACK CHURCH plus Nothingface and Gargantua Soul
Tuesday, November 10 • 8:30 pm • Ballroom
JAZZ IS DEAD plus Living Daylights
Wednesday, November 11 • 8:30 pm • Ballroom
MONEY MARK AND BUFFALO DAUGHTER
Thursday, November 12 • 8:30 pm • Ballroom
CAKE plus Bloque
Thursday, November 12 • 8:30 pm • Clubroom
TRIBE 8 plus Tizzy
COMING SOON: Black Oak Arkansas, Raging Slab, Tricky, Whale, Hals, Afrobiue, Sick Of It All, Vision, Ensign, the Voluptuous Horror of Karen Black, Clay People, Little Feat, Saw Doctors

all shows music alone shall live all ages!
IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL

Fri., 10/30 & Sat. 10/31 • 8:30 pm
MOXY FRUVOUS
Sunday, November 1 • 7 & 9:30 pm
THE CHO PROJECT
Steve Tibbetts & the Nuns of Tibet
Monday, November 2 • 7 pm
DAVID LINDLEY
Tuesday, November 3 • 7 pm
NEW ORLEANS KLEZMER ALL-STARS
Wednesday, November 4 • 7 pm
LEDN REDDDNE
Wednesday, November 4 • 10 pm
THE SPINANES
Thursday, November 5 • 7 pm
FERRON
Thursday, November 5 • 10 pm
BABALOO plus the Blue Rags
Friday, November 6 • 7 & 10 pm
RICHIE HAVENS plus Tim Mason
Saturday, November 7 • 7 & 10 pm
BO DIDDLEY plus Trailer Park
Sunday, November 8 • 7 pm
JOHN GORKA plus Larry John McNally
Monday, November 8 • 8:30 pm
MOE TUCKER BAND plus Stone Coyotes
Tuesday, November 10 • 7 pm
ROSE POLENZANI, JESS KLEIN, BETH AMSEL & ERIN McKEOWN
Wednesday, November 11 • 7 & 8:30 pm
GREG BROWN plus Karen Savoca
Thursday, November 12 • 8:30 pm
ELECTRIC BLUE & THE KOZMIK TRUTH plus Gordon Stone
Friday, November 13 • 7 & 8:30 pm
SOLAS
COMING SOON: Zen Tricksters, Javon Jackson Group featuring Ron Carter, Guy Clark, Robert Fripp

PEARL STREET NIGHTCLUB, 10 PEARL ST., NORTHAMPTON, MA • THE IRON HORSE, 20 CENTER ST., NORTHAMPTON, MA
Tickets for all shows available at the Northampton Box Office, 2nd Floor, Thorne's Marketplace, Northampton 1-800-THE-TICK or 413-586-8686. Tickets for the Iron Horse are available at For The Record in Amherst. Tickets for Pearl St. are available at For The Record, Absent Music in Broadfield and Platterpus Records in Westfield. 24-Hour Concert Info: (413) 584-9010 or visit: www.massdive.com

A little help from your Friends

"Some of the best things one can hope for in life are to touch other people, to make lasting friends and to be remembered not only for accomplishments but for the personal impact made on other people's lives."

So begins John Lee Hooker's latest, The Best of Friends.

Released on Pointblank on Oct. 20, some of Hooker's most notable collaborations of the past decade are featured on this compilation of Healer (1989), Mr. Lucky (1991), Boom Boom (1993), Chill Out (1995), and Don't Look Back (1997). He matches musicianship with everyone from Carlos Santana and Van Morrison to Ben Harper.

The disc opens with a scorching Eric Clapton guitar and mumbled John Lee vocals on the song that started things for him fifty years ago, "Boogie Chillen." As an opener, this song gives a certain familiar feeling and seems to act as almost a warm-up jam session for the album to follow.

As a follow-up to the opener, Ry Cooder's guitar provides a definite swagger to "This is Hip," as John Lee moans: "This is hip pretty baby, messed around and fell in love."

Though the synthesizers are unnecessary, another guitar giant takes center stage on "The Healer." Carlos Santana rips it up as Hooker's omnipresent, echoing vocals sing about the mystical healing power of the blues.

The most welcome duets on this album come when John Lee teams up with Van Morrison on the solemn, gospel- tinged "I Cover the Waterfront," or the dreamy, drifting finale, "Don't Look Back." On the former, Booker T. Jones provides the organ music that allows Morrison and his mentor to give their separate testimonies, while on the latter, John Lee's baritone vibrato peacefully sings of no regret for a life well-lived.

Bonnie Raitt may provide some competition to Morrison's status as John Lee Hooker's most ascribing pupil. Her slide guitar and sweet vocal lines on "I'm in the Mood" give the song that pool hall, whiskey-drinking, "don't mess with me" attiiude that John Lee's music is all about.

On every track of this album, it's as if the 81-year-old John Lee Hooker is passing the torch of the blues, whether it's down to his more renowned disciples like Clapton, Bonnie Raitt, or Van Morrison, or to his younger admirers like Harper (Harper shows his stuff on "Burnin Hell").

Hooker seems to be saying, "listen to these friends of mine," laying the base for every track while whoever's playing with him is allowed to showcase what they do best.

In contrast though, the most telling track about Hooker's legacy on this CD is the one track he plays by himself. "Tupelo," a stark, mysterious tale about a flood in a rural Mississippi town, it's power is whispered as the legend taps his foot and provides an almost biblical reverence to the tale.

"Tupelo" shows that the blues is an entity bigger than any of the hype, though the album as a whole shows it is good to have talented friends.

Joe Sullivan is a Collegian columnist.

■ guitar

continued from page 7

second, Carlo Dominiconi's "The Shepherd," was the highlight of the concert for me.

This unique and dazzling piece by a 20th century composer was easily the most challenging piece of the evening, yet the mercurially fast passage-work with shimmering quarter tone trills were executed faultlessly. There was a real, raw folk feel, a total contrast to the earlier constrains of the Bach transcriptions.

The piece came to a breathtakingly simple end on a single high harmonic, and I left the auditorium glad that I finally had something entirely positive to say about the evening, though a little perturbed that Parkening made me wait until the very end to hear it.

I'm not entirely convinced that any guitarist will ever find such an established and respected place on the concert platform as Segovia, but the Dominiconi, which was definitely more Parkening than Segovia, at least convinced me that there is room for more exploration of this genre.

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441

Featuring "Milwaukee's Best" $9.99 30/pk.
BECK'S Regular & Dark Everyday Price!!!! $9.99 12/pk
HALLOWEEN SPECIAL
Sams Octoberfest $15.99 case
also $4.70 6pk, $8.99 12pk
PABST BLUE RIBBON $8.29 cse. both.
Your Choice! $9.99 12PK
MILL CITY PETES CATAMOUNT NUTFIELD
MIX/MATCH "TWO" 6 PKS
CIDER JACK $4.99 6PK EVERYDAY PRICE!
MERIDIAN CHARDONNAY & CABERNET $7.99 750 ML EVERYDAY!
Vodka 80° EVERYDAY PRICE! $8.99 1.75 lt
CONCHA Y TORO ALL FLAVORS $5.99 1.5 LTR

• Delivery Available • OPEN 9:00AM to 11:00PM • Visa/Mastercard • All Beers Plus Deposit •

The University of Massachusetts ALUMNI Association
The Sport Management Program

The Sport Management Program present

The Annual Edwin M. Rossman Alumni Career Forum's

Sport Management CAREER DAY PANEL

Room 174

Shawn Polk, BS '97
Adult and Teen Sports Director
Boston YMCA

Andrea Savage, MS '91
Assistant Director of Athletics
Yale University

Charles Steedman, BS '84
Vice President of Partnership/Marketing
American Skiing Company

John Wentzell, MS '84
Vice President of Operations
Fleet Center

■ music

continued from page 5

The Cure — For our purposes, please restrict your playing of The Cure to two albums: Pornography and Disintegration. If you need visuals please consult the Staring at the Sea video collection. Thank you.

Current 93 — This is one creepy band. Avant-garde in every sense of the word, Current 93 weaves spooky ambient textures lost amid experimentation with an avoidance of the verse-chorus-bridge song structure. Their stuff is hard to find, although Newbury Comics often has a few of their CDs.

Fields of the Nephilim — Taking everything that has ever been done before one step farther, Fields of the Nephilim incorporate vast imagery to their sound. One of the early UK "goth rock" bands.

Incubus Succubus — Since Halloween is actually a Pagan holiday, wouldn't it be fun to celebrate with a Pagan band. Incubus Succubus has lyrics embellished with Pagan overtones, although their music may be a bit poppy. "Belladonna & Aconite" is one of their best songs.

Legendary Pink Dots — Propelling themselves into the top five albums of this year, the Legendary Pink Dots are eerie fun. If you can find their box set, I highly recommend you pick it up. Though their latest release, Nemesis Online, might be in a few stores, most of their material can only be ordered through their label, Solielmoon. Try searching Mystery Train in Amherst or Turn it Up in Northampton.

London After Midnight — This band is very cool looking, and are very successful in their home-produced cassette sales. Finding their stuff around here may be quite a challenge.

My Life With the Thrill Kill Kult — They can churn out some really funky stuff, but my favorite of their albums, Confessions of a Knife, is not one of them.

Portishead — Portishead may seem out of place here, but their last album, the self-titled Portishead, is definitely some of the most haunting music ever recorded. Beth Gibbons' seductive voice doesn't hurt either. Too bad that their live album, PNYC, won't be available until the week after Halloween.

The Sisters of Mercy — Another given. My personal album pick: Floodland.

Siouxie and the Banshees — Clear cut 80's pop. The Twice Upon a Time collection would probably be your best bet — it contains the hit single "Kiss Them for Me" and "Face to Face" from Tim Burton's Batman Returns.

Skinny Puppy — The hardcore industrial outfit Skinny Puppy may be a bit too harsh for some, but is definitely worth a spin.

Sunshine Blind — Their lyrics aren't the best, but they write some good music. Their first album, Love the Sky to Death is not as essential as their latest, Liquid. Their cover of Flock of Seagulls' "I Ran" is clearly worth the purchase price.

Switchblade Symphony — San Francisco natives Switchblade Symphony are a very impressive band. Their first album, Serpantine Gallery, is haunting and enchanting. A prodigy in the darkwave genre.

Of course I have left a few out, but this list should be adequate. Soundtracks to The Nightmare Before Christmas or The Rocky Horror Picture Show would also be nice touches as well. If you have any tacky plastic pumpkins with orange light bulbs decorating your house, now you have no excuse for your music being cheesy as well. So ditch that "Spooky sounds of Halloween" CD, and make Halloween creepy again.

Kevin Monahan is a Collegian staff member.

■ movies

continued from page 5

movies were all there was. The following is a list, in my estimation, of the best ghost movies of all time. In no particular order:

• POLTERGEIST — In 1982, Steven Spielberg warmed over audiences of all kinds with the release of I.T. His next film, later that year, couldn't have been more opposite in nature. Poltergeist took all of goodness of suburbia and put it in a blender, mixed it around, and spit it out, creating a nightmare of childhood frights.

When a little girl of a normal suburban family is captured by ghosts — through, of course, a TV — the family and a mysterious clairvoyant are her only hope of rescue. Directed by Tobe Hooper, but this is Spielberg's film.

• THE HAUNTING — Robert Wise, the director of big Hollywood musicals like The Sound of Music, was an unlikely choice for this film, based on Shirley Jackson's novel, but it paid off. The 1963 black and white movie is perhaps the greatest haunted house flick ever made, and reminds of us the days when filmmakers didn't need special effects to scare us.

The Haunting, a simple tale of a group of people stuck in a haunted house, used the power of suggestion and implication rather than visual fright. A true classic of the horror genre.

• VERTIGO — Not scary, rather disturbing, Vertigo remains one of cinema's superb psychological creations, by the master of suspense himself, Alfred Hitchcock. It's not even really a ghost movie, but the mere fact that it slightly involves a ghost makes it a worthy entry on this list.

A private detective played by Jimmy Stewart, in one of his finest performances, is hired to trail the wife of a wealthy business man, who thinks his wife (Kim Novak) is being haunted by an old Victorian age ghost named Carlotta Valdez. When Scotty falls in love with her, desire and death collide. One of the American Film Institute's 100 Greatest Movies of All Time.

• THE SHINING — Stephen King's literary masterpiece is so good, even a TV movie with the guy from "Wings" was highly entertaining, and some say better than Stanley Kubrick's horror classic, featuring Jack Nicholson's most outrageously great performance.

King's tale of Jack's family at the Overlook Hotel and the power of the mind is perhaps even more noteworthy for the tendencies of director Kubrick. Rumor has it the perfectionist filmmaker once demanded 127 takes from Shelly Duvall and used to call up King at 3 a.m. and ask him questions like "Do you believe in God?"

• GHOSTBUSTERS — a more lighthearted suggestion if you're staying in this weekend. Ghostbusters is a modern day classic, an incredible mix of wit and special effects from comic veterans Bill Murray, Dan Ackroyd, Harold Ramis, director Ivan Reitman and Rick Moranis, with a little Sigourney Weaver thrown in.

Murray is Ghostbusters' high point; he has simply never been funnier. And the Stay-Puff Marshmallow Man is one of cinema's greatest visual puns.

Bryan McAllister is a Collegian staff member.

■ tube

continued from page 7

Central decided to do that last week, and is running a brand new "South Park Halloween Special" this week. The special aired last night, but if you missed it, it can be seen again Saturday night at 10 p.m.

What would Halloween be without TBS's airing a marathon of those awfully cheesy horror movies from the 80s. This year, TBS chose to dedicate Halloween to the Wes Craven classic, A Nightmare on Elm Street. If you want to watch Freddie Kruger slash up some victims this weekend, tune into TBS at pretty much anytime, and I'm sure you'll find what you're looking for.

Another movie special this week is "Wes Craven Presents: Don't Look Down." The movie, which stars a bunch of no- name actors, is about a woman who seeks therapy after her sister dies, and is being driven crazy by the memories of what happened. This movie is set to bomb since it's being put on tonight at 8 p.m. on ABC.

I can't imagine that there will be many people that will give up a night of all new "Friends," "Frasier," and a new "ER. Halloween Special" that looks to be excellent to watch a made-for-TV horror flick that doesn't star Tiffany-Amber Thiessen.

FOX throws us a movie late on Sunday, Nov. 1st, when it shows last year's Jurassic Park sequel, The Lost World. Since they decided to put it on instead of "The Simpsons," I guess it will be worth a watch, especially since they put in some added scenes that Steven Spielberg cut from the original.

If you're anything like me, you're a sucker for that Charlie Brown Halloween special every year called "It's the Great Pumpkin, Charlie Brown." Unfortunately, we're going to have to live through a year without watching Linus go through the pumpkin patch to wait for the Great Pumpkin, because it seems that there are no networks that are planning to show the special. After searching through TV Guide, it seems there is no where to see the Halloween classic, even on cable.

It really is a shame that television has become so commercialized, that the big networks forget what we grew up on.

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian columnist.

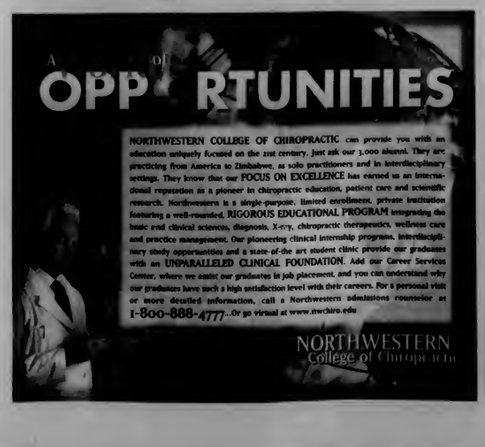
"Don't fight, guys...there are plenty of copies of the Collegian for everyone!"

Collegian Arts rocks your world!

BILLIARDS 10A BELCHERTOWN ROAD AMHERST, MA 01002 256-8284
Thursday Night 7:30 9 Ball Tournament $10 per person
"Everyday from 3-7pm $4.00 hour pool"
Saturday 10 PM-1 AM Halloween Party



Now Open....The Area's Best Fitness & Health Club
Ultimate Fitness THE HEALTH AND FITNESS CENTER
Featuring the latest in Fitness Training & Equipment
"Everything You Need in a Gym and More!"

• Certified Personal Trainers
• Fitness Testing & Programming
• Nutritional Consultation
• Tanning
• Sauna
• Juice Bar & Supplements
• Full Aerobics Programs including:
-Cardio Kickboxing
-Sports Stop
-Boot Camp
-and many more

Located in the Campus Plaza next to Liquors 44. For more information call 253-7871

Cardiovascular Equipment
• Stairmasters
• Precor Treadmills
• Lifecycle Recumbent Bikes
• Lifecycle Upright Bikes
• Precor Crosstrainers

State-of-the-Art Strength Training Equipment
• Bodymasters & Icarian Free Weights
• Cybex Circuit Training Equipment

Right Here Right Now!

Begin a career in our corporate office!

We're Ames. One of the dominant discount store chains in America, with more than $2 billion in sales and 300 stores in 14 states across the Northeast. Currently, we're looking for dynamic, creative, success-oriented graduates with excellent communication, analytical, and planning skills!

Buying • Finance • Information Systems

Because discount retailing has developed into a complex, dynamic field where vision and strategic planning are essential for success, we've created a formal, 10-week training program for you that couples comprehensive classroom seminars and on-the-job training.

Through all phases of your training, you'll work with a mentor, Buyers, Managers, Directors, and Senior Management to gain the skills and knowledge you'll need to begin your career in Buying, Finance, or Information Systems.

Buying

As an Assistant Buyer Trainee, you're on your way to developing skill sets which will prepare you for a professionally challenging and personally satisfying career in Buying! After successful completion of the 10-week training program, you will become an Assistant Buyer, working alongside a Buyer and assisting in the management of a $20-$100 million business! It's experience, responsibility, and challenge you won't find in most other fields!

Finance

As a Corporate Office Trainee in our Finance Division, you'll work closely with an experienced management team while participating in rotational on-the-job training through all functional areas of the Finance Division, such as Internal Audit, Accounting, Planning & Analysis, etc. Once placed in your regular assignment you will play an active role in the financial management of a $2+ billion company!

Information Systems

During the 10-week training program, you will work closely with Senior Management, Systems Analysts, Consultants, and our Development Team to understand how you can directly impact the business. From our new $35+ million point-of-sale system to our corporate systems, you will work with all parts of our Information Systems (IS) organization and have the opportunity to work with the latest technology used in the industry today.

Other Corporate office opportunities may be available in Human Resources, Communications, Public Relations, and more!

Ames has a training and development program in place for you to begin an exciting career. Our success begins and ends with our people – the company's most valuable asset. Because of this, we are committed to your professional development through ongoing training and support.

Please come talk to us!
We'll be at UMASS at Amherst on the following days:

Information Session
Campus Center
Room 803
Thursday, November 12th
7:00pm - 8:30pm

On Campus Interviews

School of Management
Friday, November 13th

Campus Career Network
Monday, November 16th

Contact your Career Center to schedule an interview or for more detailed information.

Sign up for an interview at Career Services!

Ames

Department Stores, Inc., Rocky Hill, CT
Ames is an equal opportunity employer M/F/D/V

She's a gang leader with a goal.

Theresa was looking for acceptance but all her friends were in gangs. For Theresa, it was just a matter of time. Choosing between gang life and soccer wasn't easy. But thanks to adults like you and after-school programs like these, she's now devoted to her teammates — learning new skills, self esteem, and the confidence to lead.

LESS CRIME IS NO ACCIDENT

It takes you — and programs that work.

Call 1-800-WE PREVENT, and we'll send you a free booklet on how you can support programs in your community that keep kids away from crime and crime away from kids.

1-800-WE PREVENT
www.weprevent.org

Ad Council

TAKE A BITE OUT OF CRIME

Using the gift of life to run a race

NEW YORK (AP) — Ketil Moe is not sure he'll make it to the finish line of the New York City Marathon. Simply making it to the starting line will be a huge accomplishment.

He is, after all, running with a new set of lungs.

Moe is one of six transplant recipients who plan to run the marathon on Sunday, and he most likely is the first lung recipient to tackle a course this long, according to Dick Traum, president of the Achilles Track Club for disabled athletes.

Moe, a 31-year-old diabetic, had to suck oxygen and use a wheelchair before his double lung transplant in the summer of 1997.

"If I can get through the race, I know that I have my disease under control," he said.

Speaking from his home in Kristeansand, Norway, Moe worried that a lingering bacterial infection might prevent him from running. His doctors warned him not to do it. But they also warned him about many of the 12 marathons he had ran before his transplant, races he sometimes entered with bleeding lungs.

This time he plans to run slowly, with his doctor, his physical therapist and two Norwegian champions — former marathoner Grete Waitz and Johann Olav Koss, an Olympic gold medalist speedskater.

"I hope I will survive," he said with a slightly wheezing laugh. "It will be the toughest race ever."

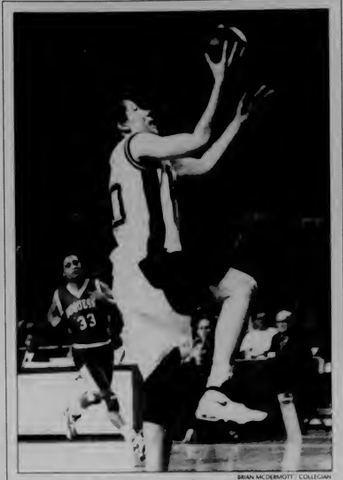
Running a marathon is not a good idea for most transplant patients, said Dr. Niloo Edwards, surgical director of heart transplants at Columbia Presbyterian Hospital in New York. But those healthy enough to do it are a symbol of hope for sick people leery of the surgery.

"It's a testament to how well transplantation works in the 1990s and to really how much quality of life... the gift of these organs brings to these patients," Dr. Edwards said.

For Donald Arthur, the transplant itself led him to the marathon. He began race walking to counter the bone atrophy resulting from his antirejection drugs.

Traum quickly persuaded him to enter last year's marathon, an event he never cared about before his heart transplant two years ago.

■ nhl



continued from page 16

downward. I love seeing Patrick Roy suffer. The more his goals against average rises, the more he longs for the glory days of old on St. Catherine's Street in Montreal. Look for former Bruin Craig Billington to get some ice time soon.

It looks like the tradewinds have died down. Felix Potvin is still riding the pine in Toronto as teams such as Montreal and Vancouver have become happy with what they have. Garth Snow is getting it done in Vancouver and Jocelyn Thibeault is keeping them out in Montreal. Potvin may still be moved eventually. Re-uniting him with Pat Burns sounds good to me. Sorry, Byron.

Maybe bringing Potvin to Boston will re-ignite what used to be one of pro sports greatest rivalries, Boston vs. Montreal, another one of Burns' former teams. The two former arch-rivals may begin a new chapter tonight as they face off in the second game of a home-and-home series. Only time will tell.

James Murphy is a Collegian columnist.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Ready to jump into the season

The time until the beginning of the Massachusetts women's basketball season is waning. They will begin with an exhibition at the William D. Mullins Center on Nov. 5 at 5 p.m.

TRAVEL SMART!

BEST PRICES FROM BOSTON TO EUROPE, WITHIN THE U.S., AND DESTINATIONS AROUND THE WORLD

CALL 800-272-9676

E-MAIL sales@prismtours.com

OR VISIT US AT www.prismtours.com

Eurailpasses and Student ID cards available.

PRISM TRAVEL
545 Fifth Avenue
New York, NY 10017

安城中國飯店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
we do not use "MSG"
253-7835 or 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst

COMPLETE AUTO BODY REPAIRS
ALL MAKES AND MODELS
DANA AUTOMOTIVE
"THE AFFORDABLE TRANSPORTATION PLACE"
COLLISION REPAIR • GLASS INSTALLATION
Authorized GM/VW Body Shop
Frame & Unibody Straightening
24 HR. HOTLINE 586-7250
FREE LOANERS
968 Bridge Road NORTHAMPTON

Goten In Sunderland
Tuesday - Sunday
Tues, Weds, Thurs, Fri, & Sat. 5:00 til close
Sunday 2 til close
Complimentary Photos at Birthday Parties
OF JAPAN
COOKING AT YOUR TABLE
Two Dinners for $20*
Shrimp and Steak Combination includes salad, soup, vegetable noodle, rice, tea & ice cream
Two Dinners for $20*
Shrimp and Scallop Combination includes salad, soup, vegetable noodle, rice, tea & ice cream
Two Dinners for $17*
Steak and Chicken Combination includes salad, soup, vegetable noodle, rice, tea & ice cream
* SPECIALS ARE AVAILABLE TUE-FRI 5-8 PM SUN 2-8 PM
SPECIALS ARE NOT AVAILABLE SAT CLOSED MON
NOW Accepting Reservations for Christmas & New Year's Parties !
Rt. 116 • Sunderland (413) 665-3628
Casual Dress • Call for Reservations • Banquet Facilities for up to 50 People

PIZZA RAMA
356 College Street
253-3808
"25th Anniversary"
(Next to Spirit Haus Liquors)
Call Delivery Express → 599-0077
BYOB

The Tradition Continues:
HALLOWEEN HAVOC 3
FRIDAY OCT 30TH
HIP HOP HOUSE
DRESS TO IMPRESS
SPECIAL BREWS ALL NITE
BEST COSTUME WINS A FREE TRIP TO MEXICO!!
CLUB METRO, 492 PLEASANT ST NOHO
$5 INFO: 582.9898
21 PLUS
PROMOTORS WANTED CALL FOR INFO:
METRO
DJ SPINNING HIP-HOP & HOUSE!!!!!!

OUR PRICES ARE SO LOW, THEY'RE SCARY!!
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
Everyday Pricing
1/2 KEGS NATURAL LIGHT & ICE $34.99 + DEP.
1/2 KEGS ICEHOUSE, RED DOG, ROLLING ROCK $36.99 + DEP.
1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD LT., BUD ICE $40.99 + DEP.
BUSCH & BUSCH LIGHT CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS $11.49 + DEP. 10 PACK
Coors & Coors LIGHT CASE OF 30-12 OZ CANS $15.49 + DEP. 10 PACK
MAGIC HAT & SIERRA NEVADA ALL FLAVORS 4 PK. BOTTLES $5.99 + DEP. 10 PACK
MOLSON GOLDEN LAGER ICE 18-12 OZ. CANS $9.99 + DEP.
Bass ALE SALE $10.99 MAIL-IN REBATE -1.50 FINAL COST $9.49 + DEP. 12 PK. BOTTLES
CAPAMOUNT AMBER - PALE ALE SAMPLER PACK 12 PK. BOTTLES $8.99 + DEP.
MILWAUKEE'S BEST "THE BEAST" CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS $9.49 + DEP. 10 PACK
WINE OF THE MONTH
Pionero CHARDONNAY CABERNET SAUVIGNON 750ML $5.49
Almaden Mountain 5 LT. PAG-IN-A-BOX ALWAYS RED, CHABLIS, RHINE, BLUSH, BURGUNDY, WHITE GRENACHE, GOLDEN $6.99
DUNNEWOOD CHARDONNAY 750 ML $5.99
GEORGES DUBOEUF CHARDONNAY MERLOT CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5L $8.99
COLUMBIA CREST MERLOT 750 ML $9.99
VENDANGE CHARDONNAY MERLOT CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5L $6.99
BLOSSOM HILL WHITE ZINFANDEL 1.5L $4.99
JACK DANIEL'S COUNTRY COCKTAILS 4 PK $3.69
SMIRNOFF VODKA 1.75L $15.49
Captain Morgan SPICED RUM 1.75L $18.49
CLAN MACGREGOR SCOTCH 1.75L SALE $13.99 MAIL-IN REBATE -2.00 FINAL COST $11.99
CANADIAN MIST 1.75L SALE $12.99 MAIL-IN REBATE -3.00 FINAL COST $9.99
SOUTHERN COMFORT 1.75L $16.49
E&J BRANDY 750 ML $7.99
JENKINS VODKA 1.75L $8.99
GORDON'S GIN 1.75L $12.99
Discounts Available on Cases of Wine & Liquor. Ask For Details.
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 10/29/98 THRU WEDS. 11/4/98
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

DiMaggio hospitalized in Florida with pneumonia, lung infection

By Marv Schneider
Associated Press

Joe DiMaggio will be hospitalized for three more weeks with pneumonia and a lung infection even though his lawyer said Wednesday he had improved from earlier this month when "we were fearful for his life."

DiMaggio's lawyer and friend, Morris Engelberg, said he has been with him every day since the Hall of Famer was admitted to Memorial Regional Hospital in Hollywood, Fla., on Oct. 12.

DiMaggio had been in intensive care with severe breathing problems, and had his lungs drained at least twice, Engelberg told The Associated Press.

"Look, he will be 84 next month and he has pneumonia," he said. "It was very, very serious. We were fearful for his life."

It was the first time Engelberg acknowledged that the life of the Yankees' great had been in danger.

He said he got the first good sign in more than two weeks when he visited DiMaggio at 5 a.m. yesterday.

"He was sitting in a chair watching the news on television when I walked in," Engelberg said.

"And I don't mind telling you that I was relieved because when I walked into his room in intensive care, and he wasn't there, I thought he had died.

"But they had moved him to another room, and there he was, watching television. I hugged him."

DiMaggio "was breathing much better this morning, he was out of bed and his eyes were open," Engelberg said.

The hospital has refused to discuss DiMaggio's condition since he was admitted, citing orders from Engelberg. That policy remained in force on yesterday.

"All inquiries regarding Mr. DiMaggio, at Mr. Engelberg's request, must be directed to Mr. Engelberg," said Lisa Kronhaus, director of public relations at the hospital, which has a children's wing named for DiMaggio, who has been instrumental in raising funds for the unit.

Engelberg has been unyielding in barring access to DiMaggio, even blocking delivery of food from one of the slugger's favorite Italian restaurants.

A woman at the hospital switchboard during the weekend even denied DiMaggio was a patient there.

DiMaggio's efforts to maintain his privacy were well known long before he was hospitalized.

"Don't say I'm a recluse," he said in an interview on his 80th birthday. "I get around a lot."

He was honored at Yankee Stadium on the final day of the regular season, and Yankees owner George Steinbrenner insisted that DiMaggio throw out the ceremonial first ball at the World Series opener in New York. But DiMaggio was hospitalized five days before the game, and Chicago Cubs slugger Sammy Sosa did the honors instead.

NBA cancels rest of games for November

NEW YORK (AP) — David Stern cut two more weeks off the NBA schedule, debated the finer points of the lockout with Michael Jordan, and then met with the players to see if the sides could compromise on the "guts" of a new deal.

"I feel neither optimism nor pessimism. I just think that we've got to talk," the NBA commissioner said. "We may have the skeleton of a deal. But in terms of a hard negotiation on the guts of this deal, I would say we're no place yet."

The cancellations, which wiped out the rest of the November schedule, came after a meeting of the league's Board of Governors at which some owners asked when the "drop dead" date would be for losing the entire regular season.

Stern said he did not want to set a deadline.

"One, we want to be ready to be imaginative," he said. "Two, we don't want to make threats; we want to make a deal."

With that, he and the owners' negotiating committee walked out of their news conference, took an elevator three flights up, and went into a conference room where about 100 players had been meeting.

According to several sources who were in the room and spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity, Jordan, Washington Wizards owners Abe Pollin and Stern had one of the most heated exchanges after Jordan asked why increases in franchise values were not being figured into profitability calculations.

After that 90-minute question-and-answer meeting, the sides were to resume formal negotiations at 5 p.m. EST at an undisclosed location.

"We've been trying to take steps to bridge the gap. Now the shoe is on the other foot," union president Patrick Ewing said. "In my negotiating with the Knicks, they always told me one side cannot monopolize the whole thing. It needs to be a win-win situation."

Two weeks' worth of games already had been scrapped, and now the season can't begin until Dec. 1 at the earliest.

Stern did say, however, that the league and union would discuss "recapturing" games. That was a change from two weeks ago, when the league announced the first set of cancellations and said the games would not be made up.

"They had told us about games being recaptured. We knew that," said Jeffrey Kessler, the lead outside counsel for the union. "You can add [games] on later, or put more into the schedule."

Until this labor dispute, the league had never lost a game to a work stoppage.

In all, 194 games have been lost with the latest cancellation of 95 games. Each team's 82-game schedule has now been whittled to about 68 games, and the players have lost about $200 million in salaries.

Yesterday's meetings were the third straight day of talks, and the sides have moved closer to an agreement on the framework — or "skeleton" — of the next agreement. For the first two or three years, there will be a luxury tax on the highest contracts. If that system did not reduce the amount of revenues being devoted to salaries, a modified hard cap would be implemented under which players would put 10 percent of their salaries into an escrow fund.

"The main point is having the skeleton. We think that is significant, since we had not agreed on a skeleton before," Kessler said. "Now we're talking essentially about whether the players will take a bad deal, which they won't. The issue is now about dollars."

"All we have to do now is agree on the numbers," Ewing said. But agreeing on the numbers will not be easy.

Players received 57 percent of designed revenues last season, and the owners want to scale that back to 48 percent by the 2002-03 season. The union has offered two cap-tightening measures if the percentage reaches 63 percent.

JAY PREMACK / COLLEGIAN

Steamrolling the competition

The 5–2 Massachusetts football team will seek to improve its record Saturday when it takes on the Wildcat neighbors to the north at New Hampshire.

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE
- DISCOUNT OIL -
NORTHHAMPTON / HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888
• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

SPRING BREAK HEADQUARTERS
Heller Travel
Student Travel Specialists, LOWEST student and faculty discount airfares.
HELLER TRAVEL
You just can't get it anywhere else!!
146 Massachusetts Avenue at Berklee Boston, MA 02115 (800) 843-1544 email: heller@berklee.edu

amc
Hampshire 6 • 584-7550
Hampshire Mall
Mt. Farms 4 • 584-9153
Mt. Farms Mall
WHAT DREAMS MAY COME (PG-13) Today at 8:10
Soldier (R) Today at (4:00 @ 52.50) 8:20
PRACTICAL MAGIC (PG-13) Today at (3:50 @ $2.50) 8:20
BELOVED (R) Today at (4:00 @ $2.50) 7:30
ROMAN (R) Today at (5:40 @ $2.50)
RUSH HOUR (PG-13) Today at (3:30 @ $2.50) 8:10
URBAN LEGEND (R) Today at 8:10
AFI Fest (R) Today at (5:40 @ $2.50) 8:20
Pleasantville (PG-13) Today at (3:20 @ $2.50) 7:00
ANTZ (PG) Today at (3:50 @ $2.50) 8:30
BRIDE of CHUCKY (R) Today at (4:00 @ $2.50) 8:40
Night at the ROXBURY (PG-13) Today at (4:00 @ 2.50)
* Special Engagement, no Passes or Coupons
$3.50 (Twi-Lite) Show Daily

WITH ONLINE BANKING, THIS ACCOUNT ALERTS YOU WHEN YOUR BALANCE IS LOW.
HELPING YOU DECIDE BETWEEN GOING TO THE MOVIES OR RENTING ONE BEFORE YOU EVEN LEAVE YOUR ROOM.
Check your balance from your room 24 hours a day using Online Banking with HomeLink. Only the Student Value Package gives you so much for so little
BankBoston
Get Free SUBWAY® Sandwiches
1. Online Banking with BankBoston HomeLink® is free (e.g., transferring funds, checking balances). There is a $3.50 monthly fee for Online Bill Payments with HomeLink. 2. Valid school ID or acceptance letter required. To qualify for E-Press Check and Reserve Credit you must be at least 18 years of age and have no adverse credit history. 3. Purchase a six inch Subway® sandwich and a 21-ounce soft drink and get a second six inch Subway® Sandwich and 21-ounce soft drink of equal or lesser price free upon presentation of a Student Value Package coupon. Offer expires May 31, 1999. Offer available at participating Subway® locations and may not be combined with any other offer. One coupon per person per visit. Subway is a registered trademark of Doctors Associates Inc. 4. If you make withdrawals, deposits, transfers, and balance inquiries electronically by phone, ATM, or computer only, the monthly fee is discounted to $1. The normal monthly Student Value Package fee is $6.
Member FDIC

INFINITY
1393 LIBERTY ST. - SPRINGFIELD, MA
(413) 731-9323
Infinit413@aol.com
EVERY THURSDAY 9pm 18+
Kiss95.7 KLUB
FRI. OCT. 30 - 8:00PM 21+
WICKED GARDEN
STONE TEMPLE PILOTS w/ Money Penny
SAT. OCT. 31 8:00PM 21+
w/ Landmine Spring
ITCHY FISH
HALLOWEEN COSTUME CONTEST 1ST & 2ND CASH PRIZES
FRI. NOV. 6 - 8:00PM 21+
Orange Crush
The Retro 80's Show
SUN. NOV. 8 - 8:00PM 18+
L.A. GUNS
SAT. NOV. 14 - 8:00PM 21+
YOUNG NEAL and the VIPERS
FRI. NOV. 20 - 8:00PM 21+
THE RAGE AGAINST THE MACHINE SHOW W/ B-SIDE
11/25 STAIND
11/26 TREE
12/6 HYPNOTIC RICK
12/13 ONE KIND DOWN
12/27 SHADOWS FALL
PROTIX (413) 732-0202

www.Shopping.com
TEXTBOOKS...
You've gotta have 'em, so why spend more than you have to? At Shopping.com you can buy your books online and save up to 45% on textbooks and up to 80% on best sellers....with no waiting in line!
... and with all that money you're going to save, you can pick up any of our Billboard TOP 40 CD's for only $8.97 each!
Then check out our huge selection of computers and over 250,000 computer accessories, supplies and software titles.
the latest video games for your Sony Playstation, Nintendo64, Sega Saturn, Gameboy or SNES
camcorders, stereos, VCR's, magazines, fragrances, sporting equipment, a complete line of furniture and accessories
and all of the other TWO MILLION things you're going to need to go to school!
www.Shopping.com 1-888-LOVE-2-SHOP
Aiwa CSD-ES228 CD Radio Cassette Recorder $69.95 YOU SAVE $10!
JVC Personal CD Player with HYPER BASS $79.95* YOU SAVE $20.00!
Creative Labs VooDoo 3D PCI 16MB Graphics Accelerator $179.99* YOU SAVE $120.00!
Canon BJC 250 Photo-Realistic Printer $108.99* YOU SAVE $50.01!
Diamond Multimedia Supra Express 56K Internal Fax/Modem $83.77* YOU SAVE $116.18!
Creative Labs PC-DVD Encore with Dxr2 Technology $181.81* YOU SAVE $118.19!
www.Shopping.com 1-888-LOVE-2-SHOP
*Due to rebate! Rebates, pre-tax, mail-in. Prices do not include shipping and handling.

NBA lockout reverberates off court

By Skip Wollenberg
Associated Press

A restaurant near the Minnesota Timberwolves' arena has scaled back hiring busboys and cooks. A Salt Lake City sports store finds little demand for Utah Jazz shirts and hats. Cable TV networks are preparing to run action movies and classic NBA games instead of the real thing.

The economic fallout from the NBA's vanishing season is already being felt a week before the league misses its first regular season game due to the lockout.

The NBA was supposed to open its season Tuesday, but instead has canceled its first four weeks — 194 games in all — due to the labor impasse. The earliest the season might begin now is Dec. 1. The league and its 29 teams had expected to generate nearly $2 billion in revenue this year through sales of tickets, arena suites, broadcast rights and advertising signs and its share of an estimated $3 billion-plus in licensed merchandise sales worldwide.

The canceled games — and the possibility of a lost season — could exact a toll in the hundreds of millions of dollars from local economies.

The Charlotte Hornets pump close to $100 million a year into the city economy, estimates John Connaughton, an economics professor at the University of North Carolina at Charlotte.

Cleveland's tourism boss said Cavaliers home games each generate $1.9 million in restaurant, hotel, bar and souvenir business. NBA teams each play 41 regular season games at home and more if they make the playoffs.

In Chicago, where the Bulls have won six NBA titles and feature the game's best-known player in Michael Jordan, Chamber of Commerce executives estimate each home game generates $8 million in local spending outside the arena.

Skeptics say such estimates are overblown.

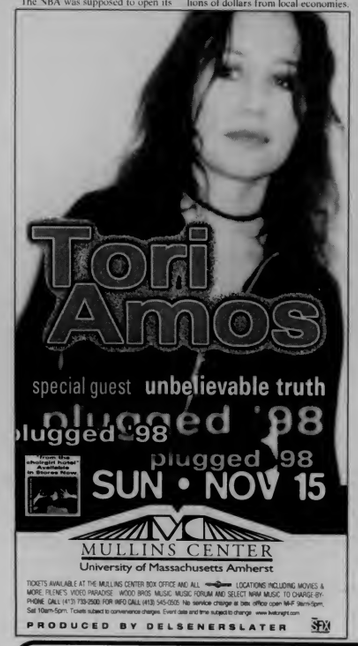
"People find other things to do," said Allen Sanderson, a sports economist at the University of Chicago. "If the Bulls were not here, people would spend the same amount of time drinking beer and going to the movies as they would have on the Bulls."

Nonetheless, lost games will directly affect people's lives. Arenas won't hire as many security guards or popcorn vendors, nearby restaurants won't get the big game-night crowds, and sports bars without compelling alternatives on their big TV screens may lose customers.

The Charlotte Coliseum Authority, which manages the Hornets' home arena, has stopped hiring and frozen the salaries of its 200 full-time workers in anticipation of the potential loss of 41 or more of its 120 scheduled events for the next year.

Only a block from the Target Center in Minneapolis, manager Tom Matoushek of The Loon Cafe plans to use seven or eight fewer busboys, cooks and other workers than the 18 or 19 he would normally have on Timberwolves' game nights when the place would be packed two hours before tipoff.

Industry insiders said there has been a 50 percent cut in licensed merchandise orders from retailers since the lockout began in July.



"It's always who's hot, and right now nobody's hot, nobody's playing ball, so nobody's buying," said assistant manager Sean Estes at Galyan's Trading Co. store in Carmel near Indianapolis.

Will Ferguson, manager of the Fan-A-Mania store in the ZCMI Center mall in Salt Lake City, said last week he hasn't sold a single jazz-related item for two weeks. "We have a lot of tourists that come in and they're not even buying. They usually do," he said.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Almost there...

Massachusetts senior and All-America candidate Lari Ketner will look to guide the men's basketball team to a successful season beginning with an exhibition against the Converse All-Stars on Nov. 3.

Wondering how fit you really are?
Don't know where to begin?
Get A Personal Trainer
@ The Body Shop
For a fee of $80 and a Current Body Shop Membership receive:
• 1 Fitness Evaluation
• 5 Personal Training Sessions
For more information call 253-8086 or
To SIGN UP stop by the Totman or Boyden Body Shop today!

VIDEO TO GO
6 University Drive, Amherst (413) 549-8509
◆ Across from Rafters, On Bus Route
◆ Inventory of over 16,000 Films
◆ Everyday Special: Four Catalog Titles, for Four Days for $5 (+tax).
$1 OFF ANY VIDEO RENTAL
(Not to be combined with any other special. One Coupon per Rental) Expires November 30, 1998.

McMurphy's Uptown Tavern
Icehouse Prize Night
Win an Icehouse Refrigerator
Hats, Shirts, Pint Glasses
9-11 pm Thursday 10/29
37 North Pleasant St.

OOPS!
• Free Estimates
• Lifetime Warranty
• Auto Glass Replacement
• Car & Truck Rental
North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center (On bus route - one mile from UMass)
78 Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA 549-2880

MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
163 SUNDERLAND RD N. AMHERST
THURSDAY NIGHT... BUD LITE NITE!
MIKE'S Mini Pitcher of Bud Lite $3
FREE SNACK BASKETS, T-SHIRTS & MAD MOVES!

■ UMass

continued from page 16

bringing the Minutewomen one win away from a berth in the national tournament.

The winner of the A-10 tourney will compete in a NCAA play-in game against the winner of the Patriot League. The game will be at the Atlantic 10 competitor's home site.

The retired Pam Hixon, who is the all-time win leader among UMass coaches, led the Minutewomen to the title in 1996. Shea, a one-time Hixon pupil, continued the streak in 1997 during her rookie season. After earning the second seed in the tournament last season, Shea's squad utilized a home field advantage, upsetting top-seeded and visiting West Chester on Richard F. Garber Field.

Minutewomen Notes: Five Minutewomen will make their final appearance in the Atlantic 10 tournament next weekend. Co-captains Kate Putnam and Vicky Browne (1997 all-tournament team), as well as fellow seniors Erica Johnston (1997 tournament MVP), Kerry Lyons, and Laura Phelan (1996 all-tournament team). All will attempt to notch their fourth conference crown in four seasons.

■ seniors

continued from page 16

points.

Corcoran may have contributed the biggest tally of the season, as he notched the lone goal in a 1-0 UMass victory at George Washington, the Minutemen's first of the season.

The seniors' greatest contributions may have been the mental approaches they brought to the game and the trickle down effect on the team as a whole.

"We tried to be mentors on this team," Brodsky said. "As seniors, one of our key roles was helping the younger guys along and making sure they will be ready to step into our roles in the coming years."

As the curtain closes on Sunday, the Minutemen will have bid adieu to four strong players that cared about their sport, their teammates and therefore gave the Massachusetts men's soccer team a chance to win every time out.

■ Bankhead

continued from page 16

Whipple got on the ball and, along with wide receivers Jimmy Moore, who transferred to UMass from Division I Southern Methodist University, and Adrian Zullo, a high school speedster, persuaded the selfless Bankhead to come over from Palomar Junior College in California.

Other offers made toward the highly scouted signal-caller included Hofstra, who entered this season with much more prestige than the rebuilding Minutemen. The Flying Dutchmen not only could boast a talented roster, but could almost assure a successful season, as they came into September ranked as one of the Top 10 teams in the nation.

However, Bankhead would have had to sit on the bench behind All-American candidate Giovanni Carmazzi, and, as a junior, there wasn't time for that.

Instead, he took his chances with Whipple and UMass, despite the school's recent woes.

The decision was not only very right for Bankhead, but arguably very wrong for Hofstra. On Oct. 3, Bankhead's Minutemen travelled to Hempstead, N.Y. to take on the No. 5 Flying Dutchmen, and their leader, Carmazzi.

After a tough battle, the unranked underdogs, paced by Bankhead's 348 passing yards and three touchdowns, overcame his prospective school by score of 40-35, including a game-winning scoring toss from UMass' new hero to Zullo with three seconds on the clock.

His composure on the final drive of that game helped vault Massachusetts into the national rankings, from which they were vacant since the preseason of 1995. Several of his outstanding plays this year took a great deal of ability as well, as his clear head would be useless without a capable body.

That is, one would think before talking to Bankhead.

"I'm not a real good athlete, so I just try to get the ball out to people like Marcel who can elude the defense and pick up yards for us," Bankhead said.

"The offensive line here has done a tremendous job, you know. They've given me time to make throws and work the ball downfield."

Yards are exactly what No. 10 has covered in each and every game this year. Even on the ground, the unadmitting Bankhead has picked up three scores and 65 yards scrambling. Still, he chooses not to end his movie-worthy career with much personal glitz and glamour.

"As far as this year is concerned, I'd just like to make the playoffs. Next year I want to win and do more of the same. We're just trying to be successful as a team."

LAUREN KUSKY / COLLEGIAN

Digging through the season

The Massachusetts volleyball team will hit the road this weekend as it travels to meet Duquesne tomorrow and Virginia Tech on Saturday. Game times are at 7 p.m.

~Sports Notice~

1998-99 UMASS MEN'S AND WOMEN'S 9-BALL REGIONAL QUALIFYING TOURAMENTS

The UMass 9-Ball Region One qualifying tournaments will be held concurrently in Union Billiards at 6 p.m. tonight. The top three qualifiers for both men and women are eligible to represent UMass in regional competition. The regional tournament's sites, dates, and times TBA.

Union Billiards is hosting this event. The campus community is invited. Admission is free.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
HELD OVER - DAILY 7:00 & 9:20 DON'T MISS IT!
FULLY RESTORED TO ORSON WELLES' ORIGINAL VISION!
"MARVELOUSLY GARISH...TERRIFIC ENTERTAINMENT!"
TOUCH OF EVIL
CHARLTON HESTON JANET LEIGH ORSON WELLES
MIDNIGHT BOOGIE IN 3-D!
HALLOWEEN LATE SHOW FRI. & SAT. @ 11:45 (TKS. FROM 10PM.)
DISCO DOLLS IN 3-DIMENSION
ACADEMY of MUSIC Cinema House NORTHAMPTON 584-8435

Best Place for a Hot Tub
30% STUDENT DISCOUNT
W/VALID I.D.
SUNDAYS -THURSDAYS
Holidays Excluded
413-586-6843 • 33 West St. • Northampton
www.eastheaven.com

Regency Hairstylists would like to introduce SARAH
STOP BY ANYTIME!
SHAMPOO, CUT & BLOWDRY $13.00
184 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-9526

Fuzzy Sweater.
ZAVA
downtown Amherst

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
We have over 30,000 pints of fresh ales & lagers.
WE SHARE!!
Thurs- Native (NYC Groove)
Fri- Tom Major Quartet (Blues)
Sat- Saturn & The Outer Planets (Surf Rock)
• Fully Stocked Bar
• Late Night Menu Till Midnight
24-36 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-4400

THE FINE ARTS CENTER SERIES
Three Americas
The Fine Arts Center and Jazz à la Mode present
Eliane Elias
JAZZ PIANO
This Grammy-nominated Brazilian pianist/singer and her band connect the music of North, Central, and South America to create an unforgettable night of jazz. "Elias understands how to make great music. . ." – JazzTimes
SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 7
8PM, BOWKER AUDITORIUM
No Fear of Flying
The Fine Arts Center and Hampshire College present
STEPHEN PETRONIO COMPANY
NOT GARDEN
AN EVENING IN MOVEMENT, MUSIC, AND IMAGE
Astonishing, athletic, in-your-face dance from one of America's most celebrated choreographers. Hampshire college-alum Stephen Petronio. The company takes flight in the New England premiere of "NOT GARDEN," its first evening-length work. Don't miss it.
THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 8PM CONCERT HALL
Saint-be-Praised
ST. PETERSBURG STATE SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
RAVEL MARTYNOV, Music Director
MARGARITA ALAVERDIAN, Soprano
The world-renowned orchestra makes it regional premiere as part of a rare North American tour, with an all-Russian program including Rimsky-Korsakov and Tchaikovsky. Guest soprano Margarita Alaverdian, a soloist at the Kirov Opera, sings arias from Eugene Onegin, The Tsar's Bride and Ruslan and Ludmilla.
FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 8PM, CONCERT HALL
Presented with the generous support of Merrill Lynch
WE'RE RAISING THE ROOF! While our new lobby is under construction, you may enter the Concert Hall via alternate entrances. On-site signs and guides will show you the way.
The Fine Arts Center University of Massachusetts Amherst
Call 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS for tickets
TICKETS 577 9
FOR FIVE COLLEGE STUDENTS

TO² TODD OLDHAM JEANS™
Darby
downtown Amherst

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Brian- Thanks for the beautiful roses! The whole campus should know! I hope you like this! -Eclare

Come see the UMass Women's Ice Hockey team play their first home game this Sunday, Nov 1st, vs UMass Lowell at 1pm in the practice rink. Free admission.

AUTO FOR SALE

VW Bus For Sale Yellow 80 Vanagon Westfalia Stick, Full Kitchen and Pop Top, Good Condition Very Cumfy 973-256-2359 or 413-559-4552

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

1991 Pontiac Grand Am Excellent condition. Low mileage. $3800/BO. 256-6027.

86 Toyota Pick-Up 4x4 Runs great. $1900/BO. Call Mark 256-0416.

88 Honda Civic 5 speed, 166K, many new parts, well-maintained, runs great. $1100 or B/O. 268-0388.

College Car! Pontiac Sunbird. Runs perfect! $800/BO. 259-1915.

93 Geo Metro 60,000 miles. Great gas mileage. Good condition. $1000. Call Kirsten 548-6941.

CARS $100-$500 Police Impounds. Hondas, Chevys, Jeeps, & Sport Utilities. MUST SELL! 1-800-522-2730 x4554

COMPUTERS

Macintosh Printer Color StyleWriter 1500 $100 or B/O. Call Tony @ 549-5514.

COMPUTERS

486 Computer Great For Student Works Good $100. Color VGA $50 (413)584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

The Magma Group is looking for student organizations and motivated student reps to assist with promotions on campus. This is an easy way to earn great money while working flexible hours. For more info please call (617)783-9700 ext 22.

Disc Jockey needed for mobile DJ service. Willing to train but must have a dependable vehicle and knowledge of current dance music. Call 253-6355.

INSURANCE SALES

Earn $35,000+ in your 1 year as a personal lines account exec. If you have the drive and ambition to succeed, are well organized and have exceptional interpersonal skills, start your career in homeowner/auto insurance sales. We will train the right individual to sell our highly competitive insurance products and provide you with unlimited qualified leads. Candidate must be willing to work evening. We offer a competitive base + commission and complete benefits package. Send resume to W.D. Grinnell, Webber and Grinnell Insurance Agency, P.O. Box 538, Northampton, MA

WEBBER & GRINNELL INSURANCE

Drivers Wanted Pays $9 to $15 per hour. Inside help wanted too. Flexible hours. Call Ominos 256-8911

EMPLOYMENT

Best Part-Time Job In The Valley
You don't have to wash dishes or flip burgers for the extra money you need. Become a Clean Water Action organizer and earn $7.30-$9.00/hr fighting air and water pollution. Paid training, flexible schedule, evening and weekend hours. 584-9830.

Looking for outgoing motivated students for campus spokesperson position. 10-15hrs/wk. On-campus, Flexible hours. $10-$12/hr. Please contact Dan Wolman @ Campus Information Services. 800-922-5579.

EARN CASH Flexible Hours Now Hiring At Sbarros Hampshire Mall

Legal Assistants Wanted Spring 1999 Internships with Student Legal Services Office, get hands-on experience in the legal profession—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary—training provided. Deadline to begin the application process is Nov 13, 1998 — Contact The Student Legal Services Office today 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Wanted 98 People We'll pay you to lose up to 29+ lbs. Expires 11/11/98. 1-703-817-1071

Waitress Part-Time Make $400 & work 2 or 3 nights. Flexible hours. Dancers For Upscale Gentleman's Club No experience necessary. Unlimited $$$ Potential. Bikini, Topless, or Nude! Call 413-536-0502

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ For Hire: DJ FOOZ is now booking your next function. Check me out at Pruddy's on Thursday nights. Call Tim at 549-9127.

Lights and Sound: Rave to Dorm Party, Your OJ's or ours. Call BARR Productions (413)737-8561.

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Free delivery. 253-9742.

FURNITURE

Papason Chair, Couch, and Footrest. (Black). All $150. Decent TV. Great price- $50. Call Jessica 548-3966.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

We're here to pump... YOU UP! Creatine Monohydrate, Creatine Surge, DHEA, Whey Protein and more from Fitness Workshop delivered right to your door. 1-877-FIT-WORK. www.fitnessworkshop.com

HOUSE FOR RENT

Summer Rentals Cape Cod Group Summer Rentals. Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Call Diamond Real Estate 1-508-477-1900.

INSTRUCTION

KICKBOXING INSTRUCTION Personal training. Workouts customized to meet your fitness goals. Joe 548-8979. Leave message.

LOST & FOUND

Ladies Watch Lost- Pay phones between Haigis Mall and Herter or entrance to Morrill Auditorium. 532-7730.

Thursday Night at The Pub- Lost my mother's engagement ring! Huge sentimental value! Call Jenn 256-0375.

MISCELLANEOUS

Think Different $500-$1000 part-time per month. No experience needed. Will train. Free information packet. 413-788-9838. cleanair@javanet.com

PERSONALS

Alumnus from Boston area looking for a pen pal. Any age O.K. Address: Rick Lewis 40 Hampton Rd. Sharon, MA 02067 Phone: 781-784-3470 Please Write To Me.

ROOM FOR RENT

1 bedroom in 3 bedroom apartment. 10 minutes from UMass campus. Big back yard, quiet area. Call Katie 256-5995.

SERVICES

Keg Systems New installations, parts. CO2 filled. Call Bryan 586-2452.

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst Area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TO SUBLET

4 bedroom apartment on Main St. Nicest place in Amherst. Walk to town. Available Jan 1st. Call 256-0416.

3 bedroom apt for sublet. $875 per month, all utilities included. On bus route. Cliffside Apt. For more info call (413)665-0052.

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK '99 Cancun & Bahamas: Sign up now and get free meals/drinks! Florida, Jamaica, and South Padre available! Sell Trips and Travel Free! Call for free brochure. 1-888-777-4642

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK 99! Cancun * Nassau * Jamaica * Mazatlan * Acapulco * Bahamas Cruise * Florida * South Padre
Travel Free and make lots of Cash!
Top reps are offered full-time staff jobs.
Lowest Price Guaranteed.
Call now for details!
www.classtravel.com
800-838-6411
930 Comm Ave South
On BU's West Campus

SPRING BREAK '99
Largest selection of Spring Break Oestinations, including Cruises!
Foam Parties, Drink Specials, and Club Admissions.
Group Discounts.
Epicurean Tours
1-800-231-4-FUN

TYPING

Have your paper typed by an English Major! $1.50 1st 2 pages, $1 each additional. Proofreading & Typing $2 a page. Call Jen at 256-6351.

WANT TO SUBLET

Looking to sublet from Jan 1-June 1. 2 or 3 bedrooms. Call 546-1747.

The Classifieds...

Makes you feel GOOD!!!

Are you looking for a place to live next semester?

People are looking for people to rent or sublet to!

Put an Ad in The Classifieds today!

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, OCT. 29

Lecture — A lecture will be given by Dr. James Nestor at 7 p.m. in room 124 Hasbrouck. The lecture is sponsored by the UMass Arts Council, the SGA and the GSS.

Lecture — A lecture entitled "Queer Identity, Feminist Fetishes and Subversive Desire in the Sex Industry" will be held at 12:30 p.m. in room 903 of the Campus Center.

Presentation — A presentation entitled "Reporting Under Fire: A Journalist in Caucasian War Zone" will be at 7 p.m. in the Executive Board Room at the Willits-Hallowell Conference Center at Mount Holyoke College.

Presentation — A slide presentation from The Passionate Camera: Photography and the Bodies of Desire will be shown at 7:30 p.m. in the Campus Center room 168.

Reading — Jean Baker Miller and Irene Stiver will read from "The Healing Connection: How Women Form Relationships in Therapy and in Life" at 7:30 p.m. in the New York Room in Mary Woolley Hall at Mount Holyoke College.

Reception — A photo presentation by Kane Stewart will be shown in the Gallery of the Film/Photo Building at Hampshire College. The reception will be from 5-7 p.m. in the Gallery, and the exhibit runs through Nov. 15.

Speech — Peace activists from each of the major ethnic groups in the former Yugoslavia will talk about their experiences in a talk entitled "Roads to Reconciliation: Peacebuilding in the Former Yugoslavia." The speech begins at 7:45 p.m. in room 163C of the Campus Center.

Workshop — A workshop on contraception and safer sex will be held at 3 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

Workshop — A workshop by professional filmo artist Evan Gerber will be held from 6-8:30 p.m. in the Craft Center in the Student Union. Hands-on participation is limited to 30, but everybody is welcome to watch.

FRIDAY, OCT. 30

Community — There will be personalized psychic readings in the Bluewall Cafe in the Campus Center from 7-9 p.m. The movies "Scream" and "Scream 2" will be shown beginning at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium. Both are part of the Something Every Friday program series.

Concert — Garrick Ohlsson will give a piano concert as part of the Sage Hall Concert Series at 8 p.m. in Sweeney Concert Hall at Sage Hall at Smith College.

Discussion — There will be a panel discussion on the explorations of repetition and the machine in new sculpture at the art gallery in the Student Union at 1 p.m.

Lecture — A lecture entitled "The Autistic Child: Biology, Diagnosis, and Advocacy" will be held at Smith College in McConnell B05 at 4 p.m.

Reception — A queer fall reception for graduate students will take place in the graduate lounge in the campus center from 5-7 p.m. There will be free food and beverages.

NOTICES

Community — Official Mail-In Voter Registration Forms are available at the Registrar's Office, and Commuter Services in the Student Union. Voting is on Nov. 3.

Exhibit — "Equal Partners" is being shown at the Smith College Museum of Art from Sept. 25-Dec. 13. This exhibit showcases the work of 15 American firms founded by female/male partners.

Submissions — The UMass Poetry Society is seeking submissions to its anthology. Call Joshua at 546-5823 for more details.

Workshop — A workshop for women survivors of childhood sexual abuse will take place on Nov. 7. The workshop include writing, drawing, and movement. In the evening, participants are also invited to perform dances, music, and monologues about healing from abuse. Call 586-7190 for more information and to sign up.

PSAs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PSI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

If you think that shopping a college store means having no choices...

Think again.

New University Store "Not like a mall... Better."

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 29, 1998

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEOH	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Political Debate		Political Debate		Mystery! "Touching Evil"		Chelf	This Old Hse.
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Promised Land (In Stereo)		Diagnosis Murder "Alienated"		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Promised Land (In Stereo)		Diagnosis Murder "Alienated"		48 Hours (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Vengeance Unlimited		"Don't Look Down" (1998, Suspense) Megan Ward, Billy Burke		News		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny	Friends	Wayans Bros.	Jamie Foxx	Steve Harvey	For Your Love	News		Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Jesse	Frasier	Veronica's Cl.	ER "Masquerade" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	9	Married...With	Home Imp.	Judge Judy	Judy Judy	"Inferno" (1998, Science Fiction) Jonathan LaPaglia		News		Newsradio	LAPD	Newsradio	LAPD
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Friends	Jesse	Frasier	Veronica's Cl.	ER "Masquerade" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Frasier	Simpsons	Simpsons	Breaking Magician's Code 4		News		Friends	Mad Abt. You
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Jesse	Frasier	Veronica's Cl.	ER "Masquerade" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	6	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour Wiss	Jim Lehrer	This Old Hse.	Dra. on Call	Mystery! "Touching Evil"		Jewel in the Crown		Charlie Rose
WGGB	20	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Vengeance Unlimited		"Don't Look Down" (1998, Suspense) Megan Ward, Billy Burke		News		Nightline
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	"Inferno" (1998, Science Fiction) Jonathan LaPaglia				Mad Abt. You		Frasier	Cheers
WTBS	22	Family Matters	Family Matters	Roseanna	Roseanne	WCW Thunder		WCW Thunder		"Firewalker" (1986, Adventure) Chuck Norris
A&E	33	Northern Exposure		Law & Order: Volunteers		Biography: Carol Burnett		Unexplained (R)		Touch of Frost (R) (Part 2 of 2)		Law & Order "Survivor"
CNN	23	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand: Entertainment		Sports	Moneyline
COM	35	1 Night Stand	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	"The Rocky Horror Picture Show" (1975, Musical) Tim Curry		Young Comedians (R)				Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	32	New House	Fix-It-Line	Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery "Ocean Park"		Into Unknown	Strange-True	High Speed Chase (R)		Discovery News	Live
ESPN	31	Up Close	Sportscenter		Gamehight	College Football: San Diego State at Bryam Young (Live)						Sportscenter
LIFE	34	Ellen	Ellen	Party of Five	"Close to You"	Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		"Moment of Truth: A Mother's Deception" (1994) Joan Van Ark				New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	29	(5:30) Jams Countdown		Biorhythm (R)	Beavis & Butt.	Celebrity	Celebrity	Celebrity	Celebrity	Celebrity	Celebrity	Beavis & Butt.	Loveline
NICK	40	Figure It Out	Secret of Alex	Drug		Kenan & Kel	Secret of Alex	Brady Bunch	Lewinched	Happy Days	Laverne	Dick Van Dyke	Newhart
SCIFI	45	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Sightings		Star Trek: "Wolf in the Fold"		"Refrozen III: Hell on Earth" (1995, Horror) Doug Bradley		Sightings		Star Trek
TLC	28	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours (R)		Medical Detect: Without Warn.		Trinity and Beyond (R)				Medical Detect	Without Warn.
TNT	30	Babylon 5 "Point of Departure"		ER "Bully Shower" (In Stereo)		"The Seventh Sign" (1988, Horror) Demi Moore				"When a Stranger Calls Ba..." (1993, Suspense) Carol Kane
USA	36	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Xena: Warrior Princess		Walker, Texas Ranger		"Stop, Or My Mom Will Shoot" (1992, Suspense) Sylvester Stallone		New York Undercover
HBO	48	(4:30)		"The Man Who Knew Too Little" (1997) Bill Murray. "PG"		"Face/Off" (1997, Suspense) John Travolta, Nicolas Cage. (In Stereo) "R"				Inside the NFL (In Stereo)
MAX	49	"Sprinkling for Bobby Fischer" (1993) Joe Mantegna. "PG"				"Par Sematary" (1989, Horror) Dale Midkiff. (In Stereo) "R"		"Operation Delta Force" (1997) Ernie Hudson. "R"				"Little Dieter"
SHOW	50	Dead Man's Gun: "The Tracker"		Outer Limits: "Ima" (In Stereo)		"Universal Soldier" (1992) Jean-Claude Van Damme. "R"				Linc's. (R)		Rude Awaken.	Compromising

HSCN Hearing Services Cable Network

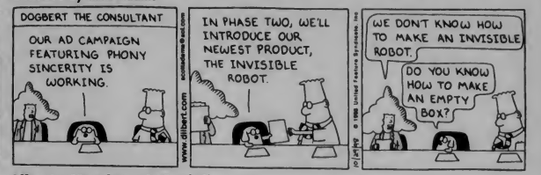
2	HSCN Bulletin Board	18	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	19	UVC-TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	21	Cornell to Cornell
6	PBS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	23	Sundance
8	UPN1/20 Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	25	CTN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	ABC/CH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
16	WB/New Haven	33	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

Cathy By Cathy Guisewite

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady



Fiendish Foglios By Brian D. Moses

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Liberty Meadows By Frank Cho

Non Sequitur By Wiley

Non-Cents By John Zaccone Jr.

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — Timing may not be your best friend today, but you can overcome any obstacles by thinking things through to the fullest capacity.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — You don't want to find yourself saying "no" to an offer before you consider the pros and cons. Nightfall brings a chance to see things in a new light.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — You'll feel as though the pace is picking up considerably today. You'll have the chance to make a lasting decision, so act wisely.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Be sure to brush up on those skills that have been untried for awhile. Today, you may find that you need to do something risky and unusual.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — Someone may be trying to talk you into doing something that you would've resisted at any other time. Today, things are different.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Your romantic intentions must not get confused or be misinterpreted today, or you'll surely be disappointed. Share your feelings openly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Today you'll remember a past glory in a way that inspires you to repeat it. Look forward, rather than get lost in the way things used to be.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — You're feeling a little more selfish than usual, and a friend or loved one may not be in the mood to cater to your whims. Lay low to avoid stress.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Someone in charge may be considering you for an advancement at this time. Make sure you do nothing to hurt your chances. Play it safe!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — You may react to environmental influences in unusual ways today. Make sure you're surrounded by people and things that make you feel at ease.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — It's a good day to try and look at familiar things in a new light. Getting a different perspective at this time can aid you for the future.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — You mustn't let communication break down between you and the loved one. Don't mistake a trite disagreement for something more series.

Quote of the Day

"I'm going to be a tube of Bengay for Halloween."

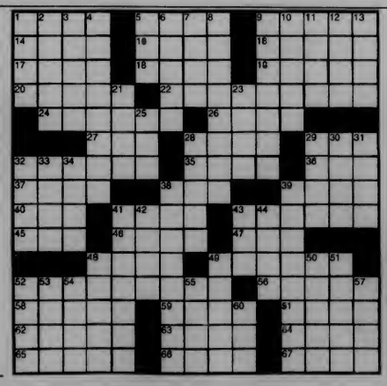
–Overheard

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Mine's the 'Howard Stern' in the back row"

ACROSS

1 Illegally obtained wealth
5 Memo initls.
9 San Antonio tourist site
14 Toast topper
15 Jefferson's veep
16 Enchantress
17 Egg-shaped
18 Alberta tribe
19 Fish, in a way
20 Answer
22 In a positive manner
24 Bar seats
26 Author Kingsley
27 Which person?
28 Posterior
29 Clever one
32 Urban bird
35 Nobelist Wiesel
36 Genetic material
37 Difficult
38 Motorist's need
39 Candle part
40 Self-esteem
41 Pat dry
43 Lighthearted
45 Thrill
46 — Hashana
47 Slippery one
48 Is sick
49 Fixed
52 Card game for one
56 Bitter
58 Not together
59 Untainted
61 Cartoonist Peter
62 Caravan animal
63 Perimeter
64 Clothing
65 Hue
66 Caribou, e.g.
67 — gin



DOWN

1 Needy
2 Santa's helpers
3 Vaulted
4 Tailed
5 Alphabet starters
6 Browses on the Internet
7 Expanse
8 Triumphs
9 Spanning
10 Italian coins
11 Swift, graceful horse
12 Whimper
13 Nothing but
21 B.C.'s — National Park
23 Prefix for "potent"
25 Chaney of film
28 Moor
29 Legal document
30 Part of a foot
31 Seize
32 Sigh of relief
33 Othello's foe
34 Develop
38 Spread rumors
39 Villanova players
41 Peanut —
42 Actress Albright
43 Nectar gatherer
44 Singer Home
48 Ventilated
49 Highway sign
50 Actor Flynn
51 Wild dog of Australia
52 Pouches
53 Colorful fish
54 Tibetan monk
55 Bad-mannered
57 Doctor's spoonful
60 Ending for "suction"

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

M	O	P	S		D	E	P	T	H		T	U	C	K
A	V	E	C		O	M	A	H	A		N	O	O	N
G	E	A	R		M	E	R	Y	L		L	I	M	O
I	N	S	T	I	P	E	R	S		O	C	T	E	T
		B	U	S	Y		S	U	L	U
E	A	T	E	N		C	E	R	E	M	O	N	Y
R	O	U	S	E		R	U	I	N	G		Z	O	O
A	R	N		K	I	T	T	E	N	S		O	R	K
S	T	E		S	T	O	L	E		M	A	N	S	E
E	A	R	N	I	N	G	S		O	G	E	E	S
		B	A	R	E	L	Y		M	E	S	A
R	A	V	E	L		V	E	R	T	I	C	A	L
A	M	I	D		A	B	I	D	E		N	O	V	A
F	U	L	L		M	U	S	I	C		S	L	O	G
T	H	E	E		T	R	I	A	C	H	T	A	I	N	S

10-29-98 © 1998 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Vegan Falafel Sandwich w/Sauce
Fiesta Rice and Cheese

DINNER
Breaded Chicken Tenders
Lemon Pepper Cod
American Grill Burger
Grilled Cheese Sandwich

Worcester

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Vegetarian Egg Roll
Vegetable Fried Rice
Vegan Ravioli w/Tomato Sauce

DINNER
Breaded Chicken Tenders
Lentil Chili
Pastabilities: Breaded Chicken Tenders

Hampshire

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Charbroiled Chicken Sandwich
Macaroni and Cheese

DINNER
Breaded Chicken Tenders
Baked Fish w/Herb Stuffing

Berkshire

LUNCH
Hamburger on a Roll
Spaghetti w/Meatballs & Tomato Sauce
Meatball Grinder
Spicy Black Bean Burger

DINNER
Breaded Chicken Tenders
Broccoli Stuffed Flounder
Lentil Chili
Pastabilities: Baked Ziti

Night Editor: Casey Kane
Photo Technician: Roberto Delgado
Copy Editor: Ken Mc Donald
Production Supervisor: Rob Snow
Production Staff: D.J. Carey, Bridget Delrosso

Bruins still have promising team; league settling

Recently it was brought to my attention by a close friend that in my last column I did not give the reader fair warning to the fact that I am a die–hard Bruins fan. I figured that I might just hint towards my love for the black and gold, as I felt I did, picking the B's to win the Northeast division, which to many was probably either a very brave and/or biased pick. I realize now though that my friend was right.

So now that I have warned you, let's discuss the new mess Bruins management has created at the shiny "Vault"

James Murphy
on

(FleetCenter) on Causeway Street.

You may have recently heard that forward Anson Carter and defenseman Kyle McLaren, who have both sat out the Bruins' first seven games, recently signed 25–day contracts with the Utah Grizzlies of the International Hockey League. The reason: the Bruins management is still light years behind when it comes to paying players what they deserve and putting out the dough it takes to win a Stanley Cup (or least make the second round of the playoffs).

Massachusetts assistant hockey coach Chris Salani (a teammate of Carter's at Michigan State) was asked recently what kind of teammate Anson Carter was in college.

"Anson was an unbelievable teammate," Salani said. "He wasn't the high scorer or anything like that but he came to play everyday. Even if he didn't score or put points on the board, his presence was always felt. He was very physical, always laying down the body along the boards and he was so fast. He still is."

Carter, who had a career high in points (43) and was an integral piece in the Bruins' resurgence last season, is asking for $1.6 million plus incentives over two years. Last season he made only $350,000, close to the league minimum. Eight hundred thousand–dollars a year is not a hefty raise for someone who put up 43 points and could be a second line center on perhaps any team.

On top of that is his age, 24, this would be only his third season and I'm sure he is only getting better.

The same can be said for McLaren, who is only 21 and had a stellar 25–point season last year. Though he is asking for a bit more than Carter (most likely around $4.5 million plus incentives for four years), the Bruins should not have even questioned such a proposal, let alone be locked in a holdout.

Though I have frequent nightmares about such a dreaded day, Ray Bourque will eventually retire and if the Bruins' management doesn't fork up some dinero soon, there will be nobody who can even come close to replacing him.

When the Bruins were eliminated in last year's playoffs by the Capitals, most fans would admit that although they might have been upset, nobody really expected them to even make the postseason after the disastrous last–place finish in '97. Most Bruins fans would also have to admit that their pain was eased by the fact that this team showed promise.

The Bruins were and still are a young team which overachieved under the tutelage of Pat Burns (the Bill Parcells of hockey). So why wouldn't the expectations be high this season, as long as management kept the team in tact?

They would at least make the second round this season. Once again though, owner Jeremy Jacobs and his pre– historic puppet Harry Sinden have let their stubbornness get in the way of the team's on–ice success.

As long as Jacobs is still making money and Sinden is still living in the dark age in terms of contracts, the Bruins will continue to go backwards instead of building towards the future with youth and promise.

It appears ironic that Jacobs was willing to buy the Cleveland Browns last month for $307 million but he can't dish out a mere $6.1 million for two rising stars.

Well, enough of my rambling and bitterness. Congrats to Mark Messier on notching his 600th career goal Sunday. Messier became the 10th player to join the 600 club and now stands 10th on the all–time goals chain. He joins former Edmonton teammates Jari Kurri (601) and the all–time leader Wayne Gretzky (886).

Speaking of Messier, he seems to have regained his scoring touch of old. You know, that touch that brought him 5 Stanley cups, 4 in Edmonton and 1 under current Canucks coach Mike Keenan in New York. Hey how about those Canucks! I'm not one to say I told you so but...

The Orcas (check–out their emblem) of the Northwest, now stand atop their division. The Avalanche however are at the bottom and continue to spiral

Turn to NHL, page 10

UM field hockey victorious

By Aaron Saykin
Collegian Staff

Since her first day on the job, Massachusetts field hockey coach Patty Shea has continually been reminding her players that great teams are supposed to overcome adversity.

In the midst of a mini two–game losing streak, the Minutewomen could not have chosen a better opportunity to take her advice. Despite a combination of downpours and numbingly cold weather, UMass managed to keep its composure, notching a 3–1 victory over host Dartmouth yesterday.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Massachusetts senior forward Erica Johnston and freshman Anke Bruemmer helped propel the field hockey team to a 3–1 win over the Dartmouth yesterday.

"It was hard today because it was pouring rain," said Shea after the game. "It was very cold. It got muddy in front of the goal cages, and it was hard to maintain footing. But it is a short field and that's good on a grass surface."

All three of the UMass goals were scored on the penalty– corner attack. Freshman Anke Bruemmer continued to terrorize opposing defenses, notching all three tallies with help from senior midfielder Vicky Browne and sophomore back Patty Robinson.

"We were able to score on three corners," said Shea of her team's recent efficiency. "Anke scored all three goals, and Vicky and Patty assisted. I think it's good [for us] that it worked, because that's one of the things we practice all of the time."

Despite a 1–1 deadlock at the half, UMass took command on Bruenemer's second score with 14 minutes remaining in regulation, and put the game out of reach just under the five–minute mark. Massachusetts goalie Zowie Tucker turned away five Dartmouth tries, en route to another solid performance.

Her counterpart Brittany D'Augustine made three saves for the host, which dropped to 7–7 with the defeat.

After topping the Big Green in their regular–season finale, the Minutewomen (11–7, 4–1 Atlantic 10) prepare for their conference tournament on a positive note. Although her squad has lost two of its last three contests, Shea remains enthusiastic concerning eight UMass wins in the last 10 games.

"You have to be happy with the way we're playing now," Shea said. "[We are] really focused and and I've told them we have to concentrate."

The Minutewomen will have 10 days to recuperate before traveling to Philadelphia on Nov. 7, when Temple University hosts the Atlantic 10 conference tournament.

After rolling to a 4–1 A–10 mark, UMass enters the conference post–season as the No. 1 seed and will meet No. 4 seeded St. Joseph's in the opening round.

As the two–time defending champions, UMass is hoping to capture its third consecutive conference crown.

Turn to UMASS, page 13

UM seniors finishing careers, contributions

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

When the Massachusetts men's soccer team concludes its season this weekend at home, four collegiate careers will come to a bittersweet end.

The Minutemen will officially say goodbye to Jake Brodsky, Paul Corcoran, Carmelo "Pie" Garcia and Brad Kurowski on Sunday during their Senior Day ceremonies.

The quartet has been through three winning seasons at UMass before enduring this year's demoralizing campaign.

The Minutemen currently have a 2–12–2 record overall, 2– 6–2 in the A–10 as they head into their final matches against Duquesne and St. Bonaventure.

The seniors are prepared, however, and energized as they contemplate their careers and their final collegiate battles.

"Speaking for the seniors, I know we are going to fight to the finish," Garcia said. "We want to win these last two games, not only for ourselves, but for the younger guys as well. We want them to be ready for next year."

The foursome will not deny that this year has had its share of frustrating moments, but team continuity has never been stronger during their time on the team.

"The attitude on this team has been great," Kurowski said. "Unfortunately things never seemed to go our way this year, but we stuck together through all of it."

"If the team chemistry level was not as high as it is, this season really would have been miserable," Brodsky said. "We overcame a lot of the troubles on the field, by remaining so close off of it."

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Jake Brodsky

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Paul Corcoran

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Carmelo Garcia

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Brad Kurowski

Perhaps no one knows how much these players will be missed more than their coach, Sam Koch.

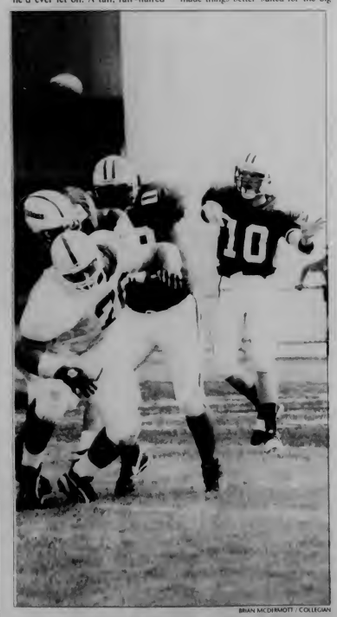
"Our four seniors are the core of our team, and therefore they represent a tremendous loss as a group," Koch said. "Each one of these guys brought special qualities to our team that we will need to replace next season."

Koch saw Corcoran as one of the unheralded leaders on the team, while he lists Kurowski as one of the best markers in the program during his tenure as coach.

Brodsky stood out for his superb defensive capabilities, while Garcia, a two–year captain, contributed with his all–around ability. Koch also noted his "team– first" attitude, that repeatedly proved to be of utmost importance.

Garcia sacrificed his role in the overall attack to compensate for player injuries throughout the year. He selflessly managed to become an integral member of the defensive scheme employed by Koch. "Pie" transferred to UMass after an NCAA tournament appearance at Hartwick College.

"One of my goals here was to return to the tournament, and it was disappointing that we did not get there," Garcia said. "But if I had the chance to do this over, I would not change a thing."



Of the four players, Brodsky has compiled the most impressive scoring statistics with six goals and nine assists to his credit. He has remained scoreless this season, however, as Kurowski has led the way with two goals for four

Turn to SENIORS, page 13

Bankhead aids in return to respectability

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

His arrival at the University of Massachusetts was more heroic than he'd ever let on. A tall, fair–haired young man from Escondido, Calif. rides into Amherst on a wave of anticipation that holds him higher than any shiny white horse ever could. Only a sunrise in the background could have made things better–suited for the big screen.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Since quarterback Todd Bankhead has arrived from California...

Massachusetts quarterback Todd Bankhead wears no cape or cowboy hat that tells him apart from the other students flowing to and from class during a normal weekday, but come Saturday, he might as well.

"There are more people in the stands for games," Bankhead said. "But nobody has really started to notice me around campus. I go around campus just like last semester. Nothing has really changed."

Bankhead, in his first two games as the UMass starter, recorded the best back–to–back games in school history with identical 323–yard performances against Delaware and Richmond. Over the same time span, the Californian became the first Minuteman to have consecutive games with over 20 completions.

As it turned out, his lofty stats at the beginning of the season were no fluke. After seven games, Bankhead has accumulated 22 touchdown passes, which is two more than any other quarterback has recorded over an entire season.

Dave Palazzi's 1987 UMass single season yardage mark of 2,043 yards is already in jeopardy as well, as the 6–foot–3, 207–pound Bankhead is only 118 yards away with four games left to play. After three more completions, Bankhead will own that school mark as well.

The records have fallen like dominos, but Bankhead humbly smirks at the mention of such statistics. To him, the real triumph of his season is the team's 5–2 record.

"[The records] are nice, but UMass has never really been known for their passing offense," Bankhead said. "It has a lot to do with coach Whipple's system and the guys around me. When records get broken, it means the offense is moving, and that's the real goal. We're trying to win games."

With a 3–1 Atlantic 10 record, the Minutemen are tied with Connecticut for first place. After a 2–9 mark a year ago, few people would expect such an improved start. Last year, quarterbacks Jeff Smith and Anthony Catterton shared the starting role, and although each showed flashes of competence, neither could dominate games.

When Mike Hodges stepped down from his position as coach following last year's dismal season, most fans in the region had reason to believe that the rebuilding process would be slow and painful. Other than talented running back Marcel Shipp and tight end Kerry Taylor, the offense lacked punch.

New coach Mark Whipple brought with him a stacked resume, but without an all–star cast, many thought it would be impossible to guide the squad into the postseason.

Turn to BANKHEAD, page 13

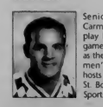
BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

...the formerly downtrodden Minutemen have returned to prominence within the Atlantic 10 conference.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN



Volume CIV Issue 38 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Friday, October 30, 1998

Let them eat rock

Brazilian metal legends Sepultura returned to Boston this week to critical acclaim. Check out our interview with the band (see Arts and Living, page 5).

The last hurrah

Senior co–captain Carmelo Garcia will play his final home games this weekend as the Massachusetts men's soccer team hosts Duquesne and St. Bonaventure (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Russia seeks donations but denies food scarcity

MOSCOW (AP) — While insisting Russia is not facing food shortages, the agriculture minister conceded yesterday that the government is talking to the United States about humanitarian aid.

Since the economic crisis began in Aug., there has been growing concern that Russia may not have enough food for winter because of a sharp drop in food imports and an unusually small harvest.

Agriculture and Food Minister Viktor Semyonov said the government sees "no threat of food shortages, no grounds for the threat of food shortages today."

"Russia is stocked up rather fully on basic foods such as potatoes, sugar, oil, vegetables and other foods," he told a news conference.

But he said there were problems in getting food to far–flung regions and selling it at prices that the poor can afford.

He refused to confirm reports that Russia has asked for humanitarian aid from the West, but said the possibility has been considered, and donated food would be helpful.

"There is no reason to refuse humanitarian aid in food," Semyonov told a news conference.

NATION

Punishment for teen accused of murder

FREEHOLD, N.J. (AP) — A young woman who gave birth in the bathroom at her senior prom, strangled the baby and returned to the dance floor was sentenced to 15 years in prison yesterday.

Under a plea bargain, 20–year–old Melissa Drexler received the maximum sentence, but could be released in just under three years.

"I'd like to tell you I'm really, truly sorry for what I've done, OK?" said a tearful and disheveled Ms. Drexler, who pleaded guilty in Aug. to aggravated manslaughter.

Superior Court Judge John A. Ricciardi called Ms. Drexler's actions "explainable, but not excusable."

"She is not a monster. She is not someone to be gawked at, to be vilified by the public and the media. She is entitled to our understanding, our compassion and our prayers," he said.

Ms. Drexler's lawyer, Steven Secare, said the circumstances will "obviously never occur again." He said she had a developmental and learning disability and was in denial, not of her pregnancy, but of how to deal with it.

He cited psychological evaluations that describe her as childlike and disoriented, and said she suffered from "disassociative disorder."

Prosecutor Elaine Leschot portrayed Ms. Drexler, instead, as selfish. She said the young woman knew that revealing her pregnancy would hold her up to shame.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 52	HIGH: 53	HIGH: 51
LOW: 37	LOW: 34	LOW: 33

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics.....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News.....page 3
Sports .....page 10

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Campus organizations rally for voter turnout

By Julie Fiallow
Collegian Staff

Different organizations on campus are trying to encourage student voter turnout by phone–banking, postering, going door–to–door, and handing out information at tables.

MassPIRG, who is organizing a massive voter drive, said their goal is to have 500 registered student voters commit over the phone to coming out to the Nov. 3 elections.

"We're doing one–on–one contacting, we are going to alert them that it is election day. We are spending 100 hours Sunday and Monday on the phone calling all registered voters on campus," said Liz Kennedy, campus organizer for MassPIRG.

Kennedy said there were sign–up sheets sent around to different organizations asking for volunteers. Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA), the UMass Republican club, is helping MassPIRG with the phone–banking.

Marc Kennon, coordinator for SCERA, said their organization's involvement with getting students to the polls includes advertising in the Collegian and providing a van service.

"The insert in the paper will include where to vote and give schedules for the van service. We have a web page [www.umass.edu/rso/scera]," he said.

Kennon and Kennedy also stressed the importance of getting students in Southwest to vote.

"We'll go door–to–door in Southwest, asking registered voters there to come out," said Kennon.

Kennedy said, "The town has made it known that we must utilize the Southwest booth. It was a hard–fought battle to get, and clearly needed. Southwest has so many residents anyway."

According to Kennon there are 1377 registered voters in Southwest. At this fall's primary election, said Kennedy, only seven of those voters cast their votes.

Kate Geyer, financial manager of the Pride Alliance, said they've been encouraging their members to make their voice heard in this year's gubernatorial debate.

"We've been encouraging members to vote. There are a lot of ballots across the country that affect the GLBT [Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual, Transgender] community. Basically we're encouraging people to go to voter registration tables and register: that's our goal," she said.

Michael Rossettie, a liaison between the Mass Alliance of College Republicans and the UMass Republican Club, said, "We're calling all registered republicans and encouraging them to go out and vote. We're also having a vote republican rally from noon till 1 p.m. on the Student Union steps."

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

She's ready for Halloween!

Potato, the class mascot of German 363, "Witches: Myth and Reality," sits outside of the library yesterday afternoon.

Any truth to UMass ghost stories?

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

It's Halloween! It's Halloween! The moon is shining bright. Ghosts, witches, and goblins alike prowl the grounds at night. Students at the University of Massachusetts better be filled with fright, for when Halloween comes around, students may want to know that fabled ghost stories may be right!

Patrick Browne, a UMass alumni, formed an interest in such ghost stories told on campus and he researched the validity of most of them. The results that he found were shocking and most are revealed in the following paragraphs, so turn back now or forever be haunted by the facts revealed.

In Mary Lyons in Northeast, a girl was supposedly hung in the back stairwell in the late 1980's. The stench of her dead corpse can be smelled drifting in the halls even today.

"Browne researched these ghost stories and says that if you go back to the 1980 Collegians, events like this one are recorded," Senior Angela Milani said.

Also in Northeast, there's a story about two girls that lived together in Thatcher, and one of the girls woke up one morning to find her roommate dead. The girl screamed frantically and even today, people have said they still hear the scream coming from a room. Today, this room, numbered 315, is occupied by a Resident Assistant.

According to Browne, a ghost tale from Orchard Hill, involving a boy falling from an apple tree, is completely factual. The hill used to be an orchard hill, and a boy fell out of a tree one day. Another friend rushed him to the infirmary via the Worcester path, leading from Orchard Hill to Northeast. As the story goes, the injured boy died along the path and to this very day, people can see his decrepit figure wobbling down the path.

"The student was John Howard and his death was recorded in the Collegian on May 2, 1929," Howard said.

Another factual incident that occurred involved a bell boy that was struck by a car on his way to ring the UMass Chapel bell. Even in these modern times, on Halloween night, the bells can be heard ringing in the still night, and people say they can see the boy sometimes standing near the bells.

The first murder on campus occurred in Draper Hall in early 1930's and involved a cook murdering another cook. A women's dorm was located above it and even today, they can hear crazy noises emanating from the kitchen room.

There are many more ghost stories surrounding UMass, and Browne feels that not all of them have been proven to be factual, but the idea that they could be true is thrilling enough.

"Students should look into these stories," Browne said. "They don't realize it, but ghost stories are part of the UMass tradition and always will be," Browne said.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

According to some, there are haunted buildings around the campus of UMass, like the Marshall Annex, shown here.

Higher Ed amendments won't affect UM students

By Lorraine Kennedy
Collegian Staff

Concerns about campus safety, the reporting of crime statistics and how colleges conduct the student judiciary process led Congress to make some major changes to the Higher Education Act.

The campus security provisions of the Higher Education Act are formally named in memory of Jeanne Clery, a former Lehigh University student who was slain by another student in 1986.

The amended Higher Education Act was signed into law by President Clinton on Oct. 7. Among the changes is one that relates to the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974, which no longer prohibits institutions of post– secondary education from disclosing the final results of any disciplinary proceeding involving crimes of violence or non–forcible sex offenses.

In addition, colleges and universities are no longer prohibited from disclosing to parents of students under 21, information regarding alcohol or drug–related disciplinary violations.

The amendments apply to any institution that receives federal money, according to Dean of Students Jo–Anne Vanin. However, she emphasized that "these are recommendations, not requirements."

The amendments will not affect the UMass student judiciary process, Vanin said, nor will the University begin notifying parents of drug or alcohol–related offenses.

"We are not going to change our practices," she said.

Under the current University policy, student judiciary hearings are closed, but students may request an open hearing, according to student judicial advisor Katie Neff.

But, she said, "most people don't request open hearings."

The hearing board is made up of three to five people and includes faculty members and students who apply for the position on a volunteer basis, Neff said.

Outcomes of student judiciary hearings are disclosed only to the student in violation and not to the public, Vanin said, except in cases of "violence, assault, sexual assault or rape" when the victim is also notified of the outcome.

An aggregate of violations is disclosed in the annual report released by the Dean of Students, Vanin said.

Punishment for violations of the student Code of Conduct varies according to the violation.

"It depends on the past judicial history [of the student] and what the charges are," Neff said.

In her experience, Neff said, "it's pretty rare for students to be kicked off campus... relocation is more common."

According to Vanin, students are relocated when the University wants "to remove them from a situation...or from a victim." Or, she said, because of "an accumulation of violations in a residence hall."

Students are removed from on–campus housing if their behavior causes them to be "a danger to the community" or because of "violations of residence hall policies."

According to UMass Chief of Police John Luippold, the student judicial process can sometimes conflict with the police department.

"What [the police] and the district attorney's office don't like to see is a victim testifying prior to the criminal case," Luippold said.

"It subjects the victim to the potential for cross– examination without having the opportunity of having... someone from the DA's office present."

Lawyers are not allowed to represent students in student judiciary hearings, Neff said.

"In most severe cases, testifying in a judicial hearing requires the possibility of reliving the incident which can be very traumatic," he said.

"There's a place for the student judiciary process to occur," Luippold said, "but if it's a criminal case, that needs to occur first.

Fundraiser for death row inmate to held in Amherst this weekend

By Laura Forster
Collegian Staff

It has been 17 years that Mumia Abu–Jamal has been on death row for a crime which has received international attention and protest.

On Sunday, Nov. 1, the Western Massachusetts Mobilization for Mumia organization is holding a fundraiser for Abu–Jamal's defense fund at the Unitarian Universalist Society of Amherst.

The Western Mass. Mobilization for Mumia is a special project of the International Action Center which is working on securing a second trial for Abu–Jamal. The first trial sentenced Abu–Jamal to execution in 1995, but due to international protests, was called off 10 days before his death.

Speaking at the fundraiser will be Abu–Jamal's lawyer, Leonard Weinglass, who will update the crowd on the case. Other speakers include: University of Massachusetts English professor and poet Martin Espada, UMass English professor and author John Edgar Wideman, poet Kate Rushin, and son of Julius and Ethel Rosenberg, Robert Meeropol.

Espada, who visited Abu–Jamal before he was put into detention, was censured from National Public Radio

Turn to FUNDRAISER, page 2

MassPIRG increases student activism

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

Activism at the University of Massachusetts MassPIRG chapter is concerned with more than learning about the environmental and social issues that affect our society. It focuses on the devotion of students who feel that such issues need to be addressed while emphasizing the ideal that students themselves can make the difference.

As a nationwide movement, MassPIRG has focused its attention on issues ranging from credit card fraud to industrialized pollution. This semester, they have been directing their attentions towards addressing

Turn to MASSPIRG, page 7

COURTESY OF AFOIL CONNOR / MASSPIRG

Krissy Johnson protests against Arctic oil drilling on Poute Nine.

CRSA seeks involvement; efficiency review recommended

By Christie Vincent
Collegian Staff

The office of student affairs is looking to grow into a more efficient office and hopes to see the fruits of its labor soon.

"You have a garden, with tomatoes, herbs, and flowers. The Committee for Review of Student Affairs is looking at this question: Do we have to move everything around to make it grow better, or are they feeding off each other okay?" Peggy Jablonski, chairperson of the committee, explained to campus community members in a meeting Tuesday, addressing what the committee plans to achieve.

The meeting was also intended to offer an opportunity for the campus community to voice their concerns about the review, ask questions and offer suggestions.

The committee was formed by University of Massachusetts Chancellor David Scott over the summer, based on the advice, as he stated in a memorandum to the campus community, that he received after vice chancellor Tom Robinson's departure this year.

The committee consists of faculty and administration members, as well as six students. A few of the members of the committee were present at the meeting, including Vachel Miller, staff support for education, who is credited with the garden analogy.

"We give the Chancellor the recommendations, but post- Jan., it is up to the Chancellor to follow through on the process. We will not recommend change for change's sake. We have not been told that anything job- or money wise has to be cut [in student affairs]," she said.

Campus faculty and staff, as well as one undergraduate student, voiced their concerns as to what and if the committee will establish anything, or if student concerns will continue to go unnoticed.

"Students, for example, from Asian Latino African Native American (ALANA) feel that this committee has little to do with their lives," said Rick Townes, assistant vice chancellor for campus activities. "How can we get ALANA students engaged in this process?"

"You can try and convince them that they may not see immediate results, but they will help future students here," Jablonski said.

"As much publicity as you do, there is a historical problem of the administration not listening to student needs," said senior Tom Sadkowski.

"We have students involved on the committee. Whether that will have an effect on the student body, I don't know," said Miller.

Michael Wiseman, director of Greek Affairs, has worked and studied at various types of colleges and universities, public and private. He said that different types of schools have different priorities and missions.

"The mission of a large research institution differs from smaller institutions that are not research institutions. So, when important decisions are made, those in charge at a research institution may have to think about the school's main mission, which is research [and not student affairs]. It's a fair approximation to say that the fact that UMass mainly is a research institution could contribute to the problem with student affairs."

"I have been a staff person here since 1983. During the period when Tom Robinson was vice chancellor of student affairs, we saw a change of culture," said Nelson Acosta, director of ALANA Affairs. "There was more listening. Students used to take over buildings [to get the attention of the administration]. That is not the case anymore. Now, there is a lot of student apathy."

"We give the students lip service on paper, but we don't seem to listen. It just doesn't seem to happen," he said.

"There are barriers within student affairs. It is difficult to get things done," Wiseman said.

"I hope that more discussion will happen as an outcome of this review, at the least," Jablonski said.

There will be another community meeting on Thursday, Nov. 5, in the campus center in room 917 from 4-6 p.m. The entire campus community is invited.

■ fundraiser

continued from page 1

(NPR) for writing a poem in defense of Abu-Jamal. Wideman wrote the introduction to Abu-Jamal's book — "Live from Death Row." The Amandla Community Chorus will also be performing at the event.

Abu-Jamal was a radio journalist in Philadelphia, and a leading critic of police violence and racism. In 1981, he was convicted of slaying police officer Daniel Faulkner in Philadelphia.

According to Espada from his essay "All Things Censored," "Officer Faulkner was beating Mumia's brother with a flashlight when Mumia came upon the scene. In the ensuing confrontation, both Faulkner and Mumia were shot. Though Mumia had a .38 caliber pistol in his taxi that night, and the gun was found at the scene, the judgement of the medical examiner concerning the fatal bullet was that it came from a .44 caliber weapon. Several witnesses reported seeing an unidentified gunman flee, leaving Faulkner and Mumia severely wounded in the street."

Philadelphia Governor Thomas Ridge, who supports the Philadelphia Fraternal Order of Police (FOP), is prepared to sign Abu-Jamal's death warrant.

Numerous public figures support Abu-Jamal's defense including: Nobel Laureate Archbishop Desmond Tutu, Reverend Jesse Jackson, Ms. magazine founder Gloria Steinem, REM member Michael Stipe, and Rage against the Machine among others.

The event will begin at 3 p.m. at 121 Pleasant St. in Amherst. Tickets and information are available by calling 538-8537.

UMass prof earns faculty award, honors

By Anna Glazman
Collegian Correspondent

Ronald K. Hambleton, a University of Massachusetts School of Education professor, was appointed Distinguished Professor by University President William Bulger Oct. 7.

The appointment was approved earlier this month by the Board of Trustees.

Chancellor David K. Scott, Vice Chancellor for Academic Affairs and Provost Cora B. Marrett, and Dean of the School of Education Bailey W. Jackson all recommended Hambleton for the honor.

The Distinguished Professor award, which recognizes distinguished faculty in their fields, is given by the University system.

"[Hambleton] is known as one of the top psychometricians in the country," said Jackson.

He referred to Hambleton as a "nationally and internationally known scholar," and called the appointment "long overdue recognition for his outstanding work."

Jackson also mentioned that Hambleton has brought in millions of dollars in grants and contracts to the University.

"It's an honor to have him on the faculty," said Jackson. "His reputation is well-founded."

Hambleton said he was surprised to have won the award.

"I am pleased to be honored by the University," said Hambleton. "I was very surprised. It's a special honor."

He attributed an undergraduate psychology course as inspiration for starting his career.

The course sparked his interest in measurement in individual differences. He then decided to go to graduate school, and later became a professor.

Hambleton, originally from Canada, has been at UMass for 30 years, and calls himself a "happy person."

He didn't originally plan on staying here long.

"I've been well-treated," Hambleton said. "When I came to UMass, I thought I'd be here for four of five years, and then I'd return to Canada."

But his plans changed after enjoying his time here. He credits the positive way he was treated for motivating him to stay.

As an educator, Hambleton said his role is to help his students achieve their goals.

"I am concerned that learning be going in my classes," he said.

Hambleton said he is content with the University and has been here long enough to find some room for improvement.

"I would like to see better facilities, and more assistantships for graduate students," Hambleton said.

Hambleton also indicated that he has benefited from his colleagues and the high quality doctoral students.

"I am honored to be in an environment to do what I want to do," Hambleton commented. "It makes it fun to come to school everyday."

■ MassPIRG

continued from page 1

the needs to stop corporate oil businesses from drilling in wildlife refuge areas like the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge on the northern coast of Alaska.

Oil companies like B.P. (British Petroleum), Exxon, Arco, and Chevron are involved in the Arctic drilling and many of these oil companies have past records of destroying land and wildlife to reach oil beds in the ground.

According to MassPIRG, the real concern surrounding the oil drilling lies in the number of species that call the infected wildlife refuge their home. Among the world's endangered species, the Porcupine Caribou graze the Arctic land and the oil drilling would threaten their vital habitat.

More of a concern for activists involved in the project is the number of oil spills occurring during those drillings. According to a MassPIRG account, Arctic oil spills occur every 18 hours. In 1995, approximately 500 oil spills occurred and involved more than 80,000 gallons of oil.

Jenn Zwanziger, Student Coordinator of MassPIRG, explained that the oil supply in the Arctic is very low and is not worth destroying the land.

"This piece of land is one of the most untouched land," Zwanziger said. "They're destroying the land for six months worth of oil."

Like Zwanziger, hundreds of students across the nation are involved in more than 75 PIRG chapters and each chapter is working towards the Arctic campaign.

On a local level here at UMass, students can become involved in activism on the volunteer level or as an intern. Volunteers dedicate their time and efforts in working towards their goals. Interns, on the other hand, receive three credits and put in a total of around 10-12 hours per week. All together, there are approximately a total of 50 MassPIRG activists at UMass, almost a half of whom are volunteers.

On an average, MassPIRG is involved in protests at least once a week. In preparing for these protests, student activists do a lot of coalitioning. They send letters out to companies expressing their opinions and concerns over issues. In addition, they work on getting RSO's and Faculty to sign their petition forms. Zwanziger feels that all the work is well worth the final outcome.

"It's a really great opportunity to educate people about what's going on," Zwanziger said.

Some of the upcoming events that MassPIRG has been planning include an Arctic Action Day on Nov. 10th, in which there will be letters and calls sent to the oil companies about the issues surrounding the Arctic refuge.

Also on Nov. 10th, guest speaker Lenny Kohm, a journalist that travelled to the Arctic, will give a talk on his dedication to the preservation of the Arctic in the Campus Center 904-08 at 8 p.m.

Activists like Zwanziger want students to know that their voice does matter and that they should express their perspectives on issues.

"I think student activism is a very important thing," Zwanziger said. "We need to let the public know that students do care about the issues."

Visit us on the web!
www.umass.edu/rso/colegain

THE EDWIN M. ROSSMAN ALUMNI CAREER FORUMS
presents

HISTORY DEPARTMENT CAREER NIGHT

DATE: MONDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1998

TIME: 4:00 P.M. - 6:00 P.M.

LOCATION: HERTER 601 LOUNGE

SUSAN HAMMOND
Humanities & Fine Arts
Assistant Director, Career Education

DIANNA DUNN
Humanities & Fine Arts
Assistant Director, Field Experience

EDWARD FOUHY
Executive Director and Founder of the Pew Center on the States

LISA MEADE
State Director for Senator John Kerry

CRAIG BROWN
Computer Analyst and Actor

STEPHEN SPELMAN
Attorney at Law with Buckley, Richardson and Gelinas

ROSE ANDERSON
Independent Film Producer

JULIE GALLAGHER
Graduate Student and former school teacher

JOYE BOWMAN
Director of Undergraduate Studies, Moderator

SPONSORED BY: CAMPUS CAREER NETWORK
ALUMNI ASSOCIATION
DEPARTMENT OF HISTORY

For more information, please contact: Humanities & Fine Arts Network at 545-6255.
Refreshments Served - ALL STUDENTS ARE WELCOME!

THE COLLEGAIN WISHES YOU A HAPPY HALLOWEEN!

BUB'S BAR-B-Q
'Pig Out In Style'
VOTED BEST BARBQ AND BEST RIBS FOR THE PAST 14 CONSECUTIVE YEARS BY THE ADVOCATE · (413) 548 9630

SPRING BREAK HEADQUARTERS
Heller Travel
Student Travel Specialists, LOWEST student and faculty discount airfares.
HELLER TRAVEL
You just can't get it anywhere else!!
146 Massachusetts Avenue at Berklee
Boston, MA 02115 · (800) 843-1544
email: heller@berklee.edu

UMASS STUDENT TICKET PICK-UP FOR MEN'S BASKETBALL GAMES AGAINST NIAGARA (PRESEASON CHASE NIT), UCONN (MASSMUTUAL U-GAME) AND BOSTON COLLEGE

10:00 AM – 2:00 PM – CAMPUS CENTER CONCOURSE
9:00 AM – 4:00 PM – CURRY HICKS CAGE

Available	Cost	Location	Opponent	Date
Nov. 2	$5.00	Mullins Center	Preseason Chase NIT v Niagara	Nov. 16
Nov. 2	$5.00	Mullins Center	MassMutual U-Game v UConn	Dec. 9
Nov. 2	$10.00	Worcester Centrum	Boston College	Dec. 12

STUDENTS MUST PRESENT A VALID UMASS STUDENT ID CARD IN ORDER TO PURCHASE TICKETS. EACH STUDENT IS LIMITED TO TWO TICKETS PER EVENT.

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Jason Trenkle • Photos by Brian McDermott

What is the funniest, scariest, or weirdest Halloween costume you have ever worn or seen on Halloween night?

"I saw a guy running around New York wearing a huge penis costume. It was one giant dick."

Ethan Posilkin
Sophomore
Psychology

"That would have to be my costume. I'm going to be a slice of watermelon. It's one hot pink skirt with pits on it and a rind at the bottom."

Anne Sheridan
Sophomore
Music Education

"There was a guy dressed as a flasher. He had skimpy shorts on and he would run around flashing people. It was definitely scary."

Miles Harris
Junior
Wildlife Conservation

"My brother was dressed as a victim. Just a victim. That's all I have to say."

JusCrea Giammarino
Sophomore
BDIC

"The costume I saw was a combination of a He-Man outfit and Mr. Bean. He was wearing the muscle suit but had on high-water pants and a wig."

Francellis Nunez
Junior
Political Science

"Someone I know went as a "Where's Waldo?" Waldo, and the poor guy kept going around asking people to find his scroll."

Mike Coyne
Freshman
Sport Management

Glenn back in orbit, faring well

By Paul Recer
Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — John Glenn rocketed back into orbit today on a mission of science and sentiment, returning as the world's oldest astronaut to the high frontier he pioneered for America 36 years ago.

"Let the wings of Discovery lift us on to the future," said launch control in its final words to the seven-member crew before liftoff.

"Liftoff of Discovery with a crew of six astronaut heroes and one American legend," added launch commentator Lisa Malone.

Discovery rose majestically from its seaside launch pad, riding the roaring flame of its five rocket engines through a cloudless blue sky. The craft quickly gained speed, arced toward the east and slowly faded from view, gaining orbit 8 1/2 minutes after liftoff.

"America is very, very proud of you today," President Clinton told NASA engineers at the launch control center.

Glenn's journey began 19 minutes late — a lot better than his first trip to orbit in 1962, when he had to endure 10 postponements over two months.

The countdown had proceeded flawlessly until about 10 minutes before the scheduled 2 p.m. launch, when an alarm sounded inside Discovery's cockpit, triggering a nine-minute delay. Shortly after the count resumed, it had to be held again briefly when a plane intruded into the restricted area. NASA said later it was a private pilot jockeying for a good view, and an Air Force plane escorted him out of the zone.

One small problem did occur during liftoff, NASA said at a post-launch briefing. A panel that may be the door covering a drag chute used during landing jarred loose during liftoff and may have hit one of the main engines. Officials were studying video of the craft but said the incident was unlikely to have any impact on the mission or landing.

The weather at the Cape was perfect for writing a new chapter in space history — temperatures in the 80's and winds calm with just occasional gusts.

Glenn, 77, was the first American in orbit in 1962, on the third U.S. manned mission. He returned to space on the nation's 123rd manned mission.

Clinton called it "a great day for America and a great day for our senior citizens."

Besides the president and his wife, Hillary, many members of Congress and some Hollywood celebrities were on hand at the Kennedy Space Center area for a fleeting glimpse of history roaring into space.

Veteran observers said the launch frenzy rivaled that of missions to the moon and far exceeded most recent shuttle flights. Nearby highways and beaches were lined with RVs, cars and tents, and NASA spokesman Bruce Buckingham estimated there "may well be a million people watching," including residents and visitors.

Even though he is a U.S. senator and an American space hero, Glenn returned to space as the lowest-ranking of Discovery's crew. His official title for the nine-day mission is Payload Specialist 2.

In keeping with his position, Glenn went next-to-last when the crew boarded the shuttle in their baggy orange space suits and tight white caps. All seven crawled on hands and knees into the cabin, where technicians helped to strap them into couches — on their backs with their feet in the air. Glenn rode on a lower deck with two others.

During a routine communications check from Mission Control in Houston, Glenn replied vigorously, "PS2, loud and clear," at his turn.

The other crew members are Curtis L. Brown, the commander; Steven W. Lindsey, pilot; mission specialists Stephen K. Robinson, Scott E. Parazynski, and Pedro Duque, and Payload Specialist 1, Chiaki Mukai.

Shortly before launch, NASA played a greeting from original Mercury astronaut Scott Carpenter to be replayed for the crew after launch.

"Good luck, have a safe flight, and...once again, Godspeed, John Glenn," said Carpenter, his voice quivering slightly as he repeated his famous benediction for Glenn's first flight in 1962.

Starting before dawn, launch workers had filled Discovery's huge external propellant tank with more than 500,000 gallons of supercold liquid hydrogen and liquid oxygen. The chemicals energize the shuttle's main rocket engines at launch, joining the thrust of two solid rocket motors. Together they provide the lift needed to vault the 4.5-million-pound shuttle into orbit.

The astronauts were awakened today at 8:30 a.m. and quickly sat down to a tradtional pre-launch breakfast of steak and eggs. A silent television scene showed them seated at a table, wearing matching dark blue shirts and smiling and gesturing. In the center of the table was a cake frosted with the colorful crew patch that identifies their mission. This is one of the rituals of pre-launch.

Glenn's return to space results from a combination of political clout, persistence, good health and his heroic reputation. Glenn forcefully lobbied NASA for months to put him on a space shuttle crew.

He argued that he could play a unique role in scientific studies of aging. Glenn got his wish and will serve as a medical guinea pig in 10 experiments measuring the effects of weightlessness on the human body. Many of these changes are similar to those suffered by the elderly on Earth.

Doctors examining Glenn said he had the body, strength and stamina of a much younger man.

For NASA, flying a national icon brought both risks and rewards. The sentimental space journey has brought new international media attention to the agency. More than 3,500 journalists registered to cover the mission, and the launch was being televised live by major broadcasters.

At the same time, Glenn's presence meant that if anything went wrong, the glare of public scrutiny would be all the harsher.

"Would it be any different from any mission? Sure," said Joe Rothenberg, NASA's chief of spaceflight. "Because like having a teacher on board, it really has got very high visibility and an awful lot of people would look at it as something happening to an American hero and we were part of the process. There's no question about that."

Glenn first captured national acclaim by orbiting the Earth three times in a one-man Mercury capsule he called Friendship 7. The accomplishment prompted ticker tape parades, a speech before Congress and a visit to the White House.

Ironically, his fame may have barred him from later missions. Glenn said recently that he learned President Kennedy had ordered him grounded to avoid the risk of a national hero dying in space.

Hurricane Mitch winding down

By Eric Nunez
Associated Press

LA LIMA, Honduras — Hurricane Mitch wore itself out pounding the Honduran coast and was downgraded to a tropical storm yesterday. But floodwaters continue to rise, cutting off communities from food, water and medicine.

Already at least 32 people have died, and a yacht with 31 people aboard was missing off the Nicaraguan-Honduran border. A U.S. Coast Guard airplane was searching for the boat yesterday.

Mitch, which on Tuesday ranked among the century's most powerful storms, moved slightly inland of the Honduran coastline yesterday and lost much of its punch.

At 4 p.m. EST, sustained winds were only 60 mph, down from 180 mph early Tuesday.

The storm had hardly moved since its peak, and yesterday was tearing into the same coastline and tourist islands it had been lashing for three days.

On the Bay Islands, about 25 miles off Honduras' coast and popular with divers and beachcombers, at least 14 people died and many houses were destroyed. There were few details because the islands were cut off except for occasional phone service.

Along the coast, up to 25 inches of rain had flooded at least 50 rivers, knocking out bridges and highways and putting many towns underwater. More than 150,000 people were forced to seek higher ground.

"My God, this thing is getting ugly," said 13-year-old Juan Padilla as he watched the swollen Chamelecon River sweep cars, trees, cattle and pieces of houses down toward the Caribbean Sea in La Lima.

In addition to the dead on the Bay Islands, Honduras reported nine other deaths and Nicaragua, eight. Mexico said an American was thrown from his boat south of Cancun on Monday and was presumed dead.

And the Antigua-registered Fantome, a 240-foot sailing yacht with 31 people aboard, had been missing since Tuesday, said the U.S. Coast Guard, which sent a C-130 transport plane to search for it.

The Fantome, which is owned by Windjammer Barefoot Cruises, was on a six-day cruise through Belize and Honduras' Bay Islands when the storm hit, said the Windjammer spokesman James Canty.

University of Massachusetts Theatre Guild and The Daily Collegian Present

THE WIZ

November 5, 6 & 7 at 8pm
with November 7 matinee at 2pm
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall, UMASS Amherst

Ticket Information
$10 General Public / $5 Five College Students, Kids under 12
Groups of 20 or more - $8/$4

Tickets Available at Bowker Box Office 413.545.2511
For more information call the UMTG office at 413.545.0415

Artistic Director: Tara M. McRae
Production Manager: Ari Teplitz
Choreographer: Denise Brown
Vocal Director: Dolores Brown
Produced in cooperation with Samuel French Inc. 45 West 25th Street New York, NY 10010

THE WIZ

This production is made possible in part by a grant from the UMASS Arts Council

Don't miss Dean Stork and the Minutemen as they take on Merrimack Friday 7pm @ The Mullins Center

And again on Sunday as they battle the Wildcats from New Hampshire Beginning at 5pm

TICKETS STILL AVAILABLE !!

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Love and marriage...

Traveling to campus on the PVTA the other morning, I heard a high school girl declaring her love life resolutions to her friends. She claimed that she was planning on marrying at the age of 20 and abstaining from sex for five years to make sure her husband really loved her. I was impressed by this young woman, who appeared to have everything all figured out for herself, while many college students are trying to convince their parents they were at the library studying at 9 a.m. on Saturday.

There are some Florida high schools that are initiating mandatory courses teaching students about marriage and relationships. Their aim is to address the 50% divorce rate which marriages are meeting up with, making values and communication key lessons in the classroom. The hope is to instill in students the ideal of solid commitments in their own lives.

> "The only thing we really learned was that if we lived off of hot dogs for a week, we could go to all the movies we wanted."
>
> Laura Forster

The closest I ever came to a Relationships 101 course was in the seventh grade when we had to "marry" someone and plan a week's worth of finances to understand what marriage is really all about. I was lucky enough to be paired up with my crush — John Battersby. We had a tough time with money since he had to be a garbage man and I a florist, but I believed that what we had was real and we could beat the odds. The assignment was a week long so the only thing we really learned was that if we lived off of hot dogs for a week, we could go to all the movies we wanted and that was enough for us.

I wonder what the result of these courses will do for high schoolers and if this is a long overdue necessity. I have to say this approach seems a little more realistic than the old approach of carrying-around-an-egg for a while to understand what it's really like to have a child. I babysat for my brother's children last weekend and I can say an egg is nothing to compared to a child. At least with an egg, you know what substance is going to come out of it.

I love children, don't get me wrong, but I don't know what else could prepare you for them besides them. However, I am impressed by the Florida education system's attempt to address the issue of relationships. I'm sure parents and dedicated members of the community will come forward to argue that these values should be left to the family, but then again, where are we getting our morals from anyway?

I'm not going to launch into an angry tirade blaming my parents for every mistake I've ever made as a result of their delinquencies in parenting, because it seems that's been done much too much. Although making me wear the little red rain suit with matching boots and brim hat (the butt of every bully's joke) could have been avoided, the fact that my parents — as with all others— are human seems to be overlooked often times.

So parents didn't do it right the first time, or the second, or maybe they still don't seem to have it down just yet. There's nothing better than those who condemn their parents shortcomings and still follow suit in their own behavior.

It would be nice to be as sure as the young lady on the bus and I admire how she seems to know exactly what place her man is going to fill in her life. According to my little sister and her aptitude at determining relationships via MASH, I am destined to have five kids with Ben Affleck and live in a bungalow in Tahiti. It works for me.

I had a psychic stop me the other day to ask for directions (?) and then precede to tell me about my love life. She informed me that I had gone through a disappointment recently and that some sort of obstacle had been the cause of it, but that I'd have to see her to find out more information. She was right, of course. But if I'm going to go the psychic route, I might as well call up Mama Stallone and save myself the hassle.

I'm not really sure what source to trust for relationship advice right now and the Cosmo quizzes are only narrowing down where to find the men — the gym, the bank, Rodeo Drive, the study of the Oval office. But I just haven't found any tips very helpful so far, so I've decided to just go with it for now. But maybe some courses on the subject would have done me some good.

As much as I agree with the Florida school system and what they're trying to do, I hope they're not going to pull out pie graphs and flow charts analyzing the marriage emotion curve, because it's just not the honeymoon forever.

Relationships call for improvisation at some point and I'm sure marriage and its package deal probably calls for a lot of learning as you go, but a few tips for a teenager, left with multiple choice quizzes in the pages of glamour magazines, couldn't hurt. And it certainly makes more sense than asking them to carry eggs around and live off of hot dogs for a week. There's just got to be more to it all than that.

Laura Forster is a Collegian staff member.

Writer's block

There's a funny thing that happens when you get your name in print. Ever since I started writing this column, my friends and acquaintances have felt the need to offer suggestions on topics I could write about. Some of these have been interesting, some are just okay, and a few are so inane that I wonder why I hang out with those people. Of course, in my arrogance at being a published author (as it is), I shrugged off their offers of advice, thinking the day I needed a good idea for a column was the day, well, that I needed a good idea.

> "You could always go as a person who graduated with an English degree. That is, if you can find a McDonald's uniform before Halloween."
>
> Chris Collins

In case you haven't guessed by now, that day has come. I had actually written an entire column, and while it was a bit of a departure from my usual happy-go-lucky material, I felt pretty good about it. Until I offered it up to my friends for approval. I figure if they laugh at call up Mama Stallone and save myself the hassle.

I'm not really sure what source to trust for relationship advice right now and the Cosmo quizzes are only narrowing down where to find the men — the gym, the bank, Rodeo Drive, the study of the Oval office. But I just haven't found any tips very helpful so far, so I've decided to just go with it for now. But maybe some courses on the subject would have done me some good.

As much as I agree with the Florida school system and what they're trying to do, I hope they're not going to pull out pie graphs and flow charts analyzing the marriage emotion curve, because it's just not the honeymoon forever.

Relationships call for improvisation at some point and I'm sure marriage and its package deal probably calls for a lot of learning as you go, but a few tips for a teenager, left with multiple choice quizzes in the pages of glamour magazines, couldn't hurt. And it certainly makes more sense than asking them to carry eggs around and live off of hot dogs for a week. There's just got to be more to it all than that.

Laura Forster is a Collegian staff member.

Paul Martinez

writer, a professor I had my freshman year named Jerry Badanes. I was going to school outside of New York City and majoring in fiction writing. Jerry was my advisor as well as my professor for my First Year Studies in Fiction Writing class. And he could teach you more in one day about how to write than anyone else I've ever studied with could show you in a year. He had a remarkable depth of feeling and love for people and the stories they had to tell, and this is what he tried to instill in us. Jerry was the one who emphasized the difference between the sarcasm I used in my stories and the irony I was trying to use, pointing out that irony edifies the reader while sarcasm can only attack.

I've been thinking about Jerry a lot lately. I've been thinking about the last day of my class with him, how he mentored me for a year and guided a confused group of young writers on the path to their goals. I remember how my friends and I were planning on bringing wine and whiskey to that last class. We wanted to force Jerry to get drunk with us, and to help celebrate the end of the year and the deep friendship and respect everyone in that class felt for him.

Most of all I remember the shock, that sudden thousand pound weight that landed on my chest when I found out he was dead. He had suffered a massive heart attack on his way to our class that last day of school, and the ambulance with his body inside had left the scene about five minutes before I got there. My friend and I had a bottle of wine with us.

I remember the memorial service through a haze and the feeling that I had lost someone who was like a father to me, someone who had helped me grow as a person and a writer. I remember the feeling that I would never be able to write without thinking of him, and for a long time I wasn't able to write at all. Every time I tried I would choke and would end up staring at a blank page for hours. Nothing would come to me. Eventually, I gave up on fiction writing, but I can still hear him telling us what to do if we had writer's block.

"Just start writing," he would say. "If you're stuck, just start writing about anything and let the story go where it wants to."

Sometimes it does, and sometimes sincerity sneaks it's way in, no matter how hard you try to avoid it.

Ironic, isn't it?

Paul Martinez is a UMass student.

Brilliant disguises

Well, Halloween is tomorrow (according to the calendar hanging in my dorm's hall it is just four days after cranky coworker day, which is right up there with arbor day as a national holiday), and I figured as a service to the UMass community, I would give a couple of low-cost alternatives to spending upwards of a buck fifty on a costume.

My first thought is that it would not be all that difficult to dress up as a drunk student. In fact, all one would need to do is wear a small placard which read "DRUNK" and pretend to stumble around as you act as if you have consumed large amounts of an intoxicating agent. Of course, the alternative is to actually become drunk, but none of the students on this campus would go so far just to make a Halloween costume appear authentic, right? Granted, they will do it because that is the most creative thing that they can think of to do for fun, but that is for another column.

My second suggestion also involves drinking — this time it is coffee, though. That's right — we can all pretend to be Yuppies drinking decaf raspberry mint latte with sugar and cinnamon. Nah, I'm just kidding. What you really need the coffee for is to dress up as a Biochemistry major. This costume is easily pulled off, just drink coffee and don't sleep for a week prior to the holiday. Thus, you will have the bloodshot eyes and strained looked that seem to go along with the major. The final touch to this costume is that you must continuously mutter chemistry related phrases under your breath, as if you are about to snap due to the pressure. My favorite is "hippuryl phenylalanine", although "exopeptidase" will also work if you really want.

If neither of these two costumes work, you could always go as a person who graduated with an English degree. That is, if you can find a McDonald's uniform before Halloween. Or if you really wanted to be fancy, you could find a Wendy's uniform and go as an Art History major. Or perhaps you could wear a Taco Bell shirt and pretend you are a Comparative Literature major.

Another good costume would be to be a member of the 'power and class' of New England. Yup, go as a member of the chess club. Of course, I'm just kidding here: the power and class of New England is the band, and I would really suggest that as a costume. Of course, you would have to find a Band Hat (it's called a Shake-o and the band will heat you to a bloody pulp if you call it a hat), a cape, a sash, and of course some sort of instrument. You will also need to learn how to march, so now that I think about it, maybe it would be better if you didn't go as a member of the band, it sounds like an awful lot of work for Halloween. And frankly, one can't just pretend to have power and class, one must actually have it.

Of course, a great deal of people enjoy making a political statement with their Halloween costume. The obvious butt of many of this years costumes is going to be William "I was easily as promiscuous as" Jefferson Clinton. But dressing up as Clinton is both unoriginal and it can be expensive. So let's not forget the other players in American politics. One could be Monica simply by breaking out the candy a little earlier (be careful not to spill anything on your nice clean navy dress) than normal. Of course, finding one of those zombie masks could make anyone a perfect replica of most of the members of Congress.

Smoking crack would allow a perfect impression of James Carville (he's the bald guy who yells a lot about how none of this is the American people's business). If you are a member of a couple, the two of you could go binge-eating and show up to all the parties as Linda Tripp and Rush Limbaugh, just because I think that they would make a great couple provided neither possessed the ability to procreate.

Well, now that I've dirtied my hands I'll give you a couple of cheap costumes that could be used if you plan on dressing up with a group of people. Pick a pop music group that is popular in the nine to 13 range. Yes, I realize there are an awful lot of them to choose from, but stick with me here. If you chose one group (I'm not going to mention names because enough people will be gunning for me after this column, but I will provide hints like it rhymes with "Bran's son"), all you need to do is put on long blonde wigs. If you chose another set of musicians (the hint here is Rice Pearls), you just need to take regular length clothing and reduce the amount that it covers by half. Of course, if you don't have a group, you could go as the single member that left the group, you know the one that fell off the edge of the world and was never heard from again?

Well, whatever you chose be it Billy-Boy or Band member, I wish you a Happy Halloween. Me? I think that I'm going to see if I can get to K-mart before they sell out of plain white sheets. That way, when everyone I've offended with this article comes looking for me, I will be able to disguise myself.

Chris Collins is a UMass student.

Bump in the night

Tomorrow is the night of the creepy, the curious, the downright terrifying. Many will be travelling far and wide to wreak havoc upon unsuspecting homeowners and children, to consume large amounts of alcohol, and don funky little costumes. But who needs a specified day to celebrate the spooky stuff? I am surrounded by horror every day.

Stacey Shackford

I necessarily wouldn't say that I'm easily frightened, but a lot of things about this University scare the bejeebers out of me. Whitmore, for instance.

The library also terrifies me. No, it's not the falling bricks I fear (which, by the way, are attached in large decorative sheets, not masoned on individually, so that if bricks really were falling, there would be enough to kill someone). I'm afraid of the elevators that make that scary whistling wind noise as they drop from floor 21 to the second floor in five seconds flat. I'm afraid of roaming the stacks late at night, when the darkness envelops you and the silence is deafening. I'm afraid of the people who lurk in the shadows and what they're doing there.

This guy I knew had this theory about vampires who inhabit the secret underground passages that criscross campus. He claims to have spotted one emerging from the huge steam vent near the New Africa House.

They're called gamers, and they scare me to no end. Remember when they used to play with Nerf swords outside the Bluewall? I was afraid to pass within 50 feet of the plunging foam blades. I was more afraid of the warriors than the weapons, I might add.

I'm also afraid of "Butterhenge"— You know, that large black monument between Van Meter and Butterfield made up of a steel concentric circle and radiating lines of flowers leading to random rocks — it's supposedly a monument to William Clark, a former Chancellor who encouraged the international expansion of UMass and united the University with it's "sister school" in East Asia. Now it is host to drum circles and other curious nighttime activities.

Speaking of curious nighttime activities, I am one of the few remaining students who has experienced the original UMass Ghost Tour (and survived to tell about it [evil cackle]). Two years ago, a UMass grad student was completing research for a book he was writing about the history of the University. In his research process, he uncovered many documented cases of unexplained phenomena.

You've all heard stories about the roaming Orchard Hill ghost and the Northeast hanging victim haunting the halls. Spooky, eh? Try roaming through the orchards at midnight while some guy's about the tale in a low voice (how about the phantom of Stockbridge Hall and the knife wielding chef in Draper? Don't forget the Faculty Club ghost and the wandering eyes painting.

Rumor also has it the chapel is haunted. Supposedly an old bell ringer who expired before he had the opportunity to ring the bell one last time roams the chapel all year trying to get to the belltower. He finally makes it at midnight on Halloween and gives the bell one dramatic toll. He'll be facing tremendous odds this year, considering the bell's not even there.

The scariest tale, however is the little known Greenough Ghost. Back in the day when dorms were run by dorm "fathers" and their families, a little boy lived in the basement and often hung out with the college students who lived there. One of his favorite games was to go to the top floor and chase his ball as it bounced down the stairs.

One day, for some unknown reason, the boy died tragically. Everyone mourned terribly. Years later, however, when memories of the boy had faded, a student reported opening the door to his room and discovering a little boy sitting on his bed with a ball. He was a little alarmed but assumed the boy was lost, and sent him on his way to the dorm office where they could help him find his brother or whoever he was visiting.

A little while later, he felt bad for shooing the boy away and went to go check on him. He went to the office, but no one had seen the boy. For years afterward, many people reported hearing the sound of a bouncing ball and the patter of little feet chasing it down the stairs. One couple was even sitting in the stairway when it happened (It's the staircase to the right of the front door, in case you were wondering.)

One of the guys on the tour froze up when he heard the story. Turns out, he used to be an RA in Greenough and his residents used to complain about an annoying noise late at night — almost as if someone was bouncing something off the hallway walls.

Are you scared yet? I'm getting chills just writing about it. Just remember, this Halloween don't go climbing any 25 foot trees, stay far, far away from vampires with foam bats, and beware of things go bump (or bounce) in the night.

Stacey Shackford is a Collegian staff member.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor. Letters must be typed, no more than 400 words long, and include name, address and phone number for confirmation purposes. They can be submitted by mail to Pbl/Op Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst MA 01003; by email to letters@pol-sun.oit.umass.edu; or by fax to (413) 545-1592.
The Collegian reserves the right to edit letters for length, clarity, and style.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor-in-Chief Victoria Groves Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
Steve Salerno Jr. Advertising Manager David Parmenter Advertising Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Laura Forster Developing Nations Editor
Mike Messaros Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Co-Jewish Affairs Editor
Morgan Tobor Co-Jewish Affairs Editor
Heather Lei Guzzetta Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jill Carroll News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylanski Sports Editor
Allana E. Todman Women's Issues Editor
Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Prentes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

"New" Sepultura rages Boston, satisfies skeptical critics, fans

By Michael Delano
Collegian Correspondent

SEPULTURA with VISION OF DISORDER and EARTH CRISIS
Avalon Ballroom
Oct. 28

BOSTON — Against, the latest album from Brazilian metal band Sepultura also seems to describe to state of mind the band had Wednesday night in Boston. Sepultura stands against those who gave up hope for the band after the departure of vocalist Max Cavalera, and against those who thought the remaining members would just call it quits. The release of Against has put most fears to rest, but many cynics feel that new singer Derrick Green will never be able to match the energetic stage presence of his predecessor. At the Avalon Wednesday, fans got to judge for themselves as Sepultura, completed by guitarist Andreas Kisser, bassist Paulo Jr., and drummer Igor Cavalera, took the stage with support from Vision of Disorder and Earth Crisis.

The new material can be seen as somewhat of a departure from what fans have come to expect from Sepultura. Besides adjusting to the new vocals of Green, songs like "Troopermillennium" find the band going in new directions since the track is mostly acoustic and features a cello, an instrument not usually associated with heavy metal. "The song has a very different vibe," Paulo Jr. explained during an interview before the show. "The first half was written before Derrick joined the band, and we kept that beginning." The second half was recorded with Derrick, and Paulo reveals that the song deals with "changing from this millennium to the next."

Paulo was also pleased with the quests that are present on the new album. Working with Metallica bassist Jason Newsted on the track "Hatred Aside," Paulo describes as "awesome" and "a great experience." Paulo also notes a very positive experience with the Kodo village in Japan and admits he "can't compare it with the Xanvantes tribe" that the band had worked with on Roots, as it was "a totally different vibe." When asked if he feels this is Sepultura's best work to date, he enthusiastically answers, "Definitely. No doubt about it."

The pairing of Sepultura with fellow Roadrunner bands Vision of Disorder and Earth Crisis seems awkward since both of those groups are known mostly as hardcore acts. But Paulo assures that everything has "been working out great" so far and that he likes the "very powerful" music of both bands. "We like to bring a strong bill wherever we tour."

Sepultura's set list reached back to the first album. The band did not avoid the multiple Sepultura songs Max Cavalera's new band Soulfly have been playing live recently such as "Attitude" and "Beneath the Remains." "[These are] songs that are very important in our career," Paulo says. "and we will definitely be playing them."

Smaller venues in the U.S. are the destination of this tour, which Paulo describes as a "warm-up tour," where the band will "get to know each other better on stage." Paulo says he enjoys the smaller places with the fans right up front since it is "important to have that type of contact with the fans." As for Sepultura's plans after the tour, they are headed to Europe to co-headline a tour with thrash legends Slayer.

Finally, I ask Paulo if he has any fond memories of the Avalon. He remembers he "saw the most beautiful waitress in the place" the last time they stopped by. Regardless of where Paulo's eyes were that night, all eyes were on Sepultura last Wednesday.

COURTESY CARY MONROE

Brazilian heavy metal outfit Sepultura prove they still have what it takes on their new record.

Depeche Mode shine bright on first tour stop

Matthew Nixon
Collegian Staff

DEPECHE MODE
Worcester Centrum
Oct. 27, 1998

WORCESTER — Depeche Mode were stunning. The first performance of the U.S. leg of their world tour was flawless. Singers Dave Gahan and Martin Gore are true showmen.

Using a combination of recorded beat tracks and live instrumentation, Depeche Mode easily amazed the crowd within the cavernous Centrum.

A crimson curtain served as backdrop for the cabaret-like stage set. Large marquee-type letters "D" and "M" decked out in white bulbs stood beside a booth on which film clips were projected.

Lots of floor space allowed the three sets of keyboards and drum set to be spread out. Gahan was free to twirl his microphone stand around and gyrate his hips to the approval of the audience.

Martin Gore walked on stage in a silver outfit made of sequins that glistened in the light. Gahan wore black. Gore stood at his keyboard station for the initial song, "Question Of Time." He soon donned a guitar and was at a microphone at the front of the stage for "World In My Eyes." The hits flowed freely, though in a different order than Singles 86>98 for which they are touring in support of.

Gahan took a short break and Gore took over lead singer duties with "Question Of Lust" and "Home." Background vocalists dressed in blue sequins joined him. His voice sounded beautiful. Gahan returned for "Condemnation" which worked well in the arena-environment. The backup vocalists breathed life into the song with their gospel-like waits. The pace of the show slowed down for just a few minutes.

"In Your Room" picked things up and the tempo [illegible] with its pulsating [illegible] guitar. The fourth [illegible] number, Andrew Hanlon [illegible] keyboard [illegible] Gahan [illegible] away behind [illegible] a live drum [illegible] backdrop that [illegible] sound [illegible] Gahan [illegible] "Remember [illegible] "Enjoy. The [illegible] had a bass line [illegible] the Centrum.

One of the [illegible] with the [illegible] Jesus." The [illegible] feather boas and [illegible] have all kinds [illegible] eliminated the [illegible] time the [illegible] was sung by [illegible]

The set [illegible] not too [illegible] this was the [illegible] songs from this album [illegible] on an official [illegible]

Fans waited [illegible] The bleachers [illegible] the crowd [illegible] appeared on [illegible] boardist snuck [illegible] and began playing [illegible] ed to deliver a [illegible] "Somebody." At [illegible] wondered if the band [illegible] before the year [illegible] "oldie." The crowd [illegible] time would soon [illegible]

The first [illegible] "Stripped" and "I Just Year [illegible] band left the stage [illegible] fans were going [illegible] "Condemnation" which worked well in the arena-environment. The backup vocalists breathed life into the song with their gospel-like waits. The pace of the show slowed down for just a few minutes.

"In Your Room" picked things up and the tempo [illegible] with its pulsating [illegible] guitar. The fourth [illegible] number, Andrew Hanlon [illegible] keyboard [illegible] Gahan [illegible] away behind [illegible] a live drum [illegible] backdrop that [illegible] sound [illegible] Gahan [illegible] "Remember [illegible] "Enjoy. The [illegible] had a bass line [illegible] the Centrum.

One of the [illegible] with the [illegible] Jesus." The [illegible] feather boas and [illegible] have all kinds [illegible] eliminated the [illegible] time the [illegible] was sung by [illegible]

The set [illegible] not too [illegible] this was the [illegible] songs from this album [illegible] on an official [illegible]

Fans waited [illegible] The bleachers [illegible] the crowd [illegible] appeared on [illegible] boardist snuck [illegible] and began playing [illegible] ed to deliver a [illegible] "Somebody." At [illegible] wondered if the band [illegible] before the year [illegible] "oldie." The crowd [illegible] time would soon [illegible]

The first [illegible] "Stripped" and "I Just Year [illegible] band left the stage [illegible] fans were going [illegible]

Arts & Living:

Currently looking for prospective writers to cover theatrical events, movies, concerts, and book reviews.

Call Brian McDermott, 5-1864

DJ Chubby Chubb to blaze the X

By Edgar A. Barros
Collegian Staff

They have almost 15 years of DJ experience between the two of the them. Tomorrow at the Malcolm X Cultural Center, DJ Chubby Chubb and DJ Wal-Gee will change the Malcolm X Cultural Center forever.

Chubby Chubb and Wal-Gee, otherwise known as Willie Sanchez and Walter Gomes respectively, have joined forces for the first time on campus grounds.

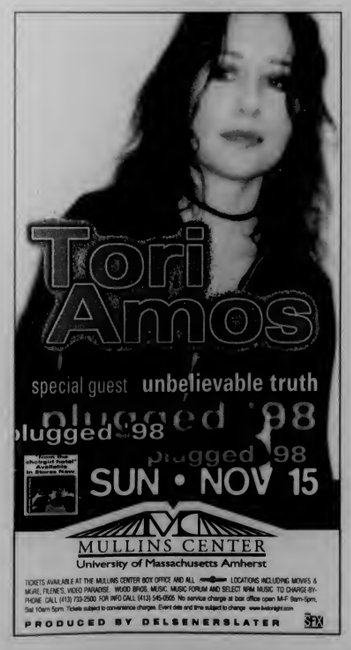
From the studios of WMUA during "The Sweatshop Turntable," hosted by University of Massachusetts students, Dave duCille (DJ Cappuchino), Chris Rondini (DJ Dini), and Walter Gomes (DJ Wal-Gee), Chubby Chubb spun and scratched records for the Pioneer Valley listeners.

"I like to see the crowd go wild," Chubb said.

Chubby Chubb, a native from the Bronx, New York, has been a DJ for about 10 years now.

"I've been a DJ for the past 10 years. I love music; music is the joint," said Chubb. Wal-Gee stood by and watched as Chubb scratched some of the hottest records.

"It's is pleasure to work with Chubby Chubb. I respect his work. He's one of the legends," Wal-Gee said.



This DJ tandem is sure to keep the Malcolm X Cultural Center crowd on its feet. "Saturday is going to be off the mear rack," Chubb said.

"The Malcolm X Cultural Center is going to be different. We're going to bring the X to the next level," Wal-Gee said.

Wal-Gee has been a DJ since 1994. His first job was for a church "Youth Party" in his hometown of New Bedford, MA.

"My first DJ experience was at a church basement in New Bedford. I wasn't sure if I wanted to DJ, but my girlfriend, Shauna Duarte, kept pushing me to do it," said Wal-Gee.

Turn to CHUBBY, page 6

U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
North Amherst Motors A Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd. North Amherst, MA
549-RENT
Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday AM - Starting at $59.95
• Cars • Mini Vans • Trucks • Cargo Vans • 15 Passenger Vans • Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older • Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
(On bus route - one mile from UMass)

Boat Neck

ZANNA
downtown Amherst

Valley Light Opera
presents
Gilbert & Sullivan's
Comic Opera

PATIENCE

• A Show for the Whole Family •

Amherst Regional High School

5 Performances
Friday, Nov.6 & 13 8pm.
Saturday, Nov.7 & 14 8pm.
Sunday Matinee, Nov.8 2pm.

• • • • Tickets • • • •
Adults $12.00 • Students & Seniors $9.00
Student Night, November 6, $5.00 K-12, College
Cash • Check • Mastercard • Visa
Discover (Novus)
Tickets on sale at Amherst Leisure Services.
Call 256-4065 for information and phone sales.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

DJ's Chubby Chubb and Wal-Gee will perform at the Malcolm X Cultural Center this Halloween.

■ Chubby

continued from page 5

As the crowd kept increasing inside the WMUA studio, the spectators looked on with admiration.

Alan Berry, a UMass junior said, "I don't know how he does it. He is definitely hot!"

During a break, Chubb would reveal some of his secrets.

"I very record I spin is my last joint, because I may never do it again," Chubb said.

"You got to have the love for it. It's not about the money or the fame, when I first started, I used to do it for free," said Wal-Gee.

The music that these two create is the type that will have a dead crowd into a live one. The philosophy behind their music is what is most intriguing.

"I love music, it's that simple. I want to see the crowd have their hands up the whole time," Chubb said.

"I like to entertain the crowd. Any party where I don't do that, I go back to the lab," Wal-Gee said.

DJ Chubby Chubb will release his mix tape this weekend. The tape title, "School's in Session — 1998," will be available all over the Northeast.

"Wherever you may buy your mix tapes — whether it's in Boston, Providence, Springfield, or New York — be sure to pick up my tape," Chubb said.

Chubby Chubb has deejayed in clubs and universities from here to Las Vegas. His greatest experience though, was a visit overseas.

"London was the hottest joint, they like hip-hop out there," Chubb said.

Wal-Gee, though just starting out in comparison to Chubb, has begun to make his rounds.

"I've deejayed at The Tunnel and Club Carbon in New York City. Those two places have been my greatest experiences to date," Wal-Gee said.

The hard work behind the duty of "DJ" is not overlooked by the skillful Chubb Chubb.

"Being a DJ is hard, it takes a lot of time and practice," Chubb said.

As in any profession, Chubb was influenced by a few of his seniors on his quest to stardom.

"I looked up to guys like Clark Kent, S+S, the Technician, and Rock Raider. These guys were like my mentors," Chubb said.

This is not the first time the two have worked together. Last spring they deejayed at Club Metro in Northampton. The Northampton show was a success and Halloween night shouldn't be any different.

"It's going to be two of the most defined party rockers this side of the Mississippi. People better get ready to move," said UMass senior Ben Gilbarg.

"The Halloween After Party Bash," sponsored by the Cape Verdean Student Alliance, will definitely be a hot spot this weekend. The Malcolm X Cultural Center doors open at 11 p.m. The party is slated to end at 5 a.m.

"We hope that everyone comes out to have a good time. If you want to dance your behind off this weekend, then come to the Malcolm X Cultural Center. There isn't another party or club in the Pioneer Valley with better deejays tomorrow night," said Cipriano Andrade, Director of Public Relations for CVSA.

Patriots' offensive systematically fails; Missed opportunities continue to hurt

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — Sure-handed Ben Coates let the pass slip from his hands in the end zone. On the next play, six-time Pro Bowl tackle Bruce Armstrong was hit with a 15-yard unsportsmanlike conduct penalty.

And on the next play, Adam Vinatieri's 45-yard field goal attempt fell short.

That sequence by the New England Patriots preserved Miami's 3-0 lead midway through the second quarter of last Sunday's 12-9 Dolphins' victory. It also symbolized the problems of a New England offense considered one of the AFC's best.

"The plays are there to be made," Armstrong said. "There'll always be three or four plays that will have a real big impact on the outcome of the game. You don't know where those plays are going to be."

In the Patriots first five games, four of them wins, the offense was outstanding. Drew Bledsoe had four solid wide receivers and rookie Robert Edwards was emerging as a productive running back. The offense was so good that it overwhelmed the NFL's top defense in a 40-10 win over Kansas City that improved the Patriots' record to 4-1. They were the fourth highest scoring team in the league.

Since then, though, they've lost 24-14 to the New York Jets and, against Miami, extended their streak to six quarters without a touchdown. The Dolphins lead the AFC East at 5-2 while the Patriots, Jets and Buffalo Bills are 4-3.

The offense, which averaged 361.6 yards in its first five games, averaged 271 in its last two.

Injuries to wide receivers Terry Glenn, Troy Brown and Vincent Brisby and fullback Tony Carter have hurt. All four should be sidelined again Sunday at Indianapolis, although the Patriots hope 16-year veteran Henry Ellard, signed after a tryout Tuesday, will help at wide receiver.

"This last game was very disappointing to us, especially with the field position we had early," Bledsoe said. "I don't make any excuses for the production of this offense. When these [replacements] come in, we've still got to be able to produce."

Bledsoe has tailed off the last two games and completed just 13 of 33 passes for 240 yards and an interception against Miami. And, if that pass and the one to Coates in the end zone were completed, the Patriots could be leading the division now.

"Either one makes an enormous difference in the game," coach Pete Carroll said.

So did Armstrong's penalty, which turned a 30-yard field goal attempt by the reliable Vinatieri into a 45-yarder.

Armstrong said he was returning to the huddle when he pushed defensive end Jason Taylor, who was in his way. Taylor fell and the flag flew.

"The guy did a nice job going down and drew the attention of the official," Carroll said. "It was a poor decision to give the official an opportunity to make the call."

"The interpretation of the guy who called the penalty was that I punched the guy in the face," Armstrong said. "I didn't punch the guy in the face. I gave the guy a little shove. The guy took a dive...Mentally, I didn't lose it."

Still, the penalty was another serious blow to a struggling offense that can't afford them.

"The veteran guys on this team have to lead by example," Bledsoe said, "have to do the right thing and make the right decisions in order for the young guys to learn and come along."

Lots of teams looking for new homes

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The San Diego Padres were swept in the World Series, but their fans may give them a nice consolation prize — a new stadium.

This Election Day offers a new contest for the Padres, and for professional teams in Cincinnati and Denver looking to voters for new ballparks.

The Padres boosted their chances for a $411 million stadium by their surprisingly strong finish to capture the National League pennant.

The number of voters favoring next week's stadium measure increased from 48 percent this summer to 60 percent during the playoffs. Thousands of fans refused to leave Qualcomm Stadium after the final World Series game, standing and roaring until the Padres returned for a curtain call.

"I hope this proves to them how much they mean to San Diego," said Angie Berry, 29, who stuck around to cheer the Padres after the last loss to the New York Yankees. "I'm sure now they'll get their stadium."

The Padres estimate they've lost $50 million in the last three years because Qualcomm has no luxury boxes. They share the 31-year-old stadium with the Chargers until the Padres' lease expires next year.

Harriette Wade, who has bought Padres season tickets since the team formed in 1969, says the team loses money not for lack of luxury boxes, but because of exorbitant player salaries.

"They can fill the seats right here during a winning season and make money," she said.

Cincinnati voters already approved a half-cent sales tax increase in 1996 to build stadiums for baseball's Reds and football's Bengals, who now share the 28-year-old Cinergy Field. Reds owners and business leaders want the stadium along the Ohio River, where the new Bengals stadium is being built. But residents who want it located at Broadway Commons, six blocks from the riverfront, put a measure on this year's ballot asking voters to approve that site.

"We've got enough concrete piled up on the riverfront now," said Cincinnati Councilman Jim Tarbell.

In Denver, the Broncos' Super Bowl victory last year and this season's undefeated record have boosted support to replace Mile High Stadium. Voters in six surrounding counties are being asked whether to extend a penny-per-$10 sales tax to build a $395 million stadium.

And in Texas, pitching great Nolan Ryan has a stadium vote of his own Tuesday. He leads a group that bought the minor league Jackson [Miss.] Generals and hopes to bring them to Round Rock, Texas. Residents there will vote whether to approve $6.8 million in hotel-motel taxes to build the Generals a stadium.

Proposition C in San Diego asks voters to approve a deal the city made with the Padres to build the $411 million stadium downtown near San Diego Bay. The deal requires the city to contribute $275 million, most of which would come through hotel taxes and bonds.

The Padres would kick in $115 million, up to $40 million of which they would raise from selling a company the six surrounding counties are being asked whether to extend a penny-per-$10 sales tax to build a $395 million stadium.

And in Texas, pitching great Nolan Ryan has a stadium vote of his own Tuesday. He leads a group that bought the minor league Jackson [Miss.] Generals and hopes to bring them to Round Rock, Texas. Residents there will vote whether to approve $6.8 million in hotel-motel taxes to build the

COURTESY ALMO SOUNDS

Stupid Girl?

Shirley Manson and her cohorts in Garbage bring their shiny glam-pop to Mount Holyoke College on Nov. 3.

KARA STOKES / COLLEGIAN

A midfield battle for control...

The Minutemenmen's soccer team will host Duquesne and St. Bonaventure this weekend.

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS ...always $10.
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256-0733
145 main st. northampton 586-0155

PIZZA RAMA
356 College Street
253-3808
"25th Anniversary"
(Next to Spirit Haus Liquors)
Call Delivery Express → 599-0077
BYOB

Network Design Engineers...
Wild things are happening.

Bell Atlantic knows which way the future is headed, and we want you to go with us. We are one of the top performers in the hotly competitive communications and information industry...essentially a one-stop shop for all of our customers' communications needs.

We're looking for bright, innovative, high-energy people to help us design a wildly different world. A Bachelor's degree in Mechanical, Electrical, or Civil Engineering; Computer Science; Telecommunications or a related discipline is preferred. To find out more – contact your Career Services Office – and we'll see you at the following events.

Information Session: November 2nd, 6 pm
Campus Center, Room 163C
On-campus Interviews: November 3rd & 4th

Bell Atlantic is an equal opportunity/affirmative action employer.

Bell Atlantic

Visit us at www.BellAtlantic.com

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
HELD OVER - DAILY 7:00 & 9:20 DON'T MISS IT!
FULLY RESTORED TO ORSON WELLES' ORIGINAL VISION!
"MARVELOUSLY GARISH...TERRIFIC ENTERTAINMENT!"
TOUCH OF EVIL
HESTON LEIGH WELLES
MIDNIGHT BOOGIE IN 3-D!
HALLOWEEN LATE SHOW
FRI. & SAT. @ 11:45
(TRS. FROM 10PM.)
DISCO DOLLS IN 3-DIMENSION
R
COLOR
ACADEMY of MUSIC Cinemafloric NORTHAMPTON 584-8435

UMass volleyball to the road for two

By Paul Teves
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts volleyball team [10-12, 7-5 in the Atlantic 10] heads back on the road this weekend after a deceiving 2-3 homestand.

It was deceiving in the fact that the Minutewomen finished the homestand with two wins, most importantly with a stunning 3-1 over the A-10 conference leader, Temple.

"You never know how you're going to play following a big win, until you play again. We enjoyed the Temple win a little this weekend, but Monday it was back to the task at hand," UMass volleyball coach Bonnie Kenny said. "The important thing about the Temple game was that it showed Celia Wiste, Lymarie Llovet and Janeen Demarte what they're capable of. But Temple was just one game. We need consistency."

UMass currently has a two game winning streak, one that they hope to improve on this weekend when they first travel to Pittsburgh to battle Duquesne, a team they beat 3-1 in their first A-10 meeting.

"Duquense is a young team that has lost some tough matches, and they've lost a little confidence. We need to get off to a quick start against them in order to win the match," Kenny said.

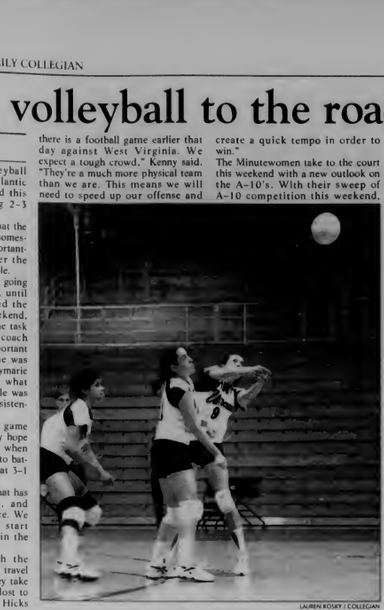
Following the match with the Dukes, the Minutewomen will travel into Virginia Tech, where they take on the Hokies, a team they lost to earlier this season at Curry Hicks Cage, 3-1.

"Virginia Tech is a tough place to play. It will be Halloween night, and there is a football game earlier that day against West Virginia. We expect a tough crowd," Kenny said. "They're a much more physical team than we are. This means we will need to speed up our offense and create a quick tempo in order to win."

The Minutewomen take to the court this weekend with a new outlook on the A-10's. With their sweep of A-10 competition this weekend, they have been thrust back into postseason contention.

"We said before the Temple game that we weren't going to lose a match in the second half of the conference schedule," junior co-captain Kari Hogancamp said.

With only eight games remaining in the regular season, the Minutewomen will need to keep that tough focus and mentality again this weekend, not only when they battle the Hokies, but also Duquense.



The key for this season continues to be Kari Hogancamp and Jill Meyers. However, the key to the success of the team is the contributions of players like Janeen DeMarte, Lymarie Llovet, Rebecca Hasson and Celia Wiste. The Minutewomen will need offensive, as well as defensive contributions, from these players in order to continue their recent success.

"Every team we've lost to has four good hitters. The other night against Temple we had four good hitters. We need Janeen and Lymarie to be productive on offense so we can open things up for our big guns Kari and Jill," Kenny said.

The Hokies are bigger than UMass, as is Temple. The Minutewomen will need good blocking at the net in order to beat Virginia Tech.

"Whoever is playing in the middle with Jill, be it Celia or Rebecca, they need to get involved. They need to block and deflect balls," Kenny said. "Whoever can do that will be in the line up."

The Minutewomen begin their weekend when they play the Dukies tonight at 7 p.m., and will play Virginia Tech tomorrow night at the same time.

LAUREN KOSKY / COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts volleyball team will look to add to its two game winning streak this weekend when it squares off against Virginia Tech and Duquesne.

Chicago outcome big surprise to everyone

CHICAGO (AP) — Training camp was only two days old when reporters crowded around Chicago Bears president Michael McCaskey, badgering him about coach Dave Wannstedt's job security.

There was no question the Bears were going to be bad this year. The question was how bad — the first team to go 0-16, perhaps? — and how long it would be tolerated. This team had no stars, no playmakers, no breaks with the schedule, no nothing.

But Wannstedt insisted things weren't that bleak, even as his team started 0-4. Offensive tackle Andy Heck said these Bears could be even better than the 1994 team, the last to make the playoffs.

Look at the Bears (3-5) now. With two straight victories, and three in their last four games, they're one of the NFL's big surprises.

"We've got a bunch of guys that are willing to come early and stay late. When you've got a group of men willing to do that, I don't care what you're doing, good things are bound to happen," Wannstedt said.

Chicago's success this year has been a strange mix of the improbable, the impossible and the downright weird. The Bears lead the league in turnovers with 23. Their number of fumbles [16] equals their total takeaways.

Despite fifth overall pick Curtis Enis and Edgar Bennett, Green Bay's leading rusher from 1994-96, Chicago is averaging just 3.4 yards per carry, 25th in the NFL. The run defense is also 25th.

And yet, the Bears could be 7-1. They led at halftime in the first four games. Jacksonville, Pittsburgh and Minnesota — all playoff teams last year — needed late rallies to beat Chicago. The only time the Bears lived down to everyone's preseason expectations was the Oct. 11 game at Arizona. Chicago had eight turnovers that day and needed Bobby Engram's touchdown catch in the fourth quarter to avoid the first shutout of the decade.

"That's what makes you sick. We're still 3-5," fullback Ty Hallock said. "When you look at all the games and how hard we're working and how many times we've stubbed our own toes, that's what digs at you.

"I'm glad we have a bye week to reflect on that," he said. "Hopefully, that's what we get out of it. That guys get [angry] that we're 3-5 and that we could be a lot better."

Though Engram, quarterback Erik Kramer, defensive tackle Jim Flanigan and cornerback Walt Harris are all having career years, what's made these Bears overachievers is that all-elusive thing called chemistry.

The front seven has four new starters, but it's playing like a group that's been together for years. Rookie safety Tony Parrish looks like a veteran, and the offensive additions have made relatively smooth transitions.

"I remember the first game when we talked about having 11 new starters out of 22. That's not easy," Wannstedt said. "Having these guys come together and be able to create some chemistry — and I'm not talking about getting along chemistry, I'm talking about being able to go out there and execute some things — that's been good."

And it's a huge change from last year, when Chicago's locker room dissolved into in-fighting and finger-pointing. Bryan Cox, who signed in hopes he'd bring some fire to the team, instead alienated teammates with his temper tantrums.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Gimme the puck

R.J. Gates and the Massachusetts hockey team will get two cracks for win No. 1 this weekend when they host Merrimack and New Hampshire.

■ soccer

continued from page 10

otherwise known as Olean, NY.

"They've turned things around and have a competitive team that has set an school record for A-10 wins in a season," Rudy said. "They're one weekend away from the incredible — going from nowhere to the A-10 tourney."

The Minutewomen will have one final motivational factor on their side heading into this weekend's games. In a season where seemingly anything that can go bad, has, the entire UMass athletic department was dealt a major blow earlier in the week with the sudden passing of Tommy Bishko.

Bishko was a recognizable face around the UMass athletic scene for over five decades, and will be sorely missed be all of the players and coaches he has been associated with.

"Tommy was a legend here. Even after he retired he kept coming back because he loved packing bags and dealing with the kids," Rudy said. "A lot of people don't realize that he was more than an equipment manager, but an asset to our community, and his wife Alice is also a huge UMass fan."

"I just told the team that we can't do anything better than to play these games in his memory and win them for him," continued Rudy. "He was the kind of guy who would help anyone, and you don't find a lot of people like that."

■ football

continued from page 10

[at home against the Wolverines and Michigan State are the only "tests"], they look to be Fiesta Bowl-bound.

Everyone wants 'em there, they shouldn't have any problem.

Tennessee: The Sleeper

If they are only third through the meat of the schedule, an SEC championship and a contender's loss elsewhere, namely UCLA or OSU, would put them right there, still having to worry about who lies in ambush below.

The Vols have done everything they could've done. They knocked off Syracuse and Georgia away from Knoxville and upended Florida in overtime at home. The rest of the schedule certainly won't challenge Tennessee too much. So they need a little help, and maybe some run-it-on-up action before it's all over.

They've shown that they can play without Jamal Lewis, beating Georgia handily in Athens and then disposing of Alabama 35-18. Known for its offense, that which of the Peyton Manning kind, it has been the defense that has shown its grit in recent weeks, led by Butkus Award candidate Al Wilson.

We won't put anything in stone right now, but Tennessee is thinking undefeated. They might have a little surprise in their stocking. A nice second-place certificate with a little sticker. Certificates don't look as good in a showcase. But the truth's the truth. The Vols could be playing for candy.

Kansas State: The Unproven Warrior

Yeah, yeah, everyone's heard about the cupcakes the Wildcats have lined up for target practice in the early going. But everyone has their Akrons and Southwest Wyoming Techs to pick on. K-State, well, they just like playing the bully role more often, is that so bad?

Michael Bishop should be back for a Halloween bash with cross-state Kansas this weekend, just another pushover until the Nov. 14th showdown with Nebraska.

The Wildcats defeated Texas without a problem, holding the nation's leading rusher, Ricky Williams, to 43 yards on 25 carries. But in their first real test, Colorado in Boulder, they tip-toed off of Folsom Field with a 16-9 win. Hardly a big sell.

They need more big wins, but this time, against quality opponents. The 'Huskers come a-knockin' and then the 'Cats round things out on the road against Missouri. Not until then, though, will Kansas State be a contender.

Wisconsin, Arkansas, Tulane: The Peach Bowl Specials

The Badgers thought winning in Michigan would matter, but even that won't get the Badgers any sort of respect. Arkansas thought the same would happen with Auburn, but, well, the Tigers aren't any good either. Tulane was born in raised in the land of cupcakes and will continue dancing in those fields until they learn better. Quarterback Shaun King's the man and all, leading the nation in passing efficiency, but I, too, could show off my gun against Cincinnati and SMU, too.

Or you just settle it all in the Rose Bowl. After all that...

Mauser's Toilet Bowl Picks of the Week:

Last week: 1-2
Season: 10-8

I've been challenged, so I bring to you the real deal, like Evander not Holyfield, only Mauser. Remember that right book? Yeah, sure you do.

Contenders respond when adversity is presented to them. Here comes the noise...in lightning flashes...try to keep up.

Ohio State's good, but I'm gonna hang with Indiana, getting 24 against the nation's best. Hoop season hasn't started yet.

Gimme Southern Mississippi. Not with a Brett Favre to Michael Jackson connection, but rather Todd Pinkston to Sherrod Gideon. Very well known these days. Oh yeah, and with the steadiness of senior placekicker Tim Hardaway on the PATs. The Golden Eagles give 3 1/2 on the road to 'Bama.

And in the game that really matters, Temple at Rutgers. If that's on TV, I'm all about sleep. Maybe it'll be a goody, though. Temple's red-hot with their one-game winning streak. They're looking for two. They'll get it, giving 3 1/2 to a very, very sorry group of Scarlet Knights.

Brett Mauser is a Collegian columnist.

amc
There is a Difference!
Evening Performances
No child under 6 in any
PG-13 or R rated film after 6PM.
Mt. Farms 6 • Mt. Farms Mall
584-9153
WHAT DREAMS MAY COME (PG-13)
Today at (4:50 @ 7:30)
Sat at 1:30 (4:50 @ 7:30)
Sun at 1:30 (4:50 @ 7:30)
Mon-Thurs at 7:30
SOLDIER(R)
Today at (5:10 @ 7:30) 9:40, 10:30
Sat at 1:30 (5:10 @ 7:30) 9:40, 10:30
Sun at 1:30 (5:10 @ 7:30) 9:40
Mon-Thurs at 5:30, 8:30
PRACTICAL MAGIC (PG-13)
Today at (5:00 @ 7:30) 9:40, 10:10
Sat at 1:30 (5:00 @ 7:30) 9:40, 10:10
Sun at 1:40 (5:00 @ 7:30) 9:40
Mon-Thurs at 5:40, 8:10
BELOVED (R)
Today at (4:00 @ 7:30) 7:30
Sat at (12:30 (4:00 @ 7:30) 7:30
Sun at 12:30 (4:00 @ 7:30) 7:30
Mon-Thurs at 4:00, 7:30
URBAN LEGEND (R)
Today at 7:00, 10:20 Sat at 7:00, 10:20
Sun at 8:10, Mon-Thurs at 8:20
Hampshire 6 • Hampshire Mall
584-7550
RUSH HOUR (PG-13)
Today at (5:20 @ 7:30) 7:40, 10:00
Sat at 1:30 (5:20 @ 7:30) 7:40, 10:00
Sun at 1:30 (5:20 @ 7:30) 8:00
Mon-Thurs (5:30 @ 7:30) 8:00
John Carpenter's VAMPIRES (R)
Today at (5:10 @ 7:30) 9:50, 10:30
Sat at 1:40 (5:10 @ 7:30) 9:50, 10:30
Sun at 1:40 (5:10 @ 7:30) 8:20
Mon-Thurs (5:40 @ 7:30) 8:20
APT PUPIL (R)
Today at (5:00 @ 7:30) 9:50, 10:40
Sat at 1:30 (5:00 @ 7:30) 9:50, 10:40
Sun at 1:30 (5:00 @ 7:30) 8:10
Mon-Thurs at (5:30 @ 7:30) 8:10
PLEASANTVILLE (PG-13)
Today at (4:50 @ 7:30) 7:00, 10:30
Sat at 1:30 (4:50 @ 7:30) 7:00, 10:30
Sun at 1:30 (4:50 @ 7:30) 7:00
Mon-Thurs at (5:20 @ 7:30) 8:00
ANTZ (PG)
Today at (1:30 @ 5:20) 7:30, 9:50
Sat at 2:30 (1:30 @ 5:20) 7:30, 9:50
Sun at 2:30 (1:30 @ 5:20) 7:30, 9:50
Mon-Thurs at (6:00 @ 7:30) 8:40
BRIDE OF CHUCKY (R)
Today at (5:30 @ 7:30) 9:30, 10:50
Sat at (1:30 (5:30 @ 7:30) 9:30, 10:50
Sun at (1:30 (5:30 @ 7:30) 8:50
Mon-Thurs at (5:50 @ 7:30) 8:30
$2.50 'Twi-lite' Show Daily!
Special Engagement
No Passes or Coupons

garbage
TUES. NOV. 3 8:00PM
with special guests GIRLS AGAINST BOYS
CHAPIN AUDITORIUM
Mt. Holyoke College — S. Hadley, MA
Advance tickets available at Fat The Record in Amherst, B Side Records in Northampton, Tix Unlimited at U Mass., About Music in Greenfield, and all Strawberries Record Stores. To charge by phone call Protix at (413) 737 8707 or (800) 677 8449

BLUES TRAVELER
with AGENTS OF GOOD ROOTS
TUES. NOV. 10 8:00PM
BOB WEIR ROB WASSERMAN
RAT DOG
MARK KARAN JAY LANE
DAVE ELLIS JEFF CHIMENTI with Matna Davis
THUR. NOV. 19 8:00PM
JOHN M. GREENE HALL
Smith College — Northampton, MA
Advance tickets available at Fat The Record in Amherst, B Side Records in Northampton, Tix Unlimited at U Mass., About Music in Greenfield, and all Strawberries Record Stores. To charge by phone call Protix at (413) 737 8707 or (800) 677 8449

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Come see the UMass Women's Ice Hockey team play their first home game this Sunday, Nov 1st, vs UMass Lowell at 1pm in the practice rink. Free admission.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 Bedroom Apartment. Newly renovated. Very bright. Busline $795, all inclusive. Stacey 549-6657.

AUTO FOR SALE

VW Bus For Sale Yellow [illegible] Vanagon. Excellent condition and Pop Top. Great condition. Very [illegible] or 413-[illegible].

1991 Pontiac Grand Am Excellent condition. Low mileage $3800/BO. 256-6077.

86 Toyota Pick-Up 4x4 Runs great. $1900/BO. Call Mark 756-0416.

88 Honda Civic 5 speed, 166K, many new parts, well-maintained, runs great. $1100 or B/O. 268-0388.

College Car! Pontiac Sunbird. Runs perfect! $800/BO. 259-1915.

93 Geo Metro 60,000 miles. Great gas mileage. Good condition. $1000. Call Kirsten 548-6941

CARS $100-$500 Police Impounds. Hondas, Chevys, Jeeps, & Sport Utilities. MUST SELL! 1-800-522-2730 x4554

COMPUTERS

Macintosh Printer Color StyleWriter 1500 $100 or B/O. Call Tony @ 549-5514.

486 Computer Great For Student Works Good $100. Color VGA $50. (413)584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

TUTORS Bilingual Tutors for part-time, paid assistance to students speaking Amharic, Spanish, Khmer, Portuguese, and Vietnamese. Contact ESL/Bilingual Office at 413-549-9857. Amherst Public Schools. An Affirmative Action/ Equal Opportunity Employer.

INSURANCE SALES

Earn $35,000+ in your 1st year as a personal lines account exec. If you have the drive and ambition to succeed, are well organized and have exceptional interpersonal skills, start your career in homeowner/auto insurance sales. We will train the right individual to sell our highly competitive insurance products and provide you with unlimited qualified leads. Candidate must be willing to work evening. We offer a competitive base + commission and complete benefits package. Send resume to W.D. Grinnell, Webber and Grinnell Insurance Agency, PO Box 58, Northampton, MA

WEBBER & GRINNELL INSURANCE

Legal Assistants Wanted Spring 1999 Internships with Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary—training provided. Deadline to begin the application process is Nov 13, 1998—Contact The Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

EMPLOYMENT

CHILDRENS HEALTH RESEARCH Abt Associates is recruiting Research Interviewers to participate on a Federally sponsored national survey of the immunization status of children. Interested applicants should be able to work a minimum of 20 hours per week evenings including 1 weekend shift. The position requires good communication skills and some computer experience. Hourly wages start at $6.25/hour, $6.88/hour weekends, with regular merit increases. Health and Dental Insurance is available. For further information, or to arrange a personal interview contact: 1-800-792-4514. Abt Associates is an equal opportunity employer.

Disc Jockey needed for mobile DJ service. Willing to train but must have a dependable vehicle and knowledge of current dance music. Call 253-6355.

Best Part-Time Job In The Valley You don't have to wash dishes or flip burgers for the extra money you need. Become a Clean Water Action organizer and earn $7.30-$9.00/hr fighting air and water pollution. Paid training, flexible schedule, evening and weekend hours. 584-9830.

Looking for outgoing motivated students for campus spokesperson position. 10-15hrs/wk. On-campus. Flexible hours. $10-$12/hr. Please contact Dan Wolman @ Campus Information Services. 800-922-5579.

EARN CASH Flexible Hours Now Hiring At Sbarros Hampshire Mall

EMPLOYMENT

Wanted 98 People We'll pay you to lose up to 29+ lbs. Expires 11/11/98. 1-703-817-1071

Waitress Part-Time Make $400 & work 2 or 3 nights. Flexible hours. Dancers For Upscale Gentleman's Club No experience necessary. Unlimited $$$ Potential. Bikini, Topless, or Nude! Call 413-536-0502

Drivers Wanted Pays $9 to $15 per hour. Inside help wanted too. Flexible hours. Call Dominos 256-8911

ENTERTAINMENT

Lights and Sound: Rave to Dorm Party. Your DJ's or ours. Call BARR Productions (413)737-8561.

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Free delivery. 253-9742.

FOR SALE

GMAT Bargain! Princeton Review. Prep Class reg. $795 only $600. 259-1051.

FURNITURE

Papason Chair, Couch, and Footrest. (Black). All $150. Decent TV. Great price - $50. Call Jessica 548-3966.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Babop Shabop Happy 21st Alissa! You thought we'd forget... Jen, Janna, Denise, Kara, Jessica

HEALTH & BEAUTY

We're here to pump... YOU UP! Creatine Monohydrate, Creatine Surge, DHEA, Whey Protein and more from Fitness Workshop delivered right to your door. 1-877-FIT-WORK. www.fitnessworkshop.com

HOUSE FOR RENT

Summer Rentals Cape Cod Group Summer Rentals. Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Call Diamond Real Estate 1-508-477-1900.

INSTRUCTION

KICKBOXING INSTRUCTION Personal training. Workouts customized to meet your fitness goals. Joe 548-8979. Leave message.

LOST & FOUND

Missing cat- grey tiger with white feet and tummy. Call Emily 549-0471.

Thursday Night at The Pub- Lost my mother's engagement ring! Huge sentimental value! Call Jenn 256-0375.

MISCELLANEOUS

Think Different $500-$1000 part-time per month. No experience needed. Will train. Free information packet. 413-788-9838. cleanair@javanet.com

PERSONALS

Alumnus from Boston area looking for a pen pal. Any age O.K. Address: Rick Lewis 40 Hampton Rd. Sharon, MA 02067 Phone: 781-784-3470 Please Write To Me.

ROOM FOR RENT

1 bedroom in 3 bedroom apartment. 10 minutes from UMass campus. Big back yard, quiet area. Call Katie 256-5995.

SERVICES

Know Your Rights Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find Out! Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

SERVICES

On-Line Roommate/Apt Search Service Free Ads. http://members.aol.com/puroommate/

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst Area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TO SUBLET

4 bedroom apartment on Main St. Nicest place in Amherst. Walk to town. Available Jan 1st. Call 256-0416.

3 bedroom apt for sublet. $875 per month, all utilities included. On bus route. Cliffside Apt. For more info call (413)665-0052.

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK 99! Cancun * Nassau * Jamaica * Mazatlan * Acapulco * Bahamas Cruise * Florida * South Padre Travel Free and make lots of Cash! Top reps are offered full-time staff jobs. Lowest Price Guaranteed. Call now for details! www.classtravel.com 800-838-6411 930 Comm Ave South On BU's West Campus

SPRING BREAK '99 Largest selection of Spring Break Destinations, including Cruises! Foam Parties, Drink Specials, and Club Admissions. Group Discounts. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-FUN

WANTED TO RENT

Looking to sublet from Jan 1-June 1. 2 or 3 bedrooms. Call 546-1747.

Put an Ad in The Classifieds Today!!

The Holiday Season is right around the corner....

Are you wondering how you are going to afford Holiday gifts?

Now do you need a job?

Check out The Classifieds today and see the numerous opportunities out there and waiting for you!

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, OCT. 30

Community — There will be personalized psychic readings in the Blackwall Cafe in the Campus Center from 7–11 p.m. The movies Screamers and Screamers 2 will be shown beginning at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center auditorium. Both are part of the Something Extra Friday program series.

Comedy — Comic Craig Oldson will give a stand-up comedy as part of the Sage Hall Concert Series at 8 p.m. in Sweeney Concert Hall at Smith College.

Discussion — There will be a panel discussion on the explorations of repetition and the machine in new sculpture at the art gallery in the Student Union at 1 p.m.

Lecture — A lecture entitled "The Autistic Child: Biology, Diagnosis, and Advocacy" will be held at Smith College in McConnell B05 at 4 p.m.

Performance — The University Dancers Improvisation Group will perform at the Augusta Savage Gallery from 3:45–4:30 p.m.

Reception — A QUEER fall reception for graduate students will take place in the graduate lounge in the Campus Center from 5–7 p.m. There will be free food and beverages.

Service — There will be a Shabbat service at 6 p.m. in the Hillel House. Rabbi Jonathan Klein will lead, and a free Shabbat dinner follows.

SATURDAY, OCT. 31

Comedy — MISSION IMPROVable, the UMass improvisational troupe, will perform at 8 p.m. in room 163 of the Campus Center.

Dance Party — There will be a dance party for diverse students looking for a night of dance, music, and fun in the Student Union Ballroom at 8 p.m.

Race — The UMass Stonewall Center will present the Second Annual UMass Drag Race at the Top of the Campus Center from 8–10 p.m.

SUNDAY, NOV. 1

Concert — Elizabeth Shammash, a mezzo soprano, will perform along with piano and viola accompaniment in Sweeney Concert Hall at Smith College at 4 p.m.

Hike — The Sierra Club and EMS will co-sponsor a hike in the hills of Leverett. Register by calling 584-3554.

Reception — There will be an artists' reception in the art gallery located in the student union from 2–4:30 p.m. The event is sponsored by the UMass Arts Council, the SGA, and the GSS.

NOTICES

Community — Official Mail-In Voter Registration Forms are available at the Registrar's Office, and Commuter Services in the Student Union. Voting is on Nov. 3.

Community — Golden Key National Honor Society nominees are reminded to return membership forms as soon as possible. Deadline is approaching.

Scholarships — UMass students interested in scholarship opportunities are encouraged to visit the Office of National Scholarship Advisement in room 610 of Goodell. Deadlines for scholarships are approaching fast.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Next time, try US first.

New Store Not like a mall... Closer.

HSCN Hosting Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Ch.
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WCVH & HSCN
14 International
15 UMass Academic TV
16 WB/New Haven
17 HSCN Programming
18 The Learning Channel
19 UVC-TV19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
21 Gavel to Gavel
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 Sundance
24 Bloomberg Financial
25 CTN
27 TBS
28 BET
29 TV Land
30 Univision
31 Comedy Central
32 Cartoon
33 Much Music

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 30, 1998

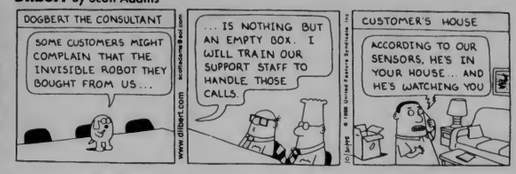
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEQH	2	12 Wishbone (R	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Connecticut Journal		Antiques Roadshow (In Stereo)		Nova "Terror in Space" (R
WFSB	3	3 News (R	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Charlie Brown	Garfield	Kids-Daredevil	Candid C.	Nash Bridges "The Tourist" (R		News (R	Late Show (R
WBZ	4	4 News (R	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent Tonight	Charlie Brown	Garfield	Kids-Daredevil	Candid C.	Nash Bridges "The Tourist" (R		News	Late Show (R
WCVB	5	5 News (R	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle (R	Trio of a Kind	Boy World	Sabrina-Witch	Brother's Kpr	20/20 (R		News (R	Nightline (R
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny (R	Friends (R	★★★ "Pretty Woman" (1990, Comedy-Drama) Richard Gere				News		Friends (R	Nanny (R
WHDH	60	News	NBC News	Wheel Fortune	Jeopardy! (R	Dateline (In Stereo) (R		Trinity "No Secrets" (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street (R		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Married... With	Home Imp.	Judge Judy (R	Judge Judy (R	Legacy "Brother Love" (R		Love Boat: The Next Wave (R		News	Newsradio (R	Newsradio (R	LSPD
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy (R	Dateline (In Stereo) (R		Trinity "No Secrets" (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street (R		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons (R	Friends (R	Seinfeld (R	Frasier (R	Brimstone "Encore" (In Stereo)		Millennium (In Stereo) (PA) (R		News		Friends (R	Mad Abt. You
WWLP	22	News (R	NBC News	Wheel Fortune	Jeopardy! (R	Dateline (In Stereo) (R		Trinity "No Secrets" (In Stereo)		Homicide: Life on the Street (R		News (R	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	State We're In	Time Goes By	Monty Python	Red Dwarf	Charlie Rose (In Stereo) (R
WGGB	40	20 News (R	ABC News	Seinfeld (R	Frasier (R	Trio of a Kind	Boy World	Sabrina-Witch	Brother's Kpr	20/20 (R		News (R	Nightline (R
WSBK	38	Judge Judy (R	Judge Judy (R	Seinfeld (R	Frasier (R	Legacy "Brother Love" (R		Love Boat: The Next Wave (R		Mad Abt. You	Mad Abt. You	Frasier (R	Cheers (R
WTBS	46	Family Matters	Family Matters	Roseanne (R	Roseanne (R	★½ "Sleepwalkers" (1992, Horror) Brian Krause. Madchen Amick.				★★★ "Carrie" (1976, Horror) Sissy Spacek.
A&E	65	Northern Exposure (R		Law & Order	Out of Control (R	Biography: Rush Limbaugh		L.A. Detectives (R)		Midsommer Murders (Part 2 of 2)		Law & Order (R
CNN	29	23 Worldview (R	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire (R	World Today (R		Larry King Live (R		Cold War "Kines" (R) (R		Sports	Moneyline (R
COM	35	30 Comedy Hall	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	Gallagher: Totally New (R)		★★★ "Beetlejuice" (1988, Comedy)		Michael Keaton. Geena Davis.		Upright	Comedy Hall
DISC	67	New House	Fix-It-Line	Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery: Jungle		News	Storm	Lost Warriors of the Clouds		Justice Files	Vigilantes! (R)
ESPN	59	Up Close	Sportscenter		Tour Championship		Baseball	MLB Players Choice Awards				Sportscenter (R
LIFE	62	Ellen (R	Ellen (R	Party of Five "I Do" (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope "Divided Loyalty		★★ "Lisa" (1990, Suspense) Staci Keanan, Cheryl Ladd.				New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	69	5:30 Jams Countdown		Revue (R)	News	Eye Spy Video	Say What?	All-Time Top 10 (R) (In Stereo)		Celebrity	Celebrity	Celebrity	Celebrity
NICK	43	You Afraid?	Cousin	Doug (R	Hey Arnold! (R	Rugrats (R	Animorphs (R	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Happy Days	Laverne	"I Love Lucy (R	Bewitched
SCIFI	66	Amer. Stories	Sci-Fi Entert.	★★½ "The War of the Worlds" (1953) Gene Barry.		War of the Worlds				Friday the 13th: The Series (R		"The War of the Worlds" (1953)
TLC	68	28 Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours "On Hero Street" (R)		48 Hours		Ancient Prophecies (R) (Part 1 of 2)				48 Hours (R)
TNT	63	Babylon 5 "Revelations" (R		ER "The Healers" (In Stereo) (R		★★½ "The Outlaw Josey Wales" (1976, Western) Clint Eastwood, Chief Dan George.						"Dollar for the Dead" (1998)
USA	64	Hercules: Legendary Journ.		Xena: Warrior Princess (R		Walker, Texas Ranger (R		★★★ "Rahvin/James" (1993) Sciocchi, Harrison Ford, Anne Archer. (In Stereo) (R				"Phantasm III"
HBO	49	(5:15) ★★★ "Scrooged" (1988)		Inside the NFL (In Stereo) (R		★★½ "Event Horizon" (1997, Science Fiction) (R		"Legend of the Mummy" (1997, Horror) Louis Gossett Jr. (R				Chris Rock (R
MAX	44	★★½ "Project X" (1987, Drama) Matthew Broderick. PG				★★½ "The Night Flier" (1997) Miguel Ferrer. (R		Making-Ghost		★★★ "Kiss or Kill" (1997) Frances O'Connor. (R		Emmanuelle
SHOW	45	★★½ "The Hoyt/Connections" (1997) J.C. Hamsher. PG				★★ "Striptease" (1996, Comedy-Drama) Demi Moore. (R				Stargate SG-1	Dead Men's Gun	Outer Limits

Cathy By Cathy Guisewite

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Non Sequitur By Wiley



Sven By Stephen Higgins

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Liberty Meadows By Frank Cho

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — If you have to boss others around today, you are best to do it in a low-key fashion, allowing room for some intuitive decision-making.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You can do much toward accomplishing something today that only a loved one thought was possible. You'll get a sense of your true potential.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You'll benefit from a new point of view today. It may come to you as quite a surprise, so you might resist at first.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — You'll be most comfortable today hearing what has been passed onto you by another. You won't be bothered by extra weight.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — If you must travel far from home today, do so only for reasons of monetary profit or any other tangible personal gain.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — Not everyone will believe what you have to say today, but your works are likely to be borne out of the events transpiring around you.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — The inevitable is likely to occur before the day is out, but you should have little trouble facing it directly if you've been preparing.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — Someone you once loved is going to make a play for your attention today. Before making a decision, make sure you know where your affections stand.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — A little bit of "hide-and- seek" may be in store today. When you recover something that has been lost, you'll have a whole new perspective.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — You're nearing a goal which will bring you a great deal of fulfillment. However, you mustn't start to celebrate prematurely. Be patient!

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — You'll be called upon to perform a task or two for someone who is in no position to succeed. Your efforts will be repaid.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — You aren't going to be very good at concealing the truth today. You're best bet is to be forthcoming whenever you get the chance.

Quote of the Day

"Q: What do you call an impotent ghost? A: A hollow-weanie"

–A Jokester

Close to Home By John McPherson

After the 117th Monica Lewinsky costume, Frieda and Glenn Daggett Lash out.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Taco
Clam Roll
Vegetable Taco
Reuben Sandwich on Rye

DINNER
Savory Baked Chicken
Risotto Italiano
Spaghetti
Burger

Worcester

LUNCH
Captain's Catch on Sesame Roll
Grilled Cheese
Fettuccini
Black Eyed Peas

DINNER
Savory Backed Chicken
Glazed Harvest Ham
Korean BBQ Tofu
Ravioli Alfredo

Hampshire

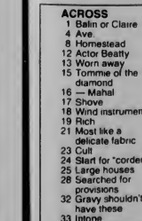
LUNCH
Hamburger
Chicken Cutlet
Captain's Catch on Sesame Roll
Grilled Cheese

DINNER
Savory Baked Chicken
Glazed Harvest Ham

Berkshire

LUNCH
Captain's Catch on Sesame Roll
Fettuccini
Grilled Cheese
Beans and Rice

DINNER
Savory Baked Chicken
Pork Ginger Stir Fry
Tempeh Stir Fry
Ravioli Alfredo



ACROSS

1 Balin or Claire
4 Ave.
8 Homestead
12 Actor Beatty
13 Worn away
15 Tommie of the diamond
16 — Mahal
17 Shove
18 Wind instrument
19 Rich
21 Most like a delicate fabric
23 Cult
24 Start for "corder"
25 Large houses
28 Searched for provisions
32 Gravy shouldn't have these 33 Intone
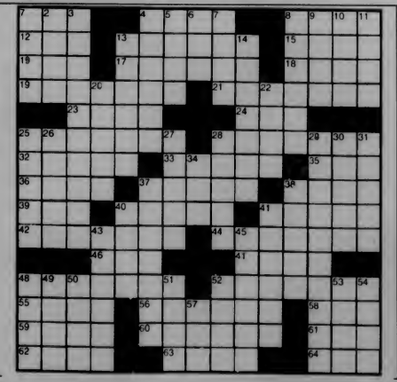
35 Flightless bird
36 Purposes
37 Goes yachting
38 "— upon a time"
39 Newscaster Rather
40 Regions
41 Frozen rain
42 Necessitates
44 Realms
46 — liver oil
47 Thomas — Edison
48 Wished for
52 Pew adjunct
55 Elegant coiffure
56 Plunder
58 "— Gotta Be Me"
59 Skelton and Barber
60 Pittered
61 Zuider —
62 Hardy heroine
63 Wide-spouted pitcher
64 Finale



DOWN

1 Two — ten is five
2 One of the tides
3 Modification
4 Charlotte or Emily
5 Misplaced
6 Computer abbr.
7 Small, secluded valley
8 "Our Lady of —"
9 Chills and fever
10 Yanks' foes
11 Steak or pork
13 Does a bouncer's job
14 Church officials
20 Jumps
22 Supermarket vehicle
25 Avoid adroitly
28 Lazy —
27 Glances over
28 Bogus
29 Make a sweeping statement
30 Host
31 Songs for two
34 Make haste
37 Fuses (metal)
38 Martini garnish
40 — National Park
41 Internal organ
43 Puzzle direction
45 Horse's trough
48 Mongol's tent
49 Fencer's weapon
50 Puts 2 and 2 together
51 Appointment
52 Leafy vegetable
53 Like 2
54 Marsh plant
57 Promise

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

10-30-98 © 1998 United Feature Syndicate

Night Editor — Dinuce Jimenez
Photo Technician — Brian McDermott
Copy Editor — Laura Sansoucy
Production Supervisor — Matt Wolaver
Production Staff — Angie Annese

SPORTS

The big mess of the Bowls; Who is really No. 1?

You sit down on the couch, pull over a bag of nacho chips with cheesy salsa and you're set to go for a Saturday afternoon of college grids. Do a little dance, work the remote, lick the fingers, you're set to go.

Your favorite team's on the tube, and, man, you'd do anything for a 'W,' as your team is one of the few undefeateds left vying for a shot at a national championship in January 4th's Fiesta Bowl.

Brett Mauser

Heh...you think you're the only one who would pull some strings to fix the crystal ball? Along with the millions of college football fans nationwide, a small group of middle- aged men will be feasting on fingernails for the afternoon, because they need some Divine Intervention more than anyone at this point.

The Bowl Championship Series. They thought they had a solution. And if not this year, then next year, or a few years down the road, the flaws will be exposed, and a football town or two's hearts will be broken. They will think "kill" with certain peoples' hides on their minds. Then, and only then, will the much overdue 16 or 8–team playoff system be implemented.

The BCS innovator amongst the 102 544 at Neyland Stadium in Knoxville, after Tennessee routs Arkansas in the SEC title game, completing an undefeated season, yet still playing for second place come 1999?

Not me, my friend. My right hook and I are pretty vicious, but not that vicious.

Let's take a stroll down the What-Could–Happen path for a while and put a halt to this hullabaloo.

In summary...polls, computer rankings, strength of schedule, and won–loss record...these are what will determine who will be the next Tostitos sponsors.

The computer rankings consist of in-depth statistical grading done by the New York Times, the Seattle Times, and Jeff Sagarin. They are smaller versions of what the BCS is trying to get at in discovering who are the top two teams in America.

Opponent's record and opponent's opponents record, more compilation of numbers and winning percentages and home field advantages and all that good stuff thrown in, and you got your BCS rankings. Lowest score wins.

And now the key players...

UCLA: The Frontrunner

The BCS has the Bruins on top, both understandably and questionably. The PAC–10 used to be known for its wide- open play, but only UCLA has held true to form, and that has helped them to a 6-0 record heading into a home date with Stanford.

Some are sold on this L.A. story. They have their lead actor in quarterback Cade McNown and a key supporting cast in back Jermaine Lewis and receiver Brian Poli- Dixon.

But that defense, ooh, that defense, could be a problem. Just ahead of Toledo at 73rd in the nation in total defense, the Bruins are giving up 377 yards per game.

The front seven, though, does the job when the job needs to be done. Against California last weekend, they kept the Bears out of the end zone on two possessions inside the 2. They forced five turnovers in their 41–38 overtime victory over then–undefeated Oregon. Linebacker Brendan Ayanbadejo sacked Ducks' quarterback Akili Smith twice on their possession in the extra frame, ending all hopes of an Oregon victory.

The defense, though, will have to prove themselves down the stretch when they close the season with a home game against USC sandwiched in between travels to Miami and Washington. By then, we should know the real deal.

Ohio State: The Favorite

The polls dig 'em, the fans dig 'em, and the Big Ten fears them.

You think Michigan's going to continue their reign over the Bucks? It oughta be over by halftime this time around in Ohio State's favor, believe it or not.

The knock on OSU at the beginning of the season was quarterback Joe Germaine, a headman that was "good" at everything, but without a distinguishing characteristic that would stand out in a crowd.

Well...he's a Heisman candidate now. Granted, a Heisman darkhorse, but if everyone else fades, he's got a slim shot.

The Buckeyes have it all. A steady offense, a killer defense, a solid special teams, and, well, we won't mention the coach, Gary Cooper. That's still up for argument.

If they win out, which they should

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 7

UMass travels to battle New Hampshire

Minutemen will need big effort to stop Wildcats' Azumah

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

Freshman Tre Brady is in over his head a bit. He's got to be thinking professional football the way things are going for him. Last week, it was Brian Westbrook, and the Minutemen successfully held Villanova's back at bay. This week, well, Division 1–AA's all-time rushing and scoring leader, New Hampshire's Jerry Azumah.

His job?

Mimic them.

The slashes, the spins, the cutbacks, the package. Tre be him. But it isn't that easy. Westbrook is one, but Azumah is who Coach Mark Whipple calls "probably the best player in the country."

Be him, Tre, be him.

The Massachusetts football team (5–2, 3–1 in the A–10) will try to benefit from Mr. Brady's endeavors in finally slowing down the Wildcats' 5–10 senior tailback. After all, it's probably about time.

Last year, it was 28–10, and Azumah went for 156 yards and two scores, yet another failure among a string of them in stopping the Wildcat Express. In fact, only once in the nineties have the Minutemen gone into battle against the 'Cats and come out on top.

The references to his surname come in bundles, and justifiably so. Bottom line, Azumah is a coach's nightmare and this weekend in Durham, NH, Whipple and Co. will try to change the Minutemen's luck with the little squirt.

"If [our defense] isn't ready to play, it's going to be ugly," Whipple said. "They know if they aren't ready, they're going to get embarrassed. We have to make him earn every yard."

Oh yes, did we forget? Marcel Shipp isn't so bad either. Five consecutive 100–yard games to his credit, UMass' sophomore tailback needs 151 yards to surpass 2,000 on his career. To say the least, rush defense isn't expected to be in top form on Saturday afternoon.

Motivation to outdo The Man?

"I think winning motivates Marcel Shipp," Whipple said. "He'd do whatever he needs to do to win a game. It's not a boxing match. They'll never going to see each other on the field at the same time, but it can't hurt."

Football
Massachusetts @ UNH
Saturday, 12:30 p.m.

Instead, the UMass defense will be stepping into the ring against Azumah. New Hampshire without their tailback could be a boat up a creek with no oar. The Wildcats get only 148 yards through the air with senior quarterback Tim Cramsey. Since Chad Salisbury's big day in Amherst, UMass has held opposing quarterbacks to just a 49% completion percentage.

So who can figure these guys out? Two losses at home to Richmond and Northeastern, then a relative rout of William & Mary? The question is which team will show up.

The Tribe thought they had an off-week last week before hooking up with national power Hampton this weekend. Instead, Azumah rambled for 255 yards helping UNH to a 31–19 victory. The Wildcats also handed Connecticut their only league loss by defeating the Huskies 34–20 in Durham.

UMass' emergence as one of the conference's elite has not gone unnoticed nationally. Jeff Sagarin's power ratings has the Minutemen ranked tenth in the country, yet fourth in the conference, behind William & Mary, Delaware, and Richmond. The conference itself is undoubtedly one of the top three in the country, having compiled a 16–5 record against out of conference opponents. UMass contributed to that statistic by defeating Hofstra and Buffalo.

Quarterback Todd Bankhead comes off a 283–yard, three touchdown performance, but could be without one of his favorite targets, senior co-captain Kerry Taylor, who, despite eight catches in last week's 36–26 win over Villanova, remains questionable for Saturday's contest. Defensively, Jeremy Robinson continues to go easy on the sprained ankle he sustained in the first quarter of the loss to Connecticut.

After Saturday's tilt with the Wildcats, the Minutemen move onto Rhode Island where they will take on the Rams.

JAY PREMACK / COLLEGIAN

The Massachusetts football team will look to improve on its 5–2 record tomorrow afternoon when it travels to UNH to face the Wildcats.

One win remains to qualify for A-10's

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

After almost four months of intense training and game action, it all comes down to this weekend for the Massachusetts women's soccer team.

The first 18 games of the 1998 season will be nothing more than a mere afterthought when the Minutewomen take to the field for a pair of road games at Duquesne and at St. Bonaventure this weekend.

The equation is simple: a win either today or Sunday will pretty much sew up the final bid in the next week's Atlantic 10 tournament for the Minutewomen. Anything less...well, let's just say UMass isn't hoping for that scenario to occur.

"We're basically looking to qualify for the A–10's this weekend after what has been an arduous and tough season," Massachusetts women's soccer coach Jim Rudy said. "This has been the toughest season in the history of the program here at UMass."

The Minutewomen [9–9, 6–3 in the A–10] will enter today's 2 p.m. matchup with Duquesne in Pittsburgh as winners of three in a row. However, today's contest will provide another new challenge for UMass, as the playing surface at Arthur J. Rooney Field is artificial turf.

"Yes, [playing on the turf] is a big concern," Rudy said. "It's a small, fast field that requires a different amount of timing, both on runs and receiving. That's something we're going to have to adjust to."

Aside from the surface, however, the Minutewomen will also have to contend with a Dukes squad that will look to be the ungracious host and play the role of spoiler against UMass.

"Duquesne is a very aggressive, physical team," Rudy said. "The two times we've played them, we've played them here [at UMass], but defensively they are very good. Shelley Heisey [the DU coach] also does a great job of preparing her team."

Sunday's opponent, St. Bonaventure, is also in the hunt for that final spot in the tourney, but will need to win its two games this weekend in order to leapfrog both the Minutewomen and Rhode Island.

Nevertheless, the Bonnies are expected to provide a stiff challenge for UMass on Sunday afternoon at 1 p.m. in the metropolis

Turn to SOCCER, page 7

KARA STOKES / COLLEGIAN

Sophie Lecot and the Massachusetts women's soccer team will pack their bags this weekend for a pair of road games against Duquesne and St. Bonaventure.

MC, UNH to face off with hockey squad

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

The last times the Massachusetts hockey team took to the ice to play Merrimack College and the University of New Hampshire, their opponents went away embarrassed.

Back on Jan. 31 in North Andover, the Minutemen turned the corner on their 1997–98 season and blew out the Warriors 6–2 at the Volpe Complex. Then, a little less then a month later, No. 4 UNH came calling to the William D. Mullins Center, and left as 4–3 losers in UMass' biggest win of the season.

UMass [10–2, 0–1 in Hockey East] will look to turn the same trick this time around against both of those teams. Merrimack [0–2, 0–0 in HE] and the Wildcats will both make the trip to Amherst this weekend for a pair of key conference matchups.

Although the Minutemen have had eight days to think about a heartbreaking 4–3 overtime loss to UMass–Lowell, heading into tonight's 7 p.m. faceoff with the Warriors [91.1 FM, WMUA], UMass will be ready for Merrimack.

Hockey
UMass vs. Merrimack
Friday- 7 p.m.
WMUA- 91.1 FM
Michael Kobylanski- Play by Play
James Murphy- Color Commentary

"We're going to try to look at it [the OT loss to Lowell] as a positive," Massachusetts hockey coach Joe Mallen said following last week's contest. "We want to use it as a springboard forward."

Although the Warriors did go through an overhaul in the offseason with the departure of longtime head coach Ron Anderson and the graduation of offensive threats such as Martin Laroche and Casey Keselring, this squad has the potential to surprise some teams in Hockey East.

Just ask Boston University, who won the conference last year only to fall to the Warriors in the HE playoffs last March. It was the first time in school history that Merrimack had reached the semifinals of the conference tournament.

This year's edition of the Blue and Gold will be led by seniors Rejean Stringer and Kris Porter, who were the top two snipers on last year's squad with 57 and 54 points, respectively. Junior netminder Cris Classen will likely get the nod between the pipes, as he played in 28 of 38 games last season.

New Hampshire will bring its strong tradition and national prominence into Amherst for a 5 p.m. faceoff on Sunday afternoon [91.1 FM, WMUA]. Both teams are well aware of what happened the last times the two met, and the Wildcats will have revenge on their minds this time around. However, that hasn't wavered the confidence of the Minutemen at all.

"We can beat any team in this league. No problem," UMass junior captain Dean Stork said.

The Wildcats lost plenty of firepower from their arsenal with the loss off Derek Beakr, Tom Nolan, and Mark Mowers. However, senior Jason Krog is back, and will highlight the UNH attack along with junior Mike Souza. Senior goaltender Sean Matile will also return between the pipes and is regarded as one of the best netminders in the conference.

The Minutemen have been using a balanced offensive attack in the early going, and sophomore Markus Helanen has also been superb in net for UMass. It will take more of the same this weekend for the Maroon and White to come away with victories in what are expected to be two tightly contested games.

Hockey
UMass vs. UNH
Sunday- 5 p.m.
WMUA- 91.1 FM
John Place- Play by Play
Paul Teves- Color Commentary

Men's soccer to host 2

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's soccer team will look to conclude their season on a high note as they take on Duquesne and St. Bonaventure today and Sunday afternoon, respectively, at Totman Field.

The Minutemen [2–12–2 overall, 2–5–1 A–10] will not qualify for the Atlantic 10 championships regardless of what transpires this weekend, but they still have high hopes for salvaging some respect.

"This team will continue to play hard," Massachusetts men's soccer coach Sam Koch said. "They have stuck together through tough times this year, and I do not expect them to quit now."

While Duquesne will not qualify for the A–10 title either, St. Bonaventure is sitting pretty at 10–4–1 overall, and 7–2–0 in the A–10.

However, Koch emphasized that both games are of equal importance to the team.

"We can not approach games differently because of the opponent's record. We want to win both of these games no matter what to end this season with some positive experiences."

Duquesne, despite engaging in a disappointing season, will undoubtedly be seeking revenge, as UMass has defeated the Dukes in each of the past three seasons.

The Minutemen will have to be in top form to conquer the Bonnies on Sunday as they a possess a well–rounded scoring attack, complimented by a stingy defense.

Four Bonnies have posted double–digit scoring totals for the season, including Justin Evans, who leads the way with 15 points on six goals and three assists. Nick Cammarata has chipped in with 11 points on five goals and one assist.

Meanwhile, Rob Vartughian has been exceptional in net, posting a 1.47 goals against average, with a .685 saves percentage.

At the opposite goalpost, Koch will insert Bryan O'Quinn to guard between the pipes on Friday against Duquesne.

"Bryan has worked really hard throughout this season, and he deserves a chance to play," Koch said.

Junior keeper Todd Fowler will return on Sunday to start in net for Senior Day.

UMass will pay tribute to seniors Jake Brodsky, Paul Corcoran, "Pie" Garcia, and Brad Kurowski before the encounter with the Bonnies.

"These games are very important for the whole team, Garcia said. [The seniors] want to end their careers with some wins and hopefully help out our younger players in the process."

Some of those younger players such as Fred Kinateder and J.R. Pouncey, have made great strides toward becoming integral members of the squad in the near future.

Pouncey will most likely return this weekend from a neck injury, after sitting out last week's matches at La Salle and Fordham.

Minutemen Notes : Game time for today's match vs. Duquesne at Totman Field has been changed to 2:30 p.m.

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 39 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Monday, November 2, 1998

An ode to melancholy

Genre–slicer Cat Power resists conventions on her new album, Moon Pix, a tumultuous ride through sadness and despair. Check out our review (see Arts &ing, page 6).

It ain't over till it's over

Cori Stevens and the UMass women's soccer team propelled themselves into the Atlantic 10 tournament in their last chance to do so (see Sports, page 12).

WORLD

Trial of dissident set to begin today

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AP) — Once groomed as heir-apparent to Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad, Malaysia's most famous dissident now must defend himself against charges of corruption and sodomy.

The trial of Anwar Ibrahim, set to begin today, follows the biggest outburst of public protest in the country's history. It focuses unprecedented attention on issues of political dissent and human rights in a land that prides itself on being one of the most progressive in Southeast Asia.

Anwar, the former deputy prime minister, was dismissed, jailed and allegedly beaten by police after his arrest on Sept. 20. Many Malaysians questioned the case against him and began to rally to his side. A demonstration last weekend in the capital, Kuala Lumpur, turned into a full-scale riot, Malaysia's first in nearly 30 years.

Anwar's trial will take place amid tight security at the federal courthouse, where his supporters have held protests regularly since his arrest.

NATION

Bomb threats clear campus

CONCORD, N.H. — Part of a college campus was evacuated yesterday because of a bomb threat, the latest in a series of incidents that started with two fire bombs placed in Concord libraries last week.

An anonymous call yesterday morning warned that three bombs had been placed on the campus of the New Hampshire Technical Institute, said Mike Moffett, the school's public information officer.

About a dozen buildings were evacuated, including a state police training building and the Christa McAuliffe Planetarium. A police bomb squad gave the all-clear after about 2 1/2 hours of searching turned up no evidence of a bomb.

"You'd have to anticipate things like this," state police Lt. John Stevens said. "You have to take it seriously. It's very disruptive to the operation of these places, but you can't just dismiss them."

Two children's shows had been scheduled during the morning at the planetarium. The college also had planned an open house yesterday, but Moffett said it was canceled.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 52	HIGH: 42	HIGH: 47
LOW: 23	LOW: 24	LOW: 29

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 10
Comics .....page 11
Crossword .....page 11
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 10
News .....page 1
Sports .....page 12

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Police seeking suspects in Friday night shooting

By Lorraine Kennedy
Collegian Staff

A University of Massachusetts student was shot Friday night in Cashin Residence Hall in Sylvan Residential Area.

The victim was taken to Baystate Medical Center in Springfield where he underwent surgery for a gunshot wound to the neck. He was listed in fair condition in the Intensive Care Unit, according to Director of Public Affairs David Lorenzatti.

UMass Police report that one shot was fired in the student's room in Cashin Hall shortly before 9:30 p.m. Friday, and that another student was in the room with the victim at the time of the shooting, according to UMass News Director Kay Scanlon.

A weapon has not yet been recovered, she said.

Amherst and State Police officers assisted UMass Police in searching the area for two men who were reportedly seen running from the building immediately following the incident, according to Barbara Pitoniak of the UMass News Office.

The victim, whose name is being withheld due to safety concerns, is a 24–year–old junior civil engineering major from Massachusetts.

Police are still investigating the incident and believe the shooting was "not a random act," Pitoniak said.

Scanlon said it is "really hard to speculate" on a motive for the shooting at this time, but that "police are waiting for doctors to okay" questioning of the victim.

Police have been interviewing witnesses and are working to develop a composite sketch of the assailant, Scanlon said.

She emphasized that police believe that there was "some kind of relationship or knowledge between the victim and assailant."

"We believe strongly that other students are not in danger," she said in a statement from UMass regarding the incident.

Police, however, have "beefed up" security in the Sylvan area, Scanlon said, and will do so through today as they evaluate student reaction to the shooting.

"While the administration is concerned about the incident, in general, the campus is a safe place," Scanlon said. "However, people should be alert as to what is going on around them."

UMass police urge anyone with information on the incident to call the TIPS hotline at (413)577–TIPS.

Student alleges assault by basketball player

By Casey Kane and Lorraine Kennedy
Collegian Staff

A student filed a report with the University of Massachusetts Police Department yesterday, alleging she was assaulted by UMass basketball player Monty Mack yesterday afternoon.

Police are investigating an assault and battery that took place at Hampshire Dining Hall in the Southwest Residential Area at approximately 2:30 p.m. yesterday, a source within the UMass Police Department said.

"At this point [Mack] is the suspect... [but] no charges have been filed," the source said.

The victim said she plans to file charges against Mack today.

According to the victim, a UMass sophomore political science major who asked that her name be witheld, the incident began in the dining hall when a fight broke out between two females and then escalated as others joined in.

The victim said in a statement she gave to police that she got involved in the fight because, "I'm not going to watch my friends get jumped."

The victim alleged that when they were inside of the dining hall Mack, a 6–foot–3, 195–pound junior guard for the men's basketball team, punched her right ear once and threw her against a tray rack.

Turn to ASSAULT, page 3

Celluci, Harshbarger make campaign stops

By Jean McMillan
Associated Press

BOSTON — Attorney General Scott Harshbarger, son of a minister, returned to familiar ground yesterday in the final days of the campaign for governor, taking his message to three of the city's black churches.

His Republican opponent, acting Governor Paul Celluci, chartered three buses to make appearances in Southeastern Massachusetts and the Cape in last-minute campaigning before tomorrow's election. Harshbarger asked hundreds of parishioners at three Boston churches for their prayers — and their votes.

"I, with all humility, with a request for your prayers and blessings, ask for your vote on Nov. 3. You can make a difference in this world," the Democrat said.

Harshbarger said that he grew up the son of a teacher and a minister who became the chaplain at Penn State University. He also talked about his experiences working for a ministry in New York City's East Harlem neighborhood.

"Through your prayers, I hope I will become the instrument of making sure that our children have a fair and equal opportunity for social justice and that all of us in the community rise above our prejudices and our biases and make this not only a church without walls, but a State without walls," he said at one stop.

Harshbarger visited the Bethel African Methodist Episcopal Church in Jamaica Plain, the Holy Tabernacle Church in Dorchester and the New Covenant Christian Center in Roxbury.

The largest crowd, nearly 1,000, was at the New Covenant, housed in a former supermarket building on Blue Hill Avenue where a choir, dressed in red, sang with gusto.

One of the parishioners was Barbara James, 63, of Brockton, a switchboard operator at Boston University.

James said she planned to vote, but did not yet know for whom she would be casting her ballot. She said she was discouraged by the televised gubernatorial debates, which she characterized as "immature."

"I expected more of people running for office," she said. The ministers at

Turn to CAMPAIGN, page 3

Olver and Morgan vie for seat in Congress

By Julie Fialkow
Collegian Staff

Congressional candidates for the First District, Representative John Olver, (D–Amherst) and Republican candidate Greg Morgan, sit on polar opposite sides of the fence on many issues including healthcare, social security and education.

Looking to gain his fourth term, Olver faces Morgan, a retired army colonel from Leominster. Morgan withdrew from a brief congressional race two years ago.

Olver, one of the most liberal members of the entire House of Representatives, according to Toby Chaudhuri, youth coordinator of the Harshbarger–Tolman campaign and president of College Democrats of Massachusetts, considers education to be one of his highest priorities.

"[Olver] came here last semester and led a roundtable discussion about issues of general concern to students. He encouraged political activism, rather than political apathy," Chaudhuri said.

Morgan said he also places education issues at the forefront of his priorities.

"By pushing education back to the local level, students will be able to get into better colleges. I know my kids felt they needed more of a challenge in secondary school and they struggled," he said.

Morgan believes in special governmental savings accounts for education.

Matt L. Barron, Olver's campaign manager, said the incumbent Congressman is a strong supporter of all federal grants, and is a member of the house appropriations committee which is responsible for financing such grants.

"Morgan wants to demolish Department of Education, that hands these grants out," said Barron.

Morgan contends that he would put money directly into boards of education, instead of allowing the Department of Education to disperse it. He said this would save 70 person of the money, which is currently used for bureaucracy.

Morgan also intends to improve transportation in western Massachusetts.

"On Route 2 in Phillipston, where four lanes become two, there have been 11 deaths and Olver has done nothing to get money for that road," he said.

Less than a month ago, a University of Massachusetts student was killed in the location Morgan spoke of on Route 2.

Morgan also said he wants a feeder highway from UMass to Route 91, enabling motorists to bypass the congestion of Route 9.

"This has been in Olver's backyard for all these years and he hasn't done a darn thing about it," said Morgan.

Olver, who was a chemistry professor at the University several years ago, has been running two 30–second advertising spots on local television stations dozens of times a day. Morgan however, is running a low–key campaign, spending only $28,000 compared to Olver's $339, 916 (according to an Oct. 29 Daily Hampshire Gazette article.)

Elections for the First District Congressional Seat will take place tomorrow.

KARA STOKES / COLLEGIAN

A bucket full of psychics

Psychics from The Goddess' Treasure Chest in Salem gave readings in the Bluewall Friday night.

Funds allotted for UM facility repairs

Some new buildings, repairs for old ones

By Natty Yagudin
Collegian Correspondent

Buildings on the University of Massachusetts campus have fallen into disrepair due to lack of funds but the Board of Trustees is looking to change that.

"In general, the shape of campus is very poor due to chronic under-investment of existing facilities," said Jim Cahill, director of facilities planning.

According to the Facility Condition Index, the average condition of all buildings at UMass is rated "very poor."

"Currently, there's no way we are going to fix all the deficiencies," Cahill said.

In all, the amount of money UMass must spend to fix all the buildings around campus is around $393 million.

This amount is equal to roughly 25 percent of the value of all buildings at the University of Massachusetts.

In a meeting held a few weeks ago, the Board of Trustees approved a new capital plan which will forward more funds to deferred maintenance prob-

Turn to FACILITIES, page 2

KARA STOKES / COLLEGIAN

The Campus Center steps are one of the many areas of campus which could use repair.

Research pod launched off Discovery

By Marcia Dunn
Associated Press

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Space shuttle Discovery's astronauts let loose a sun-gazing satellite yesterday for two days of scientific flight, accomplishing what another crew failed to do last year.

Two tense minutes passed before the crew radioed down the good news: the Spartan satellite was free of Discovery and twirling exactly as planned.

"Spartan is in the maneuver," said Discovery's commander, Curtis Brown Jr.

John Glenn did not have an active role in the Spartan release; the schedule had him wrapping up a workout on the stationary cycle right about then.

NASA Administrator Daniel Goldin praised the 77-year-old senator's performance aboard Discovery and, for the umpteenth time, insisted the first American to orbit the Earth was back in space not for publicity purposes but rather for valuable geriatric research.

"America owed him a second flight," he added.

Goldin promised to send more seniors into space, but only if the research warrants it.

"We've asked the physicians in the aging community to evaluate this flight and see if there are significant differences" between Glenn and space travelers in their 40s, 50s and early 60s, Goldin told NBC's "Meet the Press." "Within a year or two, we expect to get results and if they recommend that it's scientifically meritorious to send aging people into space, we're going to do it."

Goldin said "some very, very important people that are getting up there in age" have contacted him in the past week, begging to go. He didn't say who.

The astronaut overseeing the research aboard Discovery, Stephen Robinson, used Discovery's 50-foot robot arm to drop Spartan overboard, with help from Dr. Scott Parazynski on the computers. The 3,000-pound satellite did a pirouette as the two spacecraft soared in formation 340 miles above Baja California — an indication that everything was working. The commander then slowly backed the shuttle away.

They'll retrieve the satellite tomorrow after it has collected images of the sun's outer atmosphere, the corona, and the charged particles streaming from the sun out into space.

The $11 million satellite was supposed to conduct these observations last November. The astronauts on that mission, however, failed to send a crucial command to Spartan before releasing it. When they tried to latch back onto it with the shuttle robot arm, they sent the craft into a wild tumble.

Two astronauts then had to go out on a risky spacewalk to catch it. To make sure that didn't happen again, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration improved the computer software used to operate Spartan, arranged better views of the satellite release for the astronauts, and spent more time training them for the job.

KARA STONES / COLLEGIAN

Yeah, baby, yeah...

An Upper Central fire hydrant just couldn't shake the Halloween spirit.

■ facilities

continued from page 1

lems, in an attempt to catch up with the problem. Roughly 45 percent of the money is allotted for repairs.

"Historically, there have not been planned budgets for capital expenditures like these," Cahill said.

The Board's plan, while increasing funds for repairs, will be allotting 30 percent of the funding for new construction such as a computer engineering building and a new animal care facility.

"There are some instances when there is more sense to build a new facility than to renovate an old one," said Elizabeth Denis, director of space management.

Some students may have already noticed the need for repairs on some buildings.

Shards of brick occasionally fall from the top of the W.E.B Du Bois Library and other buildings have had deteriorating areas roped off because they are unsafe.

The fence surrounding the library was put up to protect students from pieces of brick that have been chipping off of the building for a few years.

Cahill estimates that it will cost approximately $5 million to fix the problem, but there is not enough money available. The library is just one example of the poor state of buildings around campus.

Another building in need of repair is Boyden Gym.

"The Boyden gym roof should have been replaced 10 years ago. Lighting in the building was compromised, and there was damage to equipment," Cahill said.

As a result of leakage in the roof, sections of the gym are restricted to students. The roof is scheduled to be fixed in the summer of 1999.

Some of the lingering problems in existing buildings have already interfered with student activities this semester.

The Malcolm X Cultural Center and the Latin American Cultural Center have been temporarily closed because of violations of building codes.

"Over time, changes occurred in the buildings. Some of this construction doesn't meet the building code. It created hazardous means of regress, or exit ways from the building," said Ed Mientka, manager of Campus Safety & Fire Prevention Services.

The closing of the centers angered students, and they discussed the problems with University officials at a meeting Sept. 16.

"We were very upset. They didn't give us advanced notice to reschedule events," said Jackie Leon, a senior at the University.

At the meeting, officials helped the students find interim solutions and rescheduled events until the centers would reopen.

The Malcolm X Center has since been reopened, and there are plans to open the Latin American Cultural Center soon.

According to Cahill, the large backlog in maintenance originated as far back as 30 years ago. It is a result of rapid construction in the 1960s, which left no funds for ongoing maintenance problems.

"Most available funds were going to new construction and there was little left for repairs. For a long time, the priority was not to fix things, but to build new," Cahill said.

As a result, many buildings are left without adequate maintenance.

"Often, we will take [these] issues on temporarily, but will defer the permanent solution due to a lack of funds," Cahill said.

However, the problem with deferred maintenance isn't about to go away very soon. In fact, it is estimated to get worse.

"We should be putting $14.5 million a year into an endowment just to maintain the current level of accumulated deficiency," said Cahill.

Thanks for reading The Massachusetts Daily Collegian, the New England Newspaper Association College Newspaper of the Year.

THE EDWIN M. ROSSMAN ALUMNI CAREER FORUMS
presents

HISTORY DEPARTMENT CAREER NIGHT

DATE: MONDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1998

TIME: 4:00 P.M. - 6:00 P.M.

LOCATION: HERTER 601 LOUNGE

SUSAN HAMMOND
Humanities & Fine Arts
Assistant Director, Career Education

DIANNA DUNN
Humanities & Fine Arts
Assistant Director, Field Experience

EDWARD FOUNTY
Executive Director and Founder of the Few Center on the States

LISA MEADE
State Director for Senator John Kerry

CRAIG BROWN
Computer Analyst and Actor

STEPHEN SPELMAN
Attorney at Law with Buckley, Richardson and Gelinas

ROSE ANDERSON
Independent Film Producer

JULIE GALLAGHER
Graduate Student and former school teacher

JOYE BOWMAN
Director of Undergraduate Studies, Moderator

SPONSORED BY: CAMPUS CAREER NETWORK
ALUMNI ASSOCIATION
DEPARTMENT OF HISTORY

For more information, please contact: Humanites & Fine Arts Network at 545-6255.
Refreshments Served - ALL STUDENTS ARE WELCOME!

University of Massachusetts Theatre
Guild and The Daily Collegian Present

November 5, 6 & 7 at 8pm
with November 7 matinee at 2pm
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall, UMASS Amherst

Ticket Information
$10 General Public / $5 Five College Students, Kids under 12
Groups of 20 or more - $8/$4

Tickets Available at Bowker Box Office 413.545.2511
For more information call the UMTG office at 413.545.0415

Artistic Director: Tara M. McRae
Production Manager: Ari Teplitz
Produced in cooperation with Samuel French Inc. 45 West 25th Street New York, NY 10010
Choreographer: Denise Brown
Vocal Director: Dolores Brown

THE WIZ

This production is made possible in part by a grant from the UMASS Arts Council

Wondering how fit you really are?
Don't know where to begin?

Get A Personal Trainer
@ The Body Shop

For a fee of $80 and a Current Body Shop Membership receive:
• 1 Fitness Evaluation
• 5 Personal Training Sessions

For more information call 253-8086 or

The Body Shop

to SIGN UP stop by the Totman or Boyden Body Shop today!

Many Israelis and Palestinians resist peace

By Laura King
Associated Press

JERUSALEM — The military arm of the radical Islamic group Hamas made an unprecedented threat yesterday against Yasser Arafat, demanding that the Palestinian leader halt a crackdown against it or face violent vengeance.

The threat, in a leaflet faxed to news organizations, cast a pall over this week's efforts to begin implementing the Israeli-Palestinian peace agreement, but as of yesterday, both sides were still pledging to move ahead as scheduled.

In recent days, Arafat's security forces have rounded up more than 100 Hamas activists, detained some of its top political leaders and put its ailing, charismatic founder, Sheik Ahmed Yassin, under house arrest.

That crackdown — and the Hamas demand to halt it — marked a spectacular smashup of the uneasy peace that had prevailed between Arafat and Hamas over the past 14 months, ever since Yassin was released from Israeli prison and returned to his faithful following in the Gaza Strip.

Up until now, in deference to Arafat's enduring role as a symbol of Palestinian unity, Hamas had stopped short of direct threats against him. But the leaflet — signed by Hamas' Izzedine al Qassam brigades — specifically accused the Palestinian leader by name of having "reached the point of treason" by moving against Hamas. It called for an immediate end to the crackdown in order to spare Palestinians "the horrors... of civil war" and Arafat's camp the "fires of revenge."

With so many Hamas officials in jail, few were available to vouch for the leaflet's authenticity, and none wanted to do so publicly. But its language, style and phrasing were markedly similar to past communications from Hamas' military wing.

One Palestinian government official — Imad Falouji, the communications minister and a former Hamas member — said he doubted the threats were real. Falouji, however, has been trying to act as a mediator between Arafat and Yassin.

Palestinian security officials took the warnings seriously — and issued some of their own in response.

"We have only one authority in this land, which is the Palestinian Authority," said Palestinian police commander Ghazi Jabali. "We are going to take all measures to control the situation."

The leaflet denounced the house arrest of Yassin, whom it called "the prince of holy warriors" and warned Palestinian security forces against pursuing Mohammed Deif, a top leader of Hamas' military wing whose arrest has been demanded by Israel.

Strong steps by Arafat against Islamic militants are a key provision of the Washington pact, which the leaflet referred to as the "black agreement."

Under the accord, Palestinians are to undertake a series of security-related measures in exchange for a handover of another 13.1 percent of the West Bank by Israel.

The Palestinian side said it would deliver a promised security document to the Americans today, and the Israeli Cabinet is to begin discussing the accord tomorrow and vote then or Wednesday. Meanwhile, extremists on both sides — hard-line Jewish settlers on the one side, Hamas on the other — have been trying hard to derail the accord.

Yesterday, without any interference from Israeli authorities, Jewish settlers built a fence on a disputed plot of land in traditionally Arab east Jerusalem, infuriating the Palestinians. Hamas, for its part, tried last week to blow up a school bus carrying Jewish schoolchildren in the Gaza Strip. The children were unharmed but an Israeli soldier was killed.

Already shaken by that attack, Israel saw the threats against the Palestinian Authority as a potentially worrisome new complication.

David Bar-Illan, a top aide to Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, said he did not know if the leaflet was authentic, but that Hamas' military wing "has been allowed to grow and to expand to such an extent that it probably does now pose a real danger." In recent months, Yassin's rivalry with Arafat has grown more and more pronounced.

Earlier this year, the sheik made a high-profile fund-raising tour of Muslim nations during which he harshly criticized Arafat and worked to drum up support for Hamas. In what may be a bid to cash in now on that political capital, the leaflet called on Arab leaders to pressure Arafat to halt the crackdown. Several Arab countries have already spoken out against the Washington accord, and Iran denounced Arafat for entering into it.

Despite a slippage in Arafat's popularity, polls consistently indicate fewer than one in five Palestinians supports Hamas. But if smaller, Yassin's following is more fervent.

KARA STONES / COLLEGIAN

Just a creepy tree...

A foreboding tree looms over a greenhouse behind Morrill Science Center.

■ assault

continued from page 1

"He punched me in the ear and pushed me," the victim said yesterday in a telephone interview. "I yelled, 'Get off me, get off me.'"

Outside of the dining hall, she alleged that Mack punched her again, pulled her hair, then threw her to the ground.

"He hit me again on the same side, then somebody pulled him off of me. He pulled me by the hair and knocked me to the ground," the victim said. "I didn't fight back. I'm 5-foot-4 1/2. He's bigger than me.

"I have scrapes all over my arm, cuts on my hand, bruises on my thigh and my ear is all bloody. I had on a thick hoop earring, close to the ear lobe, and it came off," she said.

A witness to the incident gave a similar account of the event, adding that Mack took the time to take off his shirt before getting involved in the fight outside of the dining hall.

"You hit me, Monty," the victim told police in the report.

The victim's statement to police quoted Mack as replying, "I know I hit you and I'm going to do it again."

While there were reportedly close to 100 bystanders, including members of the men's basketball team according to one witness, another witnesses report to police said that only one person, basketball player Kitwana Rhymer, made any kind effort to stop Mack.

The victim said she wanted to file for a restraining order against Mack, but was told by police that because the incident was not a domestic dispute it was not possible to obtain the restraining order.

The victim's student judicial advisor said that, in addition to the victim's statement, at least two other people gave witness statements to UMass police yesterday. She said that another two people were planning to make statements as well.

■ campaign

continued from page 1

the churches urged people to get to the polls tomorrow to make their voices heard and surprise those who predict a low turnout.

Later in the day, Harshbarger planned appearances in Springfield with U.S. Sen. John Kerry, in New Bedford with U.S. Rep. Barney Frank, and in Hyannis with U.S. Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

Meanwhile, about 200 Cellucci supporters climbed aboard three buses in downtown Boston for a day-long trip, with stops scheduled in New Bedford, Falmouth and Plymouth before a rally at Quincy City Hall.

Cellucci backers included Republican Treasurer Joe Malone, who whacked away at Cellucci during the primary but promised his support in the general election.

In New Bedford, the bus riders were met by Cellucci and joined by dozens of additional supporters for a rally in which hundreds of red, white and blue Cellucci-Swift signs waved in the air. Cellucci asked voters to elect him to his first full term in office to "build on the remarkable progress" the state made under his leadership and that of popular former Gov. William F. Weld. He touted his experience, saying, "I've managed the state in good times and in bad times. Don't turn the clock back with my opponent."

Cellucci reiterated his support for the death penalty and tests for current teachers, and his pledge not to raise taxes.

Cellucci, whose party is outnumbered 3-to-1 by the Democrats, needs a strong showing among independents, the largest voting group in the state.

He appealed to people at the rallies to go out and call 50 friends to urge them to vote for him.

The buses were met with honks of appreciation as they bowled down the state's highways. At a Sons of Italy post in Falmouth, the crowd turned into a hooting and hollering mass of hundreds who applauded, cheered and chanted "Four More Years."

How are you going to get a job after four years of school?

By writing for Collegian news!
If you want to have fun and talk with government big wigs, movers and shakers, and be on the cutting edge of breaking news events, come down today. To get started come to the Collegian in room 113 of the Campus Center and ask for Jill Carroll, news editor and you will be on your way to success.
Be a news associate and write several articles a week or be Collegian Correspondent and write at your pace and level.

Nicaraguan death toll rises in wake of hurricane

By Filadelfo Aleman
Associated Press

MANAGUA, Nicaragua — Rescue workers recovered bodies yesterday from communities buried when a lake in a volcano crater overflowed and sent tons of mud and rock hurtling down on villages below. The finds boosted the death toll from former Hurricane Mitch to at least 705.

Authorities feared that many more bodies would be found in ten communities at the foot of the Casitas Volcano in northern Nicaragua.

Mitch was one of the most violent hurricanes to hit the Caribbean, causing heavy rains and floods as it cut a fatal path along the coasts of Honduras, Nicaragua and other Central American countries.

The first army rescue helicopters to reach the volcano yesterday found widespread destruction, an army spokesman said. Rescue workers recovered 87 bodies in four villages near Posoltega, about 50 miles northwest of Managua.

A river of mud and rubble collapsed on the villages Friday after a crater lake near the volcano's peak overflowed and caused part of the mountain to crumble, army spokesman Capt. Milton Sandoval said. About 1,800 of the communities' 2,000 residents were listed as missing, Sandoval said.

It was unclear whether the residents of the villages of El Porvenir, Versalles, Rolando Rodriguez and Santa Narcisa had fled in time to avoid the mudslide or were asleep in their homes when it struck.

A woman who claimed to have survived the disaster told Radio Nicaragua yesterday that she had seen "many unburied bodies" in orchards near the volcano.

The survivor, Mercedes Rodriguez Zapata, claimed to have left the area Saturday and traveled on foot and horseback to the capital, Managua.

Unconfirmed radio reports said as many as 4,000 people may have died when mudslides struck in the northwestern province of Chinandega.

The newspaper El Nuevo Diario yesterday called Mitch's death toll "apocalyptic" and said it may be the country's worst natural disaster since a magnitude-6.2 earthquake killed 5,000 people in 1972.

Mia.

ZANNA
downtown Amherst

Home page ▼ http://www.aup.edu/html/summer.html

PARIS'99

Celebrating our 20th anniversary in providing American quality summer education.

SUMMER PROGRAMS
Over 100 courses
French Immersion
Art History
Acting for Film, Filmmaking
Cultural Excursions

THE AMERICAN UNIVERSITY OF PARIS
[illegible] from 2200
[illegible], 75007 Paris, France
Tel: (33/1) 40 [illegible] Fax (33/1) 40 62 07 17
New York office: [illegible] (212) 983-1414
Email: summer@aup.fr

For Fast Easy Delivery Call 256-4110

La Cucina di PINOCCHIO of Amherst 30 Boltwood

#1 Delivery in Town

Monday Night Football is Back!!!
(Monday-Thursday Special)

Get 10 Free Wings With The Purchase Of A Large Cheese Pizza
ONLY $8.00/Tax Included
Any 2 Calzones $8.00/Tax Included

SPICY FRIES NOW AVAILABLE

NEW

KEEP ALL THOSE EXTRA POUNDS AWAY THIS SEMESTER
WITH OUR "NEW MENU ITEMS"
VEGGIE BURGER & SPICY BLACK BEAN BURGER
(ONLY 2 GRAMS OF FAT EACH!)

Must Mention Ad When Ordering
Offer Expires 5/31/99

Delivery Only, Not Valid In Restaurant

Also Available:
Diet Veryfine Juices
Apple-Cran
Pink Lemonade
Kiwi Strawberry

-- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian --

The only choice

Next Tuesday, the voters of Massachusetts will choose who will be governor for the next four years. While many are legitimately dismayed by aspects of this campaign, it's important to focus on the big picture. This election will in many ways determine what kind of UMass, and what kind of state, we will have going into the next millennium. For the following reasons, among many others, Scott Harshbarger deserves our support.

Support for public higher education: In the budget proposals of the Paul Cellucci/Bill Weld administration, UMass has consistently been underfunded by over $300 million in the last three years. They have vetoed millions more in scholarships for Massachusetts residents.

Fortunately, the legislature has added these additional funds to the budget, over the vetoes of the former and acting governors. This year, Cellucci also vetoed funding for asbestos removal and other long-overdue repairs and renovations for campus buildings, despite record state budget surpluses.

"This year Cellucci also vetoed funding for long-overdue repairs and renovations for campus buildings, despite record state budget surpluses."

Tom Coish

He delayed submitting campus union contracts to the legislature until the last minute (raises due last July may not come until January), and reneged completely on the GEO contract settlement by not submitting it at all.

In contrast, Scott Harshbarger supports increased state appropriations for UMass and public higher education, including the "fair share" bill, which would assure the campus of stable, predictable funding over a period of several years, and allow UMass to better plan and prioritize its use of resources.

Harshbarger also supports taking care of greatly needed building and facilities repairs using current surplus revenues, rather than going into debt, at greater cost, to finance them. He supports workers and their unions, and respects and honors commitments to them. For example, his office took over enforcement of wage and hour laws after the Weld/Cellucci administration had virtually stopped enforcing them.

Education in general: Cellucci thinks that we can improve public schools by scapegoating teachers, springing pop tests on them which have nothing to do with teaching or motivating real students in real classrooms. However, in 1995, he was totally at the other extreme, pushing for the elimination of all teacher-certification requirements. Sounds like political opportunism, doesn't it?

Harshbarger supports teacher testing, but only as part of a comprehensive assessment process to improve the performance of teachers and students. He has supported the education reform law all along, which was written and passed by the legislature with his support, while Cellucci tries to take credit for it. Harshbarger also supports worker retraining and adult literacy programs, which were vetoed by Cellucci this year.

The death penalty: Cellucci is bashing Harshbarger because he is opposed to the death penalty. Nevermind that there is no evidence that it deters the rates of murder or violent crime (which are declining anyway), or that it has consistently been applied in a discriminatory manner against defendants who are of color or are poor. No other western democracy has a death penalty in peacetime, and it is opposed here and around the world by such groups as Amnesty International and the Catholic Church as a human rights violation.

Yet Cellucci and his running mate, Jane Swift, both of whom opposed the death penalty until they ran for statewide office, are pandering to feelings of grief and vengeance by pushing hard for it now. Make no mistake about it — if Cellucci wins this election, we will have a death penalty in the next four years; if Harshbarger wins, we won't.

Other social justice issues: Homelessness is growing despite the current economic "boom." More than 700,000 people in the state have no health insurance; thousands more have inadequate coverage, and the numbers have almost doubled under Weld/Cellucci. Thousands of families lack affordable day care and services for children, and inner-city neighborhoods and communities continue to crumble. Harshbarger has ideas, and the will to address these problems; they're not even on Cellucci's radar screen!

Campaign finance reform: Our system of financing election campaigns is really nothing more than legalized bribery and is considered a joke and a disgrace in other democracies.

Cellucci, raising and spending almost twice as much money as Harshbarger, opposes any meaningful campaign finance reform. Harshbarger supports fundamental reform efforts such as Question 2 on this year's ballot, which would establish voluntary spending limits, ban unregulated "soft money" from outside parties and interest groups, and provide for public financing of state election campaigns. This would go a long way toward developing political leadership which works for the public interest, rather than wealthy special interests.

By all accounts, this election is going to be very close, and all of our votes are extremely important. For the future of UMass, and our families and community, Scott Harshbarger is the clear choice!

Tom Coish is president of the professional staff union on campus, Local 509, Service Employees International Union.

I'm fine, how are you?

Some part of me feels like I'm doing you a favor by telling you some of the things that bother me. I'm not naive enough to think you may care about my concerns because they are more important than yours, but rather I am content with the fact that they are, unlike yours, in print and, subsequently, more powerful than everything you've never said. This fact being established, here's what's been on my mind in the last week. Enjoy and discuss.

1) The employees from Parking Services who give out tickets to students like they are candy on Halloween. Granted, their job is dirty work from top to bottom. But have you ever seen their faces as they slide a ticket beneath a wiper or calls for a car to be towed? Satisfaction surges into their countenance, and they light up a butt with a big fat grin on their face. It's nauseating. It's not healthy for someone to gain this much pleasure from causing a student financial and emotional stress. They should be humiliated and treated for the mental condition that drove them to make a living delivering misfortunes.

"I don't think it's good for students at our age to be pampered with politeness."

Matt McLaughlin

2) Kids who let me know how really drunk they are. It makes me lose most of the respect I have for a guy, and it makes a woman all the more unattractive. If you're going to get drunk and do stupid things, go ahead. Just don't expect me to care how much you drank or all the crazy things you did. The further you go into a drunken story the less I'll like you.

3) The traffic light in front of Bart's in downtown Amherst. It's completely unnecessary and is just another speed bump in the center of town. It's a complete hassle to go through the center of town at all times.

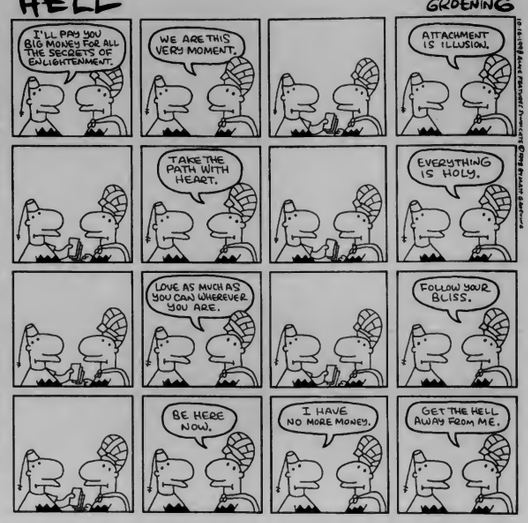
4) The phrase "Thank you much." It just sounds bad. I don't know how long this shallow gratuity has been around, but I just started hearing it this summer. It feels contrived, and, catchy in an insincere way. If a person feels strongly enough to mention it to you, they should go the extra distance and toss in a very.

5) The southern end of the campus pond, the part near the steps of the Fine Arts Center. Anyone who has crossed over the bridge there has undoubtedly been taken aback at the layer of crap and litter that covers that end of an otherwise decent pond. If the sun is really strong one day, and you can see through this disgusting film, I encourage you to take a look and you may notice some fish there, just kind of hovering.

6) Skim milk. If I want water I'll drink water.

7) The employees of Mystery Train Records. They make every customer feel like he just got released from jail for shoplifting. Do me a favor and make their job harder by being shady when shopping there. Conceal a CD and look them in the eyes with a guilty expression. Take CDs over to the vinyl section because that really bothers them. Just give them every inclination that you're going to steal something without actually doing it, unless you have a good feeling you can get away with it.

8) Professors who are nice to students who make unintelligible or effortless comments in class. I don't think it's good for students at our age to be pampered with politeness. I want professors to start tearing into students. The student will get over his hurt feelings when he realizes he was better off for being criticized.

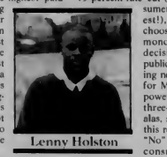


9) My friends — you know who you are — who did significantly less work than I last semester, and still got a better GPA than me. This is a farce. I'm still convinced that my diligent efforts will triumph one day.

10) I'm going big time with this one: The Department of Defense. They are currently developing the latest high-tech weaponry for wars to come. In fact, they are actual terminators. That is, robots designed for combat are being developed over at lovely MIT, funded by you and I, the taxpayers. I find the time, effort, and money this nation spends on improving the efficiency of our killing and destruction a bit disturbing. I'm thinking that perhaps it would be better if time and money were spent on trying to develop the most innovative path to peace. But I guess that's just a silly idea I have.

11) UMass Student Security. I got scolded by another student for entering my dorm through a side door. This kid happened to be a member of the elite UMass Student Security. I don't know who assembled this sad crew or what their purpose is, but every one of them I've encountered has been a socially dysfunctional dork seeking some sense of power that has probably eluded them their whole lives. I'm thinking that these kids are the Resident Assistant rejects. Incidentally, my old roommate, who is now an RA in a dorm I won't name, is stationed inside a side door and writes up kids who pass through. What a terrible waste of time and effort.

And so it goes. Here are some of my other bothers for you to take on the road: clear-cutting forests, Nair, uni-brows, donkeys, old people, El Dorados, and deadlines. Please write to the Collegian for an extensive list with explanations. If they get enough requests, they'll print my manifesto.



Matt McLaughlin is a UMass student.

How to vote

The following column is for the three of you who plan on voting in tomorrow's election. Consider this a public service to help you make informed and intelligent choices. There are four ballot questions and countless candidates and you may not know the dilly. Don't thank me, I do it for the love.

BQ1: This ballot question or BQ (saying "BQ" makes voting sound cool and trendy like saying GH instead of "General Hospital," DMB as opposed to Dave Matthews Band, or BJ instead of... Bo Jackson) deals with setting the salaries of state legislators. Even though these scoundrels are part of the highest-paid legislature in the nation, they love having secret, late night votes to increase their pay. A "yes" vote saves them from accountability, but their pay would adjust every two years in accordance to the state median income. Put simply: with a robust economy, the legislature would receive a well-deserved raise; if the economy goes down like an intern on Bill, then the legislature will be earning as much as Kenny's family on "South Park." (Not really, but remember, I am trying to make voting seem cool and trendy.) Vote "Yes."

Lenny Holston

BQ2: Not only does BQ2 sound like an awesome sequel, it is a trailblazing initiative that may set a trend for the country. Public Campaign Financing has long been a favorite promise of candidates, and here is the chance for voters to make it so. Basically, candidates who voluntarily agree to a set of spending limits would receive matching public funds. This is a step forward for Joe Six Pack (or Joe 40 oz. in my neighborhood). Big money and big spenders would no longer have the upperhand. Arizona also has a similar BQ, and how can you go against the wisdom of a state in which the people routinely vote against a paid day off for Martin Luther King (MLK) day? (Okay, well vote "Yes" anyway.)

BQ3: This one is a tax cut. I like that and most people who do not have "Kennedy" as a last name do also, and should. The Commonwealth has the highest tax rate on interest and dividends in the United States. One million Massachusetts residents will get a break. The present tax rate actually punishes saving money. Since this is the Visa Age, saving should be encouraged.

BQ4: Calvinistic to the extreme is the question of Electric Utility Industry Restructuring which was started last year. With this one, you are damned if you do, damned if you don't. If you believe the hype that the utility companies have spent $2 million lobbying for it, claiming that it will create jobs, it will give us a 15 percent rate cut, and it will let consumers choose. Unfortunately, if you look at the facts, then you will find that it will create jobs (in Mexico), it will give us a 15 percent rate-cut (that is actually a loan which consumers will have to repay with interest!), and consumers will be able to choose. (With the banning of private monopolies, consumers can make a decision between the newly created, publicly subsidized monopolies or having no electricity). There is good news for Mr. Burns, though, since nuclear power plants will remain open (more three-eyed fish for Springfield!). But alas, since the Commonwealth has had this restructuring in place for a year, a "No" vote would be too expensive to consumers. This was by design, of course. After getting Massachusetts addicted, it will be too costly and painful for us to stop now. So vote a reluctant "Yes" for this state's equivalent to crack.

Finally, let us not forget all of the other issues of this election. How can we forget about the local BQ5? Okay, I forgot about it. It seems like a good thing, because I saw some 90-year-old woman on Route 9 with a sign that says to vote yes on it, so I will and so should you. In the governor's race you should vote for Paul Celluci over Scott Harshbarger. Harshbarger is guaranteed to ruin this economy, or your money back — even though you will not have any money left when he turns this state back into Taxachusetts. As for the attorney general's race, Brad Bailey is much tougher on crime than Tom Reilly. Bob Maginn will make a better state treasurer than Shannon "I'm Buying" O'Brien. And for secretary of state, flip a coin because it is a useless office anyway. See you at the polls (yeah, right).

Lenny Holston is a UMass student.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Apathy got you down?
Do something. Write for Ed / Op.
Come down and see Mike Messaros for all your inspiration.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor-in-Chief Position Vacant Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
Steve Salerno Jr. Advertising Manager David Parmenter Advertising Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Laura Forster Developing Nations Editor
Mike Messaros Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Co-Jewish Affairs Editor
Morgan Tobor Co-Jewish Affairs Editor
Heather Lei Guzzetta Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jill Carroll News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylarski Sports Editor
Allana E. Todman Women's Issues Editor
Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

UMass' own: Young, black, and on the rise

By Edgar A. Barros
Collegian Staff

He has deejayed at the Tunnel and Carbon in New York City, Club Metro in Northampton, Razzles in Springfield, Club Kai in Hadley, and the Malcolm X Cultural Center here at the University of Massachusetts.

He is the deejay for Strela Negra (Black Star), a Cape Verdean/hip-hop music group. Their CD, "Dje Dje," has sold more than 10,000 copies in the United States, Cape Verde, Angola, Guinea-Bissau, Mozambique, Portugal and the Netherlands.

He has performed with Strela Negra at Boston College, and will be at the University of Massachusetts in Dartmouth this Friday, Nov. 21, 1998. He and Strela Negra will be here at the UMass, performing at the Cape Verdean Cultural Night. In December, this UMass product will tour with Strela Negra in Portugal, Cape Verde and the Netherlands.

He is also the deejay for the hip-hop group Busted Fro, which is currently working on their first album.

This man was the first place winner of the Iota Phi Theta Music Talent Extravaganza in 1996. He is also a two-time champion of the Phi Beta Sigma DJ Spin-Off, winning in 1997 and 1998.

His organizational affiliates include "Danceyo'assoff productions," and the Black Mass Communication Project (BMCP).

Through these organizations he has worked with music industry heavyweight Chubby Chubb. Involvement with BMCP has brought him exposure to music personalities such as Peter Gunz, Lord Tariq, Kevin Mitchell, KRS-One, De La Soul, The Roots, Boot Camp Click, Redman and Cocoa Brovas.

He is currently a UMass senior working towards his bachelor's of arts in legal studies and sociology.

This man is Walter Gomes, more commonly known as DJ Wal-Gee.

"I started out in late 1994. I came up to visit my man Temistocles 'Blessed' Ferreira, and he happened to have a turntable in his room. He wanted to go out but I didn't. So I stayed and started messing around with the turntable," Wal- Gee said.

After getting an initial exposure to the turntable, Wal-Gee decided he had to have his own.

"I bought my first set from working at Ponderosa as a dishwasher," Wal-Gee said.

It has been all uphill from there.

"My first deejay experience was at a church basement in New Bedford. They wanted to throw a youth party, but didn't have a deejay, so I volunteered," Wal-Gee said.

Born in Angola to Cape Verdean parents, Walter Gomes has never forgotten his roots. At every party or club where DJ Wal-Gee is spinning, the Angolan flag is proudly displayed.

"Whenever you see the Angolan flag, I'm in the house," Wal-Gee said.

With all the success and fame Wal-Gee has gained through his ventures in the northeast, he realizes that he has uncovered only the tip the iceberg.

"I see hip-hop becoming the answer. If it is used right, it could be a powerful weapon in combatting racism."

"Right now I just got my foot in the door. I'm meeting different deejays and I'm learning from more experienced deejays. I have a long way to go before I can be mentioned in the same sentence with deejays like Kid Capri and Chubby Chubb," Wal-Gee said.

Deejaying stardom is not the only goal on Walter Gomes' list of aspirations.

"After I graduate from UMass with my B.A., I want to go to a sound engineering school down South called Full Sail. There I will attain the necessary skills to bring up Strela Negra, Busted Fro, as well as bring my deejaying skills to the next level." Wal-Gee said.

According to Wal-Gee, being a successful deejay requires more than just playing a few records and scratching a few beats.

"You have to be original; your style has to be different," he said. "You have to develop the skills and understand what it means to be a 'turntablist.' A 'turntablist' is a deejay who not only plays records on the turntable, but also uses it to create new music. Examples of this include scratching [and] beat juggling."

Gomes sees himself as a crowd pleaser. He is not simply playing records, but is catering to the needs and wants of his audience.

"I like to entertain the crowd. Any party where I don't accomplish this, I take it back to the lab [his room]. I try to give people what they want," Wal-Gee said.

With the many problems that exist in our society, it is hard for any black person in America to escape the evils of racism. Being a native of Africa, raised in the United States, Wal-Gee sees hip-hop as the potential unifying force for all people.

"I see hip-hop becoming the answer. If it is used right, it could be a powerful weapon in combatting racism. Hip-hop is bringing together Asians, Caucasians, West Indians, Latinos, Africans — basically the whole world together. The lyrics are what does it, they're so powerful," Wal-Gee said.

Wal-Gee is always open to new opportunities and connections.

"Anyone who is interested in a quality, first-class deejay, should call me," Wal-Gee said.

Gomes is adamant will to help the youth is apparent through his conversations. "In order to reach our youths, we have to able to speak the hip-hop language," Gomes said.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Music artist Walter Gomes is the on the rise.

Insurrection:
The conceptualization of ignorance

I'll begin with an excellent quote from one of my favorite figures of black-story. (I refrain from treating our story as his-story). El-Hajj Malik Shabazz, also known as Malcolm X, said, "I am not African-American; I am one of 22 million Africans that are victims of Americanism." The present number is 33.9 million; but the sentiment is still very evident. I have grown increasingly weary and annoyed with the ideology that "America is a collage of various cultures and religions" and, in that, the supposed melting pot theory. Is this the best defense that you, white America, can conjure, when we, members of the African Diaspora, confront you because of your wrongs?

Let us not forget that the term America, derived from the Italian explorer, Amerigo Vespucci, who like the other "explorers" of his time pillaged, massacred, exploited and raped the indigenous peoples of the western hemisphere. Is that something America is to take praise, honor and patronage in? Let us not forget the malicious, inhumane and barbaric manner in which Africans were stripped of their land, dignity and culture. A culture that is based on thousands of years of technological, intellectual, artistic and spiritual significance; that has not been and still is not matched by any peoples since white "explorers" invaded Africa.

"As long as our melanin varies and our ethnicities differ, how are we expected to 'shut up already.'"

Kenny T. Lacoste

I believe that there are always repercussions for the things we do. Just as their will be repercussions for the past 450 years of the black man and woman's strife on this continent and hemisphere. The audacity of such feeble-minded, ignorant and fragile persons to deem slavery, oppression, and legislative discrimination as acts that should be excused and pardoned by black people. Understand this — the only way that we have ever changed our status and dilemma has been by arms or by force. To view our "attempt for equality" as immature, "pre-pubescent" and less accepted is purely ludicrous. From Toussaint L'Ouverture and the Haitian Revolution; to Nat Turner's Rebellion; to the Civil War; to the riots and black nationalism movement of the '60s, people of the African Diaspora are distraught with the notion of just shutting up and turning our backs on our past. Maybe white people can live comfortably with that; we cannot even ponder that possibility. It hurts too much.

The United States Constitution does indeed say that "all men are created equal" under the eyes of God. Thomas Jefferson, George Washington and John Hancock could not have believed this phrase, and in no way did they intend this to apply to black people. I am a member of the African Diaspora, so I was never included in the framework of this "Great Land." All of my ancestors were regarded as brute, cannibalistic savages that were "blessed" with the "luxury" of labor, and they were "taught" to act in a "dignified" manner. If we were all truly created equal, we would not need an Emancipation Proclamation to set us free from slavery; we would not need to utilize amendments to the Constitution (those being the thirteenth, fourteenth, and fifteenth). America is a large, mammoth land of historical hypocrisy. We all know the meaning of the flag, correct? Well, let me verse upon it. "Blue" is for the tears that contributed to the genocide and travels of Africans, and for which they perished. "Red" is for the blood that was shed and spilled by Africans and natives onto the swords of Europeans and on the land for profit of this nation; and "white" still stands for the symbol that continually oppresses and destroys black, Latino, Asian and native peoples economically, academically, intellectually and spiritually.

Of course someone would have to respond to such non- intelligible and irate articles such as those, Must your intellect vacillate between docility and ignorance?

Racism and discrimination are practices that have been originated and mostly practiced by white Americans and Europeans. I cannot be a racist. I cannot intellectually, academically, politically, or socially demean or exterminate a group of individuals because of their race or phenotypic characteristics. This is both foolish and absurd.

In isolating myself, I am removing myself from the feeble thought patterns that coexist in this social phenomena.

By attacking and insulting the programs that enrich, educate and provide a resource for us, you are further shooting yourselves in the proverbial foot and influencing our minds with reasons why we can never move forward as a society.

As long as our melanin varies and our ethnicities differ, how are we expected to "shut up already." It is very malignant the way this society operates in terms of dealing with race in America. And until black America has redeemed her independence and white America has been dealt its repercussions, the conversation will never cease.

Kenny Toussaint Lacoste is a Collegian Staff Member

A West African hidden jewel, Cape Verde finally revealed

This is part one of a two-part series

Cape Verde, or Cabo Verde in Portuguese, is a country consisting of 10 major islands, nine of which are inhabited, off the west coast of Africa. Its capital city is Praia (Pryai), on the island of Santiago. Its nearest coastal country is Senegal.

Cape Verde's history began with the Portuguese, who first came in the early 15th century. Being traders, they bought slaves from Africa, and began to teach them the Portuguese culture and way of life. Jews also came; some exiled from Portugal, and others running from persecution by the Spanish Inquisition, between 1492 and 1496. Later on, Spaniards and French began to inhabit the area.

"People left Cape Verde to better their lives and provide for a better future of their children," Cruz said.

Reggie Price

However, most of what is known as the Cape Verdean culture is a direct result of African and Portuguese influences.

The climate of the Cape Verdean islands is usually between 80 and 90 degrees all year round. There is very little rain, so it is mostly dry heat, with perhaps a little humidity in the summer.

Cape Verdean culture is very diverse. Its main religion is Roman Catholic. The language is Crioulo, (Portuguese Creole) and includes a major dialect called Caboverdian Creole (dialects will differ one island from another). Its music has some differences also. To some, the various styles of music are designed to focus on a particular age group. Most of the traditional music is made up of drums, singing and dancing.

There are several music styles. Batuq' uses African drums; is a call and response type of music; people stand in a circle and follow the leader; some would call it a "hip dance" because of the way the hips are used to dance to the beat of the drums.

M o r n a (mohr-na): African drums (sometimes) and a viola: this music is very sad and is often played during sad times, especially in times of grieving; themes can also focus on life, love, immigration, and advice; this music is often listened to by "older" people, usually over 40.

Coladera: uses African drums; people clap to the rhythms, follow the leader, and at times call out the names of Saints to provide intercessory for those who may be sick, dying, or recently experienced death in the family; it is also a traditional way of story telling.

Pasada: more contemporary and upbeat: this music was started in Angola.

Funana (foo-na-na): contemporary and upbeat sounds.

Traditional Cape Verdean foods are flavorful in taste. They may differ from island to island, but the basics remain the same; almost every meal includes rice and beans. Several traditional dishes include:

Katchupa (kat-chu-pa): a dish made with hominy grits, meat (eg: beef, pork), lima beans, and different vegetables, depending on the island.

Jagacida aka Jag: rice (or flour), beans (kidney, lima, blackeye peas, etc.) and linguisa (meats).

Pastel: dough filled with tuna, then fried.

Pudim de leite (milk cake): — custard or flan.

Traditional drinks include goat milk, water, fruit drink for women, while the men would drink ponchi (punch) or Cape Verdean rum called gro-gio cubo verde, all which are alcoholic in nature.

When asked about their cultural background, UMass students Elizabeth Cruz and Marlene Gomes offered some interesting facts about the Cape Verdean culture.

"The music tastes are different in age groups. Pasada is mostly listened to by teens to upper 20s, while funana is listened to by usually those from 20s to mid 30s," Gomes said.

"The Cape Verdeans were the largest group from African descent to willingly come to America. Most went to live on the coast of Massachusetts, using established African trade routes," Cruz said.

"They settled in New Bedford, Brockton and Cape Cod. Many that settled near Cape Cod worked on the cranberry bogs there. People left Cape Verde to better their lives and provide for a better future of their children," she said.

One of the things Cruz likes about her culture is the diversity. Her culture as a whole has Creole, French and Portuguese elements. When asked what ethnic group most Cape Verdeans identify with, Cruz said:

"It depends on the age bracket. Most of who were under Portugal's authority, until 1975, considered themselves Portuguese. Due to some avid history teaching, many of the younger generation now relate more with those of African descent."

There is much more to the Cape Verdean culture, and we will continue to explore it next week in part two of this column.

Reggie Price is a UMass student.

How do you rock the vote when the same old records are playing?

Once again it's election time, and frankly, I'm pissed.

Ever since I've been a registered voter, (which every black man and woman should be) I've never cast a vote for a candidate that I've backed 100 percent, and it'll be no exception tomorrow.

The race for Massachusetts governor has really been one helluva show, a work of art even Jerry Springer would be proud of. Now, with tomorrow being election day and all, we get to give the highest position in Massachusetts to one of two men who have done nothing but point fingers, scream and make empty promises throughout the entire election process. Of course, this is nothing new to the world of politics, but that's no excuse.

I'm tired of listening to candidates dance around real issues that directly affect me and my community. If you saw or read anything dealing with the Cellucci/Harshbarger debates, you've basically witnessed two "gentlemen" bicker over which one of them is the bigger liar.

Humphrey brown III

Not once has either one of them really gotten down to the meat and potatoes of issues like welfare, education and crime. Instead, they've chosen to insult one another on personal levels, leaving the voter stuck between that old rock and a hard place.

Politics is an ugly game, and it keeps getting uglier every election year. In the end, though, the only ones who really lose are me and you. Politics this ugly make most of us want to turn away and ignore it, but that can't happen. In order for the agenda of the people to ever be adhered to, we have to let those who are running for office know that they need our vote.

What this means is that we have to take a greater interest in what goes on in the political realm of this country. I hear brothas and sistas say over and over that they don't get involved because they don't like politics.

Who does? No one likes politics, but if we don't get involved, we will never get the attention of the ones who are making all the rules. It doesn't take a lot, just keep yourself informed. We'll keep getting candidates like Paul Cellucci and Scott Harshbarger if we don't.

Politics isn't our only avenue for change, it is merely one avenue. We've got to hit 'em from all angles, including the political one. We've got to get candidates who will adhere to our agenda, and will be open to new ideas and policies.

No one wants to rock the vote when the same old records are playin'.

Humphrey brown III is a Collegian staff member.

Black Quote of the Week

"No one rises to low expectations." — Les Brown

"Melrose" and "90210" revamp with success

Jacob Fanning's Soap Chat

Hi soap fans. This week I thought I'd dish our fave daytime counterparts (a.k.a. the prime-time soap), namely "Beverly Hills, 90210," "Melrose Place," and "Party of Five."

Why the exclusion of the teen smash, "Dawson's Creek"? Well, as much as I thoroughly enjoy the show, I'm a little sick of all the press coverage. Every week there's a new cover story concerning the teens of "Dawson's," hence I won't bore you, or myself, by indulging in it.

"Melrose Place:" I used to live and breathe "Melrose" back in the day. My friends and I were even lame enough to throw a little bash every Monday celebrating what had become one of the country's guiltiest pleasures.

Unfortunately, two years ago and following the departure of Marcia Cross (Kimberly) and Laura Leighton (bad girl Sydney), the show became a bit of a mess, and a boring one at that. What was once America's flavor of the month had become one of the country's biggest faux pas (think jelly shoes). The show seemed to have lost its focus, and its ingenuity, even Amanda had lost her verve.

In an attempt to fill the void, the show brought in a few fresh new faces and lost a few of the old, slightly less interesting characters like Billy and Matt. Unfortunately, most of the characters, with the exception of Jack Wagner and the quirky Lisa Rinna, were complete duds and the show continued to languish in a creative nightmare.

Fast-forward to today, last Monday to be exact, when I finally had the resolve to give the show yet another chance. I'm happy to say, I'm hooked. Josie Bissett (Jane) is back. Amanda is happily spouting some of the bitchiest one-liners in the biz, and everyone's bedding everyone else (think sexual musical chairs).

The show has racked up quite a cast of hotties to boot (Kyle's brother and Jamie Lunar). I'd be hard pressed to find a weak link in the entire cast. The show has also given Amanda a worthy arch-rival in Lexie, played by the enchanting Lunar, who, according to the show's producers, is supposed to dethrone Amanda as "MP's" most heartless.

Last but not least, the show currently sports two "GH" alumni, Jack Wagner and Rena Sofer (ex-Lois), who are currently an item. On the show that is. What I'm trying to get at here is — the "MP" we clamored for in the past is back. Check it out.

Tonight's episode: Things heat up when a blackout strikes Melrose. Look for hormones to run amuck. The previews look absolutely yummy.

"90210:" I was never a huge fan of the post-Brenda "90210," but given the fact that my darling Vanessa Marcil (Brenda, "General Hospital") was slated to make her debut in a few weeks, I thought I'd give it a shot. Surprise, surprise, I loved it. The show has really grown up since I last saw it, even though the cast hasn't (Brandon still looks like he's 14).

It's no longer about a bunch of bratty kids crying over spilled milk (drama queens, every last one of them). It was good to see that, despite her pledge to become a "better" person, Valerie hasn't lost her edge. It's a shame that she's leaving because, in my opinion, she's one of the semi-old school members who don't annoy me.

I can't stand Steve; they've exhausted his character's potential. Donna is slightly growing on me; ditto with David. I like Noah (don't ask me why) and I adore Sophie (Laura Leighton), who's playing both Steve and David like a fiddle. You can bet there will be some trouble there.

I'm sure things are bound to get even juicier come this month when Dylan (Luke Perry) makes his return and Vanessa makes her debut as Gina, a figure skater with a major chip on her shoulder. It's more than likely she'll fill the "bitch" quota when Valerie splits town.

"All My Children" fans might be interested to know that Daniel Cosgrove (a.k.a. Scott Chandler) has also snagged a role on the soap. It looks like his character and Kelly might get it on. All in all, the show is surprisingly good. It seems to have finally found that right balance between adult themes and youthful appeal. No longer does the show focus on petty problems (like what Donna's going to wear to the prom). They're actually facing some pretty hefty things (Valerie's AIDS scare, alcoholism) and that's what makes for interesting drama.

This Wednesday: Tune in to see Jason Priestly's final farewell. I'm sure there will be lots of touching flashbacks (ones that make me feel old while watching) as well as a few tearful goodbyes. I know I'm going to start bawling my eyes out when he and Kelly part company. If you've ever been a "90210" fan, this is the one to watch.

"Party of Five": What can I say? I love the show. It's probably one of my all-time fave shows. Sure, it's depressing (just call me a glutton for punishment) but well worth a few tears. Did you guys catch last week's episode?

Weren't Charlie and the mother-to-be just too cute for words? And Julia...tsk, tsk. Skankin' her roommate's man. Can you blame her, though? Hello hottie! I'm keeping my mouth shut about this because I've been on both sides of the coin and I know that no matter what I say my friends will call me on it...

I have only one question — what happened to Owen? I miss one week and the little guy's aged about four years. Must be a case of SORAS (Soap Opera Rapid Aging Syndrome). And who says "Party" isn't a soap?

This Wednesday: Complications with the baby arise, and Charlie has to choose between saving his baby or his girl (or whatever she is). Did you really expect a fairy tale ending? Happiness is a rare commodity among the Salinger clan.

Back to daytime — here's what to expect from this week's soaps:

"Another World:" Jake and Vicky have it out about Marley.

"As the World Turns:" The town is shocked by Emily's next and very public move against Margo.

"Days of Our Lives:" Bo comforts Billie, and cues Georgia's death.

"General Hospital:" Luke returns to Port Charles but doesn't like what he sees.

"One Life to Live:" Cassie exacts revenge against Barbara.

"Port Charles:" Kevin confronts the killer via a phone call.

"Sunset Beach:" Ben tries to jog Maria's identity.

Jacob Fanning is a Collegian columnist. Questions or comments about this column can be emailed to jfanning@student.umass.edu.

Moon Pix has moody Power

COURTESY STEPHANO GIOVANNI

Chan Marshall, a.k.a. Cat Power, mixes genres and transcends categorization on her new release, Moon Pix.

By Rob Roensch
Collegian Staff

MOON PIX
Cat Power
Matador Records

There are two kinds of music. The first is music you pay, music you buy or hear on the radio — music you can turn on and off. Then there is the music that plays your movie, that wakes you up in the morning and cradles you to sleep at night. Cat Power is the latter.

Cat Power is the stage name of Georgia native Chan Marshall. Her spare, shuffling drunken guitar and drum sound is usually classified under indie-rock, but she owes just as much to mournful music and the blues as she does to Sonic Youth. She's more than another "next big pop thing" much more than another preteen-pleasing indie ling. Marshall is the latest in a fine old American tradition, using her music to express pain, to release pain, and to share that release and flight with the audience.

Cat Power like much contemporary popular music, is a mixture of styles, a blend of blues, urban noise and sad indie-pop. Unlike, say, Beck, the combinations don't seem awkward or forced. She doesn't pick and choose styles, samples and lards instrument; it's almost like the style chooses her. Cat Power's music is emotional, not intellectual. Like all true blues, it bypasses your eardrums and goes right into your blood.

For her latest, Moon Pix, she dropped her New York noise rock sensibilities and recorded instead with two-thirds of the passionate Australian rock combo Dirty Three. Consequently, Moon Pix is much more focused than either 1998's raw Myra Lee or the shimmery poppy What Would the Community Think. Moon Pix is her finest, most mature work to date.

Picking out highlights on an album this strong is like fishing at the aquarium. The album as a whole is packed with perfect moments: miniature crystalline gems of sense and feeling in the form of a phrase or two, was a blood falls apart. There is so much here she gets it so right.

The three in "He Turns Down" soars and chirps like a wounded bird. A twisted piece of "Amazing Grace" shows up in "Metal Heart." Injury breaks in as spectacle and distant. Picking Sand" and "Back of Your Head" are stripped down to a riff and a voice. Quiet and empty spaces become part of the song.

The album's most gentle and most sad track, "The Colors and the Kids," is little more than a simple, repeated piano figure and Chan's watery voice. The song begins with "Must be the colors and the kids / that keep me alive / because the music / is boring me to death," and then somehow glides into such improbably affecting lines as "When we were teenagers / we wanted to be the sky" and "yellow hair / you are a funny bear."

The plainly sentimental lyrics and patent lowliness of the song slowly but surely overwhelm the opening statement of emotional deadness.

Cat Power's music is not hip or radio friendly. It can be hard to listen to, mostly because it is music that begins with difficulty and darkness. The common misconception of blues music or sad music in general, is that it tries to trap you forever in a world of depression and loss. Far from it. Music like this, that exchanges pain for song, is a ladder of light up out of the darkness. Cat Power does not merely lament a life gone wrong, she tries to save it. A 4 out of 5 kids prefer Arts & Living to Spnach. Write for Arts and become a folk hero to millions of toddlers and preschoolers.

Even the Odds.

Theirs and Yours.

Join AmeriCorps, the domestic Peace Corps. By tutoring kids, restoring streams and parks, building playgrounds, helping communities hit by disasters, serving in a health clinic, or meeting other important needs, you'll help others succeed

When you join AmeriCorps for one year, you get:
- Skills for your future
- Almost $5,000 for education
- A living allowance and health care
- Deferment of qualified student loans
- An experience you'll never forget

AmeriCorps @ UMASS Amherst
Thursday, November 5th
Info. table 10–3pm Campus Center Concourse
Info. session 4:40pm Rm. 804 Campus Center
Friday, November 6th
Info. table 10–3pm Campus Center Concourse
For more information: 413-493-5229

http://www.cns.gov

AmeriCorps. Getting Things Done.

BEEN THERE, DONE THAT? Take Credit!

Earn college credit for what you already know! The College-Level Examination Program (CLEP®) lets you earn between 3 and 6 college credits for each satisfactory test score. Study and review can help you prepare. Then show what you know at $44 per exam. Do the math. You'll come out ahead at both graduation and the bank.

To find out about your college's CLEP policy, contact your admission officer.

To register for a CLEP exam, contact your campus testing center. To learn more about CLEP, visit us on-line at www.collegeboard.org

clep

Building confidence. Building careers.

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE
- DISCOUNT OIL -
NORTHAMPTON / HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888
• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

CASTAWAY LOUNGE
Rts. 5 & 10 Whately, MA 413-665-8733
1997 1998
Adult Entertainment proudly presents:
EVERY MONDAY NIGHT IS FOOTBALL NIGHT
FREE FOOD, PRIZE GIVEAWAYS!!!
5 Beautiful Exotic Dancers 5pm-1am
all other days entertainment 1pm-1am
$$$ BEAUTIFUL GIRLS, need money? $$$
No experience? No transportation? We will provide everything!
Call (413) 665-8733 - Ask for Jim
Coming AMATEUR NIGHT
Ladies must apply in person
Our beautiful VIP room is available for private parties
North of 91: Exit 22, take Rts. 5 & 10 north 2 miles
South of 91: Exit 24, take Rts. 5 & 10 south 2 miles

Big Y WORLD CLASS MARKET
175 University Drive

LOOK HERE FOR EVERYTHING YOU NEED!

12 oz NEWMAN'S Fig Newmans 2FOR$5

Glaceau Mineral Water 1 Liter, 33.8 oz 129

Mad River Green, Red or Oolong Tea 17.6 oz 79¢

Breyers Yogurt 8 oz, All Varieties Regular or Light 5for$2 ON UP TO 25

WORLD CLASS SALAD BAR Fresh to Go! 249¢

MADE FROM SCRATCH AUTHENTIC WORLD CLASS BAGELS 3 FOR 99¢ 15 VARIETIES ON UP TO 5

IN OUR PRODUCE DEPT. 10 OZ PACKAGE, 4 VARIETIES TO CHOOSE FROM DOLE COMPLETE CAESAR SALAD MIXES BUY 1 • GET 1 FREE

WE'VE GOT PHONE CARDS!

PRICES EFFECTIVE NOV. 2 THROUGH NOV. 8, 1998 IN OUR AMHERST AND NORTHAMPTON STORES ONLY

PART TIME HELP WANTED
COME JOIN Big Y
COMPETITIVE WAGES
EXCELLENT TRAINING
FLEXIBLE SCHEDULES
Apply in person at the Customer Service Desk at any Big Y Store.
As a family of quality minded people, we are a committed equal opportunity employer.

Weighty issues from Hollywood

By Lynn Elber
Associated Press

Calista Flockhart is just fine, insist the folks at Fox TV. She's absolutely fit and healthy, says her publicist; which is certainly good to hear about the lovely "Ally McBeal" star whose whisper-thin figure has prompted cries of concern and just plain prying about her eating habits. Quite a few of the rest of us, unfortunately, are in rotten shape.

It's not just that we're chubby, although we are. More Americans are overweight now than at any other time in our history, with up to one-third fitting in the obesity bracket that indicates an increased health risk.

But it's more than that. Some of us are hurting emotionally, too: the result of a psychological battering about how fashionably thin we ought to be in a land of plenty. More children, teen-agers and even adults are suffering from serious eating disorders, while many other people simply drive themselves to distraction trying this weight-loss diet or that new drug.

"I believe we live in a toxic environment with respect to both food and body image," said Kelly Brownell, a Yale University professor of psychology and public health. "On the food side, we're exposed to unprecedented levels of high-fat, high-calorie foods, highly available at low costs. Because of that, and declining physical activity, the population gets fatter.

"The pressure on people to have a thin body in the face of a tidal wave of inducements is what creates this paradox."

Certainly, the flood of television, movie and magazine images of sexy thinness seems inescapable — both for consumers and those featured in the media.

"I entered a field that is weight-obsessed," said Camryn Manheim, who co-stars on ABC-TV's "The Practice." Her Emmy acceptance speech in September for supporting actress included the war cry, "This is for all the fat girls!" And she has an upcoming book called, "Wake Up, I'm Fat."

"If an alien came down and their only experience of our culture was watching television, they would never get a sense that we had fat people in the world," Manheim said.

Slimness, of course, has always been at a premium in Hollywood. But the quest for it seems to have accelerated recently into what one industry member called a "high-school competition" among actresses to flaunt the smallest dress size.

Courteney Cox and Jennifer Aniston of "Friends," Lara Flynn Boyle of "The Practice," Helen Hunt of "Mad About You" and talk show host Kathie Lee Gifford are among the TV stars who were wisps to start with or are shrinking before our eyes.

A costume designer for one new drama said the lead is a dream to dress: She wears a size zero.

The star of another series smokes to keep herself from gobbling doughnuts off the set's omnipresent snack table. Weight control is a major reason cigarettes are seen hanging off so many actresses' lips.

But where is the pressure coming from to turn them into weightless wonders?

Veteran casting director Junie Lowry Johnson ("NYPD Blue," "Star Trek") insists there is no emphasis on "rail-thin" looks by studios or producers. But if actresses are lowering the bar themselves, she understands why.

"There is tremendous competition [for work] and all these girls want to look good. They want everything in their packet that they can have. It's so hard to get a part," said Johnson.

Even if these women win roles, however, they may end up being penalized by observers and viewers who claim they are too scrawny for their own good, or ours. Skeletons aren't sexy, we complain. Antisocial X-rays, we grumble, setting unreal istic standards for the rest of us.

Emme, who has gained success as a larger-size model (her latest coup is a contract to join Cindy Crawford and Halle Berry as a Revlon "face") thinks that actresses like Flockhart are victims of changing attitudes.

"There's been such a pressure in the past to stay thin, thin, thin... but now there's a little bit more of an open-mindedness," she said, pointing to Manheim's achievements and her own busy schedule that includes an E! Entertainment Television series.

And there's a backlash: "The finger is pointed to the women that they've been telling to keep so thin; it's, 'Hey, what's wrong with you?'" Emme said.

"It's a very sad thing to see that women, once again, are having to jump through hoops."

So are consumers, especially when it comes to television.

The medium, of course, is far from alone in featuring the extremely thin. Movie actress Gwyneth Paltrow, repeatedly acclaimed for her elegant air, isn't a whipping-post thinner than any TV star.

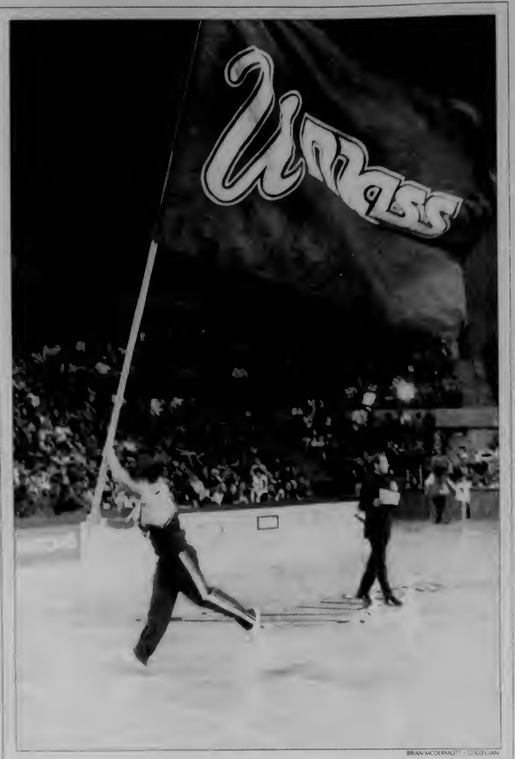
Fashion models like Kate Moss and Shalom Harlow barely tip the scales.

But television is the master of mixed messages. Ads for Big Macs or M&Ms don't fill the fashion pages of Vogue or Elle; the magazines present a seamless — if unattainable — fantasy in which images of lean models are separated by entreaties to buy perfume, cosmetics and clothes.

Television repeatedly interrupts its sleekly populated shows to bring these important words from our sponsor: Eat something.

Grab a fast-food burger. Pop up some popcorn. Microwave a pizza snack. And, hey, have a couple of beers with that while you're at it.

"Food brings us together" is the tag line of a new, warm-and-fuzzy campaign from Kraft. In one spot, we see a mother sharing good times with her children over a variety of the company's products.



The apparent message: Your kids may not talk to you but at least you can be Velveeta buddies.

All of it is just business, of course, a way to make a sale. But the result is like demoralizing carnival mirror in which the fun-house mirror taunts us with thin images while we shove corn dogs and candy down our throats.

And we're supposed to buy into it. The most significant numbers in America's weight war aren't on the scale. They make up the bottom line.

Gwyneth Paltrow is just one of the many Hollywood actresses who set the size standard.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Charge!

Basketball season begins this Thursday for UMass as the Converse All-Stars come to the Mullins Center to take on the Minutemen.

Drinkers turn to hard cider

By Sharon L. Lynch
Associated Press

BOSTON — It's not bad for something that tastes like a cross between apple juice and flat beer.

Hard cider has had fans since at least 1165, when English monks brewed it by pressing apples and fermenting the juice until the sugar turns to alcohol.

Today, as micro-breweries that boomed earlier in the decade look for ways to expand profits, some are banking on hard cider as the small-batch brew of the future. And bars across the country are making room for it on tap.

It's for the yuppie crowd tired of Chablis and micro-brewed beer, too sophisticated for wine coolers and not tough enough for bourbon.

Retailers think it's neat to have something unique, says Jim Koch, founder of The Boston Beer Company, maker of Samuel Adams Boston Lager and the largest of the "craft brewers" in the United States.

(Technically, micro-breweries make fewer than 15,000 barrels of beer a year. Since almost no companies are still that small, "craft brewer" is the term used to describe what most Americans think of when they think "micro-brew.")

Koch said he got interested in making hard cider a few years ago, in part because of its long history in America. The Pilgrims brought it over on the Mayflower, and by the mid 1800s it was [illegible] popular beverage.

But it died out [illegible] Prohibition, leaving its research he relied on [illegible] Stanley Burroughs' "Making Hard Cider." Burroughs helped keep the cider tradition alive by [illegible] it to their hook. "Maine Farm

"Making cider is [illegible] Joseph wrote. "Has home grown fruit, smiling brown special sparkle to make a happy occasion."

His account came complete with [illegible] pages of how-to brew info and photographs of [illegible] pigs nuzzling through the apple mash [illegible] pressing out the juice.

But Koch needed [illegible] information if he was going to mass market [illegible] a period English cider brewer to help him [illegible] Original Hard Cider, unveiled last year.

"The entire cider [illegible] United States is teeny," Koch said. "Hard cider [illegible] part of our business but it's a fun part.

Boston Beer has [illegible] cranberry and raspberry cider versions.

Others are emerging [illegible] Massachusetts Draft Cider out of Cavendish, Vt. [illegible] Berkshire Cider Company and Hornsby's [illegible] Cider, made by Ernest and Julia Gallo in Modesto, Calif.

Jets and Vikes win

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — If you're not in first place in the AFC East, you're Indianapolis.

John Hall kicked a 32-yard field goal as time expired and the New York Jets (5-3), who started the season 0-2, beat the fading Kansas City Chiefs 20-17 yesterday for their fifth win in six starts. The Jets shouldered their way into a four-way tie atop their division.

It was the third straight loss for the Chiefs (4-4), all since quarterback Elvis Grbac returned from a shoulder injury.

After Louie Aguiar's 25-yard punt, the Jets took over on the Kansas City 45 with 1:50 left. Vinny Testaverde led the Jets to the 19 and called time with :02 remaining. The Chiefs were penalized for encroachment, moving Hall five yards closer, and his kick was perfect.

For a brief moment with less than 7:30 left in the game, the Chiefs thought they'd taken a 16-10 lead. Pete Stoyanovich faked what would have been a 47-yard field goal and punted, and Kansas City's Ty Parten hatted the ball back from the edge of the goal line. New York's Corwin Brown tried to pick it up and failed, then holder-punter Aguiar scooped up the ball and stepped into the end zone.

One official signaled touchdown, but then officials huddled and said the kicking team cannot take possession after touching the ball unless the receiving team had actually taken possession and then fumbled.

The teams exchanged touchdowns 50 seconds apart earlier in the fourth as a cold, steady rain pelted the turf.

Testaverde, who had thrown 141 passes without an interception, threw the ball straight into the arms of linebacker Anthony Davis, who returned it 27 yards to the 8. Donnell Bennett's 1-yard dive gave Kansas City a 17-10 lead.

Then Aaron Glenn returned the kickoff 62 yards and set up Testaverde's 20-yard touchdown strike to Kyle Brady that knotted the score with 12:53 left.

The Chiefs, playing in a steady rain for the third time in their last four home games, took a 7-0 lead on their second possession. Elvis Grbac hit Derrick Alexander for gains of 34 and 22 yards and set up Tony Richardson's 2-yard run.

Testaverde hit Wayne Chrebet over the middle with a short pass early in the second quarter and he turned it into a 56-yard gain to the 14. But the Jets had to settle for Hall's 20-yard field goal after wasting a first- and-goal from the 2.

Hall was wide left on a 31-yard attempt late in the second period. But two plays later, Grbac threw behind Andre Rison and right to Dwayne Gordon, who broke one tackle en route to a 31-yard touchdown return that put the Jets on top 10-7.

Stoyanovich made it 10-10 with a 42-yarder in the third period.

Vikings fall for first time this year

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — So much for Tampa Bay's shaky offense being a liability against the explosive Minnesota Vikings. When the Buccaneers are at home, they're on solid ground.

Moving the ball and scoring almost at will, the Bucs broke out of an offensive funk with a team-record 246 yards rushing Sunday and beat the NFC's last unbeaten team 27-24 on Mike Alstott's 6-yard touchdown run with 5:48 to go.

Alstott ran for a career-high 128 yards on 19 carries and Warrick Dunn gained 115 on 18 attempts, giving Tampa Bay (4-4) a pair of 100-yard runners in a game for the first time in franchise history.

"I couldn't feel any better than I feel right now," Alstott said. "We knew what we could do. It was frustrating those first seven weeks, because we kept hurting ourselves through penalties and missed opportunities.

Shear Bliss
HOLISTIC DAY SPA
479 West st. Amherst
• organic colors & perms
• body waxing & sugaring
• facials, pedi, & manicures
$5.00 off w/ Ad!
253-2322

安城中國飯店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
we do not use "MSG"
253-7835 or 253-2813
63 Main Street, Amherst

amc
Hampshire 6 - 584-7550
Hampshire Mall
Mt. Farms 4 - 584-9153
Mt. Farms Mall
WHAT DREAMS MAY COME (PG-13) Today at (5:30 @ 52.50)
SOLDIER (R) Today at (5:30 @ 52.50) 8:30
PRACTICAL MAGIC (PG-13) Today at (5:40 @ 52.50) 8:10
Beloved (R) Today at (4:00 @ 52.50) 7:30
Urban Legend (R) Today at 8:20
RUSH HOUR (PG-13) Today at (5:00 @ 52.50) 8:30
John Carpenter's VAMPIRES (R) Today at (5:40 @ 52.50) 8:20
APT Pupil (R) Today at (5:20 @ 52.50) 8:10
Pleasantville (PG-13) Today at (5:20 @ 52.50) 8:00
ANTZ (PG) Today at (4:00 @ 52.50) 6:40
Bride of Chucky (R) Today at (5:30 @ 52.50) 8:30
* Special Engagement, no Passes or Coupons
$2.50 (Twi-Lite) Show Daily

CALL THE REST THEN CALL THE BEST!
USA SPRING BREAK
CANCUN
BAHAMAS
JAMAICA
FLORIDA
CALL FOR OUR BEST PRICE GUARANTEE!
JOIN US FOR THE WILDEST PARTIES ON THE PLANET!
EAT & DRINK FOR FREE!*
ROUNDTRIP AIR* 7 NIGHTS HOTEL
ROUNDTRIP TRANSFERS* PORTE TAXES
BMP ASSISTANCE USA PARTY PACKAGE
*Certain packages only. *Call to verify.
1-888-SPRING-BREAK
www.usaspringbreak.com

The Shining Strength in Your Future
THERE'S ONE COMPANY that stands out for its independence, its strength, and its stability. Liberty Mutual Group. We recruit, train and develop our people to excel in our $45 billion Fortune 150 company.
If you are a UMass-Amherst student who is driven to succeed and wants a career with an organization where you can grow and learn, your future is with Liberty. As the sixth largest property and casualty insurer in the nation, we have several opportunities through out our corporation for individuals who want to take part in our dynamic growth. Secure yourself a brilliant future: look into career opportunities with Liberty Mutual Group.
INFORMATION SESSION
Come meet Neal Colman, VP and Regional Underwriter
Tuesday, November 3, 5:30pm - 7:30pm
Campus Center, Room 165-9
We currently have opportunities available in the following areas:
Corporate Finance
Claims
Information Systems
We offer our employees advancement opportunities, flexible time off, tuition reimbursement, medical and dental coverage, 401(k) and retirement benefits. If you are unable to attend the Information Session, please forward your resume to: Liberty Mutual Group, Attn: Amy Elm, Human Resources, 175 Berkeley Street, Boston, MA 02117. Fax: (617) 574-5616.
Liberty Mutual is an equal opportunity employer committed to workforce diversity.
LIBERTY MUTUAL
The Freedom of Liberty
www.libertymutual.com

UMass splits pair of A–10 tilts

By Paul Teves
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's volleyball team took to the road this weekend much happier then it had left for previous road trips. The reason was because the team was coming off two 3-1 victories over La Salle and Temple.

The news in that was the fact that the Minutewomen had beaten conference leader Temple.

UMass had to refocus after celebrating their recent success on the task at hand, and that was playing Duquense on Friday in Pittsburgh, and then heading to Virginia Tech on Saturday.

"You never know how your going to do coming off a big win like that till you get to play again," UMass coach Bonnie Kenny said.

The Minutewomen responded pretty well on Friday night, as they turned aside the effort that Duquense put fourth. The Minutewomen easily mopped up the Dukes, by handing them a 3-0 loss.

"We played really well. We just had a couple of bad spurts where Duquense was able to run off five or six straight points but we had built a big enough of a lead that we were able to hold them off," Kenny said. "Duquense was a good team, they just lack some confidence and an athletic setter. We were able to jump on them early and we also defended well, and served really well."

The key players for UMass in their 15–5, 15–11, 15–10 win over Duquense, included Jill Meyers, who tallied 12 kills, and Atlantic 10 volleyball player of the week Kari Hogancamp, who recorded her 12th straight double-double with 16 kills and 12 digs.

UMass received other contributions from Janeen DeMarte who had six kills, 12 digs and four service aces. Heather Holtsberg recorded her third double-double of the season, tallying 33 assists and 10 digs. Lymarie Llovet also played well for UMass as she recorded seven kills, four digs and four assists.

"I thought Lymarie had a solid match against Duquense, which really helped us out a lot," Kenny said.

After defeating the Dukes, the Minutewomen were scheduled to go play at Virginia Tech, which coach Kenny said was a difficult place to play. On this particular Halloween night it would be even more difficult.

The Minutewomen's travel plans changed and were rerouted once and put on two different buses, before having to take the court 30 minutes later.

Despite all this, the Minutewomen had to face a hostile crowd at Virginia Tech, but the Minutewomen came out and took it to the Hokies early winning game one 15–10.

"We won the first game because we played great defense. Our offense wasn't quite their but we were able to fend them off by touching balls at the net and getting digs," Kenny said.

In the second game, UMass failed to maintain the intensity it came out with in the first match. The Minutewomen struggled with the same skills they had taken to the Hokies in game one.

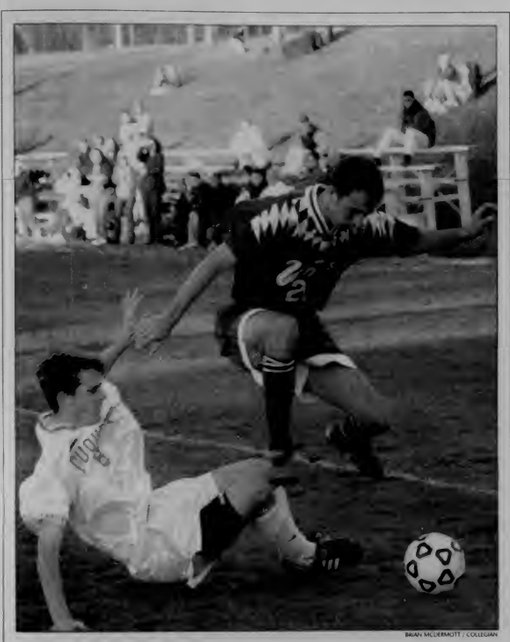
"We forgot how to pass in both games two and four. We missed assignments, and offensively we hit the ball herendously," Kenny said.

The real Minutewomen returned for game three. They stayed with Virginia Tech again, and tied the game at 12–12, but failed to finish it, and the Hokies scored three quick points and took the lead two game to one with a 15–12 win in game three.

"We fought our way back after a bad game two, and kept it close in game three, but Virginia Tech was able to get the last three points in that game," Kenny said.

In the fourth game the Minutewomen returned to their game two form and dropped the match losing game four, 15–4.

"Virginia Tech played really well. They never let up, that in combination with the fact that we didn't pass well hurt us," Kenny said. "Overall, I feel that our block was okay this weekend, but the offense was non-exsistant in the Virginia Tech game."



The long awaited response to the Temple win was a split in two A–10 games. They beat Duquense a team they had beaten before, but once again struggled with Virginia Tech.

The Minutewomen next take to the court this weekend against Fordham and George Washington at Curry Hicks Cage. These two teams are must wins in order for UMass to strengthen their post season hopes.

LAUREN KOVARY / COLLEGIAN

Heather Holtsberg and the volleyball team split a pair of A–10 matches, beating Duquesne, but falling to the Hokies.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

All's well that ends well

The Massachusetts men's soccer team finally got back on track just as their season was ending. Read tomorrow's Collegian for the wrap-up of this weekend's success.

Packers back in rhythm against S.F.

By Arnie Stapleton
Associated Press

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Brett Favre and Antonio Freeman overshadowed the top scoring duo in NFL history and saved the Green Bay Packers' season yesterday.

The two connected for touchdown pass plays of 80 and 62 yards as the blitz-happy Packers beat the San Francisco 49ers 36-22 at frenzied Lambeau Field.

The Packers' nine sacks of Steve Young were the team's most since Oct. 24, 1965, against Dallas.

Freeman caught seven passes for a career-best 193 yards as the Packers and 49ers both went home 6-2, one game behind Minnesota for the NFC's best mark.

Young set two more NFL records: most TD runs by a quarterback and most TD tosses to one receiver — Jerry Rice. But in the end, Young was battered and beaten — and winless in eight career starts against his No. 1 nemesis, the Packers.

After blowing a 16-0 lead, Green Bay regrouped in the second half by blitzing Young and returning to the quick-strike offense that sent them to the last two Super Bowls.

With the score tied at 22, Favre hit Freeman for a 62-yard TD toss with 11 minutes left in the game. Freeman beat Marquez Pope and Merton Hanks, the same two he burned on the first play from scrimmage for an 80-yard score.

Reggie White had three sacks, giving him 11 for the season, the 12th time he's reached double digits. Five of Green Bay's sacks came in the first six minutes of the fourth quarter after Favre's three-interception performance was threatening to send them to 5-3 with a three-game road trip coming up.

Sack No. 7 resulted in a fumble at the San Francisco 11 that Santana Dotson recovered for Green Bay. Travis Jervey rumbled in from there for his first NFL touchdown, bouncing off R.W. McQuarters at the 5 and plowing into the end zone for a 36-22 lead with 9:30 left.

The 49ers, who lost to the Packers in the NFC championship last season, extended their losing skid to Green Bay to five, including playoff losses the last three seasons.

San Francisco overcame an early 16-0 hole and trailed 19-13 at halftime after linebacker Lee Woodall intercepted Favre in the end zone with 28 seconds left, beginning a string in which three of six passes would be picked off.

Safety Zach Bronson's interception on Green Bay's first possession of the second half set up Garrison Hearst's 30-yard TD romp that tied it at 19.

■ hockey

continued from page 12

Dzieduszycki, Jason Krog and Chad Onufrechuk, while creating some good offensive chances of their own.

Going into the first intermission the Minutemen found themselves within striking distance of the nationally ranked Wildcats, who were upset by UMass towards the end of last season before going to the final four and losing to the eventual National Champion Michigan.

In the second period UMass came out with the same intensity they displayed in the first and finally struck gold 5:51 into the period as freshman forward, Jedd Crumb, playing in only his second collegiate game found the back of the net tying the game at one. Jeff Blanchard and freshman Darcy King assisted on the goal which resulted from some pretty passing and a hard fought assist from Blanchard who was being harassed by a UNH defenseman. Blanchard able to poke the puck out to Crumb, who was waiting at the top corner of the goal crease.

The game remained deadlocked at one for the next 10:24 until Jayme Filipowicz scored on the powerplay to put the Wildcats ahead for good.

UMass had found themselves down by one before and came back to tie the game at one earlier in the period, so there was still hope. Whatever hope there was on the Minutemen bench and in the stands was about to dissappear in a hurry because Jason Krog was sitting in the penalty box waiting to give the young UMass defense a free All- American clinic in offense.

Krog, who was serving an off-setting highsticking minor, while his teammate Christian Bragnalo sat next to him for a holding penalty, must have had enough of the smothering UMass defense, because as the off-setting penalties ended and UMass went on the power-play via Bragnalo's minor, Krog came out of the box with a vengence. Right as the senior UNH forward stepped back onto the ice, he caught a lead past from defenseman Steve O'Brien and caught the Minutemen defense napping, breaking in one on one and faking out goalie Markus Helanen, and backhands a shot in.

UMass now found themselves down 3-1, but the nail was still only half-way in the coffin. There was still 1:12 left and Krog took the courtesy of letting the Minutemen know that his "clinic" was still in session. With 31 seconds left, he hammered the nail deep into the hearts of UMass and the bedazzled crowd, giving the Wildcats a 4-1 lead which would eventually be the final.

Redskins get first win in eighth week

By Joseph White
Associated Press

LANDOVER, Md. — The Washington Redskins were 0-7, and the bye week had been a disaster. Seemingly buried under adversity, they rose behind a young group of unlikely heroes and wiped away some of the humiliation.

Against a flat offense and an erratic quarterback, the Redskins forced the New York Giants to punt on 11 of 13 possessions. Trent Green, Stephen Davis and Skip Hicks — all inexperienced backups on offense at the start of the season — did the rest in Washington's 21-14 victory on yesterday.

"When you're 0-7, what else can go wrong?" free safety Stanley Richard said. "So, just go out there and start having fun. And that was the attitude today. We know we can win. Let's just keep rolling."

The Redskins (1-7) won without 1997 defensive player of the year Dana Stubblefield, Marc Boutte and Stephen Alexander — all injured during the two-week break since the last game. Gus Frerotte and Michael Westbrook were benched — Frerotte because he was struggling and Westbrook because he missed a practice — with both expressing their displeasure with coach Norv Turner. In addition, Terry Allen reaggravated a strained calf muscle in the first half.

Nevertheless, the Skins won — even if the locker room celebration was somewhat muted.

"It's a start," receiver Leslie Shepherd said. "We said when we came up at the end of the game, there's no need to go out and celebrate like we've won the Super Bowl. But when you're 0-7, the emotions are going to take over because it just feels good to win — for a change."

Bledsoe victimizes Colts' Burris

By Steve Herman
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — New England made the Indianapolis Colts pay dearly for cornerback Jeff Burris' mistakes.

Burris was called for pass interference three times yesterday. The first two set up touchdowns by the Patriots, and the third was declined when the pass from Drew Bledsoe went for a 63-yard touchdown to rookie Tony Simmons in a 21-16 victory.

"Tony stepped up and had a great game for us," Bledsoe said of the second-round draft pick out of Wisconsin. "He has the speed and can run with the best of them."

New England (5-3) needed only one play after an Indianapolis punt early in the fourth quarter to clinch it. Burris tried to break up the long pass, but Simmons held on, broke free at the Colts 20 and ran in for his first career touchdown.

"I wasn't concerned about the call at all. I didn't grab him," Simmons said of the contact with Burris. "When I saw the flag, I knew I didn't shove him."

Burris, a five-year veteran, didn't argue.

"I'm man enough to take responsibility for this loss," Burris said. "I didn't play well. Their best beat my best. Today just wasn't my day."

The Colts (1-7) had a season-high 30 completions by rookie Peyton Manning, including touchdown passes of 4 yards to Lamont Warren in the first quarter and 15 yards to Marcus Pollard with 3:40 left in the final period. But the last two Indianapolis drives ended with interceptions by Lawyer Milloy. Manning's NFL high 15th and 16th.

"It's really frustrating, because we really focused on this game and came in expecting to win this game," Manning said. "We certainly played better against them the second time around [after a 29-6 loss at New England in September], which shows we have made progress. But we still have to make more plays."

The first interference call against Burris gave New England the ball at the Indianapolis 10. Robert Edwards, the NFL's top rookie rusher, picked up 8 yards on the next play and Bledsoe passed the final 2 yards to Ben Coates.

Coates finished with 10 catches for 109 yards, his first 100-yard game since he had 135 yards against Miami two years ago. New England played without wide receivers Terry Glenn (hamstring), Vincent Brisby (broken finger) and Troy Brown (ankle).

"We would have liked to knock them out when we had our chances. That's where I'm disappointed," Patriots coach Pete Carroll said. "Ben Coates carried the load. He was open all day long. As the game went on, he found a way to get open."

Manning, who was 30-for-52 for 278 yards, hit all six of his passes on the series after Coates' touchdown, taking the Colts to the New England 12. Warren ran to the 4, then caught a pass for his first career touchdown reception.

The Patriots moved 81 yards on the next series. Passes of 24 and 12 yards to Simmons helped New England to the Colts 12, then Burris was called for interference on Simmons in the end zone, putting the ball at the 1. Edwards ran twice for no gain, then scored his seventh touchdown rushing to put New England back on top.

"Reason No4 why you should take my MCAT course."
4 Our teachers deliver
Only the best instructors teach our courses. Not only are they experts in their specific field, (physics, biology, chemistry, verbal) but they have also passed our rigorous hiring and training process.
Call 1-800-2REVIEW or visit us at www.review.com
Courses held on the UMASS campus! Smith, Mt. Holyoke, and WHEC as well.
THE PRINCETON REVIEW

Munchie Madness 3-6PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Vegetarian Potato Skins 3.88 7.75
Sweet Potato Fries 2.63 5.25
Shrimp Tempura 3.25 6.50
1/2 PRICE!
Judie's
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

OOPS!
• Free Estimates
• Lifetime Warranty
• Auto Glass Replacement
• Car & Truck Rental
North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center (On bus route - one mile from UMass)
78 Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA 549-2880

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS always $10.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Class of 2001
It was great working with you to bring Rabbi Harold Kushner.
A terrific finale for UMass Week. -Hillel

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take My Lease Two bedrooms on bus line. Call 549-5318.

2 Bedroom Apartment Newly renovated. Very bright. Busline. $795, all inclusive. Stacey 549-6657.

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know your legal rights? Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

VW Bus For Sale Yellow 80 Vanagon. Westfalia Stick, Full Kitchen and Pop Top, Good Condition. Very Cumfy. 973-256-2359 or 413-559-4552.

1991 Pontiac Grand Am Excellent condition. Low mileage. $3800/BO. 256-6027.

86 Toyota Pick-Up 4x4 Runs great. $1900/BO. Call Mark 256-0416.

88 Honda Civic 5 speed, 166K, many new parts, well-maintained, runs great $1100 or B/O. 268-0388.

CARS $100-$500 Police Impounds. Hondas, Chevys, Jeeps, & Sport Utilities. MUST SELL! 1-800-522-2730 x4554

COMPUTERS

Macintosh Printer Color StyleWriter 1500 $100 or B/O. Call Tony @ 549-5514.

486 Computer Great For Student Works Good $100. Color VGA $50. (413)584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Bell Ringers needed part-time for Christmas Kettle Campaign. Flexible hours, outdoors. Nov/Dec. $5.60/hr. 585-8729.

INSURANCE SALES

Earn $35,000+ in your 1 year as a personal lines account exec. If you have the drive and ambition to succeed, are well organized and have exceptional interpersonal skills, start your career in homeowner/auto insurance sales. We will train the right individual to sell our highly competitive insurance products and provide you with unlimited qualified leads. Candidate must be willing to work evening. We offer a competitive base + commission and complete benefits package. Send resume to W.D. Grinnell, Webber and Grinnell Insurance Agency, P.O.Box 538,Northampton,MA

WEBBER & GRINNELL INSURANCE

Sorority close to campus looking for 2 housepeople for kitchen help. Call for information. 549-4683. Ask for Michelle.

Legal Assistants Wanted Spring 1999 Internships with Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary—training provided. Deadline to begin the application process is Nov 13, 1998—Contact The Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

EMPLOYMENT

CHILDRENS HEALTH RESEARCH
Abt Associates is recruiting Research Interviewers to participate on a Federally sponsored national survey of the immunization status of children. Interested applicants should be able to work a minimum of 20 hours per week evenings including 1 weekend shift. The position requires good communication skills and some computer experience. Hourly wages start at $6.25/hour, $6.88/hour weekends, with regular merit increases. Health and Dental Insurance is available. For further information, or to arrange a personal interview contact: 1-800-792-4514. Abt Associates is an equal opportunity employer.

Disc Jockey needed for mobile DJ service. Willing to train but must have a dependable vehicle and knowledge of current dance music. Call 253-6355.

Best Part-Time Job In The Valley
You don't have to wash dishes or flip burgers for the extra money you need. Become a Clean Water Action organizer and earn $7.30-$9.00/hr fighting air and water pollution. Paid training, flexible schedule, evening and weekend hours. 584-9830.

EARN CASH
Flexible Hours
Now Hiring At Sbarros
Hampshire Mall

Wanted 98 People
We'll pay you to lose up to 29+ lbs.
Expires 11/11/98.
1-703-817-1071

EMPLOYMENT

Waitress Part-Time
Make $400 & work 2 or 3 nights.
Flexible hours.
Dancers For Upscale Gentleman's Club
No experience necessary
Unlimited $$$ Potential.
Bikini, Topless, or Nude!
Call 413-536-0502

Drivers Wanted
Pays $9 to $15 per hour.
Inside help wanted too.
Flexible hours.
Call Dominos
256-8911

ENTERTAINMENT

Lights and Sound: Rave to Dorm Party. Your DJ's or ours. Call BARR Productions (413)737-8561.

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Free delivery. 253-9742.

FOR SALE

GMAT
Bargain! Princeton Review. Prep Class reg. $795 only $600. 259-1051.

FURNITURE

Papason Chair, Couch, and Footrest. (Black). All $150. Decent TV. Great price - $50. Call Jessica 548-3966.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

We're here to pump...
YOU UP! Creatine Monohydrate, Creatine Surge, DHEA, Whey Protein and more from Fitness Workshop delivered right to your door. 1-877-FIT-WORK. www.fitnessworkshop.com

HOUSE FOR RENT

Summer Rentals
Cape Cod Group Summer Rentals. Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Call Diamond Real Estate 1-508-477-1900.

LOST & FOUND

Missing cat- grey tiger with white feet and tummy. Call Emily 549-0471.

MISCELLANEOUS

Think Different
$500-$1000 part-time per month. No experience needed. Will train. Free information packet. 413-788-9838.
cleanair@javanet.com

PERSONALS

Tara:
And if you ever need someone, count on me anytime. I'll be here to lay you down because a rested body is a rested mind...Work hard and don't stress. You make me so proud! 143 -s.h/w

Aaron,
The last two years have been the best of my life. Thank you for everything.
I Love You!
Sweetie Bears

SERVICES

Rabbit Rescue has a lovely selection of bunnies. Many colors and types as well as a selection of cages and hutches. We can also help with any bunnies you can no longer care for. Call Ellen at 367-0105 after 9am please.

On-Line Roommate/Apt Search Service
Free Ads.
http://members.aol.com/puroommate/

Pregnant? Need help?
Call Birthright of Amherst Area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TO SUBLET

4 bedroom apartment on Main St. Nicest place in Amherst. Walk to town. Available Jan 1st. Call 256-0416.

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK '99
Cancun & Bahamas: Sign up now and get free meals/drinks!
Florida, Jamaica, and South Padre available! Sell trips and travel free!
Call for free brochure.
1(888)777-4642

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK 99!
Cancun * Nassau * Jamaica * Mazatlan * Acapulco * Bahamas Cruise * Florida * South Padre
Travel Free and make lots of Cash!
Top reps are offered full-time staff jobs.
Lowest Price Guaranteed.
Call now for details!
www.classtravel.com
800-838-6411
930 Comm Ave South
On BU's West Campus

SPRING BREAK '99
Largest selection of Spring Break Destinations, including Cruises!
Foam Parties, Drink Specials, and Club Admissions.
Group Discounts.
Epicurean Tours
1-800-231-4-FUN

The Classifieds...

Place an Ad TODAY!!!

Do you need a job?

Check out The Classifieds and see how many numerous opportunities are out there and waiting for you!!

FILL THIS SPACE with your ads!

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, NOV. 2

Lecture— There will be a lecture entitled "A Collaborative History, Feminists and Lesbians in the Connecticut Valley of Western Massachusetts" at 4:30 p.m. in the Dickinson House living room of the Five College Women's Studies Research Center at Mount Holyoke College.

Meeting— There will be a meeting for anyone interested in television broadcast journalism at 8 p.m. at the UVCTV-19 offices. Volunteers are needed to write stories and assist in the technical aspects of Channel 19 News.

Lecture— There will be a lecture entitled "The Last Graduation" in recognition of Prison Awareness Week at 7 p.m. in the Student Union Duke Room.

Workshop— There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 7 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

TUESDAY, NOV. 3

Colloquium— A colloquium entitled "Citizenship, Marriage and Law in Revolutionary France" will be at 7:30 p.m. in the Five College Women's Studies Research Center at Mount Holyoke College.

Lecture— There will be a lecture on the war on drugs in room 162 of the Campus Center at 7 p.m.

Meeting— There will be a Jewish Student Union general meeting at 6 p.m. in the Hillel House. All are welcome.

Poetry— All are welcome to share poetry or song at 8:30 p.m. at the Hillel House.

Rally— There will be a rally against the criminal injustice system on the Student Union steps at noon.

Workshop— There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 7 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

Meeting— There will be a meeting of Students for a Free Tibet at 5:30 p.m. in the Student Union's Colonial Lounge.

Meeting— There will be an Animal Rights Coalition meeting at 7 p.m. in Student Union room 306. Contact Jenn Falcon at 546-5566 for more information.

NOTICES

Community— Official Mail-In Voter Registration forms are available at the Registrar's Office and Commuter Services in the Student Union. Voting is on Nov. 3.

Community— Golden Key National Honor Society nominees are reminded to return membership forms as soon as possible. Deadline is approaching.

Scholarships— UMass students interested in scholarship opportunities are encouraged to visit the Office of National Scholarship Advisement in Goodell room 610. Deadlines for scholarships are approaching fast.

Submissions— The UMass Poetry Society is seeking submissions to its anthology. Call Joshua at 546-5823 for more details.

Workshop— A five-week workshop entitled "Women, Food, and Body Image: Rewriting Our Stories, Restoring Ourselves" will be held Thursdays beginning November 5 from 4:30-5:45 p.m. at the Smith College Health Services Conference Room. To register call 585-2840.

Workshop— A workshop for women survivors of childhood sexual abuse will take place on Nov. 7. The workshop includes writing, drawing, and movement. In the evening, participants are also invited to perform dances, music, and monologues about healing from abuse. Call 586-7390 for more information and to sign up.

TVN are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an ITC, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

If you think that shopping a college store means having no choices...

Think again.

New University Store — Not Like a mall... Better.

HSCN 4 Hampshire Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board	18 The Learning Channel
4 CBS/3 Hartford	19 UVC-TV19
5 CBS/4 Boston	20 ABC/40 Springfield
6 ABC/5 Boston	21 Gavel to Gavel
8 PBS/57 Springfield	22 NBC/22 Springfield
9 HSCN Movie Ch.	23 Sundance
10 UPN/20 Hartford	24 Bloomberg Financial
11 Weather Channel	25 CTN
10 NBC/30 New Britain	27 TBS
11 Fox/61 Hartford	28 BET
12 PBS/24 Hartford	29 TV Land
13 WOCH & HSCN	30 Univision
14 International	31 Comedy Central
15 UMass Academic TV	32 Cartoon
16 WB/New Haven	33 Much Music
17 HSCN Programming

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — NOVEMBER 2, 1998

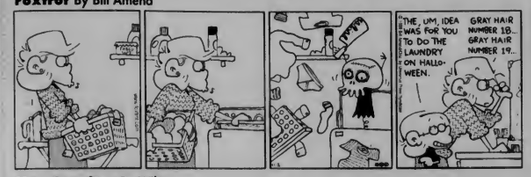
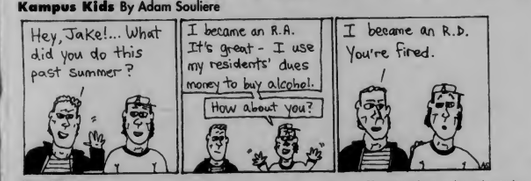
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEQH	2	12	Wishbone (R)	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		Great Performances "Cats" (In Stereo) (R)					Connecticut Journal
WFSB	3	3	News (R)	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Cosby (R)	King	Raymond	Becker (R)	L.A. Doctors "Maybe It's You"	News (R)	Late Show (R)
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Cosby (R)	King	Raymond	Becker (R)	L.A. Doctors "Maybe It's You"	News	Late Show (R)
WCVB	5	5	News (R)	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle (R)	NFL Football Dallas Cowboys at Philadelphia Eagles. (In Stereo Live) (R)					News (R)
WLVI	6		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny (R)	Fresh. (R)	7th Heaven (In Stereo) (R)		Hyperion Bay (In Stereo) (R)		News	Friends (R)	Nanny (R)
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	Sudden-Susan	Caroline	"The Temptations" (1998, Drama) Terron Brooks, Leon. (R)			News	Tonight Show
WTXX		8	Home Imp.	Judge-Brown	Judge Judy (R)	Judge Judy (R)	Malcolm-Eddie	Guys Like Us	Malcolm-Eddie (R)Reverb (R)		News	News-radio (R)	Married...With
WVIT		30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy (R)	Sudden-Susan	Caroline	"The Temptations" (1998, Drama) Terron Brooks, Leon. (R)			News	Tonight Show
WTIC	9	11	Simpsons (R)	Friends (R)	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	Melrose Place (In Stereo) (R)		Ally McBeal (In Stereo) (R)		News	Friends (R)	Med Abt. You
WWLP	9	22	News (R)	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	Sudden-Susan	Caroline	"The Temptations" (1998, Drama) Terron Brooks, Leon. (R)			News (R)	Tonight Show
WGBY	10	6	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		Great Performances "Cats" (In Stereo) (R)				Cheese Rises (In Stereo) (R)
WGGB	12	28	News (R)	ABC News	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	NFL Football Dallas Cowboys at Philadelphia Eagles. (In Stereo Live) (R)					News (R)
WSBK	38		Judge Judy (R)	Judge Judy (R)	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	Malcolm-Eddie	Guys Like Us	Malcolm-Eddie (R)Reverb (R)		Med Abt. You	Med Abt. You	Frasier (R)	Cheers (R)
WTBS	22		Family Matters	Family Matters	Roseanne (R)	Roseanne (R)	"Desperate Hours" (1990, Drama) Mickey Rourke, Mimi Rogers					"The Doctor" (1991, Drama) William Hurt
AAE	23		Northern Exposure	"Rosebud"	Law & Order "Angel" (R)		Biography: Clare Boothe Luce		Investigative Reports (R) (R)		Patriot "The Lost Mine"		Law & Order "Corruption" (R)
CNN	15	21	Worldview (R)	Moneyline	Newshour (R)	Crossfire (R)	World Today (R)		Larry King Live (R)		Newsstand: Time (R) (R)	Sports	Moneyline (R)
COM	19	26	Gallagher	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	"Tarzan" (1981, Comedy) Bill Murray, Herbert Lom				Dr. Kitis Pro.	Rob-Margaret	Derry Show	Stein's Money
DISC	21		New House	Fire-R-Line	Gimme Shelter		Wild Discovery: Ants		Story of the Elephant Men		Egypt Uncovered (R)		Justice Files (R)
ESPN	17		Sportscenter	Monday Night Countdown			Figure Skating Professional Championship				Cheerleading	Cheerleading	ESPNews	Sportscenter
LIFE	27		Ellen (R)	Ellen (R)	Party of Five "I Do" (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope "Divided Loyalty (R)		"For the Love of Nancy" (1994, Drama) Paisley Gold.		New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	31		15-30 Jams Countdown		Fanatic, (R)	Sports	Eye Spy Video (Aweks TV (R)		Alanis Morissette Concert		Road Rules	Road Rules	Cult (In Stereo)	Loveline
NICK	35		Figure It Out	Secret of Alex	Doug (R)	Rugrats (R)	Hey Arnold! (R)	Allen Strange	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Happy Days	Laverne	I Love Lucy (R)	Bewitched
SCIFI	33		Quantum Leap (In Stereo) (R)		Sightings (R)	Star Trek "The	rouble With Tribbles" (R)		Sliders "California Perch" (R) (R)		Welcome to Paradox (R)		Sightings (R)	Star Trek (R)
TLC	29	28	Home Again	Home Again	Trauma: Life	Trauma: Life	Wonder-Weeths		Extremely Weird (R)		Wonder-Weeths		Wonder-Weeths	Wonder-Weeths
TNT	40		Babylon 5 (In Stereo) (R)		ER "The Match Game" (R)		WCW Monday Nitro (In Stereo Live) (R)				WCW War Zone (In Stereo) (R)		Mortal Kombat: Conquest (R)
USA	42		Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Xena: Warrior Princess (R) (R)		Walker, Texas Ranger (R)		WWF Raw (In Stereo) (R)				New York Undercover (R)
HBO	45		★★ "Look Who's Talking Now" (1993) John Travolta, PG-13 (R)				★ "A Smile Like Yours" (1997) Greg Kinnear (R)		Siege-Look		★★★ "Allen's Girls" (1997, Drama) Peter Fonda, (R) (R)
MAX	46		★★ "Dear God" (1996, Comedy) Greg Kinnear, (In Stereo) PG (R)				★★ "Body Armor" (1997) Matt McColm, (R) (R)		Making-Roswell		★★ "Silver Bullet" (1985, Horror) Gary Busey, (R)		"Call Girl" NR
SHOW	55		★★★ "Tucker: The Man and His Dream" (1988) Jeff Bridges, PG				★½ "The Matchmaker" (1997) Janeane Garofalo,		Seven Years		★ "Fever Lake" (1996, Horror) Corey Haim, NR		Women



Cathy By Cathy Guisewite

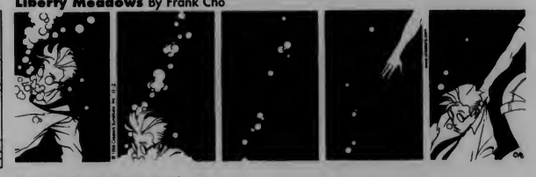
Drabble By Kevin Fagan



Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Non Sequitur By Wiley

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere



Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Liberty Meadows By Frank Cho

Rose Is Rose By Pat Brady

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Horoscopes

You can win a major prize today simply by doing what you consider to be "right" and "proper." The competition along these lines should be light.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — Your quick-witted approach to simple problems will not only win you admiration, but a good many "followers" as well. Tend to your flock wisely.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — Ideas you come up with today are likely to be quite instrumental in solving a long-standing problem that has stumped your predecessors.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You may have to say things over and over again before you get the message across today. Be patient and try not to let your frustrations be known.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — You'll have a calming influence over those around you today. Ironically, you may find that you're in need of one yourself later on.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — Why do you insist on doing the same things over and over again, while expecting different results? It may be time to change your ways!

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — While others are doing only what is expected of them today, you can win remarkable results by going that extra mile!

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — Try to balance accomplishing your personal goal while completing a task assigned to you by others today. Don't get off track.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — Don't allow your unwarranted assumptions to hurt you today. Being swift in judgement can actually end up holding you back.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — Health Services Conference Room. To register call 585-2840.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — Not everyone is willing to go the distance like you today. As a result, you can expect to be the center of attention for quite awhile.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — A good friend can satisfy your passion for something quite unusual today. Don't worry, none of you will be subjected to danger.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — Patience is a virtue. However, you may choose to hurry things along today for a very good reason that is only obvious to you.

Quote of the Day

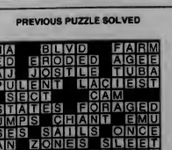
"The object of war is not to die for your country but to make the other bastard die for his."

–General George Patton

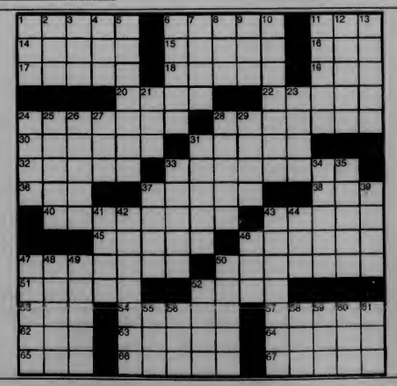
Close to Home By John McPherson

The Fulkersons finally devised a way to keep their teen-agers from monopolizing the bathroom.

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.



SORRY NO D.C.MENU AVAILABLE



Night Editor — Casey Kane
Photo Technician — Kara Stokes
Copy Editor — Nicole Racicot
Production Supervisor — Jeremy Brothers
Production Staff — Lisa Metcalf, Allen Mackey

ACROSS
1 "April Love" crooner
6 Type of corgi
11 Part of a min.
14 Ell
15 Lulu greeting
16 Bullring "bravo"
17 Moor
18 Philadelphia player
19 Disencumber
20 Beginning for "belium"
22 Not glossy
24 Stuffed cornmeal foods
28 Just said "no"
30 Walking on air
31 Thighbone
32 Church sections
33 Triumphant
36 Greek letter
37 Large-eyed monkey
38 W. alliance
40 Works on a Disney film
43 Early New Zealander
45 Takes a break
46 Swore
47 TV series with Krystle and Alexis
50 Breed of cat
51 Bridle parts
52 Brook
53 Dunderhead
54 Light-bulb filler
57 Muslim's religion
62 Nev. hrs.
63 Birds that honk
64 Ruckus
65 Hog's home
66 Go in
67 Collect bit by bit

DOWN
1 "—, humbug!"
2 Clock numeral
3 Out — limb
4 Bullock film, "The —"
5 Breathes out
6 Blows gently
7 Cannes lady
8 Actress Myrna —
9 The lady
10 Injurious
11 Varieties
12 Superior group
13 Granted
21 Actor Beatty
23 Emanation
24 Wear and —
25 Greek letter
26 Detective Perry
27 Devoured
28 Picture puzzle
29 Muslim prince
31 Vapors
33 Pier
34 Cowhand's loop
35 Container weights
37 Endure
39 Flank
41 Turkey's neighbor
42 Type of center
43 — over; pondering
44 Painting or sculpture
46 Shortstop Ripken
47 Hard candies
48 Bread riser
49 Super
50 Gold digger?
52 Fragrant flower
55 Slimpy's pal
56 Fetch
58 Sun. in Acapulco
59 Fib
60 Quiet — mouse
61 Guys

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

SPORTS WEEKEND

Monday, November 2, 1998 — The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Halloween football game favors UM

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

DURHAM, N.H. — With all the ghosts and ghouls wandering the streets on Halloween, Massachusetts football coach Mark Whipple was afraid of only one man.

As the Minutemen took the field at Cowell Stadium at the University of New Hampshire on Saturday, it wasn't the sound of a wild coyote howling at a full moon that sent shivers down the spine of Whipple, but rather Wildcat tailback Jerry Azumah, Division I-AA football's career rushing leader.

"I have never been so frightened on the sideline. 'Where is 25?'," Whipple said, replicating his state of panic during the course of the game. "[Azumah] is [New Hampshire's] heart and soul.

"It's Halloween... it's a scary feeling on that sideline. One play from him can break the [game] open."

Azumah had won the Bill Knight trophy, awarded to the MVP of the UMass–UNH game, in each of his first three seasons. The Wildcat faithful were not disappointed this time around either, as the local hero blazed through the Minuteman defense for 241 yards and all four of New Hampshire's scores.

When the final gun sounded, though, it was UMass standout runner Marcel Shipp who hoisted the award, instead. Shipp, who ran for 185 yards and two touchdowns in the shadow of the UNH star, led the Minutemen to a 27–26 nailbiting victory.

"[Azumah] is a great athlete," Shipp said. "For me to win this is a great achievement."

During the week leading up to the game, many of those in the media were dubbing the matchup as a personal battle between Shipp and Azumah, being two of the most prolific ball carriers in the country.

"We played hard, but things didn't work out in our favor," Azumah said. "I am not concerned about the records. I want us to win, that's the bottom line."

As seems to be the trend in UMass games, the Minutemen scored the first two touchdowns of the game, both on Kevin Quinlan one-yard runs and both in the first quarter.

The 13–0 lead was strengthened by a costly illegal procedure call on the Wildcats' first drive of the game that nullified a touchdown. The resulting field goal attempt was then blocked and recovered by UMass linebacker Matt Dawson, beginning the woes of UNH kicker Shawn MacLean, who also missed two extra points and the potential game winning field goal late in the fourth quarter.

COURTESY UNH MEDIA RELATIONS
UNH tailback Jerry Azumah

Azumah, who had been contained up until that point, responded to Quinlan's second touchdown with 2:55 left in the second frame with a 19-yard scoring scamper straight up the middle of the Minuteman defense for his first touchdown of the day.

On the very next drive, UMass returned the favor, leaving 20 seconds on the clock after the eventual MVP Shipp pushed in a one-yard score.

In typical Massachusetts fashion, the 20–6 UMass lead didn't last long into the second half.

"You could see the momentum turning when we came out at halftime," UNH quarterback Tim Cramsey said.

Azumah finished off a 99-yard drive with a 13-yard run to bring the deficit to only seven, and sprinted in from 31 yards out to tie the game with 4:31 left in the third period.

In weeks past, the UMass defense has earned a reputation for reaching a plateau late in the third quarter, but this week, that's exactly when the Minutemen got their second wind.

Beginning with the last play of the third frame, the Wildcats were stopped for a loss or no gain in seven out of nine plays. One of the two positive-yardage plays was merely a one-yard plunge by Azumah, who was noticeably frustrated by the play of Dawson and his stingy linebacking mates Kole Ayi, who registered 19 tackles, and Khari Samuel.

"It was mentioned that no one playing right now had beaten [New Hampshire]," Ayi said. "That was the past."

Rejuvenated by the defense, the offense marched down the field for the eventual game-winning touchdown, made by Shipp with 7:27 to go in the game.

After Azumah's fourth score of the contest, this time from 23 yards away, MacLean hooked the extra point wide left to leave UMass in the lead by the slimmest of margins, 27–26.

"Obviously this week we were hurt by special teams," UNH Coach Bill Bowes said. "We were hurt by missed extra points, missed field goals, and kickoff coverage."

After a Massachusetts punt with 1:11 left in the game, New Hampshire had one last chance to pull ahead, as Cramsey and Azumah drove the ball to the Minuteman 25-yard–line with no time left. A pass interference call on UMass allowed MacLean to come on to attempt a 42-yarder that would erase all earlier mistakes.

"It was awfully close, that's for sure," Bowes said. "It was a great effort. It was plenty long, we just missed the kick."

MacLean kicks away win despite Azumah's dominance

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

DURHAM, N.H. — Relieved? Yes. Satisfied? No.

Worried? After the Massachusetts football team's 27–26 victory over New Hampshire on Saturday, coach Mark Wipple does not have a choice.

Had it not been for a missed field goal by the Wildcats' redshirt freshman kicker Shawn MacLean, the Minutemen (6–2, 4–1 in the Atlantic 10) would've gone home unhappy.

It looked good, and, hey, it probably felt good. Whipple, the benches, and the UNH faithful had to wait for the referees' signal, but MacLean's 42 yard attempt into the wind with no time remaining was unsuccessful in finding its way through the uprights.

"It was really close, but it hooked off at the end," UMass linebacker Kole Ayi said. "For a while I thought it was good."

For UNH, the victory was gift-wrapped, ready to be taken home. The ribbons, the sequins — this present was looking mighty dandy for the Wildcats. But not this time around for the Wildcats or MacLean, on a day that could not have gotten any worse.

On UNH's first possession of the game, MacLean had a field goal blocked. Then a second missed extra point that would've tied the game at 27 kept the Wildcats behind, and so came the drama. Then, on the final play of the game, most of Cowell Stadium had thought MacLean had beaten UMass for the fifth consecutive time, but the ball veered a football length left of the upright and a collective "phew" was heard on the Massachusetts sidelines.

It certainly wasn't the time in the season that Whipple wanted to find a gaping hole in his defense, one that 'Cats running back Jerry Azumah apparently noticed. Understood that Azumah has a few body lengths on the rest of the field of running backs in the conference and has burned the Minutemen for 700 yards rushing in his four matchups with him, but, at times, it did not look like 11 players were on the field defensively for UMass.

"One play can change a game," Whipple said. "With [Azumah], he can make yards so fast."

The same scenario presents itself for NBAers in stopping the Chicago Bulls' Michael Jordan. Stop The Man, in this case, Azumah, or let him do his thing, while shutting everyone else down?

If situation one was the idea, well, let's just say the Minutemen failed miserably, but got lucky. But if Whipple went with situation two, call him a genius.

The official count in total yards: Azumah, 305; the rest of the team, 200.

Yeah, still the undisputed heavyweight champion of the conference.

New Hampshire Coach Bill Bowes was scratching his head as MacLean took the field for his big boot. Azumah lining up field goals in this week's practices? Nah, couldn't be.

At least not yet.

Despite the victory, which kept UMass in a first place tie with Connecticut in the A–10, Whipple was left with that sour taste in his mouth. Obviously, all year, for he and the coaching staff the mentality has been that a loss is a loss and a win is a win. Whether by one point or 40, the bottom line matters most. How much closer the Minuteman can close in on that mentality snapping point could be tested sooner than Whipple hopes.

"We got lucky," Whipple said. "We were unlucky in Connecticut (in a 44–41 loss). We'll take it and move on."

JAY FRIEDMAN – COLLEGIAN
UMass fullback Matt Jordan celebrates with his backfield mate, Marcel Shipp. Shipp won the Bill Knight Trophy as the MVP of the UMass–UNH game.

Lecot leads UMass to post–season in soccer

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

OLEAN, N.Y. — When Sophie Lecot headed home a corner kick from Emma Kurowski with 20:44 left to play in yesterday's match with St. Bonaventure, the issue was finally put to rest.

That matter the Massachusetts women's soccer team had to take care of against the Bonnies at McGraw–Jennings Field was a berth in this weekend's Atlantic 10 tournament. And, after letting the hosts hang around for the first 45 minutes, UMass got a pair of goals from Lecot in the second half for a 3–1 win and a clean slate heading into Dayton.

"Anyone can win the tournament," said Massachusetts coach Jim Rudy in regards to the field, which also includes host Dayton, Xavier and George Washington. "The A–10 is really improved, and those are three teams that we played tooth and nail tight. I'm just glad that we're a part of it."

Yesterday's game was up for grabs until early in the second half, when Lecot put UMass (10–10, 7–4 in the A–10) ahead for good. The senior co–captian knocked a lob from Kara Green past SBU keeper Karen Cunningham for a 2–1 lead. Tarah Tokarchik also assisted on the goal.

"It feels good [winning today and getting in the A–10 tournament]. We needed this win today," Lecot said. "We had a few chances in the first half, but we were a little unlucky. Now we're in the A–10's, and anything can happen."

The Minutewomen dominated play for the majority of the contest, pummelling Cunningham with quality scoring chances all afternoon.

UMass struck for a quick 1–0 lead only 3:08 into the game. Senior co–captain Amanda Thompson fed Kurowski off a free kick, who sent a cross to Green in the box. The Poughkeepsie, N.Y. native buried the short chip, and the visitors were up 1–0.

St. Bonaventure (8–10–1) came right back with a tally of its own about six minutes later. Jen Twardzik weaved her way past two UMass defenders, then keeper Cori Stevens, before finding Kristin Konstanty wide open in front of an empty cage. The freshman forward tapped home Twardzik's pass to even the game at 1–1.

The Bonnies turned up their play late in the first half, but the defensive unit of Thompson, Molly McGrew, and Anna Morozuk, along with keeper Stevens, matched SBU's intensity to keep the game tied.

"I didn't want this to be my last game," Thompson said. "Now everything we've done in the past is erased and we're going to be focused and concentrate on going game by game this weekend."

Said Rudy: "At halftime I just told them to be composed, patient, and to play with skill. We just kept it in their end and didn't let them get into ours."

UMass was put in a must–win situation yesterday because of a 1–0 overtime loss to Duquesne on Friday afternoon in Pittsburgh. The Minutewomen once again dominated play for most of the contest, but the Dukes capitalized off a freak deflection in the extra session to get the game–winner.

Minutewoman Notes:

After an outstanding freshman season, UMass forward Kara Green has continued to provide much of the UMass offensive firepower. Green is second on the team with 29 points (11 goals, 7 assist). Green exploded for 12 points last weeekend. She also scored her first collegiate hat trick against Fordham.

UM hockey nets first win, 3-2

By Paul Teves
Collegian Staff

After the first two weeks of the regular season the Massachusetts hockey team was 0–2 (0–1, in the Hockey East). The assignment for the Minutemen was to break into the win column against Hockey East foe Merrimack.

Merrimack (0–3) entered the game Friday night with the same record as UMass but it would leave the William D. Mullins Center losers of a 3–2 contest.

"It was a great win, coming back from two goals down in the second period. We played a really good game," Mallen said.

The Minutemen could have entered Friday's contest flat after losing to No. 4 Michigan 3–1, and dropping an overtime game to UMass–Lowell 4–3, and they did start slowly, but they picked up their play in the second and third period, to win.

The Minutemen (1–3, 1–2 in Hockey East) fell behind in the first period to Merrimack by allowing two goals.

The first goal was a rebound opportunity which was placed into the empty net by Kris Porter, with 4:30 left in the first period. Porter's goal was created primarily by the assist/shot from the point by junior defenseman Andrew Fox.

Porter would find the back of the net again 3:07 later, when he curled around the net and shot the puck towards the net. UMass goalie Markus Helanen was caught going the other way and the puck caromed off his goalie pad and redirected into his own net, giving Merrimack a 2–0 lead at the first intermission.

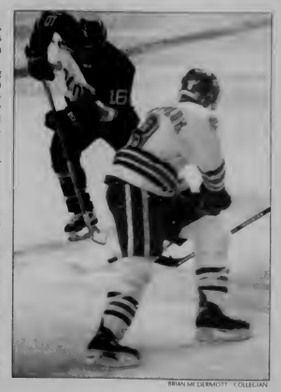
Unfortunately for the Warriors there were two more periods to play. UMass tightened up its defense in the second period and waited for its opportunities.

"I think we did a really good job keeping them off the board in the last two periods, and Markus Helanen made some great saves," Mallen said.

UMass was silent until they were sparked by an old fashion fight. Nick Stephens got in a tussle with Merrimack defenseman Roland Grelle. Both players received a game misconduct, and a subsequent suspension. But at the time the fireworks inspired UMass.

"Sometimes a fight can get the adrelaline pumping, and pick guys up, but as we know college hockey rules don't permit that and we need more discipline," Mallen said.

After the brawl, the Minutemen broke into the scoring column with 3:06 to play in the second. The Minutemen acquired a power play and took advantage of the situation. Kris Wallis fed the puck to freshman Randy Drohan who took a shot on net, which was redirected into the net by Darcy King. The goal was King's first collegiate goal. Little did everybody know that this would be a night of first collegiate goals.



"A lot of our young guys got a chance to get a lot of ice time, and they played really well," Mallen said.

The Minutemen then proceeded to score again 45 seconds later when Jeff Blanchard passed the puck from behind the net and Jay Shaw's shot slid across the crease to the waiting stick of freshman Chris Brannen, who tapped the puck home to tie the game at 2–2.

The score remained tied until the 11:57 mark of the third period, when UMass came through with a goal. UMass forward, Jeff Turner started the rush by passing to Brannen, who sent a pass to the point where defenseman, Joey Culgin collected it, and then shot it. The puck then proceeded to ring the post and then deflect off of the back of Merrimack goalie Tom Welby and slide in. The freak goal gave UMass a 3–2 lead with 8:03 remaining in regulation.

"This goal was good for Joey Culgin. The other night the puck deflected off him into our net, and tonight the puck hit the pipe and deflected in for a goal off. Tonight he gets the bounce to win the game, that's hockey," Mallen said.

With the memory of the last minute goal suffered against UMass–Lowell, which eventually cost the Minutemen the game, UMass handled the next eight minutes very carefully, but not with too much care UMass continued to attack and Helanen came up with some last second saves on the 6–5 to preserve the Minutemen's first victory.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN
R.J. Gates and the Minutemen hockey team fought to a 1–1 record over two contests this weekend.

UMass hockey falls, 4-1 to UNH; Krog Shines

By James Murphy
Collegian Staff

Coming into last night's Hockey East match–up with No. 8 New Hampshire, the Massachusetts men's hockey team was flying high after a stirring come from behind victory over another Hockey East foe, the Merrimack Warriors on Friday night.

Unfortunately for the Minutemen, the Wildcats' Jason Krog struck hard and fast with two quick goals in the last five minutes of the second period, after the Minutemen smothered the Wildcats' top gun, for the first 35 minutes of the game. UMass held Krog to only one shot in this span. However, the next two shots the speedy UNH center took got by UMass goaltender Markus Helanen leaving the bewildered netminder and his teamates on the short end of a 4–1 deficit, which eventually ended up being the final score.

Trailing 1–0 after one period of play, the Minutemen had sucessfully followed their gameplan of shutting down the Hobey Baker candidate, Krog and the high–flying Wildcat offense.

Despite being out shot by a 12–9 margin, UMass was able to shut down the Wildcats' top line of Matt

Turn to HOCKEY page 9

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN
The UMass hockey team hasn't taken anv of their games this year sitting down, but the Minutemen still lost to New Hampshire yesterday, 4–1.

UMASS VOTES!

1998 Student Voter Guide

Massachusetts Race for Governor

PAUL CELLUCCI

Paul Cellucci's career in public service began in 1970 when he was elected to the Hudson Charter Commission. One year later he won a seat on the Hudson Board of Selectman and he served on that panel until 1977. In 1976 he was elected to the first of four terms in the Massachusetts House of Represeotatives. In 1984, Cellucci was elected to the Massachusetts Senate from Middlesex and Worcester District, and during his third Senate term became the Assistant Republican Leader.

On November 6, 1990, Cellucci was elected Lieutenant Governor of Massachusetts on a ticket with William F. Weld. Paul Cellucci and Governor Weld were reelected in November 1994 by a historic margin, winning 71 percent of the votes cast. Paul Cellucci became Governor of Massachusetts on July 29, 1997 when Bill Weld resigned the post to pursue the US Ambassadorship to Mexico.

Cellucci's private sector experience includes almost 30 years of work with his family's auto dealership, and 17 years in the private sector of law, eventually serving as partner in the Hudson law firm of Kittredge, Cellucci and Moreira, P.C.

Cellucci received his law degree from Boston College Law School in 1973. In 1970, he graduated from the Boston College School of Management where he served in the Reserve Officers Training Corps (ROTC). Cellucci also served in the U.S. Army Reserves from 1970 to 1978 when he was honorably discharged with the rank of Captain.

Both natives of Massachusetts, Cellucci, 50, and his wife, Jan Garnett, reside in Hudson with their two children. Jan is a librarian at Boston College. Their daughter Kate is a senior at Boston College and Anne is a junior at Harvard.

SCOTT HARSHBARGER

Born Dec. 1, 1941, Scott Harshbarger grew up in the small, largely Republican farming communities of central Pennsylvania. His parents met and married during the great Depression. They were the first in their families to attend college and were active in civil rights. His father was a part-time farmer and minister who served as chaplain at Penn State University. His mother was a school teacher. Harshbarger's brother, Dohn, is a dean at Dominican College in New York.

Campaigning on a detailed "action plan" to make the Attorney General a constructive force in the quality of life in Massachusetts, Harshbarger won the 1990 Democratic primary and went on to an easy victory in November. Harshbarger won reelection in 1994 as the states's top vote getter.

Harshbager has received numerous awards and honors, including the 1991 American Bar Association Livingston Hall Juvenile Justice Award; the 1995 Chairman's Award from the Boston Coalition for combating violence and substance abuse; the 1995 Pioneer Institute Better Government Award; the 1996 Ira Vaughn Hiscock Award from the New England Public Health Association for his work at curbing youth access to tobacco; and, the 1996 David A. Rose Civil Rights Award from the New England Chapter of the Anti-Defamation League.

Harshbarger lives in Westwood. He has been married for 11 years to Judith Stephenson, who has worked as an assistant district attorney in Middlesex and Norfolk counties. He has two sons, Michael, 34, and Benjamin, 30, and three stepdaughters, Tenley, 29, Cameron, 24, and Annie, 21.

DEAN COOK

Dean Cook, a Beverly resident, is running for governor as the candidate of The Libertarian Party. He received the party's nomination at the convention in February of this year. His running mate is Elias Israel of Burlington. Dean was born on August 1, 1960, in Cambridge. He grew up in Saugus, where his parents still reside. He has two older sisters, and one younger brother. Dean is married to Michelle Cook (nee Piva).

Mr. Cook attended the following schools:

- Saugus High School
- Sylvania Technical School (certificate in computer electronics)
- Salem State College (BS in chemistry)

Dean served in the United States Marine Corps from 1979 until 1983. Following his honorable discharge, he served 4 years in the National Guard, 1984 until 1987.

He has been a member of The Libertarian Party since 1990, serving during that time as State Chair for two years. He previously was on the ballot as a candidate for governor in 1994. Dean ran for state representative, in Beverly, in 1996.

The 1998 Student Voter Guide has been developed with the support from the Student Government Association, the Daily Collegian and the UMass Alumni Association. The Guide is intended as a resource for students to make well informed choices between candidates on election day. If you have further questions about the election, please contact the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA) at 545-0355 or see our UMASS VOTES! web sight: www.umass.edu/rso/scera/issues/umassvotes.html.

INSIDE:

- Survey results from Gubernatorial Candidates.
- Listing and Summary of state wide referendum questions.
- Listing of the state wide and congressional candidates and web sights.
- Information on where to vote.

SURVEY RESULTS

UMASS VOTES sent a list of questions to the 3 candidates running for Governor. Each campaign was strongly encouraged to respond. Here are excerpts of their responses:

Questions	Cellucci	Harshbarger	Cook
Do you support the recent policy passed by the Board of Higher Education that mandates the University to administer entrance exams to prospective students and graduation exams for graduating students?	DID NOT RESPOND	" I am not opposed to a method of evaluating the system-wide strengths and weaknesses of our public system of higher education. I believe it is appropriate to test students as part of a comprehensive package designed to monitor the progress of education reform..."	DID NOT RESPOND
Tenure is a contract for continuous employment between faculty members and the university until resignation or retirement. Do you support tenure?	DID NOT RESPOND	" While it may be that our system of tenure could be refined, as Governor I would not do away with tenure at UMass."	DID NOT RESPOND
Do you support a continued 5% annual tuition rollback for Umass students?	DID NOT RESPOND	" No family should have to turn down an outstanding education at a public institution of higher learning because they cannot afford it. I am in favor of measures that will bring a top-notch UMass education within the budget of working families in Massachusetts."	DID NOT RESPOND
Do you support student access to student evaluations of faculty?	DID NOT RESPOND	" I would leave it to the students and faculty of UMass to formulate a policy concerning student evaluations, provided that their policy was consistent with my mandate of listening to all concerned."	DID NOT RESPOND
Do you support universal health care?	DID NOT RESPOND	" I strongly support the reform of our managed health care system. I believe that we need to put people and patients first, and put decisions into the hands of doctors rather than insurance companies."	DID NOT RESPOND
Do you support a woman's rights to reproductive choice?	DID NOT RESPOND	" Yes. Throughout my career, I have always been -- and I remain -- pro-choice. I trust women and their doctors to make their own decisions."	DID NOT RESPOND
Do you support the use of Affirmative Action in the admission of Public Higher Education?	DID NOT RESPOND	" Yes. I support affirmative action. I believe that society will be stronger if we are able to make use of all the talent in this state and nation, and if we work together to resolve our common issues."	DID NOT RESPOND
Do you support Affirmative Action hiring policies in the public and/or private sectors?	DID NOT RESPOND	" Yes. I support affirmative action. I believe that society will be stronger if we are able to make use of all the talent in this state and nation, and if we work together to resolve our common issues."	DID NOT RESPOND
Do you support capital punishment?	DID NOT RESPOND	" I've been consistently opposed to the death penalty based on my faith -- and belief that it won't get kids out of gangs, get guns off the streets, or reduce child abuse and domestic violence."	DID NOT RESPOND

REFERENDUM QUESTIONS

The following is the list of state wide referendum questions and a summary of each as provided by the Secretary of the Commonwealth.

Question #1: Setting Compensation of State Legislators
WHAT YOUR VOTE WILL DO
A YES VOTE would prohibit state legislators from changing their base pay and instead would adjust that pay according to changes in median household income.
A NO VOTE would make no change in the method for setting legislators' base pay.
SUMMARY*
This proposed constitutional amendment would prohibit the state legislature from changing the base compensation received by members of the Legislature as of January 1, 1996. As of the first Wednesday in January of 2001, and every second year thereafter, the base compensation would be increased or decreased at the same rate as increases or decreases in the median household income for the Commonwealth for the preceding two-year period as ascertained by the Governor.

Question #2: Public Campaign Financing
WHAT YOUR VOTE WILL DO
A YES VOTE would change the laws governing public financing of campaigns.
A NO VOTE would make no change in the laws governing public financing of campaigns.
SUMMARY*
This proposed law would create a new voluntary system allowing candidates for state office who agree to campaign spending limits and $100 contribution limits to receive a set amount of public funds for their campaigns, starting with the 2002 election. The proposed law would also limit transfers of money from national political parties to state political parties for administrative overhead, or party-building activities. It would also require candidates for state office who had raised or spent at least a set minimum amount in an election cycle to file their required campaign finance reports with the state electronically, and the public would have prompt electronic access to such reports.
The new funding system would replace the existing system of limited public financing of campaigns for statewide office. To participate in the new system, a candidate would have to raise a minimum number of contributions from registered voters in the relevant district, as follows: Governor, 6000; Lt. Governor, Attorney General, or Treasurer, 3000; Secretary of State or Auditor, 2000; Executive Councillor, 400; State Senator, 450; State Representative, 200. Such contributions would have to be between $5 and $100 and be collected during a limited period: for statewide beginning on August 1 of the year before the election, for other candidates beginning on January 1 of the election year, and for all candidates ending on the last day to file nomination papers with the Secretary of State. For any election, a participating candidate could not accept contributions of more than $100 from any person or political committee and could not raise or spend any money other than these contributions and public funds.
Candidates meeting all of these requirements would, subject to appropriation by the Legislature, receive public funding in the primary and general elections. This would come from a new state Clean Elections Fund, consisting of amounts voluntarily contributed through the checkoff on the state income tax return, any amounts appropriated by the Legislature, and any money in the existing state election campaign fund.
A participating candidate running unopposed would receive only half the listed amount of public funds and could spend correspondingly less than a candidate with an opponent. All funds could be spent only for campaign purposes. Any unspent public funds from a primary or general election would have to be returned after that election. A participating candidate who violated the contribution or spending limits would have to return all public funds, become ineligible for further funds, and in some cases pay fines.
Candidates who do not accept public funds would have to report any spending in excess of the limit shown above and could be fined for failing to do so. If such a non-participating candidate spent more than the limit, participating candidates in that race would immediately receive, and could spend, public "matching funds" equal to the amount of the excess spending. The total amount of public funding (including matching funds) a candidate could receive would be limited to twice the spending limit for that race. During the general election campaign, running mates for Governor and Lt. Governor would be treated as teams in order to determine the distribution of any matching funds.
An individual or political committee's total in-kind contributions (such as goods and some services) to a participating candidate would be limited to $500 per election. Higher limits would govern political parties' in-kind contributions. Participating candidates could not accept more than a set amount in such contributions, ranging from $3,000 per election for Representative up to $35,000 for Governor.
The expenditure, contribution, and public funding limits would be adjusted every two years for inflation. A special commission (including elected officials and private citizens) would be set up to meet every two years to review the system and recommend any needed changes. The state Director of Campaign Finance could issue regulations to interpret and enforce the proposed law.
The proposed law states that if any of its parts were declared invalid, the rest of the law would stay in effect.

Question #3: Tax Rate on Interest and Dividend Income
WHAT YOUR VOTE WILL DO
A YES VOTE would reduce the state tax rate for interest and dividend income.
A NO VOTE would make no change in the current state tax rate for interest and dividend income.
SUMMARY*
This proposed law would change the state income tax rate on interest and dividend income, which was 12% as of September 1997, to whatever rate applies to Part B taxable income (such as wages and salaries), which was 5.95% as of September 1997. The change would take effect starting in the tax year 2000.

Question #4: Electric Utility Industry Restructuring
WHAT YOUR VOTE WILL DO
A YES VOTE would continue new law changing the electric utility industry.
A NO VOTE would undo these changes in the electric utility industry.
SUMMARY*
The law changes the state's utility industry. Starting March 1998, instead of buying power from the utility that owns the power lines, customers may choose to buy from separate generating companies competing with each other to sell power to be delivered by the existing utility under a transition rate for 7 years, starting from a rate 10% less than 1997 rates. By September 1999, rates for such customers must be further reduced from 1997 rates (adjusted for inflation) by 5%. Subject to restrictions in the law, rates paid by such customers may be adjusted up or down if approved by the new state Department of Telecommunications and Energy (DTE).

As required by law, summaries are written by the state Attorney General, and the « statements describing the effect of a "yes" or "no" vote are written jointly by the State Attorney General and the Secretary of the Commonwealth.

ADDITIONAL STATE WIDE AND CONGRESSIONAL CANDIDATES

LT. GOVERNOR

JANE SWIFT	http://www.cellucci98.org	REPUBLICAN
WARREN TOLMAN	http://www.tolman98.org	DEMOCRAT
ELI ISRAEL	http://www.cook98.com	LIBERTARIAN

ATTORNEY GENERAL

BRAD BAILEY	http://www.bradbailey.com	REPUBLICAN
THOMAS F. REILLY		DEMOCRAT

SECRETARY OF STATE

WILLIAM FRANCIS GALVIN		DEMOCRAT
DALE C. JENKINS JR.	Dej@dale-jenkins.com	REPUBLICAN
DAVID L. ATKINSON		LIBERTARIAN

TREASURER

BOB MAGINN	http://www.maginn98.org	REPUBLICAN
SHANNON P. O'BRIEN	http:/www.shannon98.com/	DEMOCRAT
MERTON B. BAKER		LIBERTARIAN

AUDITOR

A. JOSEPH DeNUCCI	http./www.denucci98.com	DEMOCRAT
MICHAEL T. DUFFY		REPUBLICAN
CARLA A. HOWELL		LIBERTARIAN

CONGRESSIONAL

FIRST
JOHN W. OLVER		DEMOCRAT
GREGORY L. MORGAN	http://www.Morgan98.org	REPUBLICAN
SECOND
RICHARD E. NEAL		DEMOCRAT
THIRD
JAMES P. McGOVERN		DEMOCRAT
MATTHEW J. AMORELLO	http://www.amorello.com	REPUBLICAN
GEORGE PHILLIES		LIBERTARIAN
FOURTH
BARNEY FRANK		DEMOCRAT
FIFTH
MARTIN T. MEEHAN		DEMOCRAT
DAVID E. COLEMAN		REPUBLICAN
SIXTH
JOHN F. TIERNEY		DEMOCRAT
PETER G. TORKILDSEN	http://www.torkildsen.com	REPUBLICAN
RANDALL C. FRITZ		INDEPENDENT
SEVENTH
EDWARD J. MARKEY		DEMOCRAT
PATRICIA H. LONG		REPUBLICAN
EIGHT
MICHAEL E. CAPUANO		DEMOCRAT
PHILIP HYDE, III	http://www.channel1.com/~timesue/	REPUBLICAN
ANDREA MORELL		SOCIALIST WORKERS
ANTHONY A. SCHINELLA		UNENROLLED
NINTH
JOHN JOSEPH MOAKLEY		DEMOCRAT
TENTH
WILLIAM D. DELAHUNT		DEMOCRAT
ERIC V. BLEICKEN	http://www.bleicken.com	REPUBLICAN

VOTING INFORMATION

WHERE DO I VOTE ???

Cluster:	Polling Place Name:	Polling Place Address:
Northeast/Sylan: Cashin Brown McNamara Johnson/Lewis/Thatcher Dwight/Leach/Hamlin Crabtree/Knowlton/MaryLyon	Immanuel Lutheran Church	Church Lounge, N Pleasant St.
Orchard Hill/Central Webster/Dickinson Grayson/Field VanMeter (N&S)	North Fire Station	East Pleasant St
Butterfield Baker/Chadbourne/Greenough Gorman/Wheeler Brett/Brooks	Wildwood School	Strong Street
Southwest/North Coolidge Kennedy James/Emerson Melville/Thoreau Prince/Crampton	Hampden Dining Commons	SW Residential area
Southwest/south Cance John Adams John Quincy Adams Patterson/MacKimmie Pierpont/Moore Washington	Hampden Dining Commons	SW Residential area

POLLS HOURS: 7:00 A.M. - 8:00 P.M.
FOR VAN SERVICE CALL
545-5411

Off Campus students outside of Amherst: Please contact your local Town Clerks Office.

Here are some phone numbers to the Town Clerks Offices within the surrounding areas.

Belchertown	343-0400
Greenfield	772-1555
Hadley	584-1590
Northampton	587-1224
Sunderland	665-1442

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CIV Issue 40 | New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 | Tuesday, November 3, 1998

R.E.M. is going Up with new album

Check out the reviews of R.E.M.'s latest, Moxy Fruvous at the Iron Horse, an entry in the Noho Film Fest and more (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Once again; this time with feeling

Nicole Way and the UMass women's cross country team have dominated the Atlantic 10 Championship like no other team in history (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Strikes hit Eiffel Tower, library, transportation

PARIS (AP) — Commuters couldn't ride, scholars couldn't read and tourists stayed roped off from the Eiffel Tower as nagging strikes disrupted the capital yesterday.

The Eiffel Tower — the most visited monument in the City of Light — stood empty for a fourth day, with striking workers refusing to back down on their demand for more personnel.

Commuters in the Paris region faced minor inconveniences from the latest strike by public transportation workers, but the strikers failed to bring the system to a halt. Two out of three subway lines were working at rush hour and buses experienced only minor difficulties, according to France Info radio.

Commuters on some high-speed lines encountered reduced service, however, and had to find alternate routes.

The strikes were the latest in a series of social protests that have swept France this fall. Last month, thousands of high school students took to the streets demanding smaller classes and better facilities.

National Library workers continued to man picket lines Monday, barring access for the third straight week to a high-tech facility that opened to researchers there less than a month ago. The library opened to the general public in December 1996.

NATION

Gates deposition aired at Microsoft's trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Microsoft chairman Bill Gates took center stage at his company's antitrust trial yesterday, appearing on TV and computer screens throughout a federal courtroom as the government tried to show he masterminded plans to crush his competition.

Federal attorneys played portions of a videotaped deposition of Gates, taken last summer, as they tried to prove his company illegally wielded its industry influence to stifle competition.

In particular, the government focused on the role Gates played in securing a surprise August 1997 deal with archrival Apple Computer, and on a disputed meeting two years earlier between Microsoft and Netscape.

While Gates is a key figure in the case, he will not appear in person. During the government's opening statement last month, Justice Department attorney David Boies showed brief excerpts of Gates' testimony to contradict internal e-mail Gates had sent.

The same strategy played out yesterday as the government showed clips of a defiant Gates.

Often he would take long pauses and rock back and forth in his seat before responding to questions. Sometimes he would give three-word answers, sometimes drawn-out statements. Government attorneys frequently accused him, on the videotape, of failing to directly answer.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 47 LOW: 24	HIGH: 43 LOW: 26	HIGH: 46 LOW: 28

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News.....page 3
Sports .....page 10

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

UM reacts to shooting, suspect search continues

By Lorraine Kennedy and Aaron Saykin
Collegian Staff

Following Friday night's shooting of a University of Massachusetts student in his Cashin Residence Hall room, reactions from residents of the dormitory varied from anxiety over their safety to relative indifference over the incident.

Mark Rao, a senior biology major who lives on the same floor as where the shooting took place, took comfort in the police statement suspecting a relationship between the victim and his assailant.

"I feel perfectly safe. From my understanding, it was not a random act. There were people there when it happened, so they had an opportunity to shoot other people too."

Tim Guillette, a freshman school of management major, said there was little that could have been done to prevent the shooting.

"Some people were a little bit scared by this stuff and they may be locking the door 24 [hours], seven [days a week] fairly soon. I feel safe because it looks like [the suspected assailants] were looking for [the victim]. I feel it's as safe here as anywhere on campus."

Guillette felt that the assailants "would have probably found a way to get in [to the building] despite any security."

Kevin Scricco, a freshman computer engineering major and another resident of the floor where the incident occurred, was disturbed by the shooting.

"I just feel uneasy about it, but I think it was more of an isolated incident."

Ken Walton, a freshman undeclared major, was shocked that the violence occurred in the otherwise quiet Cashin Hall.

"It's kind of weird. This place seems so quiet. I'm just glad I was away this weekend."

Sophomore hotel, restaurant and travel administration major Kendra Crafts expressed similar sentiments.

"I pretty much don't feel unsafe. It wasn't random. I don't feel like someone's going to come in here and shoot me, but it's a scary thought that it happened."

According to UMass Chief of Police John Luippold, police are continuing the investigation of the incident and have not yet released a description of the assailants.

He said they have not been able to speak with the 24-year- old victim, whose name is being withheld for safety concerns. He was reported to be in fair condition yesterday at Baystate Medical Center in Springfield.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Cashin Residence Hall

DANIELLE R. GILARDI / COLLEGIAN

Sketch Portraiture

Bill Donovan's arresting sketch can be found in the halls of FAC.

Mack not arrested in assault

By Lorraine Kennedy and Casey Kane
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts basketball player Monty Mack has not been arrested in relation to an assault reported Sunday afternoon, but the woman who alleged the assault is filing for a show-cause hearing.

UMass Chief of Police John Luippold said yesterday that police are investigating the incident in which a female student alleged that Mack punched her repeatedly and threw her to the ground at Hampshire Dining Hall.

The victim confirmed that she is pursuing a show-cause hearing against Mack and has retained a lawyer, Michael Edelstein, a civil attorney in Northampton.

According to the Massachusetts Journalists' Court and Legal Handbook, a show-cause hearing is informal and held in front of a clerk magistrate, not a judge, who judges from experience whether a complaint is justified.

At the hearing, the person to be accused can tell the clerk why a complaint should not be issued, according to the handbook.

Luippold said a show-cause hearing date will be set by the district court clerk "in the next week or so" and that the hearing is likely to be in two to three weeks.

He also said there is not a warrant out for Mack's arrest because it was "not an arrestable offense."

"Assault and battery is a misdemeanor," Luippold said, "It requires specific elements that the officer must have in order for an arrest to occur."

"In regards to an alleged assault and battery, an officer needs to be a witness to the crime occurring in order for an arrest to be considered," he explained. "Otherwise, a show- cause request would be made with the court."

Luippold said that police were notified after the incident occurred in the Southwest Residential Area, but they did not witness it.

"In the cases of a past assault and battery being reported, an investigation is completed and, when warranted, a request for a show-cause hearing in Northampton District Court is completed," Luippold said.

When approached for comment at men's basketball practice last night, Assistant Athletic Director for Media Relations Mike Hardisky refused to elaborate on the incident.

"Neither [coach] Bruiser [Flint] nor Monty [Mack] are going to comment right now," Hardisky said.

"We're looking into the matter," he said. "Once we find out what has happened, we'll comment."

At yesterday's practice, Mack, who will not play in Thursday night's exhibition game against the Converse All- Stars due to a hand injury, was not in uniform.

Luippold said the police are continuing to take statements from witnesses and individuals involved in the incident. He encouraged witnesses or anyone with information to contact the Detective Bureau at 545-0893.

Candidates for governor make education reform job one at UM

By Paul Teves
Collegian Staff

Over the last three months, the two major candidates for governor of Massachusetts have battled in debates, and have run a primarily negative campaign, but in between all the bickering and the mudslinging, these two candidates have occasionally mentioned some educational issues, at least in passing.

The candidates for governor are Acting Governor Paul Cellucci, who is the Republican incumbent, State Attorney General Scott Harshbarger, who is the Democratic nominee for the corner office, and Dean Cook, who is the Libertarian representative in this election. Cook has also presented his views on education here at UMass.

Senator Warren Tolman discussed Harshbarger's chances as they attempt to narrow Cellucci's lead in the polls.

"Cellucci lacks vision and is coasting along. We're doing great now, and we have the momentum," Tolman said. Tolman is also Harhbarger's running mate.

The time has come for the voters to make their decision. One of the major concerns for many of the voters on this campus today will be higher education reform.

Harshbarger has made clear that Cellucci has spent a lot of money on higher education, but test scores are down, and public higher education has been lacking. Cellucci has defended himself by commenting on the fact that he has proposed an increase in the budget for higher education every year, and that it is the democratic legislatures fault that not enough funds have been divulged to public universities.

Both candidates have provided plans for improving higher education in Massachusetts.

One of the main programs that Scott Harshbarger has talked about during the '98 Campaign, has been the "Partial Debt Forgiveness Plan." This plan will provide students who attend universities in Massachusetts and work in the Commonwealth partial loan cuts.

"This is a plan that will increase higher education and also bolster job growth in the Commonwealth. Students will receive partial loans paid for," said Toby Chaudhuri, a spokesperson for the Harshbarger campaign.

The legislature in Massachusetts has also made it so that a student who receives college loans can receive a tax break on their income tax.

"This was a program passed by the

Turn to VOTING, page 2

Student responses show low voter turnout predicted for elections, dissatisfaction factor

By Stacey Shackford
Collegian Staff

Experts predict that today's elections may have a record low voter turnout rate. If the responses of ten University of Massachusetts students are any indication, student turnout will be virtually non-existent.

"I'm going to vote," said Nina DeLand, a sophomore School of Management student.

However, DeLand is a member of a minority of students intending to vote in this election. Of ten recently interviewed students, only seven indicated they were planning to participate in the election.

Some students were discouraged by the guhernatorial and local races, and the candidates running for office.

"I would only vote if I liked one of the candidates," said Dan Kittredge, a senior history major. "That's why I'm not voting, because I'm not impressed by any of the candidates."

Others felt that their issues were not being addressed.

"What it really boils down to is, what are they going to do for me?" said Brian Weinberg, a senior sociology major.

"Education is a big issue for me," said Debby Cheung. "Everyone talks about spending more money on education, but no one makes a real effort to improve education."

Cheung, a junior psychology major, also addressed the lack of student involvement in the political process. "I don't think a lot of students get involved because it doesn't affect them. It seems like the general thought is: it doesn't matter if I vote or not, nothing will change."

DeLand agreed. "They probably don't think one vote will make a difference, but it will."

In fact, the student vote is vital for the continued existence of a polling place on the UMass campus. Resa Singleton, student director of the Student Center for Education Research and Advocacy (SCERA), explained that UMass is one of the only schools in the country with an on-campus polling place. The Southwest polling place is part of a pilot program implemented by the town of Amherst. If successful, another polling place will be added to serve more students registered on campus.

But bright pink signs posted around campus warn Southwest residents that if they don't vote, UMass may lose its "first ever polling booth which UMass students fought over twenty years for."

Students have an obligation to get out and vote to keep the polling place," Singleton said. "It's hard because people in general aren't as enthusiastic about gubernatorial elections.. We're keeping our fingers crossed basically."

TMP launches scholarship fund

By Aimee Wallis
Collegian Correspondent

The Stockbridge School of Agriculture has recently received a donation of $260,000 to set up the Charles E. and Frances M. Osterman scholarship fund for students in the Turfgrass Management Program (TMP).

The two year Turfgrass Management Program is the oldest program in the country and prepares men and women for management and assistant management positions in golf courses, residential turf and athletic field areas.

The scholarship will be open to second semester freshman and first semester seniors beginning in the fall of 1999.

A minimum GPA of 2.5 is required when applying as well as a transcript from one semester of the Turfgrass Management Program.

Students who come from the state of Connecticut will receive preference over other applicants.

Connecticut students preference is due to the time that Robert Osterman spent there during his professional life as a golf superintendent and general manager of the Connecticut Golf Club.

The program currently consists of 59 freshman, who will be eligible for the Osterman Scholarship next fall, however the current 31 seniors will not benefit from this fund.

Each year three $2,000 scholarships will be awarded to seniors and three $1,000 scholarships will be awarded to freshman.

Nancy Garrabrants, the Director of Stockbridge, commented on other uses of the recent donation.

"The Osterman fund will also serve as an opportunity for all Turfgrass Management Program students to attend the New England Regional Turfgrass Conference in March of 1999 with the aid of free buses to and from the conference," Garrabrants said.

The fund was organized this past year when Robert Osterman, nephew of the late Charles E. and Frances M. Osterman, carried out the wishes of his aunt and uncle after Charles's death in 1985 and Frances's recent death in 1997.

Charles Osterman was a groundskeeper and superintendent for the New Jersey estate of the late Sen. Edmund Wakelee.

Osterman's love for turfgrass management was passed on for generations when his nephew Robert Osterman graduated from the Turfgrass Management Program at UMass Amherst in 1968 and his sons, Kurt and Keith Osterman, also attended the Turfgrass Management Program, graduating from the program in 1993 and 1994.

The Osterman's indicated that they would like one third of their estate to be given to "educational Institutions with courses in soils, grasses, and landscape technology, equipment, and management."

Thus, Robert Osterman recently donated $260,000 to agronomy schools at Michigan State University and Lake City Community College of Florida.

Turfgrass Management Program students who have inquiries regarding the new scholarship fund should direct questions to Nancy Garrabrants in Stockbridge Hall.

Talk on loss of inmate education starts Prison Awareness Week

By Ryan Coughlin
Collegian Correspondent

"The Last Graduation," a Radical Anti-Imperialist League (RAIL) event, addressed the issue of prison inmates' loss of Pell Grant funds last night.

The discussion in the Dukes Room of the Student Union focused on American prisoners' almost total lack of higher education since Congress passed a bill in 1994 discontinuing federal money for inmate Pell Grants. The event is part of "Prison Awareness Week," sponsored by RAIL.

The discussion's main event was a documentary in which the climax was the last graduation before the closing of a prison inmate college after its funding was stopped.

One of the views the film took is that the criminal justice system is classist and racist. It cites that in the prisons of New York state, 80% of inmates are from only seven different neighborhoods in New York City. It also states that 85% of criminals in prison are in for drug related charges.

One inmate in the video emphasized how college gave him something to do and allowed him better opportunities when he re-entered society. On his release, 25 years after his original incarceration, he became a community activist and never returned behind bars.

The video depicted the voice of those who lobbied and eventually succeeded in pulling federal aid from prison higher education. Lawmakers and judicial officers told how most criminals were unreachable and were unfit for society. They said Pell Grants were wasted on them.

Former beneficiaries of the Pell Grants were adamantly opposed, pointing out their productivity in prison and society at large.

RAIL members were adamantly opposed to the politics they believe keep filling prisons, while ignoring the roots of social unrest. "Cellucci wants to build supermax prisons, while Harshbarger wants to build supermax prisons and bootcamps," Chris Johnson, a postgraduate student in biology, said about the current gubernatorial election. "Prisons have never been about rehabilitation, but now they have stopped the pretense of rehabilitation."

The four other students at the event found it enlightening and agreeable. Brian Cullinan, an undeclared freshman, said "prison awareness week shines the light on the fact that prisoners are emotional beings."

Mary Miltis, a sophomore English major, said "It opened my eyes to the issue of classism as it relates to prisons."

"Prison Awareness Week," continues until Thursday, with a rally at the steps of the Student Union and a documentary tomorrow, with a "Forum on The Injustice System," Thursday at 7 p.m.

Weather costs rise due to global warming

By Lyndsay Crenshaw
Collegian Correspondent

Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (MASSPIRG), recently reported that Massachusetts suffered more than $102 million in weather related damages.

The report entitled "The Rising Cost of Global Warming" states that the nation spent $14.4 billion due to weather conditions.

The report suggests that recent extreme weather in the United States is related to increasingly high levels of carbon dioxide emissions that contribute to increased global temperatures.

Michael Mann, a professor of Geoscience agreed with the report's findings.

"The science is clear. Our research demonstrates that the 1990s have been the warmest decade in the last 600 years," Mann said.

The report takes into account economic loss, insured loss and federal disaster aid costs due to weather-related disasters.

But weather-related damages do not seem to be rising.

According to Jay Rasku, a campus organizer for MASSPIRG, in 1995 the total cost of weather related damages for the nation came to $120 billion and in 1994 the total was $75 billion.

"People around the country are suffering — losing homes, business, and in the worst case, even loved ones. Congress and the President must act to reduce the pollution that causes global warming," said Meghan James, MASSPIRG Climate Change Coordinator.

The conference held last December in Kyoto, Japan was aimed at doing just that.

Over 150 countries participated and agreed to reduce green house gas emissions by 5.2 percent as an average taken between the years 2008 and 2010, according to a press release on the conference.

"The Kyoto protocol provides for real and significant green house gas reductions," said Michael Zammit Cutjar, executive secretary of the United Nations Climate Change Convention.

The details of the protocol will be discussed on Nov. 2-13 during an international meeting in Buenos Aires, Argentina.

"We are now in the eve of the next round of international global warming negotiations," said James. "When the American delegation goes to Buenos Aires next month, they should represent the interest of the American people, not the pollution."

Despite such efforts as the Kyoto conference, many feel more drastic action is needed.

"It's not enough but it's a good start because it gets people thinking," said Jay Rasku, a campus organizer for MASSPIRG.

Professor Mann expressed similar sentiments.

"Most climate scientists agree the reductions that were agreed upon were not sufficient to solve the problem," Mann said.

■ voting

continued from page 1

democratic legislature, which includes Senator Warren Tolman, who is our running mate for Lt. Governor. This just echoes the commitment to higher education," Chaudhuri said.

Cellucci has also proposed cuts for Massachusetts universities and colleges. Cellucci proposed a 10 percent tuition cut for community colleges in the Commonwealth and has also proposed a five percent tuition cut for universities.

Harshbarger has also attacked Cellucci on issues such as building maintenance. Harshbarger's platform for UMass calls for improvement of buildings, hiring more teachers as well as training teachers and keeping the UMass budget up to par.

"The Cellucci administration has grossly underfunded the UMass budget ever since I have been in office," said Rep. Ellen Story (D-Amherst).

Cellucci proposed an $8 million boost for scholarships at state colleges and universities. He has also proposed cuts in fees.

Acting Governor Cellucci is also for higher standards for teachers in Massachusetts colleges and universities.

"Governor Cellucci has helped increase standards at UMass. He knows it is a great school and will do everything to make it better," said Shawn Feddeman, spokesperson for the Cellucci campaign.

The remaining candidate for governor, Dean Cook, has not put forth many plans to improve education reform, but has talked a lot about what needs to be done. He believes there needs to be less government control over education. The reason students can not get a quality education is because the government controls the educational system, and all they tend to do is raise taxes, according to Cook.

Cook also talked about how the current government is getting students to mortgage their future, by keeping tuition rates high and forcing students to accept high student loans with high rates.

When Cook visited UMass to speak at the Canibus Reform Coalition meeting on Oct. 22, he urged students to vote for him. "They're [UMass students] not going to be students forever. If they don't want government to control their lives, their only choice is to vote Libertarian."

DANIELLE K. GILARDI / COLLEGIAN

Faces from the Curtain
Promo posters line the windows of the Curtian Theater, as an unknown patron looks on.

NEWSPAPER

College Newspaper of the Year
1998
Daily Collegian
University of Massachusetts

New England Newspaper Association

University of Massachusets
Theatre Guild presents
November 5, 6 & 7 at 8pm
with November 7 matinee at 2pm
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall, UMASS Amherst
THE WIZ
Ticket Information
$10 General Public / $5 Five College Students, Kids under 12
Groups of 20 or more - $8/$4
Tickets Available at Bowker Box Office 413.545.2511
For more information call the UMTG office at 413.545.0415
Artistic Director: Tara M. McRae
Production Manager: Ari Teplitz
Choreographer: Denise Brown
Vocal Director: Dolores Brown
Produced in cooperation with Samuel French Inc. 45 West 25th Street New York, NY 10010
THE WIZ
This production is made possible in part by a grant from the UMASS Arts Council
co-sponsored by The Daily Collegian

UNITED WAY WEEK
Hampshire Community United Way at BURGER KING
BURGER KING!
11 AM-11 PM. NOVEMBER 2 THRU 8
2 BURGERS
+2 FRIES
for $2.22
REGISTER TO WIN
4 TICKETS TO NEW ENGLAND PATRIOTS GAME
2 UMASS BASKETBALL TICKETS WITH LIMO TO AND FROM GAME
AMC MOVIE PASSES
UMASS HOCKEY TICKETS
SPRINGFIELD FALCONS TICKETS
Burger King of Easthampton, Northampton and Hadley will donate $1.22 to the United Way!
So come and enjoy a great meal, get a great deal, and help out a great cause:
Hampshire Community United Way

DANIELLE K. GILARDI / COLLEGIAN

Intensely precise
Cecelai Lim, a senior BDIC major, painstakingly works on her intricate woodcut.

Anthrax evidence not found in letters to abortion clinics

By John Kelly
Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — An anthrax scare at eight abortion clinics in four Midwestern states was pronounced a hoax yesterday.

Tests found no evidence that any of the eight threatening letters received on Friday and Saturday contained the deadly bacteria or any other bacterial agent, FBI spokesman Bill Carter said.

However, tests still were being performed to identify a brownish powder found inside at least four of the envelopes.

Even without anthrax, it is still a crime to threaten to use a weapon of mass destruction.

The FBI said it has no suspects.

The letters were received at clinics in Indianapolis; New Albany, Ind.; Scottsburg, Ind.; Knoxville, Tenn.; Wichita, Kan.; and Louisville, Ky. All eight of the 3-by-5-inch white envelopes had Cincinnati postmarks.

The letters said: "You have just been exposed to anthrax." Meanwhile, the clinic in Knoxville received a hoax bomb yesterday.

"Similar devices have been received in other cities and the FBI is coordinating the national aspect of this investigation," David Ries, the special agent in charge of the FBI's Knoxville office, said in a statement. He did not say which other cities were involved.

The suspicious package arrived in the mail at the Knoxville Center for Reproductive Health, which had received its letter threat on Friday.

The FBI, the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco & Firearms and the Knoxville police all were called. The Knoxville police bomb squad determined the device was a hoax.

Another clinic in Knoxville received a suspicious envelope in the mail yesterday. It was not opened, but it also had a Cincinnati postmark and appeared to be identical to the envelopes containing the anthrax threats, said FBI Agent Scott Nowinski in Knoxville. He said it would be sent to Washington for tests.

A clinic in Toledo, Ohio, received a letter yesterday that claimed to contain anthrax, fire officials said. The Center for Choice was evacuated and the two employees who handled the envelope were being treated as if they were exposed to the deadly bacteria, fire Lt. Skip Roemmele said.

That letter was also postmarked from Cincinnati, similar to the other letters.

After a worker opened the letter sent to the Indianapolis clinic, 31 people — including a postal carrier and two police officers — were stripped and scrubbed and given antibiotics as a precaution. A clinic employee in Louisville and a mail carrier there were also given antibiotics.

Most of the eight clinics reopened yesterday.

However, the Indianapolis clinic remained closed until today while workers received counselling and the agency contacted frightened patients to apologize and comfort them. Planned Parenthood spokeswoman Chrystal Struben said.

Hurricane Mitch takes thousands of lives

By Niko Price
Associated Press

CHINANDEGA, Nicaragua — Overwhelmed by death and chaos, officials in Central America yesterday estimated more than 7,000 people died in floods and mudslides triggered by Hurricane Mitch. As Nicaraguan authorities here struggled to account for 1,500 people feared buried by a mudslide, Honduran President Carlos Flores Facusse made an emotional appeal for international aid and announced he was suspending constitutional liberties to combat looting.

"There are corpses everywhere, victims of landslides or of the waters," the president said in a nationally broadcast speech. "The most conservative calculations of the dead are in the thousands, not in the hundreds.

"I ask the international community for human solidarity," he said.

The same was true across the border: as many as 1,500 people were buried near this town in northwest Nicaragua when the crater lake of the Casitas Volcano collapsed, sending a wall of mud and debris onto villages below.

"It looked like a line of helicopters flying really low and coming at us. You could see houses, trees, everything being covered," said Ricardo Antonio Garcia, a 23-year-old farmer whose leg was amputated after it was crushed in the mudslide.

Nicaraguan Vice President Enrique Bolanos said the slide apparently killed 1,000 to 1,500 people and that some 600 other people died elsewhere in the country.

"We perhaps will never know how many people died," he said. In Honduras, "more than 5,000 people" probably died, Dimas Alonzo, operations chief for the National Emergency Committee, told a local radio station. He said the exact number would never be known.

Doctors said yesterday that 10 Americans and another person were killed when a plane operated by the Living Water Teaching Mission crashed Sunday in rains in Guatemala. At least 100 people have died in that country due to Mitch.

The U.S. Coast Guard said it has searched a Colorado-sized section of the Caribbean for 31 people missing since Tuesday aboard a 282-foot tour schooner, the Fantome, operated by Windjammer Barefoot Tours of Miami.

Many parts of Honduras remained cut off almost a week after Mitch barreled into the Bay Island of Guanaja with 180 mph winds. The storm pounded across the Isthmus, dropping up to 25 inches of rain in a six-hour period. It was still bringing rain yesterday to southern Mexico and Guatemala.

Flores Facusse said "the floods and landslides erased from the map many villages and households as well as whole neighborhoods of cities.

"We have before us a panorama of death, desolation and ruin throughout the national territory," the president said.

He announced a "state of exception" suspending constitutional liberties to help officials fight looting and vandalism.

DANIELLE K. GILARDI / COLLEGIAN

Barron Ed Mauery Nestor
Check out these "Four Pittsburg Sculptors" at the Student Union Visual and Performing Arts space.

Difficult decision faced in pulling plug on baby

By Leslie Miller
Associated Press

BOSTON — The state in the case of a severely premature baby born to a comatose rape victim must make the most difficult of family decisions: whether to remove life-support. It is a decision the state gets involved in about half a dozen times a year. The cases are generally taken care of quietly, but the baby girl born to a 24-year-old woman apparently raped in her nursing home has stirred headlines around the region.

"A real complication is you've got a ward of the state that everyone knows about," said Megan McAndrew Cooper, editor of the Dartmouth Atlas of Health Care.

The state will not necessarily make the final decision.

The baby girl's grandparents were denied custody last week, but a judge may still grant them guardianship or appoint someone else to represent the best interests of the child.

The Boston Herald reported yesterday that the baby girl, believed to be born after 26 weeks' gestation, was brain dead. Yesterday, a spokeswoman for New England Medical Center's Floating Hospital merely said the child remains in critical condition.

Whatever happens, a heated ethical debate is likely to arise over the child's fate — a debate that will only make the decision more difficult.

"Often the child gets lost in these struggles over who has the right to make the decision," said Dr. Robert Nelson, a Milwaukee neonatologist who chairs the American Academy of Pediatrics committee on bioethics.

"Most neonatologists would try to get a working relationship with the parents," he said. "In the absence of that it gets difficult, figuring out what one ought to do."

One question likely to be raised is whose interest the state is protecting.

"Are we pretending the state that acts for the nonresuscitation order is acting in the interest of the child or the taxpayer?" said Marvin Ventrell, director of the Colorado-based National Association of Counsel for Children.

In Virginia, the state stepped in after a family feud erupted over whether to take Hugh Finn, a former TV anchorman, off life support. He had been in a persistent vegetative state for 3 1/2 years.

Finn died Oct. 9, eight days after he was taken off life support.

"It was tragic to put people through that," said Judge Richard FitzGerald, trustee of the National Council of Juvenile and Family Court Judges and a friend of Finn's.

"It is an ultimate decision between the family and the medical service provider," he said.

"There are those points where the state does not necessarily have a right to intrude in a fundamental family decision. I think the issue of state intervention comes when a family fails to take action which is medically suggested or required."

PLAY HARD TO STAY HARD
JOIN THE BEST
HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club
The Area's Most Complete Club
92 Gatehouse Rd. off Rt. 9.
2 miles East of Town Center
256-6446

We'll be skiing and riding this month...How 'bout you?
Mount Snow Job Fair
Sat, November 14 • 10 am - 2 pm
Main Base Lodge
Rentals, Tickets, Security, Phone Sales, Housekeeping, Lift Attendants, Perfect Turn Coaches
Food & Beverage, Custodial, Childcare, Lodging, Parking, Patrol, Retail Mount Snow VERMONT U.S.A.
Free Skiing & Snowboarding Await You!
Mount Snow Resort • Rt 100 • W. Dover • Vermont
802-464-3333 • E.E.
www.mountsnow.com

"Reason No4 why you should take my MCAT course."
Our teachers deliver
Only the best instructors teach our courses. Not only are they experts in their specific field, (physics, biology, chemistry, verbal) but they have also passed our rigorous hiring and training process.
Call 1-800-2REVIEW
or visit us at www.review.com
Courses held on the UMASS campus! Smith, Mt. Holyoke, and WNEC as well
THE PRINCETON REVIEW

Our goal is to inform

To our readers:

When you picked up your copy of The Massachusetts Daily Collegian yesterday, you more than likely came across an insert headlined "UMass votes!"

The original concept of the pull-out section, designed and sponsored by the Student Center for Educational Research and Advocacy (SCERA), was that of an informational and educational special insert that would help inform the University of Massachusetts community — and others within the Collegian's readership — of today's elections.

The section was not intended to be biased in any way, shape or fashion.

Unfortunately, due to SCERA's time constraints, material from the Paul Cellucci and Dean Cook campaigns was not received early enough to be included. That gave the insert a bias, though SCERA members have said such a slant was inadvertent.

Because this omission will have a tremendous impact on not only the Massachusetts residents who attend this University, but also the school's out-of-state students, the Collegian has been acutely aware of its role as an informational and educational tool.

We have tried to provide our readers with as much information as possible, so that when voters go to the polls today they will do so with a comprehensive and knowledgeable plan of action.

The Collegian has followed the campaigns of both the Republican candidate Cellucci and Democratic candidate Scott Harshbarger. Libertarian Dean Cook has also been featured on these pages.

The news section has covered two gubernatorial debates, first at this campus' William D. Mullins Center and last week in Boston's Faneuil Hall. The editorial page has also run opinion pieces on Cellucci and Harshbarger.

It is our mission to inform. We hope that our readers will realize the Collegian has a commitment to fair, accurate, non-partisan reporting. Though our name appeared on yesterday's insert, the publication was SCERA's and does not necessarily reflect the opinions or views of The Massachusetts Daily Collegian or any of its writers.

Sincerely,
Casey Kane, Editor-in-Chief

Looks like a lady

Halloween to me is one of the few times of the year when a person can become something that normally society would condemn. Men can get away with dressing up as bunnies and women can have a mustache and beard without being ridiculed. Therefore, I used this Halloween as an opportunity to explore something most people would tease men for doing: wearing so-called women's clothing.

Considering my lack of ownership of women's clothing, I got to shop for them for the first time, thankfully with a female friend. It would have been easier if no one else were in the stores, but of course, that would be no fun.

After accustoming myself to putting skirts up to my waist and seeing if they were long enough, I decided to survey the other customers. Ignoring other women in the store was not a problem since they were involved in shopping, but trying not to listen to what their boyfriends said proved difficult.

It happened that two women had arrived with their boyfriends, but the males refused to shop with them. Instead they proceeded to mock their girlfriends at the same time they approved or disapproved of the sexual appeal of the clothes they saw their girlfriends considering. One male picked up a low-cut top and held it up to him as his friend laughed and joked "When can I pick you up, baby!" Besides showing off immaturity, I doubt the two realized they were showing how most people judge a potential mate by their clothing.

Furthermore, their standing outside the store suggests they believe women's shopping should only be done by the women. By constantly standing at the entrance to the store, they were separating themselves from a type of clothing that is only for the so-called other side. Yes, I know some men go into stores with girlfriends, but picture the amount of men that you've seen sitting outside them. Personally, I'd want my partner to come in, since my partner's opinion of the clothes would be just as important as my own.

"What thrilled and surprised me more than buying the top and skirt were the reactions that people gave me at the Halloween party I went to."

Jason Wiesenbach

What thrilled and surprised me more than buying the top and skirt were the reactions that people gave me at the Halloween party I went to. The first guy I saw didn't give me what would've been typical outside of the Halloween atmosphere, such as a quick dirty look and a darting of the eyes downward. Instead, he said he was not surprised that I "wore the same colors as a woman as I do as a man."

Since he said it positively, I took it as a compliment. This is the same person who acts very masculine normally, yet he did not even give me a second look. It shows immense things about the way society functions, since he acted like it was outside the realm of everyday occurrences. Is it that this person underneath did not have a problem with anyone wearing women's clothes and the context of the party allowed him to express this? More than likely, though, he knew he and society would mock me for doing this, for example, at work. Or, in the words of another guy there, "Are you going to try getting a job like that?"

Personally, I felt that the men turned it more into a joke than the women did. The men always laughed when they said anything to me, suggesting that I was to believe their positive words only during the party and not afterwards. A few of the women, though, actually seemed sincere.

For example, one told me that "It's nice to see you have different taste in clothing besides the usual t-shirt and jeans." I told her it wasn't my fault that society teaches men that they must wear only a few styles of clothes while women can choose from a great deal more. Of course, the increased choices comes with the added emphasis on women's appearance, which would likely be more torturous to me.

Later on, I talked to a female friend who asked me if I was selling the skirt afterwards. When I paused for a few seconds, she quickly asked if I was going to "dress like this all the time." I told her I wasn't ready to subject myself to a constant lack of respect from the general population.

Yet, society won't change if no one rebels, and I could dismiss the negative comments and looks as part of an uneducated majority. However, no one can deny that a man wearing skirts will not have the same respect he would receive wearing masculine clothing. And I guess if I wanted to wear women's clothing again, I could find sanctuary within my own home and with a few select friends.

But switching genders would not solve the problem, for that would still support gender specific clothing standards. A more egalitarian position would be to wear whatever is comfortable for the time of year or personal activity. Clothing would be gender neutral, as stores would not label sections of clothes by gender, but by style.

I think by shopping for atypical men's clothing and then wearing it to a Halloween party, it shows how such arbitrary things as clothing have become immensely gender specific. With the positive responses that my friends gave though, it shows how society has forced us to hide our true selves underneath materials. We then can stereotype people, and thus continue the power structure that gender perpetuates.

For me, clothing should provide a chance to express myself on the outside, since it's all most people ever know. If I can choose clothing without gender concepts mixed in, then I can use clothing for what I feel it should be used.

Jason Wiesenbach is a UMass student.

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor. But please remember:

* Letters must be typed and signed.
* No more than 400 words long.
* They must include name, address, and phone number for confirmation purposes.
* The Collegian reserves the right to edit letters for length, clarity, and style.

They can be submitted by mail to:
Ed/Op Editor, Daily Collegian,
113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst MA 01003;
by email on our new account at letters@oitunix.oit.umass.edu, or by fax to (413) 545-1592.

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

Kids say the darnedest things

When I walked into the Campus Center last week and was swarmed by little children, my first thought was, "Great. Another gubernatorial debate."

Then I got really worried. "Criminy, they've lowered admission standards again." I had visions of those little monkeys raising their hands in class before me. "Anti- Federalists!" they yell out before I can even think of the answer. Terrific, just what I need.

I mean, I have trouble adding numbers in my head. Someone was looking for the answer to 16 plus 18 the other day, and I sat there and I knotted my brow. Suddenly I was like Little Man Tate, numbers flying around my head, neon infinity symbols buzzing by my eyes. I sweated the answer out of the deepest fissures of my brain: "34!"

By the time I blurted it out, the person looking for the answer had left for the day. Someone who had just walked in stared at me curiously. "Uh, I need a new shirt," I said on the way out.

Now I had more competition. Great.

Boy, was I elated when I found out it was just some mega field trip. Whew. Truth be told, I was kind of looking forward to the little kids joining the prestigious ranks of UMass. Finally, someone I could beat at basketball. "Who's gonna drop the rock on me? You, punk? I'm Mike-diesel!" Yeah, white men don't need to jump.

I was taken aback when I received a whole bunch of letters the other day from these kids. I was surprised because the only contact I truly had with them was me trying to get through them while saying, "Get out from under my feet, you little chimps. I want to rent Air Bud from Captain Video." But as everyone seems to send their miscellany letters, issues and problems to the Collegian ("Have you seen my car keys? Signed, Jim"), I decided to sit down and answer some of the little tykes' queries. And don't you know it? Kids do say the darnedest things!

- "What's with the seagulls? Aren't we miles from the ocean?"

Yes, but the seagulls come here for a topnotch state education. Their dirty little secret (besides the fact that they go to the bathroom in public — but that's not so secret when you think about it) is that they actually got into Boston University, but couldn't get financial aid.

- "In reference to the library, what does the word 'phallic' mean?"

Whoa! Where'd you hear that word, Stevie? "Phallic" comes from the ancient Greek meaning, uh, 'fancy book learner.' But never, ever, tell your parents that you're going to be phallic when you grow up. Trust me, they won't react well.

Mike Messaros

- "I was on campus for five hours, and now housing services is charging me for housing and a meal plan. What's up with that?"

What is up with that indeed. Like the best phone companies, Housing Services charges by the second. And make sure next semester you tell them you're living off campus (with your parents, of course), or they'll be likely to penalize you for cancelling your housing too late.

- "I saw a lot of people crying on campus. Why?"

Those are English majors, possibly in their senior year. They are most likely past the point of epiphany, where they realize that in an ever-changing global economy, their knowledge of villanelles and iambic pentameter render them unemployable in this fast paced, technology-oriented world. They are realizing that soon they will be working in porno shacks, explaining to late night customers exactly what is meant by "Topless Coming Soon." Some, though, hold on to the dream set by Jimmy "The Hammer" Santucci, who actually owns his own porno shack.

Truth be told, I was kind of looking forward to the little kids joining the prestigious ranks of UMass. Finally, someone I could beat at basketball.

- "They told me the Fine Arts Center looks like a piano from the air. Is this true?"

The Fine Arts Center, or, as it is now known, "The House That Willie Nelson Rocked," is based on a style of Russian architecture called nyet bidonya which roughly translates into "House with no soul." From the air, it does look like a piano, but being that the only thing to pass over it are the seagulls no one gets to fully enjoy the pristine beauty that is the cement piano. All the seagulls see it as the cement toilet.

- "What does the school's Latin motto mean?"

Whatever, dude. No, that's literally it.

- "Is it really free to ride on the PVTA?"

It depends on the driver. With some, it's free; with others, you have to pay in "gas, grass or ass." I don't ride the PVTA much...

- "I saw a bunch of people with signs, yelling about the end of the world at passers-by. Who are these zealots?"

Republicans.

- "What's this I hear about Smith...?"

Ho-ho! I catch your drift, little man. Smith is nothing more than a finishing school, and their parties are just an excuse for them to practice their manners.

Don't you know that children are our future? Something something and let them lead the way. Show them all the beauty they possess inside. Give them a sense of pride. Or something along those lines. These little ragamuffins are our future leaders, our future English majors, our future porno shack attendants and our future gubernatorial candidates. And if they know what words like "phallic" means, then this country is going to be in great shape.

Mike Messaros is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Ballot Question Number Two

To the editor:

The passing of the clean elections law will change completely the way our state government operates. It will not allow our legislators or the offices themselves to be bought by the highest bidders. This will help in sending a message to our federal representatives to enact campaign finance reform at the federal level.

The principle of one vote for one person will be affirmed. Candidates would spend less time raising money and more time engaged with what they should be doing: talking with voters and dealing with the issues.

Please vote yes on ballot question number two.

Dade Singapuri
Amherst

Band appreciates publicity

To the editor:

I am writing on behalf of the twenty-five members of my band, the Bruce Bass Funkestra and Jam Central, in appreciation for your coverage of the band over the past year. You have covered our performances at the Central Area Spring Fest and at other campus venues. It's nice to know that the Collegian recognizes up and coming local bands.

We are working hard this semester to put on more amazing shows in the spring and to once again bring our unique sound to the UMass community. Our twenty-five piece music machine includes three trumpets, three saxophones, four guitars, percussion, one trombone, one oboe, one bass, one flute, five vocalists, and four dancers.

We look forward to seeing you at future performances this spring. Thanks again for your coverage.

Bruce Bass
Northampton

Students denied access to event

To the editor:

We are writing to express our frustration and concern over the lack of graduate and undergraduate student representation at the gubernatorial debate held at the Mullins Center this month. The graduate student body received four tickets, which were confirmed only 24 hours prior to the debate. Upon arrival at the debate, we realized that the general student body had been excluded from submitting questions, a luxury enjoyed only by those selected by the Center for Public Policy. Unfortunately, those special attendees are unaware of the real issues facing higher education, especially here at the University of Massachusetts. The need for affordable, flexible childcare for students was not raised. The lack of any programs for or tracking of economically disadvantaged students at this campus is reprehensible, but also rendered invisible by denying us our right to speak. The disproportionate attrition rate of ALANA students is a problem that I doubt either candidate knows or cares about. The high cost and limited availability of family housing at this campus again gets far less attention than Celluci's no tax pledge, which is largely irrelevant.

The University is more concerned with image than issues. The Center for Public Policy worried more about making the candidates comfortable than confronting them with serious higher education issues.

Emily LaBarbera-Twarog
Chris De Vries
Richard McPalmer
GEO officers

Question 2 for "clean elections"

To the editor:

In Britain, one politician recently said that the lack of spending limits on campaign funds had given rise to "something of an arms race." A Parliamentary committee is recommending a modest spending cap for each party in a national election. If Britain plans to bite the bullet, so to speak, why not the Commonwealth of Massachusetts?

The answer is clear: on Election Day, Massachusetts voters (a substantial segment of this academic community) should vote yes on Question 2 — Public Campaign Financing, also known as the Clean Elections Law. Voters know that it is unfair for a few wealthy donors to give the overwhelming percentage of campaign cash and that it costs too much for candidates to run for public office. They also know that currently candidates spend too much time raising cash and that special interests have too much interest on policies.

Clean Elections would limit campaign spending, remove the big money lonn politics, level the playing field for candidates and voters, and close the soft money loophole. If Maine and Vermont can have such initiatives and laws in place, why not Massachusetts and twenty other states that are currently working on similar initiatives. Passage of Question 2 will send a clear signal to Washington that voters are tired of Congress not taking any action to get special interest money out of politics.

Gerard Braunthal
Professor Emeritus of Political Science

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor-in-Chief Position Vacant Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
Steve Salerno Jr. Advertising Manager David Parmenter Advertising Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Laura Forster Developing Nations Editor
Mike Messaros Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Co-Jewish Affairs Editor
Morgan Tobar Co-Jewish Affairs Editor
Heather Lei Guzzetta Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jill Carroll News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylanski Sports Editor
Allana E. Todman Women's Issues Editor
Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Moxy treats audience

STACY COHEN / COLLEGIAN

Moxy Fruvous gave away some tricks and some treats at the Iron Horse Saturday night.

By Tom Sadlowski
Collegian Correspondent

MOXY FRUVOUS
Iron Horse Music Hall
Oct. 31

NORTHAMPTON — To say that Toronto's Moxy Fruvous put on a sensational show this past Halloween weekend would be an understatement. The band's much anticipated arrival to the venerable Iron Horse in Northampton put the capacity crowd into a state of musical ecstasy.

Touring for their latest release, "Live Noise," the band proved once again how amusing they are in concert. Their compelling lyrics and adventurous blend of musical genres leaves audiences begging for more.

The Halloween show yielded all the tricks and treats that would have been expected of a Moxy Fruvous performance. The powerful two hour set served as a dedication to their eclectic musical influences, included visits on-stage from notorious baystate acts, along with the audience interaction of which the band had become famous for.

Bucking the trend from Friday night's showcase of nearly every song the band has ever recorded, Moxy Fruvous covered just about everything Saturday night, as their performance ranged from songs like Michael Jackson's "Billie Jean," to "Love Me Two Times," by the Doors.

Using a megaphone as a means to manufacture ghostly sounds, guitarist Mike Ford was able to capture the audiences attention throughout the night, while singer and drummer Jian Ghomeshi sought enjoyment in determining how high a purple stuffed animal could project off a cymbal.

It was a festive affair, as fans had the fortune of seeing Moxy Fruvous perform with such artists as the Neilds, Jess Klein, and yeP! keyboardist John Greene.

Moxy Fruvous closed out the set with a stunning version of the Talking Heads' "Psycho Killer." Coming back on stage for an encore, they continued the trend with a cover of the fan-favorite "Brown Eyed Girl." The audience begged for more, and the band finally gave in and performed one of their songs, closing with an a cappella of the "Gulf War Song."

If you were unable to obtain tickets for either of the two shows that Moxy Fruvous performed at the Iron Horse this past weekend, check out their latest release, "Live Noise." The delightful album was recorded live in concert and gives listeners the flavor of a true Moxy Fruvous show.

Talented Boston singer-songwriter, Jess Klein, performed a breathtaking set as she opened for Moxy Fruvous Saturday night. This inspiring young artist will return to the Iron Horse on Tuesday, Nov. 10 for a show that should not be missed.

Audiomap for subway sounds

Moving away from the fragile state of hip-hop, I'd like to pay homage to the subterranean sound providers of the culture. These cats have quietly been fortifying an underworld that is seldom seen or heard by the masses.

Let's begin just east of the Pacific. If you thought that the West Coast died with Tupac or when Snoop sold his style to the Bayou, perhaps you should especially tune in. Throughout the '90s, the burden of California's "non- gangsta" movement primarily resided on the shoulders of Hieroglyphics, the Pharcyde and the Likwit Crew. However, recently the burden has become increasingly less heavy. After DJ Shadow re-established that the Bay Area was a legitimate source for hip-hop, groups like Blackalicious and Jurrsssic 5 began to emerge under the dusty trails of hydrolisized, hoshangin' lowriders.

Swollen Members, who also belong to the legendary Rock Steady Crew, consist of Mad Child and Prevail on vocals, Zodiak on the 1&2's and Easy Rock the B-boy. They have just completed an EP on BattleAxe Records that features their own production as well as guest appearances from Del tha Funky Homosepian, Everlast, Son Doobie, Kutmasta Kurt and MixMasterMike. If that isn't enough to moisten the saliva glands, they also collaborate with Aceyalone, who is a slick-witted MC in his own right. Hailing from Los Angeles, he is one of raps most introspective thinkers. His debut album Book of Human Language, features a faucet of thoughtful rhymes and beats provided by his teammate Mumbles.

David Katzoff

Dilated Peoples, who hook up with DJ Babu from the World Famous Beat Junkies, have released an assortment of nasty singles that will bring life to any mix-tape. With Babu providing the sinisterest of scratches, the joints "Work the Angle" and "Triple Optics" are guaranteed to get the neck muscles popping.

Moving eastward, we must make a pit stop in Philadelphia to sojourn the vast chambers of Adigio! These fellas, who also represent "money earnin'" Mount Vernon, NY, epitomize hip-hops cellar dwellers. With painstaking time in the studio, they have written, produced and composed music for their entire EP entitled N) to Philly.

Speaking of Philly, have I mentioned The Last Emperor? He is best known from his verse on "C.L.A." with KRS-One and Zack de la Rocha, but don't let this performance influence you until you see him live. He is one of the few lyricists that can get a crowd jumping and listening at the same time. His rhymes range from notable emcees battling comic book characters (Genius slays Silver Surfer with his Liquid Sword) to the denunciation of materialism:

"My entourage of bums are too numerous to mention/ On top of that we broke as hell and can't afford to pay attention..."

Since time is rather short and New York is rather packed with talent, I'd like to acknowledge two of the state's most silent assassins of sound. The Arsonists are a five man crew that have been given tremendous acclaim from a small circle. Their influences range from James Brown to Rage Against the Machine and they are loosely being compared with Souls of Mischief. Their most notable song, "The Session," exploded underground nearly a year ago but has not received its proper respect. Look out for the Arsonists as they continue to blaze spots up and down the east coast.

Another blossoming NY talent is Shabaam Sahdeeq who is part of the Rawkus Record clan. He has worked with the likes of US3, Mr. Complex, Pharoh Monch and Natural Resource. His first two singles "Soundclash" and "5 Star

Turn to SUBWAY, page 7

Northampton Film Festival brings Slaves of Hollywood to screen

By Rob Roensch
Collegian Staff

Slaves of Hollywood, a lacerating satire of Hollywood power games, is a new feature coming to the Northampton Film Festival this Sunday.

The film takes the underrepresented point of view of the lowest members of the power system, the young dreamers who go to Hollywood with little more than dreams of becoming a movie star or a respected director or a cell-phone toting agent. The problem is that there are more than enough players already, so the only positions available for the naive newcomers are the menial jobs: mail-room worker, coffee gopher, and babysitter.

There are two options for the young dreamers: they can sell out their creativity and morality and move up in the system by becoming part of it, or they can stick to their guns and get fired. It is either lose your self-respect or lose your job, not much of a choice.

The filmmakers Michael Wechsler and Terry Keefe both put in their time in the shark-filled studios of Hollywood. They first began shooting the film on weekends and days off from their jobs as personal assistants in the troubled Orion studios. Many of the film's little "horror stories" are actually true, like the production assistant who has to pick up his boss's kids and the assistant whose boss leaves him by the side of the road with a broken down car.

Slaves of Hollywood is the filmmakers' revenge against the Hollywood establishment, exposing the soulless, power hungry demons behind the shiny, happy facade.

The plot of Slaves follows the making of a fictional documentary about the lives of several young dreamers/ production assistants: Paulette, the director of the documentary who happens to be the daughter of the most powerful movie maker in town; Fisher, a music-video lover who is drawn into an endless party lifestyle; Thomas, a nervous, idealistic Jewish man; Pink, a socially inept Star Wars fan; and Roman Sofine, a smooth player-to-be.

The young men and women change and grow throughout a period of several months, both in relationship to themselves and to the Hollywood system, not always for the better.

Their dilemmas and frustrations are related to the audience through the witty, laid-back dialogue that characterizes American indie-comedy. It's an easy movie to watch, but it doesn't just float away. The filmmakers make sure that the young people are given a history and a future, so that their choices are important ones with serious, moral ramifications. The movie's perspective is also slightly off kilter, stuffed with weird touches like an Alfred Hitchcock impersonator and a movie mogul that broods in an empty sound-stage. It's like listening to a slightly crazy, over-tired friend rant about their job at three in the morning. The tone is perfect for this story of frustrated dreams.

Slaves of Hollywood may never enter widescale release but it is crossing the globe on the festival circuits, making stops at the Brisbane festival in Australia and the St. Petersburg Festival of Festivals in Russia among others before landing at the Northampton Film Festival, playing at Stoddard Hall at 1 p.m. this Sunday.

The film has a budget of less than 100,000 dollars and it took more than three years to make, but the end product is as sharp as anything Hollywood puts out. It's a testament to the inventiveness and perseverance of the filmmakers, and also to the possibilities for American movies made outside the mainstream. It's a movie Hollywood doesn't want you to see.

COURTESY TERRY KEEFE

Thomas (Howard Scott) and Roman (Rob Hyland) make some devious deals in the biting satire Slaves of Hollywood.

COURTESY TERRY KEEFE

Co-directors Michael Wechsler and Terry Keefe on the set of Slaves of Hollywood.

COME ON DOWN AND WRITE FOR ARTS!!

amc Hampshire 6 - 584-7560 Hampshire Mall
Mt. Farms 4 - 584-9153 Mt. Farms Mall
WHAT DREAMS MAY COME (PG-13) Today at (5:30 @ 9) 5:50
SOLDIER (R) Today at (5:50 @ 9) 3:30 @ 8:30
PRACTICAL MAGIC (PG 13) Today at (5:40 @ 9) 5:30 @ 8:10
Beloved (R) Today at (4:00 @ 9) 5:30 @ 7:30
Urban Legend (R) Today at 8:20
RUSH HOUR (PG-13) Today at (5:10 @ 9) 5:30 @ 8:30
"John Carpenter's VAMPIRES (R) Today at (5:40 @ 9) 5:50 @ 8:20
APT Pupil (R) Today at (5:30 @ 9) 5:50 @ 8:10
Pleasantville (PG-13) Today at (5:20 @ 9) 5:30 @ 8:00
ANTZ (PG) Today at (4:00 @ 9) 5:30 @ 8:40
Bride of Chucky (R) Today at (5:50 @ 9) 5:30 @ 8:30
$2.50 (Post-Lites) Stored Daily

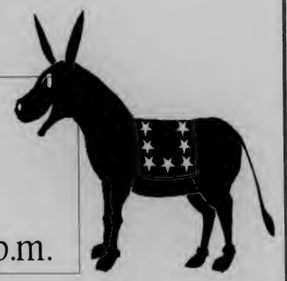
CASTAWAY LOUNGE
Rte. 5 & 10 Whately, MA 413-665-2733
1997 1998
Adult Entertainment proudly presents:
EVERY MONDAY NIGHT IS FOOTBALL NIGHT
FREE FOOD, PRIZE GIVEAWAYS!!!
5 Beautiful Exotic Dancers 5pm-1am
$$$ BEAUTIFUL GIRLS, need money? $$$
No experience? No transportation? We will provide everything!
Call (413) 665-8733 Ask for Jim
Coming AMATEUR NIGHT
Ladies must apply in person
North at 91: Exit 22, take Rte. 5 & 10 north 2 miles
South at 91: Exit 24, take Rte. 5 & 10 south 2 miles

Calculus Tutor
• Friendly & Helpful
• Affordable
• Available Anytime (at your campus bookstore)
CliffsNotes

Welcome back... NOW GO AWAY!
Check out Lots Great Advice Nice people
travel accessories and backpacks sold here! European railpasses and international student ID cards issued on the spot!
Council Travel
CIEE, Council on International Educational Exchange
44 Main St., Amherst
(413) 256-1261
www.counciltravel.com

Hey! Need A Job!?
Why not be a Bartender!?
• Only professional school in Western MA
• Hands-on training in our fully equipped bar
• National certification in alcohol awareness
• Lifetime referrals • Job Card • Bonding
• Special UMass student discounts
• Conveniently located in West Springfield
Call TODAY! (413) 747-9888
www.wispower.com

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students! 545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER



Students Matter
You matter

Make Your Voice be Heard

Vote.

Today
Tuesday November 3rd
Polls open 7:00 a.m. to 8:00 p.m.

Where To Vote, and How To get there

Van Service to and from Polling Places 12:00 p.m. - 7:00 p.m.

Cluster	Polling Place	Polling Place Address	Pickup Location	Time
•Cashin/Brown/McNamara	•Immanuel Lutheran Church	•Church Lounge, N. Pleasant St.	•Cashin Bus Stop	• Every hour on the hour
•Johnson/Lewis/Thatcher •Dwight/Leach/Hamlin •Crabtree/Knowlton Mary Lyon	•Immanuel Lutheran Church	•Church Lounge, N. Pleasant St.	•Crabtree Bus Stopà	• 10 min. past the hour
•Webster/Dickinson •Grayson/Field	•North Fire Station	•East Pleasant St.	• Dickenson Bus Stop	• Every hour on the hour
•VanMeter	•North Fire Station	•East Pleasant St.	• VanMeter Bus Stop	• 10 min. past the hour
•ButterField •Baker/Chadbourne/ Greenough	•Wildwood School	•Strong St.	• Chadbourne Bus Stop	• Every hour on the hour
•Gorman/Wheeler •Brett/Brooks	•Wildwood School	•Strong St.	• New Africa House	• 10 min. past the hour
•Commuters	• Call Town Clerk for details (256-4035)	• Vans will have Precinct Map	• Studnet Union Steps	• Every hour on the hour

Southwest voters, vote in Hampden Commons

More Info? call 545-0355 or Visit the voter info Web Page:

http://www.umass.edu/rso/scera

R.E.M.'s on the Up–side

COURTESY ANTON CORBIJN

Michael Stipe, Mike Mills and Peter Buck prove R.E.M. is a brand new band on their latest release, Up.

By Mike Messaros
Collegian Staff

UP
R.E.M.
Warner

The last thing we heard from R.E.M. on their last album, New Adventures in Hi-Fi, was Michael Stipe's voice, alone at the end of "Electrolite" singing out, "I'm not scared/ I'm outta here." It was a beautiful, defiant moment from a band that had gone through so much on their last tour, with illness falling on three of the four members, that it

In the two years since, R.E.M. is practically a new band, stripped of the history that has been constant throughout its 18 or so years. The band fired its manager under shady circumstances, Scott Litt (who has produced their albums since Document) had no time to work on the new album, and most importantly, drummer Bill Berry left and R.E.M. signalling the first change for a band that since it began, since their first day practicing, involved the same four people.

I remember hearing about Berry's leaving almost exactly a year ago today. "The Future Is Uncertain" was a suggested title for one of their albums (Out of Time, I believe), but now it was their motto. But the band came out of the inner turmoil with a new, do-anything philosophy. As Michael Stipe said soon after Berry's announcement: "A three legged dog can still walk, it just learns to do it differently."

Flash forward a year and we have Up, the brand spanking new R.E.M. album from the brand spanking new R.E.M.; perhaps the most unexpected album of the year. The album is a new adventure in hi-fi from a band that felt it needed to radically redefine their sound. It is an album that presents a buffet (yes, a buffet) of sounds, old and new, as R.E.M. grasps to find a new sound in the wake of such dramatic changes. At first, it's disconcerting listening to a band that should be as confident as R.E.M. struggling to find an identity. But on repeated listens, the album rewards.

The first single "Daysleeper" is built around an acoustic picking pattern that recalls "Fall on Me" and concerns itself with contemporary politics unseen since "Ignoreland" on Automatic for the People. And for all of its electronic, studio bluster, "The Apologist," with its minor key arrangement and a chorus ("I'm sorry/ So sorry") that recalls earlier songs ("So. Central Rain"), is pure R.E.M.

But at other times, tracks are indescribably un-R.E.M. "AirportMan," the first track is anti-melodic, built on a tinny casio beat, harsh guitar samples and ambient keyboard sounds. "Hope" is built on dueling keyboards and another synthetic beat. Guitarist Peter Buck's always catchy guitar work is sometimes given a backseat to other sounds to carry the songs, although it is his snakey riff on "Lotus" and the two guitars (one electric and one acoustic) on "Sad Professor" which recall his finest work.

While the use of drum machines and keyboards throughout the album, would lead one to perceive the work as artificial, it is as organic and emotional as the band's other work. This is partly because of Stipe's always evocative vocals and lyrics. "Hope" concerns someone looking for a cure, hoping to "cross your DNA with something reptile."

The album is a high water mark for bassist Mike Mills. While R.E.M. has always, on the surface, been Michael Stipe's show, Mike Mills has been the secret ace in the hole. While he has always played a variety of roles in the band, he has moved beyond simply playing bass here. He plays guitar, keyboards and a little bass on the album. The eclectic influence he brings pays off here, as the band moves beyond the pop that they were always so willing to stretch the boundaries of. "Why Not Smile," for example, builds uniformly from a simple, burbling electronic backbeat into and crescendo consisting of layers upon layers of sounds.

This is not to say that one should ache for the old days. We should expect and demand evolution from bands — I'd be disappointed if this were Murmur II. But the question is: is this good experimentation? The experimentation on this album comes as they healthily shed their skin, though at times, they risk losing themselves behind a disguise of homage. "At My Most Beautiful" is a nod to the Beach Boys' Brian Wilson's studio magic, with strings, piano and jingle bells. It's painfully sweet, with Stipe singing about reading bad poetry into his lover's machine: "You always listen carefully/ To awkward rhymes/ You always say your name/ Like I wouldn't know it's you/ At your most beautiful." Cue the "bah-bah-bah" backing vocals, which wash over the mix.

It would be a shame if the experimentation came at the expense of identity. But Up presents us with a new side to R.E.M., a side unwilling to bow to history. What strands remain connecting the present R.E.M. to the past, such as Stipe's vocals and lyrical themes, the meditative quality of their music and their ideas about the beauty and power of music, are present under the wash of electronica. But it is the experimentation that gives the listener the thrill of discovery after each new listen. A

UMass crew reflects on season; looks ahead to spring schedule

By Jimmy Chen
Collegian Correspondent

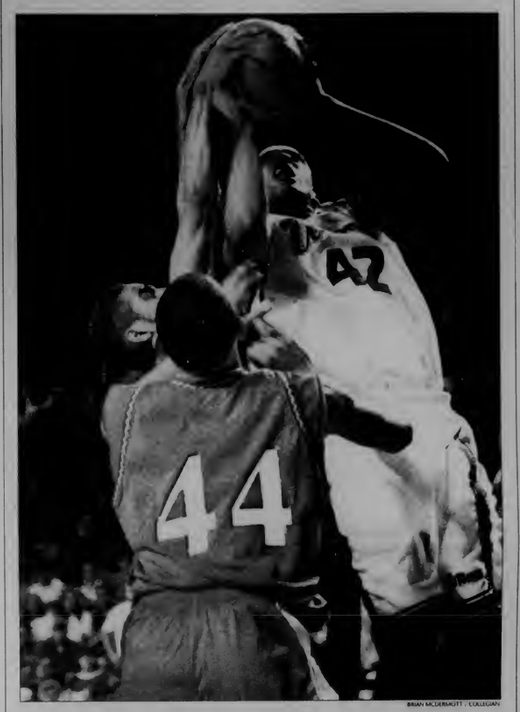
As the curtain descends on the fall season, the Massachusetts crew team heads back to the dugout with some wonders and issues to focus on before starting to race for the A-10 title in February.

The primary issue is that they need to work better with one another.

UMass women's crew coach Jim Dietz cannot stress enough the inexperience of this year's squad as he has often shifted the lineup during this fall season, trying to seek the chemistry that works best.

However, he still remains optimistic.

And there is no doubt in their abilities.



"We felt powerful and strong individually," captain Neyla Leslie said. "We just need to be powerful together. After we get off the water due to the weather, we need to emphasize on being part of the team and row powerfully as a unit."

"We will also need to take care of some minor injuries," Dietz added. Two key rowers, Cary Semenyck and Michelle Archer are currently out of the lineup.

When they do get off the water in two weeks or so, they will be aiming at maximizing individual potential by focusing on good techniques. They will also hit the weight room and increase the workout load in the rowing machine. Then the squad will move to Florida for the training camp over the winter break, where they will face a very intense training schedule three times a week.

"In Florida, we will be more serious, and by the end of the camp, we will try to make our best lineup and rank our top two boats," Dietz said.

By then, captain Renee Domina and Neyla Leslie will receive help from other key veterans, such as Verena Loch, Tamara Saraflic, and Amy Lawless to lead top rowers, the likes of Heather Walker, Jules Blight, and Dawn Stanfield, to yet another strong tournament performance.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Thursday! Thursday! Thursday!

Round ball is on the way. Minutemen faithful! Head to the Mullins Center on Thursday for the arrival of the Converse All-Stars.

Choral classics thrill crowd

By Justin Lynn
Collegian Correspondent

Chamber Choir & Madrigal Singers
Bowker Auditorium
Nov. 1

In anticipation of their upcoming Spring tour of Italy, the University of Massachusetts Chamber Choir enchanted audiences at Bowker Auditorium, Sunday afternoon.

"We will sing in Venice, Florence, and Rome," said Chamber Choir director E. Wayne Abercrombie.

Presented by the UMass Department of Music and Dance, for about an hour and fifteen minutes, Abercrombie and fellow director Robert Eisenstein alternated the University Madrigal Singers and Chamber Choir, creating an organic ensemble of vocal expression.

The royal interior of Bowker Auditorium housed a powerful mix of works by Italian and American Masters from the Chamber Choir and works by Johannes Brahms (1833-1897) and Thomas Tallis (1505-1585), among others, from the Madrigal Singers.

The Chamber Choir treated the audience to the music of Giovanni Peiluigi da Palestrina (1524-1594), Monteverdi, Philippe Verdelot, Luca Marenzio (1553-1599).

Music from American composers Samuel Barber (1910-1981) and Allen Bondi was also performed.

In addition, the Chamber Choir performed two pieces, "Quia ergo femina" and "O ignis Spiritus Parclitis," by Hildegard von Bingen (1098-1179), the famous poet, musician and scientist, on the 900th anniversary of her birth.

The Madrigal Singers performed together after the intermission, delivering a powerful trio of "Dem dunkein Schoss der heilgen Erde," "Von edler Art" and "Abendstandchen" by Brahms (1833-1897).

The concert concluded with the Chamber Choir singing "Great Day" arranged by Warren Martin.

Riveting solo performances were given by soprano, Leah Hamilton, tenor Keith Rutkiewicz, and bass Joshua M. Lizotte.

Besides "Great Day," other exceptional performances by the Chamber Choir included "Quia ergo femina" and "O ignis Spiritus Parsclitis" by Bingen, as well as "Sicu cervus" by Palestrina.

subway

continued from page 5

General" are scorching demonstrations of his raw profoundness on the mic. With a strong team of promoters, we should be seeing a lot more of Shabaam in the coming months.

Hopefully this brief guide has served you well and proved that making a tight, creative LP is much more rewarding than a flimsy full-length.

Although the limelight of fame often never shines beneath the earth, hip-hop is very much alive at a level that one must dig up to recognize.

David Katzoff is a Collegian staff member.

Gymnastics Instruction

Offered by the varsity Men's Gymnastics Team
The instruction will be offered Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7–9 p.m. at the Boyden Gymnastics Center.
Come to Intramurals at the Boyden Gymnastics Facility to find out more!

Anyone interested in becoming a part of the Men's Gymnastics Team as a manager, please contact Head Coach Roy Johnson at 545–0815.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take My Lease Two bedrooms on bus line. Call 549-5318.

2 Bedroom Apartment Newly renovated. Very bright. Busline. $795, all inclusive. Stacey 549-6657.

AUTO FOR SALE

VW Bus For Sale Yellow 80 Vanagon. Westfalia Stick, Full Kitchen and Pop Top, Good Condition. Very Cumfy. 973-256-2359 or 413-559-4552.

1991 Pontiac Grand Am Excellent condition. Low mileage. $3800/BO. 256-6027.

86 Toyota Pick-Up 4x4 Runs great. $1900/BO. Call Mark 256-0416.

88 Honda Civic 5 speed, 166K, many new parts, well-maintained, runs great. $1100 or B/O. 268-0388.

CARS $100-$500 Police Impounds Hondas, Chevys, Jeeps, & Sport Utilities. MUST SELL! 1-800-522-2730 x4554

COMPUTERS

486 Computer Great For Student Works Good $100. Color VGA $50. (413)584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Bell Ringers needed part-time for Christmas Kettle Campaign. Flexible hours, outdoors. Nov/Dec. $5.60/hr. 585-8729.

Sorority close to campus looking for 2 housepeople for kitchen help. Call for information. 549-4683. Ask for Michelle.

Disc Jockey needed for mobile DJ service. Willing to train but must have a dependable vehicle and knowledge of current dance music. Call 253-6355.

EMPLOYMENT

Best Part-Time Job In The Valley You don't have to wash dishes or flip burgers for the extra money you need. Become a Clean Water Action organizer and earn $7.30-$9.00/hr fighting air and water pollution. Paid training, flexible schedule, evening and weekend hours. 584-9830.

EARN CASH Flexible Hours Now Hiring At Sbarros Hampshire Mall

Legal Assistants Wanted Spring 1999 Internships with Student Legal Services Office, get hands-on experience in the legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary— training provided. Deadline to begin the application process is Nov 13, 1998— Contact The Student Legal Services Office today. 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Wanted 98 People We'll pay you to lose up to 29+ lbs. Expires 11/11/98. 1-703-817-1071

Waitress Part-Time Make $400 & work 2 or 3 nights. Flexible hours. Dancers For Upscale Gentleman's Club No experience necessary. Unlimited $$$ Potential. Bikini, Topless, or Nude! Call 413-536-0502

Drivers Wanted Pays $9 to $15 per hour. Inside help wanted too. Flexible hours. Call Dominos 256-8911

ENTERTAINMENT

Lights and Sound: Rave to Dorm Party. Your DJ's or ours. Call BARR Productions (413)737-8561.

FOR SALE

GMAT Bargain! Princeton Review. Prep Class reg. $795 only $600. 259-1051.

FURNITURE

Papason Chair, Couch, and Footrest. (Black). All $150. Decent TV. Great price- $50. Call Jessica 548-3966.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

We're here to pump... YOU UP! Creatine Monohydrate, Creatine Surge, DHEA, Whey Protein and more from Fitness Workshop delivered right to your door. 1-877-FIT-WORK. www.fitnessworkshop.com

HOUSE FOR RENT

Summer Rentals Cape Cod Group Summer Rentals. Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Call Diamond Real Estate 1-508-477-1900.

LOST & FOUND

Missing cat- grey tiger with white feet and tummy. Call Emily 549-0471.

MISCELLANEOUS

Think Different $500-$1000 part-time per month. No experience needed. Will train. Free information packet. 413-788-9838. cleanair@javanet.com

PERSONALS

Tara: Little Momma, I almost found that rainbow! 143 -s.h/w

ROOM FOR RENT

Take over my lease in apartment in Northampton. Two nice roommates, 5 min to bus, free laundry. $250 plus electricity. Call 585-8018.

SERVICES

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst Area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

SERVICES

Rabbit Rescue has a lovely selection of bunnies. Many colors and types as well as a selection of cages and hutches. We can also help with any bunnies you can no longer care for. Call Ellen at 367-0105 after 9am please.

On-Line Roommate/Apt Search Service Free Ads. http://members.aol.com/pvroommate/

SPORTS

Want to go to the FINAL FOUR FOR FREE? Play Wall Street Sports college hoops edition at http://collegehoops.wallstreetsports.com and WIN a trip to the FINAL FOUR!! It's FREE!

TO SUBLET

4 bedroom apartment on Main St. Nicest place in Amherst. Walk to town. Available Jan 1st. Call 256-0416.

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK 99! Cancun * Nassau * Jamaica * Mazatlan * Acapulco * Bahamas Cruise * Florida * South Padre Travel Free and make lots of Cash! Top reps are offered full-time staff jobs. Lowest Price Guaranteed. Call now for details! www.classtravel.com 800-838-6411 930 Comm Ave South On BU's West Campus

SPRING BREAK '99 Largest selection of Spring Break Destinations, including Cruises! Foam Parties, Drink Specials, and Club Admissions. Group Discounts. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-FUN

The Classifieds... Does a body GOOD!!

Remember Bob???

HI Bob!!!

Bob placed an Ad in The Classifieds! He found a job.

This gave Bob some money. He was then able to buy a car.

After he bought a car he searched through The Classifieds to find an apartment.

This made Bob happy because he could move out of the dorm!

Now Bob needs a roommate.... So, Bob places an Ad in The Classifieds to find a roommate!!!

Place an Ad in The Classifieds today!!!

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, NOV. 3

Colloquium — A philosophical colloquium "Citizenship, Marriage, and Law in Revolutionary France" will be at 7:30 p.m. in the Five College Women's Studies Research Center at Mount Holyoke College.

Meeting — There will be a lecture on the war on drugs in room 162 of the Campus Center at 7 p.m.

Meeting — The Distinguished Visitor's Program will hold a meeting at 7 p.m. in rooms 805-809 of the Campus Center.

Meeting — There will be a new meeting for Channel 17 News in the Student Union at 8 p.m.

Meeting — There will be an Animal Rights Coalition meeting at 7 p.m. in the Student Union room 306.

Meeting — There will be a Students for a Free Tibet meeting at 5:30 p.m. in the Colonial Lounge in the Student Union.

Meeting — There will be a Jewish Student Union general meeting at 6 p.m. in the Hillel House. All are welcome.

Poetry — All are welcome to share poetry or song at 8:30 p.m. at the Hillel House.

Rally — There will be a rally against the Criminal Injustice System on the Student Union steps at noon.

Workshop — There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 7 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

Information — A drop information session on eating disorders will be held from 4-5:30 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services. Anyone is welcome.

Meeting — There will be a general Theatre Guild meeting at 7 p.m. All are welcome.

Speech — The Biological Sciences Student Association will host UMass alumni who will speak about their experiences at UMass Worcester Medical School. The event will be held at 7:30 p.m. in Campus Center room 917.

Talk — Hershel Shanks will give a talk entitled "Jerusalem: An Archaeological Biography," at 7:30 p.m. in Seelye Hall room 106 at Smith College. All are welcome.

Workshop — There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 7 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

Community — UMass seniors who have a 3.85 or higher and who plan to attend graduate school next year should contact Professor Nelson at 577-2611 to discuss Phi Kappa Phi scholarships.

Documentary — A three-part documentary that explores the history of feminist video makers will be held in Herter Auditorium room 231 from 4-6:30 p.m. Discussion and introduction will be done by Alexandra Juhasz.

Documentary — A documentary about the first central prison for women will be held in Campus Center room 811 at 7 p.m.

Fair — The Second Annual Health Fair will be held in the Student Union Ballroom from 10 a.m.-3 p.m. Receive information on STDs, nutrition, alternative medicine, organ donation, and more.

Community — UMass seniors who have a 3.85 or higher and who plan to attend graduate school next year should contact Professor Nelson at 577-2611 to discuss Phi Kappa Phi scholarships.

Lecture — Dr. Norma Wikler will give a talk entitled "Jerusalem: An Archaeological Biography," at 7:30 p.m. in Seelye Hall room 106 at Smith College. All are welcome.

Workshop — UMass students interested in scholarship opportunities are encouraged to visit the Office of National Scholarship Advisement in room 810 of Goodell. Deadlines for scholarships are approaching fast.

Submissions — The UMass Poetry Society is seeking submissions to its anthology. For more details, call Joshua at 546-5823.

Workshop — A 5-week workshop entitled "Women, Food, and Body Image: Rewriting Our Stories, Restoring Ourselves" will be held Thursdays beginning November 5 from 4:30-5:45 p.m. at the Smith College Health Services Conference Room. To register, call 585-2840.

Workshop — A workshop for women survivors of childhood sexual abuse will take place on November 7. The workshop will include writing, drawing, and movement. In the evening, participants are also invited to perform dances, music and monologues about healing from abuse. For more information and to sign up, call 586-7340.

NOTICES

Community — Golden Key National Honor Society nominees are reminded to return membership forms as soon as possible. Deadline is approaching.

Scholarships — UMass students interested in scholarship opportunities are encouraged to visit the Office of National Scholarship Advisement in room 810 of Goodell. Deadlines for scholarships are approaching fast.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

If you think that shopping a college store means having no choices...

Think again.

New Barnes & Noble Campus Store Not like a mall... Better.

HSCN 4 Hosting Services Cable Network

2	CBS/3	Hartford
4	CBS/4	Boston
5	ABC/5	Boston
6	PBS/57	Springfield
7	HSCN	Movie Ch.
8	UPN/20	Hartford
9	Weather Channel
10	NBC/30	New Britain
11	Fox/61	Hartford
12	PBS/24	Hartford
13	WOCH & HSCN
14	International
15	UMass Academic TV
16	WB/New Haven
17	HSCN Programming
18	The Learning Channel
19	UVC-TV19
20	ABC/40	Springfield
21	Gavel to Gavel
22	NBC/22	Springfield
23	Sundance
24	Bloomberg Financial
25	CTN
27	TBS
28	BET
29	TV Land
30	Univision
31	Comedy Central
32	Cartoon
33	Much Music

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — NOVEMBER 3, 1998

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	4	12	Wishbone (R)	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		Nova (In Stereo) (R)		Frontline "Fat" (In Stereo) (R)		Sports Heroines (In Stereo)		Sports Heroes Religion
WFSB	3	3	News (R)	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	JAG "Angels 30" (In Stereo) (R)		48 Hours "Justice for All" (R)		Election Returns	News (R)	Late Show (R)
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Angels 30" (In Stereo) (R)		48 Hours "Justice for All" (R)		Election Returns	News (R)	Late Show (R)
WCVB	5	5	News (R)	ABC News	Inside Edition	News Special	Home Imp.	Hughleys (R)	Spin City (R)	Spin City (R)	Election Returns	News	Nightline (R)
WLVI	56		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny (R)	Friends (R)	Buffy the Vampire Slayer (R)		Felicity "Cheating" (In Stereo)		News	Friends (R)	Nanny (R)
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	Med Abt. You	Encore	Just Shoot Me (R)	Working (R)	Decision '98	News	Tonight Show
WTXX		14	Home Imp.	Judge Brown	Judge Judy (R)	Judge Judy (R)	Moesha (R)	Soulless (R)	Greatest Pets	Reunited (R)	News	Newsradio (R)	Married... With
WVIT		30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy (R)	Med Abt. You	Encore	Just Shoot Me	Working (R)	News Special: Election	News	Med Abt. You
WTIC	61	11	Simpsons (R)	Friends (R)	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	King of the Hill	King of the Hill	Guinness World Records		News	Friends (R)	Tonight Show
WWLP	22	22	News (R)	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	Med Abt. You	Encore	Just Shoot Me	Working (R)	News Special: Election	News (R)	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	6	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		Nova (In Stereo) (R)		Frontline "Fat" (In Stereo) (R)		When Sleeping Giants Wake	Charlie Rose (In Stereo) (R)
WGGB	40	29	News (R)	ABC News	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	Home Imp.	Hughleys (R)	Spin City (R)	Spin City (R)	Election Returns	News (R)	Nightline (R)
WSBK	38		Judge Judy (R)	Judge Judy (R)	NHL Hockey	Boston Bruins at Buffalo Sabres (Live)					Med Abt. You	Ivad Abt. You	Frasier (R) Cheers (R)
WTBS	72		Family Matters	Family Matters	Roseanne (R)	Roseanne (R)	★★½ "Look Who's Talking Too" (1990, Comedy) John Travolta.				Figure Skating: Vail Festival (R)
A&E	69		Northern Exposure (R)		Law & Order "Blood Libel" (R)		Biography: Aristotle Onassis		Live by Request Starring Gloria Estefan (Live)				Law & Order "Double Blind" (R)
CNN	43	23	Worldview (R)	Moneyline Newshour (R)		Crossfire (R)	World Today (R)		Larry King Live (R)		Late Edition Primetime (R)	Sports	Moneyline (R)
COM	63	26	Comedy Net (R)	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★★ "The Return of the Pink Panther" (1975) Peter Sellers				Viva Variety	Pulp Comics (R)	Daily Show Stein's Money
DISC	60		New House	Fix-It-Line	Gimme Shelter (R)		Wild Discovery: Beasts-East		New Detectives: Case Studies		FBI Files "The Crazy Don"	Justice Files (R)
ESPN	41		Up Close	Sportscenter			NHL Hockey New York Rangers at New Jersey Devils. (Live) (R)				Basketball	Sportscenter (R)
LIFE	59		Eden (R)	Eden (R)	Party of Five (In Stereo) (R)		Chicago Hope "V.I.P.ering" (R)		Any Day Now (In Stereo) (R)		On Baby (R)	Meggie (R)	New Attitudes Golden Girls
MTV	70		Real World (R)	Real World (R)	Real World (R)	Real World (R)	Real World (R)	Real World (R)	Real World (R)	Real World (R)	Real World (R)	Biorhythm	Cut (In Stereo) Loveline
NICK	42		Figure It Out	Secret-of Alex	Doug (R)		Rugrats (R)	Thornberrys	Cousin	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Happy Days	Laverne I Love Lucy (R) Bewitched
SCIFI	71		Quantum Leap	In Stereo) (R)	Sightings (R)	Star Trek "The Gamesters of Triskelion" (R)			★★★ "Red Mars" (1979, Adventure) Mel Gibson. (R)		Life After Death (R)		Sightings (R) Star Trek (R)
TLC	68	28	Home Again	Home Again	Trauma: Life	Trauma: Life	Trauma: Life in the ER		★★★ "Rain Man" (1988, Drama) Dustin Hoffman, Tom Cruise		Life After Death (R)		Trauma: Life in the ER (R)
TNT	62		Babylon 5 "A Distant Star" (R)		ER "A Shift in the Night" (R)		WCW Nitro Xtra (In Stereo) (R)		★★★ "Good Morning, Vietnam" (1987, Comedy-Drama) Robin Williams. (R)				Undercover
USA	64		Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Xena: Warrior Princess (R) (R)		Weltlaw, Texas Ranger (R)				"Terminal Rush" (1995) Don Wilson, (R)
HBO	65		★★½ "Masterminds" (1997, Suspense) Patrick Stewart. PG-13 (R)				★½ "I Know What You Did Last Summer" (1997)		Teen Killers-Second		"Terminal Rush" (1995) Don Wilson, (R)
MAX	66		★★½ "Addams Family Values" (1993) Anjelica Huston. PG-13 (R)				"The Conspiracy of Fear" (1998, Suspense) Leslie Hope. (R)		★½ "The Defenders: Taking the Fall" (1998, Drama)		★★½ "Fever Lake" (1996, Horror) Corey Haim. NR (R)		★★½ "Wild Medley"
SHOW	67		(4:30) ★★½ "The Woman in Red" (1984) Gene Wilder.				★★½ "Bean" (1997) Rowan Atkinson. PG-13 (R)

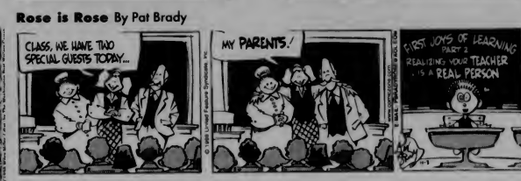
Cathy By Cathy Guisewite

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Foxtrot By Bill Amend



Liberty Meadows By Frank Cho

Non Sequitur By Wiley

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Fiendish Foglios By Brian D. Moses

Non-Cents By John Zaccone Jr.

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You are destined to be the leader today, whether you like it or not. You can conduct yourself well, provided your attitude remains positive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You and an Aries native may find a great deal to fight about today, but the fact is that you have more in common than either of you thinks.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — Your charisma is high, and your capacity for getting things done knows no bounds today. This can prove to be a turning point for you in more ways than one.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — Now is no time for you to get caught up in any unnecessary contests. You'll want to stay focused and motivated, and keep your intentions pure.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — You and a friend can accomplish something quite special together today. However, there will come a time when you must part and go your separate ways.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — Take care not to come on so strong today that you frighten away those you're counting on for timely and invaluable support.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — Your dreams can tell you a great deal about how you are living your life. Today you may decide that a single important change is in order.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You may have to work harder than expected today to keep your plans and ideas intact. Others may want to make changes without your approval.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — Your independence is more important to you now than it has been in the recent past. Today, assert yourself and demand attention.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — You have been working quite hard, and it is time to unwind a bit. You may have to give up something in order to gain a little relaxation and calm.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — There is no reason for you to think that you can't have things your way the entire day. If you encounter opposition, be creative and persistent.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — Flattery isn't likely to win you the prize you hoped for today. You must be sure that you're far more sincere than that. Be honest at all times.

Quote of the Day

"Martha Stewart can kiss my shiny plastic butt!!"

–Tiffany "Bride of Chucky"

Close to Home By John McPherson

To keep pace with the endless requests for donations to employees' birthday and get-well gifts, management devised the hourly Gift Trolley.

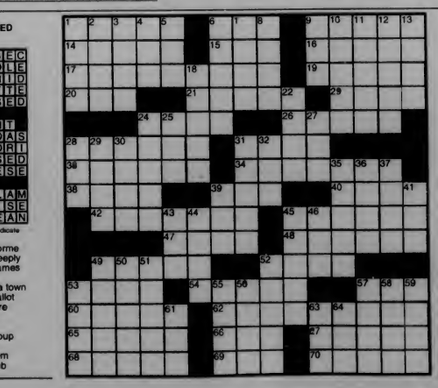
Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Sorry, no menu available today

ACROSS

1 Zodiac sign
6 Silent
9 Carter or Connors
14 Upright
15 A Gershwin
16 "Au revoir"
17 Unswerving
19 Trite
20 Very long time
21 Old cattle town
23 Sharpen
24 Spy Mata —
26 Docks
28 Fancy
31 Bosc or Anjou
33 Disturbs, in a way
34 Occupy
38 Lock part
39 Plus
40 Matinee man
42 Gushing
45 Actress Dahl
47 Deeds
48 Throbs
49 Change the color of again
52 Some luxury cars, for short
53 Actor Danny
54 Cut
57 Gridders' grp.
60 Strangely
62 Bittersweet
65 Unsophisticated
66 "— about time!"
67 Has on
68 Unripe, perhaps
69 Poor mark
70 Wading bird



DOWN

1 Misplace
2 Two — ten is five
3 Has- —: former hotshot
4 Genetic inits.
5 Tack on
6 "— Vice"
7 Bear: Lat.
8 Arith
9 Poke
10 Boise's state
11 Collegian's secondary area
12 Intends
13 Type of log
18 Golfers' cries
22 Nursemaid
24 Must
25 ABA member
27 — pro nobis
28 Globe
29 Housetop
30 Zero
31 Sharp sounds
32 Put a stop to
35 Acts like a bookkeeper
36 March date
37 — down: moderate
39 Pismire
41 Guitarist Paul
43 Method
44 Sherbets
45 Not together
46 Toupee, slang
49 Airplane spotter
50 Singer Gorme
51 Search deeply
52 Outlaw James
53 "King —"
55 Oklahoma town
56 Mark a ballot
57 Lab-culture medium
58 Blaze
59 Acting group
61 Desire
63 Overwhelm
64 Lower limb

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

B	O	O	N	E	W	E	L	I	S	H		S	E	C
A	N	N	E	X		A	L	O	H	A		O	L	E
H	E	A	T	H		F	L	Y	E	R		R	I	D
			A	N	T	E		M	A	T	T	E
T	A	M	A	L	E	S		R	E	F	U	S	E	D
E	L	A	T	E	D		F	E	M	U	R
A	P	S	E	S		J	U	B	I	L	A	N	T
R	H	O		L	E	M	U	R		O	A	S
A	N	I	M	A	T	E	S		M	A	O	R	I
		R	E	S	T	S		C	U	R	S	E	D
D	Y	N	A	S	T	Y		M	A	L	T	E	S	E
R	E	I	N	S		R	I	L	E
O	A	I	F		A	R	G	O	N		I	S	L	A
P	S	T		G	R	E	E	S	E		N	O	I	S	E
S	T	Y		E	N	T	E	R		G	L	E	A	N

© 1998 United Feature Syndicate

Night Editor	Erin Murphy
Photo Technician	Danielle Gilardi
Copy Editor	Laura Forster
Production Supervisor	Angie Annese
Production Staff	Caren Figliolini Keren Charles

Men's soccer finishes the season in grand fashion

UMass pulls it all together for two straight home victories this weekend

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's soccer team brought a happy ending to their season-long saga, as the Minutemen vanquished Duquesne and St. Bonaventure for their first two home wins of the year.

The UMass triumphs finalized their record at 4–12–2 overall, 4–6–1 in the Atlantic 10.

"This was the way to go out," Massachusetts coach Sam Koch said. "This team never gave up no matter what our record was, and they deserved to win these games."

The weekend started off in a rather ominous fashion against Duquesne. With the wind clearly working against them, UMass gave up an own goal to create a 1-0 deficit.

BRIAN McDERMOTT – COLLEGIAN

The UMass men's soccer team picked up their game during the last two matchups of the regular season...

Senior Brad Kurowski directed the ball toward goalkeeper Bryan O'Quinn, but because of the adverse conditions, the ball took a high bounce and flew over O'Quinn's head into the net.

The Minutemen regained their composure, and eventually took care of a lethargic Dukes' squad that was also out of the running in the A-10 title scheme.

After heading into the half with the 1-0 disadvantage, the Minutemen stormed out of the gates with new-found enthusiasm in the second frame.

The Minutemen put pressure on the Dukes throughout the half, but were unable to score until the 65:43 mark.

About two minutes before the tally, Koch inserted Johnny Bibb into the lineup for the first time since Bibb went down with shin splints on September 18.

Bibb provided an immediate spark by perfectly placing a kick off of a foul toward the box.

Adam Black then headed the ball from the left side of the net past Dukes keeper Fabrizio Moscatiello to knot up the game.

From there, UMass put together their fiercest attack of the season, beating Muscatiello three more times in a span of under ten minutes.

James Redmond, controlling the ball on the left corner, found Fred Kinateder right inside the box, and Kinateder was able to head the ball into the top of the net for a 2–1 UMass lead.

Redmond notched his second assist of the afternoon at 81:01 as he passed to a streaking Black who booted an 18 footer from the left side into the right corner of the net.

The Minutemen capitalized on a nearly identical play at 82:45 as Kinateder in a similar spot to Redmond's, passed to senior Jake Brodsky who also fired one in from the left side to further demoralize the Dukes.

The freshman keeper O'Quinn earned his first career victory, making one save, as UMass slightly distanced themselves from the lower portion of the A-10 teams.

On Sunday, UMass was faced with a stiffer challenge in a St. Bonaventure team that was challenging for the final spot in the A-10 playoffs entering the game.

Junior keeper Todd Fowler got the call in net for Senior Day as the graduating contingent of the squad was honored before the game.

Inspiration may or may not have played a factor in this match, but, nonetheless, UMass came up with their biggest victory of the year.

The game was scoreless heading into the half, but the Bonnies clearly controlled the pace of the action, as evidenced by their 7–4 shot advantage.

However with the wind on UMass' side in the second half, the momentum shifted as well.

"Working with wind gave us an advantage undoubtedly," Koch said. "It is tough to play when that is against you, and luckily they did not do any damage when they had it."

It appeared that it would be tough to break through against the Bonnie's sophomore keeper Rob Vartughian who had 8 shutouts during this season alone.

However, the Minutemen overcame the odds thanks in part to one of their seniors, Paul Corcoran, who assisted on the lone goal of the match.

At 76:25, Black notched his team-leading sixth goal of the season on a perfect throw into the box by Corcoran.

Black facing the opposite net, headed the ball right over the outstretched arm of Vartughian, as the Minutemen faithful exploded on the sidelines.

"I was looking for Adam or Brad Kurowski right in the box," Corcoran said. "I found Black right where I wanted to, and he did a great job finishing it off."

However, the Minutemen still had to finish off St. Bonnie's, a team desperately in need of a win.

Fowler made one final save with just over 2 minutes remaining and then was challenged physically by a charging Bonnie.

"It was a 50–50 ball, and they came in hard and a little late on it," Fowler said. "I just wanted to hold on to that ball, and make sure this game did not slip away."

With the win, Fowler earned his fifth career shutout; his third in the season.

Fowler made one final save with just over 2 minutes remaining and then was challenged physically by a charging Bonnie.

While the Minutemen fell far short of their initial expectations for the season, winning three of four to conclude the season will leave a sweeter taste in the collective mouths of the team.

"We will have confidence heading into next season," Koch said. "The team finished strong, and we have some very talented players that are continually getting better."

BRIAN McDERMOTT – COLLEGIAN

...and won both games, led by seniors like Jake Brodsky, to bring their conference record up to 4–6–1.

UM women's cross country continues A-10 dominance

By Sean Lavoine
Collegian Staff

If anyone looked up the word dynasty in the dictionary there might just be a picture of the University of Massachusetts Women's Cross Country team.

Last Saturday, at the 1998 Bell Atlantic/Atlantic 10 Cross Country Championships, the Minutewomen captured their fourth straight Atlantic 10 title, and their sixth in the last eight years. A dynasty by any means.

UMass, who was not favored to win the race, totaled 35 points to earn the victory. Rounding out the top five were Rhode Island with 67 points, Virginia Tech with 79 points, LaSalle in fourth place with 87 points, and St. Joseph's with 132 points.

UMass was paced by freshman phenom Kristen Ciswoski who won the race with a time of 18:24. She is the first freshman to win the title in the history of the A-10. Along with her championship, Ciswoski also captured Most Outstanding Rookie honors.

"I am very pleased with myself. It hasn't really sunk in yet," Ciswoski said.

What is even more impressive is that Ciswoski never ran cross country until this year. In high school she played field hockey.

"Maybe I should have run cross country in high school instead of playing field hockey," Kristen said.

Also placing for UMass were junior Sarah Hirsch, third overall at 18:27, sophomore Melissa Henderson, sixth overall at 18:39, junior Sharon Tillotson finished twelfth overall with a time of 19:00, and senior Nicole Way rounded out the top five for the Minutewomen with a time of 19:03, good for thirteenth overall.

"We ran extremely well. We held it together and ran our best race of the year," coach Julie LaFreniere said.

For LaFreniere this championship is a welcome surprise. The race was expected to be close, with UMass, LaSalle, Rhode Island, and St. Joseph's all striving for top honors. In the end, UMass ran away with it.

"With all teams competing so closely throughout the fall, this race came down to the team that had the most determination and heart. We definitely showed that on Saturday," LaFreniere said.

The race, held at Belmont Plateau in Philadelphia, was very tight at the beginning. As a matter of fact, LaFreniere told her runners not to break out in front at the beginning of the race.

"I told them not to race out front in the beginning because I knew we needed all the energy we could have for the last mile," LaFreniere said.

What proceeded after the first mile is exactly what LaFreniere had hoped for. Ciswoski and Hirsch were joined by Kathy Heahle of LaSalle, and they broke away from the large pack.

Shortly after the lead pack was another pack of runners, which Henderson was in. As she continued to run strong, UMass still needed to have other runners place high to win.

This is where Tillotson and Way came in.

They were running in a pack a few seconds behind Henderson's, and needed to step it up during their last mile to secure the win for UMass.

"I saw them running and yelled at them to place as high as they could," LaFreniere said.

Turning it into high gear is exactly what Tillotson and Way did. They passed a couple of competitors each to help give UMass the victory.

"I ran as hard as I could. I was near death." Way jokingly said.

For Way, it is her fourth team championship in her four years at UMass. She said this one is right up at the top.

"We weren't expected to win because other teams were running so well. We have been training for this race since the first day of practice, and we are relieved now that it is over," the senior captain said.

This championship is also right up at the top of LaFreniere's career.

"This is one of the sweetest Atlantic 10 victories due to the emotional level of this team. We had a team meeting Friday evening and discussed what we had to do. One of those things was getting excited to run, but not to become so excited that we became dysfunctional," LaFreniere said.

The next step for UMass is the NCAA Regional Qualifiers on Saturday, Nov. 14 to be held at Van Cortlandt Park in the Bronx, New York.

COURTESY MELISA TILLOTSON

Nicole Way was one of many strong finishers for the Minutewomen in this weekend's Atlantic 10 Championships.

Minutemen roll through post–season, win ECAC water polo championship

By Matthew Despres
Collegian Staff

The pool is a safe haven for most people; a place to lay back, relax, and let your troubles float away. But for the University of Massachusetts men's water polo team, the pool is a battleground where respect, as well as matches, can be won and lost.

The last we heard from the water polo squad, they were headed to Annapolis, MD with expectations of repeating as ECAC champions, which they had taken last year with a 9–6 victory over George Washington. The team went into the event this time around ranked No. 12, and swept through the U.S. Naval Academy by taking down No. 19 Princeton, No. 14 Navy and No. 18 St. Francis.

In the match against Princeton, junior goaltender Richard Huntley made nine saves, and came up big by stopping four penalty shots. Seniors Gabriel Marrero and Brian Stahl struck twice, akong with freshman Greg Troyer. When the final second ticked off the clock, UMass was up 7–6 and had improved to 9–2 all–time against the Tigers. UMass handled Navy, downing them 8–3 with help from goals by junior Timmy Troupis and senior Aldo Roman. Freshman Carlos Ramos was the go to guy in the championship game against St. Francis, scoring four goals to push the Minutemen to a 10–9 victory.

After winning big and repeating as champions in the ECAC's, UMass focused their attention on October 31, when they headed to Cambridge, Mass to participate in the CWPA Northern Division Playoffs. The Minutemen were looking to improve on last years performance, where they defeated both Boston College and Brown, but fell in the finals to rival Queens by a score of 10–3. After having re-ignited that rivalry this season, the Minutemen set their sights on getting the job done correctly this time around.

The first challenge was posed by Iona. Troupis scored a goal and a two point goal, along with senior Roman and freshman Evan Lutz, who each found the back of the net twice. Goaltender Huntley came up big in the first half, making four saves, and was backed up strongly by sophomore J.R. VanderWall, who came in to stop six shots in the second half. Iona could only muster five goals over the course of the match, and the Minutemen sailed to the 14–5 victory. The win left UMass with a 22–1 overall record and a date with St. Francis on Halloween evening.

St. Francis once again found themselves suffering at the hands of UMass. The Minutemen consistently struck out at the St. Francis goalie, wearing them down and eventually winning the match 10–6. Marrero and Roman scored three times apiece, with Troupis, Stahl, Brock O'Neill and Rich Slingluff also notching a goal. The two victories set up a match with Queens on Nov. 1, which would provide the Minutemen another chance to prove themselves as the classier and more dominant squad.

With all the surrounding drama, UMass smartly focused on the game at hand. Opening with a bang, and led by the superb efforts of Stahl (five goals) and Huntley (13 saves), the Minutemen outpaced Queens and claimed the title with a 10–5 win. UMass can savor their recent success for only a short while, as they will be heading to Providence R.I. on Nov. 14 and 15 to participate in the CWPA Eastern Championships.

Minutemen take fifth in A–10s

By Gary Mendese
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's cross country team finished a disappointing fifth at the 1998 Bell Atlantic/Atlantic 10 Championships on Saturday afternoon. St. Joseph's led the way scoring 29 points, followed by Virginia Tech (69) in second, and La Salle (92) in third.

"We should definitely be in the top two spots at the meet," Coach Ken O'Brien.

O'Brien was rather disappointed with the outcome of The Meet of Champions a few weeks ago, and was quite determined to push his athletes to their fullest, and take the top spot at A–10's. The squad had a week off to recuperate and prepare for Halloween's meet, and although they didn't finish at the very top, they ran quite well.

Junior Kevin Somers led the pack with a time of 26:06, finishing 19th overall. Next for the Minutemen with a time of 26:30, was senior Dan LeBoeuf in 30th overall. Freshman Kevin Curtin (31st overall) was named Most Outstanding Rookie as the first newcomer to cross the finish line, with a time of 26:31. Senior Matt Ely and freshman Ryan Corbett rounded out the top five for the Minutemen, finishing 38th (26:47) and 39th (26:49).

Somers and LeBoeuf continue to lead the men, illustrating the talent and experience of the veterans of the team. But let us not forget about the underclassmen, as a major portion of the top finishers for UMass have been freshmen and sophomores. This year's team is primarily composed of younger athletes, and still, UMass has had many outstanding performances, showing the drive and versatility of the team.

Curtin's Most Outstanding Rookie award was certainly well deserved. The Chelmsford, Mass. native has placed within the top five Minutemen at virtually every meet, and will more than likely take the top spots as he gains experience in college-level competition.

Somers and LeBoeuf have been the leaders of the pack the entire season, and LeBoeuf has been in the top two spots every meet. The void left by outstanding performer and recent graduate, Ryan Carrara, has successfully been filled, as the squad continues to dominate the opposing teams across the nation. The results of the work of the members of this talented new team are predictions of things to come.

The men have two more meets left in the season to show the rest of the league that UMass is a force to reckon with. The remaining meets are the NCAA qualifier and the NCAA Championships. The men have a week off to train, focus, and concentrate as the next meet rapidly approaches.

The Minutemen will return to action on Saturday, November 14, when they participate in the NCAA Regional Qualifier at Van Courtland Park, in the Bronx, NY. This competition is probably the most important of the season, as their fate will be revealed. A stellar performance is needed at the Regional Qualifier to advance to the NCAA championships; the most important and recognized meet of the year.

In the beginning of the season, the men finished with faster times and with a better score overall. Though it is natural to become fatigued as the season progresses, the men need to find an extra jolt of energy and determination in order to earn a spot at the NCAA championships.

O'Brien, who has been leading the men to victory since 1967, will encourage his athletes, and have them performing to their fullest by next week, as they are all seeking the same goal: to be champions.

The Massachusetts

DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 41 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Wednesday, November 4, 1998

Strange Bedfellows

David Bowie, Angelo Badalamenti and other artists collaborate on Red Hot & Rhapsody. Check out our review (see Arts & Living, page 6).

The same old song and dance

Emma Kurowski and the Massachusetts women's soccer team will head to Dayton this weekend for the A–10 tournament (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Indonesia panel links military to role in riots

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — Security agents helped incite deadly May riots that led to the ouster of Indonesian President Suharto, a fact-finding panel said yesterday in a report that indicated members of the military contributed to Suharto's downfall.

The report by the government team also disputes military claims that no mass sexual assaults were committed during the riots on May 13-15, concluding instead that 66 women, many of them ethnic Chinese, were raped.

The release of the harshly critical report is a further blow to the credibility of the tarnished Indonesian military, which is caught between widespread allegations of human rights abuses under Suharto and a new role as a promoter of democratic reform.

It comes as the military prepares a huge security operation to protect a government assembly that will cast guidelines next week for general elections in 1999. Student activists plan to protest, saying the government is not moving fast enough on political reform.

After three months of investigation, a team set up by Suharto's successor, President B.J. Habibie, said that some military officials urged crowds in parts of Jakarta, the capital, to loot and burn in a wave of unrest.

NATION

Caldor apologizes for mistake in Scrabble ad

NORWALK, Conn. (AP) — How many points is the word "OOPS" worth in Scrabble?

The Caldor department store chain apologized yesterday after 11 million copies of an advertising circular showed two smiling boys playing Scrabble around a board with the word "RAPE" spelled out. Caldor said it does not know who did it or how it got past the proofreaders.

The discount chain learned of the problem late Friday when a customer called to complain about the advertisement, which appeared in a 44-page toy-sale insert that was distributed over the weekend in 85 newspapers in the Northeast, where Caldor operates 145 stores.

The word "RAPE" is spelled vertically on the board. At least two other words on the board are nonsense words.

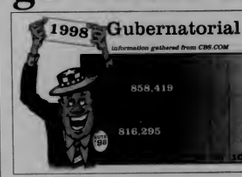
"Obviously, it's a mistake," said Caldor spokeswoman Jennifer Belodeau. "It's not something that we would ever have done intentionally. While we do proofread these things very carefully, with the volume on that particular page, that was something that was missed."

Belodeau said the Scrabble board in the ad originally was set up by a creative agency hired by Caldor. She would not identify the agency.

"It could be that everybody got up and took a break, and some unknown source came in and fooled with the board — there's no way for us to know," she said.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 44 LOW: 30	HIGH: 48 LOW: 28	HIGH: 48 LOW: 30



INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News .....page 2
Sports .....page 10

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Cellucci beats Harshbarger in governor race

By Paul Teves
Collegian Staff

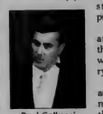
Acting Governor Paul Cellucci can finally remove the "acting" from his title as he was the winner last night over Democratic nominee for governor Scott Harshbarger.

Cellucci received 50 percent of the vote to Harshbarger's 48 percent, when the race was finally called by the major media outlets.

Cellucci came into election day holding a eight to 10 percent lead in the most recent polls over Harshbarger, but a high voter turnout favored the Harshbarger, especially in a Democratic state like Massachusetts.

The high turnout for Harshbarger came mainly from the late voters, which included undecided Independents and Democratic women voters.

Despite the solid effort and turnout for Harshbarger, Cellucci was able to hold on, by riding issues like economic stability and education. He pointed out during the election that it was he and former Governor Bill Weld, who stabilized the Massachusetts economy.



Cellucci was able to use mudslinging to his advantage during the election. He said that raising taxes was in Harshbarger's blood. At times he compared Harshbarger to former Massachusetts Governor Michael Dukakis, who governed during the 1980's, because Cellucci felt that Harshbarger was an economic risk, like Dukakis.

Cellucci also ran on a small education platform. He recently announced a proposal to reduce tuition fees 10 percent for community colleges and a five percent cut for public colleges and universities.

Cellucci did a better job than expected in normally Democratic strong holds such as Fall River, Quincy and Lynn to counter punch Harshbarger's efforts in Boston, Holyoke and Springfield.

After the close election had been called, Harshbarger came out to address his group of supporters.

"I would like to congratulate Paul Cellucci and his family. I know he will try to do the best job possible for the state of Massachusetts," Harshbarger said. "I would also like to say that I'm very proud of all of you [his campaign staff]. I want you to be proud of what you've done."

Paul Cellucci

It was a party atmosphere at Cellucci headquarters at the Boston Park Plaza Hotel, when he delivered his victory speech.

"This is a great victory, and tonight we celebrate a new era for Massachusetts, the Cellucci/Swift era," Cellucci said.

Cellucci expanded on the issues he had fought for during his campaign in his victory address.

"This is election is about the future of our schools, our economy and building on the remarkable process we have made over the last eight years," Cellucci said.

Cellucci also addressed Harshbarger efforts in making this a close race.

"I would like to thank Scott Harshbarger and Warren Tolman for a hard fought campaign," Cellucci said.

The new Governor concluded his speech by saying, "Let's not forget the values of working hard, so lets get to work!"

Voters choose Democrat Olver overwhelmingly

By Julie Fialkow
Collegian Staff

Democrat John Olver easily prevailed over Greg Morgan in yesterday's elections.

Congressman John Olver (D–Amherst) captured 72 percent of the first district's vote last night, while challenger Greg Morgan (R–Amherst) failed to steal the seat with only 28 percent of the vote, according to a Channel 4 news broadcast.

Olver, among the most liberal members for the House of Representatives, is looking forward to starting a new term.

"We don't know what the results are from every community, but we saw results from cities, towns, a smattering of support all over the first district," said Matt Baron, Olver's campaign manager.

"[Olver] is elated with the broad base of support he has received," said Baron.

At the Southwest polls, about 78 percent of the voters chose Olver, and the remaining 22 percent voted for Morgan.

In the town of Amherst, 86 percent of the vote went to Olver, and approximately 14 percent of the voters chose Morgan.

Morgan, who besides holding town government positions in his home of Leominster, was trying to break into politics with this election.

A retired Army colonel, his conservative outlook made winning an election in a state where Democrats outnumber Republicans 3–1, a challenge. In Amherst that ration is even higher with democrats outnumbering Republicans 7–1.

Morgan was not available for comment.

According to Barron, Olver wants to start his term by making some changes in Washington.

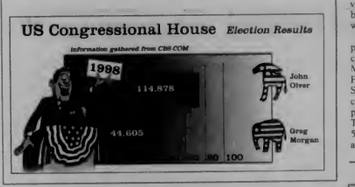
"He wants to work on healthcare, education, and social security — which really got pushed aside with the whole investigation of the president," said Barron.

"He is still on the appropriation committee and which is used for transportation and military construction."

Barron also referred to an article in the Nov. 2 edition of the Collegian where Morgan accused Olver of ignoring key transportation problems in his own community.

"John got an earmark for $2 million for Route 2, where those students were killed, said Barron.

"He got funding for the Coolidge bridge, and funding for a bridge in Westfield.



"He is on the transportation subcommitee," he said.

A former University of Massachusetts chemistry professor, Olver is celebrating his 30th year in government.

Olver's campaign, according to an Oct. 29 Hampshire Gazette article, cost $339,916 compared to $28,000 spent on Morgan's campaign.

Last night members of Olver's campaign celebrated at the Wherehouse? in Holyoke.

US Congressional House Election Results

Turn to VOTING, page 3

Turnout for elections low in the town of Amherst

By Stacey Shackford
Collegian Staff

The town of Amherst had one of the lowest voter turnout rates in recent election history yesterday. Of 16,743 registered voters, only 6,887 came to the polls, a 41 percent voter turnout rate.

"This is one of the lowest percent turnout rate I remember," said Margaret Nartowicz, the acting town clerk of Amherst. "We usually average about 60 percent."

However, the turnout rate of Amherst far exceeded the 12.7 percent voter turnout rate of districts 4a and 10a, which represent the Southwest voting populace. Only 187 students voted at Hampden Dining Commons yesterday, out of 1474 students listed in Amherst town records as registered to vote in those districts.

These numbers may decide the future of the Southwest polling place. The Student Center for Research Education and Advocacy (SCERA), has been pestering the campus with signs that warn students: "The Town of Amherst is threatening Southwest Students: They say if we don't vote, we lose our first ever polling booth [on campus]."

Resa Singleton, student director of SCERA argues that the 1474 students listed in Amherst town records does not accurately reflect the actual number of students who are registered to vote in the Southwest Residential Area.

As part of their "UMass Votes!" campaign, SCERA volunteers went door to door in Southwest this week to encourage students to vote and to check the accuracy of the town's list of registered voters. According to Singleton, the numbers collected by volunteers have not yet been tallied, but "80 percent of the list was wrong."

Results from the Southwest polling place show that the student vote closely resembled the outcome of the Massachusetts state elections. Forty–three percent of the students in Southwest voted for gubernatorial candidate Paul Cellucci, and 52.9 percent voted for Scott Harshbarger. This closely resembles the statewide 50 percent of votes cast for Cellucci, and 48 percent of votes cast for

Turn to VOTING, page 3

Mitch's mudslide kills hundreds in Nicaragua

By Niko Price
Associated Press

POSOLTEGA, Nicaragua — Hundreds upon hundreds of bodies are buried in the mud that cascaded down Casitas volcano, some with their hair and limbs entangled in the sugar cane stalks.

During a two-hour walk out of the Posoltega town center and into the sugar cane fields, 22 of the bodies were seen in plain, gut-wrenching view — bloated, scratched and crammed in trees, cane stalks and mud.

The tragedy here occurred Friday morning following pounding rains brought by Hurricane Mitch. Part of the volcano's crater collapsed and the lake inside formed a deluge down the slope. "It is full, full of bodies," Ariel Mendoza, a 26-year-old construction worker said, pointing at the volcano. "From where the mud starts, down to the sea."

Mayor Felicita Zeledon of Posoltega, the largest city near the disaster area, told The Associated Press yesterday that 1,950 corpses had been recovered in villages below the volcano.

Other officials gave lower, but still ghastly calculations of the death toll here: The Red Cross said 1,250, while the president's office said 1,338.

"We have buried some in mass graves, others we have buried one by one," Zeledon said, as she hitched a ride on the back of a tractor to where a relief helicopter was landing.

"There are still survivors in the hills," she said. "Four hundred have walked out and we believe there are another 450 alive up there — most of them children."

Zeledon said rescue workers burying and burning bodies to prevent the spread of disease had run across survivors in the hills, and had informed the military. But she didn't know if soldiers had gone back to get them.

"If they don't get them out, those people will die because there is no water, no food," she said. "It would be one more massacre."

Local Red Cross coordinator Ramiro Galio said officials do not have the equipment to reach survivors in the hills.

"It has been four days and people are still there with mud up to their waist," he said.

Nicaragua's Health Ministry said it was dispatching medical brigades to help recover and bury bodies and to fumigate the region.

Villagers said they found about 200 bodies at the San Pablo sugar cane plantation, just outside of town.

Amid the crushed cane stalks lie muddy shoes, purses, tires, a colander.

The stench of death crops up every few hundred yards where a body lies: A little girl with her hair braided into the cane stalks by the slide. A man still wearing boots, but nothing else. A boy, perhaps 8, snuggled under a tree trunk. Or just an arm sticking out of the mud.

The government urged people living near Casitas and eight other nearby volcanos to evacuate their homes Tuesday for fear of new mudslides. More heavy rains have been falling in recent days. Another small mudslide on the northern slope of the Casitas volcano wiped out 34 houses Monday night, but there were no apparent casualties, Defense Minister Pedro Joaquin Chamorro said.

President may fare better after yesterday's elections

By David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Defying history, Democrats battled Republicans to a standstill — and perhaps better — yesterday in mid-term elections likely to bolster support for President Clinton on the eve of congressional impeachment proceedings.

Resurgent Democrats won the single biggest prize of the night when Gray Davis was elected governor of California, one of 36 statehouse contests on the ballot.

The GOP held control of the Senate but Democrats ousted two vigorous Clinton critics — Alfonse D'Amato of New York and Lauch Faircloth of North Carolina. In Illinois, Democratic Sen. Carol Moseley-Braun lost her bid for re-election.

Democrats scored early gains in the House, raising the possibility that Republicans would be left with a shrunken majority. In that event, Speaker Newt Gingrich and other party leaders could come under challenge in the GOP caucus.

A GOP majority would mark the first time in 70 years they had held the House three straight terms. But any Democratic inroads would contradict a post-World War II trend of an average of 27 losses in mid-term losses for the party of a sitting president. Not since 1934, when Franklin Roosevelt was president, has the party in the White House won seats at mid-term.

Davis aside, Democrats celebrated other statehouse victories, ousting a pair of Southern governors and electing a governor in Iowa for the first time since 1966. Democrats said they were taking legislative chambers from the GOP, too.

In a dynamic triumph with implications for the 2000 presidential race, GOP Gov. George W. Bush won a

Turn to ELECTION, page 3

Peeping Tom still at large

The University of Massachusetts Police Department is seeking a college–aged male who was reported peeping in showers over the weekend in Patterson Residence Hall in the Southwest Residential Area.

According to Chief of Police John Luippold, police are looking for a light–skinned black male suspect described as clean–shaven, 18 to 19 years old, 5–foot–10 to 6–foot tall with a slim build and short black hair.

Police encourage anyone with information to contact the UMass Detective Bureau at 545–0895 or the department's anonymous tips hotline at 577–TIPS (8477).

— Lorraine Kennedy

STACY COHEN / COLLEGIAN

Guess what's missing

Someone has stolen the outer doors to the Campus Center.

STACY COHEN / COLLEGIAN

What goes up...

Rick Brazzale, a glass blowing instructor juggled at the Campus Center last night.

Police Log

Accident/Property Damage
Nov. 1
A parked vehicle rolled into another vehicle in Lot 79 on North Pleasant Street.
A minor accident that happened on Friday on Stockbridge Road was reported.
Oct. 31
A minor two vehicle accident was reported on Main Street.
Oct. 30
A vehicle backed into another vehicle on Hicks Way.
Oct. 29
A pedestrian exiting a bus was struck by a vehicle on University Drive. Angela Molta, 21, of 85 Amity St., Amherst, was taken to the hospital by ambulance with a head injury.

Annoying Behavior
Nov. 2
Individuals putting up posters in the Campus Center were accosted by others.
A past incidence of vandalism which occurred on Oct. 31 was reported from Grayson Residence Hall.
A verbal argument which occurred on Oct. 31 was reported from John Adams Residence Hall.
Nov. 1
An individual exposed himself to two women in the Dubois Library. The individual was trespassed and will be summons to court.
Five individuals were causing a disturbance in Coolidge Residence Hall and were removed from the building.
Bottles were thrown from Coolidge Residence Hall at an individual.
A large noisy group was reported in the area between Butterfield and Van Meter Residence Halls.
A delivery person was being harassed by individuals in the Southwest Mall.
Oct. 31
A male individual was reported in the women's shower area in Patterson Residence Hall.
An individual reported being followed back to John Q. Adams Residence Hall by another individual. The matter was resolved.
A heated argument was reported to be in progress in the lobby of Van Meter Residence Hall.

Assault and Battery
Nov. 1
Amherst Police provided further information regarding an earlier assault and battery at Southwest Circle which had been reported to UMass police.
Oct. 31
An individual in Washington Residence Hall reported being threatened and assaulted. The incident is under investigation.

B&E/Burglary
Nov. 1
A vehicle was broken into in Lot 13 on Olympia Drive. A stereo, valued at $250, was stolen.

Disturbance
Nov. 1
Two individuals were reported fighting outside of the Hampshire Dining Hall at the Southwest Circle. The incident is under investigation.
Oct. 30
A fight was reported to be in progress in the lobby of Patterson Residence Hall.

Domestic Disturbance
Oct. 31
An individual in Washington Residence Hall requested assistance in obtaining a restraining order.

Larceny
Nov. 2
A backpack was reported stolen from the Mullins Center on Oct. 29.
A bicycle, valued at $500, was stolen from outside Herter Hall.
Nov. 1
An individual reported a laptop computer, valued at $1000+, stolen from the Bowl Area on Orchard Hill Drive while working on a surveying project.
Oct. 30
Personal items and a large number of CDs, valued at $500+, were stolen from a room in Cashin Residence Hall.
A VCR and a TV, valued at $250+, were stolen from a lobby area in McNamara Residence Hall.
A VCR, a Discman and other personal items, valued at $250, were stolen from the common area of a suite in Brown Residence Hall.

Liquor Law Violations
Oct. 30
Scott C. Long, 18, of 30 Harwood Ave., Littleton, was arrested on University Drive and charged with illegal possession of liquor.

Medical Emergency
Oct. 30
Police responded to a medical emergency in Cashin Residence Hall.

Sexual Assault
Nov. 3
An individual in the Southwest Residential Area reported an acquaintance rape that occurred on Oct. 21.

Suspicious Person/Activity
Nov. 1
There was a report of a fight in progress between Wheeler Residence Hall and Franklin Dining Hall. The incident is under investigation.
Oct. 30
Don M. Foy, 21, 95 Kenyon St., Springfield, was arrested in John Adams Residence Hall and charged with trespassing.

Traffic Stop
Nov. 1
Alonzo P.J. Hardnett, 25, of 16 Ferry St., Chicopee, was arrested on Massachusetts Avenue and charged with operating a motor vehicle with a suspended license.
Oct. 30
Philip H. Gosselin, 22, of 383 Water St., Indian Orchard, was arrested on a warrant University Drive.

Vandalism
Nov. 1
Graffiti was reported on walls and doors of Gorman Residence Hall and eggs were on carpet.
Oct. 31
A mirror was snapped off a vehicle in Lot 32 on Massachusetts Avenue.

Want to write for news??
Come down to the Campus Center basement and ask for Jill Carroll.

A small piece of advice:
work here.

PRIMIX solutions
www.primix.com

Primix Solutions is one of the industry's leading Web consulting and systems integration firms servicing Fortune 1000 clients. You will travel within the United States and be working with leading-edge Web technologies while in a fun, casual atmosphere where we play pool and darts in the office

We will be holding On-Site interviews at University of Massachusetts - Amherst on Tuesday, November 10th and Thursday, November 12th respectively. See your career center for more details, or check out our Web site. EOE

One Too Many Treats?
Make an appointment to clean your teeth.
U H S Dental Services offers Professional Dental Cleanings
577-5400
Ask about our 10-20% discount

Welcome back...
NOW GO AWAY!
Travel accessories and backpacks sold here! European railpasses and international student ID cards issued on the spot!
Council Travel
CIEE Council on International Educational Exchange
44 Main St., Amherst
(413) 256-1261
www.counciltravel.com

University of Massachusets
Theatre Guild presents
THE WIZ
November 5, 6 & 7 at 8pm
with November 7 matinee at 2pm
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall, UMASS Amherst
Ticket Information
$10 General Public / $5 Five College Students, Kids under 12
Groups of 20 or more - $8/$4
Tickets Available at Bowker Box Office 413.545.2511
For more information call the UMTG office at 413.545.0415
Artistic Director: Tara M. McRae
Production Manager: Art Teplitz
Choreographer: Denise Brown
Vocal Director: Dolores Brown
Produced in cooperation with Samuel French Inc.
45 West 25th Street
New York, NY 10010
THE WIZ
This production is made possible in part by a grant from the UMASS Arts Council
co-sponsored by The Daily Collegian

Paleontology professor honored

By Elizabeth Johnson
Collegian Correspondent

Far from Jurassic Park Island and gestating dinosaur eggs, here, at the University of Massachusetts, professor and paleontologist Emily CoBabe studies molecules taken from fossils attempting to learn more about these early animals and the climate in which they lived.

CoBabe was recently named a Distinguished Lecturer for 1998-2000 by the Paleontological Society. Being among the five scientists from around the country to be chosen for such an honor, over the next two years she will be lecturing throughout the nation.

The five were ultimately put together by a council whose members were voted in by the society or appointed by the president.

CoBabe believes this council looks for lecturers who are "relatively dynamic, do something out of the ordinary and will represent paleontology well." Other considerations taken when choosing the speakers include their national and international stature in paleontology and their extensive publications.

CoBabe's primary research involved extracting fat molecules, called lipids, from fossils. These lipids offer information about the diet of animals and the climates of their time periods. The research process begins with grinding such fossils to a fine powder.

The molecules pertinent to the study are extracted and extra liquids are drained off using chemical techniques.

Then, using a molecular maspectrometer, the identity of the molecules can be determined and the diet of that particular animal can be discovered. Granted, CoBabe admits, "There is a whole bunch of interpretation."

As a Distinguished Lecturer during 1998-2000, CoBabe will remain a UMass faculty member, giving anywhere from 10 to 40 lectures a year across the nation.

She plans to "string together 10 to 15 lectures at a time over a three week period," and then return to the University.

When asked about her lecture subjects Emily CoBabe replied, "My topics are pretty fun!"

One lecture, titled "Molecular Paleontology, Tracking the Dietary Habits of Fossil Organisms," explains the process undergone, as described above, to reveal the diet of fossil animals.

"Chemosymbiosis In the Fossil Record: Is There an Evolutionary Advantage to Packing Your Own Lunch?" is another topic she will lecture on.

Her third topic is "Life On Ancient Mars: Using Body and Chemical Fossils to Detect Life in Extreme Environments." She will lecture on how scientists will be able to recognize and study life if it is ever found on Mars.

CoBabe earned her PhD from Harvard University and did post-doctoral work at the University of Bristol (England) and Indiana University before becoming a member of the UMass faculty in 1994. She is a professor of historical geology, paleontology and organic/biochemistry courses.

Police authority to search cars questioned

By Laurie Asseo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Several Supreme Court justices expressed doubts yesterday about giving police blanket authority to search people's cars whenever they are stopped and ticketed for routine traffic violations.

"It does seem an enormous amount of authority to put into the hands of the police," Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg said. "We do have constitutional checks because we're not always sure that the police will exercise good judgment."

The court is expected to rule by July whether an Iowa man's rights were violated by a police search of his car that turned up marijuana.

Patrick Knowles was stopped for speeding on March 6, 1996. An officer gave him a speeding ticket and then searched Knowles and his car's passenger compartment.

Knowles argued that the search violated the Constitution's Fourth Amendment protection against unreasonable searches. But Iowa courts allowed the marijuana to be used as evidence, and Knowles was convicted and sentenced to 90 days in jail.

The Supreme Court ruled in 1973 that police can search people upon arrest, citing a need to disarm suspects and preserve evidence.

Iowa law allows police to either make an arrest or issue a citation for any traffic violation. If they issue a citation they can make an "otherwise lawful search."

The Iowa Supreme Court has interpreted the provision to allow police to conduct a search whenever they could have arrested someone, even if they decide instead to issue a citation.

STACY COHEN / COLLEGIAN

Fill'er up!

"Gravy" Shumake, a freshman political science major with a minor in education, fills a car with gas at the Hadley Mobil.

Activists of abortion rights begin ad campaign

By Paisley Dodds
Associated Press

BOSTON — It's a hard-hitting ad campaign with pictures of real women talking about why they had abortions.

"I always thought women who got pregnant 'by accident' were just irresponsible," says one ad, running in daily and weekly newspapers. "Then one night my boyfriend's condom broke." Abortion rights activists hope the ads, being piloted in Massachusetts, will lessen the stigma attached to abortion and reduce attacks against clinics and doctors — violence that recently claimed the life of Dr. Barnett Slepian, a Buffalo gynecologist who was killed Oct. 23 in his home by a sniper.

The National Abortion Access Project, the group piloting the ads, said they chose Massachusetts as a test site because of its large urban area and rural areas without abortion access.

Abortion Rights groups in California, Maine and New York said they plan to use the same ads in campaigns next year.

"When they asked me to have my picture taken for the ad and put my story along with it, I was reluctant. I was scared that someone would see my photo and go berserk," said Montserrat Caballerl, 24, one of the women in the 3-inch by 5-inch black and white ads. "Even now, I feel like people are staring at me on the subway. But this is an issue I feel passionately about. It's important for women to have control over their bodies."

Caballerl, who now lives in Boston, had an abortion when she was 21. Living in a small town in North Carolina, she had to drive 85 miles to Charlotte, N.C., to obtain abortion services, she said. Directors at the Abortion Access Project admit it was difficult to come up with advertisements as powerful as the anti-abortion ads, which often use images of pregnant women rubbing their bellies, cherub-like toddlers and sonograms of fetuses.

It was also tough to find people like Caballerl who were willing to have their picture attached to the ads.

"It took us a long time to find women to agree to tell their stories in the ads, but we feel like the women who did are powerful enough to show that abortion is not something to be ashamed of," said Rosemary Candelario, a coordinator at the Abortion Access' Cambridge office.

In addition to the women's stories, the ads contain statistics such as, "84 percent of U.S. counties have no abortion provider," or "Six out of 10 women seeking abortions have experienced some kind of contraceptive failure."

The ads also give phone numbers to the Abortion Access Project. Workers hope women will call for more information.

The ads appear this month in such newspapers such as The Boston Globe and The Boston Phoenix. The ads cost the Abortion Access group about $10,000. The design and photography were donated. The campaign is one of the first to use real woman, their stories and pictures.

Anti-abortion groups said they're not planning to counter the ads, but are angry over the ads' content.

"I don't think that they are sending the right message," said Maryclaire Flynn, a director at the Massachusetts Citizens for Life group. "There should be a stigma attached to abortion. I think it's natural that the pro-life advertisements have been effective because motherhood is more of a natural choice for women." The California Hospital Abortion Access Project has said it will run the same ads in California newspapers next year.

STACY COHEN / COLLEGIAN

Cookies are in aisle three

Kathleen McGillicuddy of Amherst can help you find whatever you are looking for at the new Big Y.

■ election

continued from page 1

Texas-sized re-election. His brother Jeb added the Florida statehouse to the Republican column. And Republicans held big-state governships in Illinois, Ohio, Michigan and New York, and took nevada away from the Democrats.

Democrats countered in South Carolina, where Jim Hodges toppled first-term Gov. David Beasley, ironically the chairman of the Republican Governors' Association. Alabama Republican Gov. Fob James was defeated as well.

Democrats also kept the Georgia governorship in their hands, when Roy Barnes won his race to succeed Zell Miller.

■ voting

continued from page 1

Harshbarger. However, it varies considerably from results of Amherst voters, who voted 22.9 percent in favor of Cellucci and 74.9 percent in favor of Harshbarger.

Students also voted overwhelmingly in favor of all five referendum questions, which won statewide. The controversial Question 4 concerning electric utility deregulation received a total of 133 student votes, 76.7 percent of which were yes votes, and 6,017 Amherst votes, 68.7 percent of which were yes votes. As a result of the Question 4 victory, the state's electrical utility law will remain unchanged.

Question 2, concerning campaign finance reform, was also overwhelmingly victorious locally and statewide. It received a total of 129 student votes, 69 percent of which were yes votes, and 6193 Amherst votes, 80.6 percent of which were yes votes. As a result, the laws governing public financing of political campaigns will change starting with the 2002 election. The new law creates a voluntary system, allowing candidates who agree to campaign spending limits and $100 contribution limits to receive a set amount of public funds.

Question 1 which prohibits state legislators from changing their base pay, Question 3 which reduces the state tax for interest and dividend income, and local Question 5 which rearranges the Hampshire Country regional organization, were also passed in yesterday's elections.

U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday AM - Starting at $59.95
North Amherst Motors A Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd.
North Amherst, MA
549-RENT
• Cars • Mini Vans
• Trucks
• Cargo Vans
• 15 Passenger Vans
• Low Daily/Weekly/Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older
• Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
(On bus route - one mile from UMass)

Wondering how fit you really are?
Don't know where to begin?
Get A Personal Trainer
@ The Body Shop
For a fee of $80 and a Current Body Shop Membership receive:
• 1 Fitness Evaluation
• 5 Personal Training Sessions
For more information call 253-8086
or
To SIGN UP stop by the Totman or Boyden Body Shop today!

Student Affairs Review Committee
Community Meeting
Thursday, November 5
4-6 p.m.
Room 917
Campus Center
Over the summer, a committee was formed to review the current structure of Student Affairs at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst. Chancellor David Scott has requested that the committee engage in a broad exploration of programs and services for students and prepare suggestions for organizational configurations which will support the high quality of the total student experience.
The committee expects to focus its exploration on five general categories: enrollment services, judicial system, academic support and advising and related affinity groups, campus life, and student programs and auxiliary support. Members of the Review Committee will be present at the community meeting for discussion.
All members of the UMass community are invited to attend the community meeting and offer their insight.

EDITORIAL / OPINION

-- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian --

Gone squirrelly...

Hey you. Yeah, you. Come here, but be quiet — quiet, I say! Now, this is very "hush–hush," so don't be spreading this around, understand? If I see this information leak out to, say, the Daily Collegian, I'll be killed for sure. There's something big going down here at the University of Massachusetts that Chancellor Scott doesn't want you to know about.

Listen up, because I'm only going to say this once — I'm already putting our lives in danger by talking to you now, but somebody else has to know before it's too late.

Have you noticed the squirrels on campus? Yeah, the squirrels. There's an awful lot of them, aren't there?

Well, I'll have you know that it's not because contraceptives aren't readily available for rodents. The volume of those pesky squirrels at UMass are no mistake. Rather, they're part of a complex plan to take over the world!

You must be thinking that it's an absurd proposition, and I know it sounds like it, but it's true. A friend and I came to this conclusion while we were waiting to have our pictures drawn at the Blue Wall two Fridays ago, and I haven't seen her since. Although it might be because I haven't been to visit her, it's probably because she's been kidnapped by Chancellor Scott's evil squirrels.

Seth Koenig

Let me elaborate.

At the Whitmore Administration building they've been cloning mutant squirrels!

Is that elaboration enough? No? Well, then. I'll go on.

It all works out. The officials there take the paperwork that we pass in over the course of the semester and throw it into a big vat (yes, the same vat that all of the Batman villains fall into to become evil). Why do you think Whitmore never seems to have your key signed documents when you most need them? Innocently misfiled? I think not. They have been sent to contribute to the creation of mutant squirrels. The plot thickens.

Anyway, once the paper is in the vat, Scott oversees the addition of the second ingredient: a strange, radioactive mush that helps mold and animate the evil creatures once they've been produced. What mush they don't use is, of course, sent to the dining commons to be colored and used as either stuffing or squash (depending on what color they use).

Wait, don't walk away. There's proof!

Remember, keep it quiet, though. You can tell the squirrels are evil mutants because of their actions. Just watch them. Normal squirrels will scamper away when a big, intimidating human comes anywhere near them, but evil mutant ones? Not a chance. These buggers will look you in the eye and say, "Hey, pal, I'm going to take this acorn up this tree and if you get in my way I'll kill you just like I'm planning to do to high government officials. Hail Chancellor Scott."

"Hey, pal, I'm going to take this acorn up this tree and if you get in my way I'll kill you just like I'm planning to do to high government officials. Hail Chancellor Scott."

I was in Southwest last year walking with a tall friend, see. This squirrel crept up slowly from behind a tree and then ran up his leg. True story, I swear. My friend assumed that the squirrel was retarded or something, or that the cute little thing was blind and didn't understand that he was climbing up a human instead of a tree (my friend is pretty tall), but we all know that's bull feces. That squirrel was taking part in an infantry training maneuver. If my friend had been IFK, it would have been all over in seconds.

You know those kids that are kicked out of your building for "getting caught drinking?" That's right, they just found out about the squirrels and were disposed of.

The evil mutant squirrels are all over the place, and they're about to mobilize. Someone has got to do something soon, or Chancellor Scott will be ruling the world through a violent overthrow of the U.S. government by a rodent military!

Now remember, you never heard this... and you never met me. Trust no one — your life may depend on it.

I must go now. I think I see a squirrel carrying an AK–47 by the Campus Center. Good bye, and remember, the truth is out there!

Seth Koenig is a Collegian columnist.

Born to run

The first car that I ever wanted to drive was the "General Lee." At the age of five nothing, and I mean nothing, seemed cooler to me than to be able to dive in through the windows of a car that was painted with a giant Confederate flag. I envisioned myself tearing out onto an obscure dirt road, dust clouds billowing up behind me, madly chasing a man in a pick–up truck who had just robbed a bank with a pistol and a red bandanna tied around his face.

I had a little Matchbox model of Bo and Luke's wheels. I would sit and wish that it was big enough, or I was small enough to jump into its windows. Then I would send it careening down the bannister while yelling things about Roscoe and Boss Hog.

Parents everywhere at that time had to grab their children by the collar as the little legs flailed wildly trying to build up just the right amount of propulsion to project them through the windows into the passenger seat. I tried to tell my mom just how much cooler our family would be if she would just weld the doors to her BMW shut.

The answer was inevitably no.

Okay mom, how 'bout just the passenger side?

No!

One of the back doors?

NO!!

The second car I ever wanted to drive was "KITT" from Knight Rider. I was six by this time and the show was brand–spankin' new. David Hasselhoff was actually cool as he drove around in a black leather jacket and talked to his car.

Hmmmmm...

Yeah!

It was also around this time that my brother got a Big Wheels for Christmas and I got the My Little Pony barn. Don't get me wrong, the barn was dope, but it didn't let me tear around the back patio like some little six–year–old badass. At the time being a badass was my goal.

My brother was four and not inclined to share his new wheels, especially with a girl, especially with a girl who was his older sister. I was crushed. Our brother/sister relationship was never the same after he got the Big Wheels.

For a while I wanted to be on CHiPs, but then again, didn't everyone? Ponch and John cruising around on those super–fly Kawasakis, aviator glasses covering their eyes, keeping the California highways safe for everyone. There were no drivebys on their patrol, that's for sure. I saw recently that they came out with a new show, CHiPs '99. Eric Estrada and that other guy are now cruising around on phat BMW bikes — not quite as cool. Not quite.

"Eric Estrada and that other guy are now cruising around on phat BMW bikes — not quite as cool. Not quite."

Elsa Allen

These days my car fantasies have come a little closer to earth. Cool cars are no longer the ones that talk or fly or display their Southern patriotism most avidly. Cool cars today have taken on an entirely new meaning.

The coolest car that I ever drove was one of those huge, American boats from the mid '70s. It was a coppery brown and had a shifter on the steering column. I only got to drive it down the street about a hundred yards, but for those hundred yards I was so cool. Some guy that had been hanging out at the bar where I worked gave me 10 bucks to run across the street and pull it around front for him. Okay, whatever.

The coolest car that I've ever not been allowed to drive belonged to one of my brother's friends. My brother is now eighteen years old and has a conglomerate of friends who are acquiring their first cars. His friend Adam definitely took the cake when he pulled up in front of my house in a 1980, maroon Volaré. I think it was a Chevy, but I may be wrong. The thing was huge. Stickers had been plastered anywhere there was a surface. Savings like "Jesus is coming, look busy," and "I like animals, they're delicious!" were the general theme.

My friends and I soon learned that not being allowed to drive the Volaré wasn't necessarily a bad thing. We capitalized on the fact that Adam thought he would look cool driving us around. We would pile in, he would pop in the pimpin' music, bow–chick–a–bow–wow, and we would roll out onto the road. Often Adam would be wearing a polyester shirt with a butterfly collar, just to perfect the pimp appearance.

That summer Adam worked as a delivery driver. I would see him cruising by my work in the Volaré, left elbow out the window, right hand on top of the wheel, pimp music blasting, butterfly collar blowing in the breeze, head bobbing up and down in time to the music and I would think to myself, "Damn, I'd be scared if this kid rolled up in my driveway with a pizza!"

I drive a Honda Civic right now. I love my car, but the "General Lee" it's not. When I cruise down the street I look like everyone else whose parents were fans of the sensible and safe car. Sometimes I pretend that it's got hydraulics or a pumpin' bass tube in the trunk. I'll turn on the radio really loud and tilt my seat way back and cruise with my head bobbing in rhythm to the song. Then people look at me funny and I laugh at them and wonder if they really know how cool I am.

I bet their doors aren't welded shut.

Elsa Allen is a Collegian columnist.

Why do I do what I do?

Did you ever wonder if you were living the right life? Okay, so I know what you're thinking. It sounds weird, but bear with me. Wednesday morning I almost slept through my alarm and in my exhaustion–induced stupor, a thought came into my head. I'm only waking up because I'm going to college. If I were not here, I would not have any reason to wake up at this exact moment. That wasn't the scary part, though. The scary part was the realization that I don't know why I'm going to college. In fact, I don't know why I do anything.

All my life, I've been indoctrinated with the typical suburban mantra. Part of which is the "common knowledge" that after one graduates from high school, one goes on to college. So in my junior year, when it came time to start thinking about where I wanted to go, I didn't even flinch. I wondered "where?" instead of "why?" So I did the same thing all my friends did and applied to way too many schools, all the while complaining about the stress and agony of the college admissions process.

"There was a fleeting moment when I wondered if taking a year or two off might be of benefit. But my parents, teachers, and everyone else quickly talked me out of such silly thoughts."

Jeff Perlman

There was a fleeting moment when I wondered if taking a year or two off might be of benefit. But my parents, teachers, and everyone else quickly talked me out of such silly thoughts.

So where did it get me? I'm here now, having fun, meeting people, and getting an education, but I feel like a peon. All my friends from home are doing the same thing, but I still can't help wondering if I'm doing the right thing for me. I'm doing something that an incredibly small minority of the world gets the opportunity to do, yet I still find myself questioning the logic. Isn't college supposed to be about becoming independent and unique? Is uniqueness even part of the college equation? Am I the only one who feels like college molds everyone into the same thing? Is there a way to live life without a college education?

Sure, I'm here to challenge my mind, learn more about the world around me and to become more independent. And, of course, because I want a "good job" when I graduate. But I still have a feeling I'm missing something more meaningful that I could be doing.

Questions beginning with "what if" tend to fly through my head whenever I get bored with whatever I'm doing. In terms of college, the questions are very specific, but very open–ended. What if I were to use my tuition for a more noble cause? What if I could put my energy to good work and help someone instead of complaining about classes, exams, and other stupid, petty things? What if I spent a year or two doing something, instead of just blindly accepting college as a natural progression in my education?

I wonder if I would be better off living for a year or two in a foreign country, learning about another culture. Or even spending some time working for some sort of volunteer–based organization like Habitat for Humanity. I wonder if I would learn more than I ever could in a classroom that claims to be teaching about societies, or civilization.

In the past few weeks, I've read about the deaths of three students and a 34–year–old assistant professor on this campus alone. My friend Carolyn sent me an e–mail about her friend at Dartmouth whose boyfriend's father died recently. She said he went running and they found him in the street.

Hearing news of these sudden, youthful deaths serve as reality–checks for me. One of the UMass students was younger than I am when she died. I cannot even fathom the concept of my own mortality, let alone think about my death coming anytime soon. There are so many things I want to do before I die, and seeing other people's lives ended so abruptly only makes these goals and desires seem more urgent.

My parents have told me countless times that my "schemes" for world travel and enacting change can wait. People love to tell me things like, "You have the rest of your life to do that!" and "What's your hurry?" The reality is that I have no idea how long my life will be, and that is precisely my hurry. Most people also genuinely believe that it is best to graduate from college before travelling or trying to change anything. Sometimes we have to step back and wonder if these beliefs are simply coming from hearing them repeated so many times.

I'm really scared that the only reason why I do anything is because people before me have done it before. That's not all bad, but I really long for real independence. I don't want to be just one of the crowd. I want to stand out. But I don't know how yet. Maybe I'll learn in a college course, but I doubt it.

Jeff Perlman is a UMass student.

Letters to the Editor

Apologies for Van Meter

To the editor:

As president of Van Meter House Council, I was extremely disappointed to find out that the event Ms. McCarthy wrote about in her editorial "Human Violations" [on Oct. 28] had occurred here at my own building. According to the accounts I heard from those who had actually witnessed it, the incident was indeed far beyond the normal schoolyard banter that usually gets passed between our building and Greenough. There is an undeniable difference between a puerile "Hey, Greenough... etc," and the filthy, unprintable language that was smeared across the air that Saturday evening.

Late this past Friday night, there was another incident, and this one was addressed to Ms. McCarthy herself. Prior to this most recent occurrence, I was content in my delusion that no Van Meter resident could have done this; I thought the perpetrator probably wasn't even from the Central area. As it turns out, a Van Meter resident was seen while accosting Greenough, at times addressing his harassing comments to Ms. McCarthy directly.

Unfortunately, all Van Meter House Council can do is apologize for this behavior. We cannot promise that it won't happen again, nor can we be sure that the perpetrators will be effectively punished. This is a case where "sorry" has to be good enough. We want Ms. McCarthy to know that the comments directed at her and at Greenough late at night are in no way representative of Van Meter's attitudes or opinions toward Ms. McCarthy or Greenough Residence Hall. In fact, we commend Ms. McCarthy's courageousness in the face of adversity; she could have easily stuffed her pillow over her ears, as many of us do, trying to block out the late night disturbance of the peace; she could have tried to out–wit the hecklers by adding to the verbal mayhem, but she didn't Lindsay McCarthy drew the attention of the community to the issue, which was certainly the right thing to do since some of us at Van Meter really didn't know how bad it had become.

Again, we are deeply sorry for the continued abuse of Greenough, Chadbourne and Lindsay McCarthy. We will do all we can to prevent these incidents from occurring in the future.

Todd J. Hanaburgh
President
Van Meter House Council

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor. But please remember, letters must:

* be typed and signed.
* be no more than 400 words long
* include name, address, and phone number for confirmation purposes.
* The Collegian reserves the right to edit letters for length, clarity, and style.

They can be submitted by mail to Ed/Op Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst MA 01003; by e–mail to our new account at: letters@oitunix.oit.umass.edu; or by fax to (413) 545–1592.

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Winston Churchill says: "Write for Ed/Op."

Come down and see Mike if you have any questions... about writing.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545–3500 • Fax (413) 545–1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor–in–Chief Position Vacant Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Veldan Production Manager
Steve Salerno Jr. Advertising Manager David Parmenter Advertising Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Laura Forster Developing Nations Editor
Mike Messeros Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Co-Jewish Affairs Editor
Morgan Tobor Co-Jewish Affairs Editor
Heather Lei Guzzetta Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jill Carroll News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylanski Sports Editor
Aliana E. Todman Women's Issues Editor
Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri–Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545–3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Developing Nations

Coming to terms with conflicting interests, four activists on peace

By Anna Glozman
Collegian Correspondent

Four peace activists from Bosnia, Croatia and Serbia visited the University of Massachusetts to discuss their experiences and issues related to the conflict in their countries.

Jakob Finci, Lidija Obad, Mirha Kratina and Dragan Popadic spoke last Thursday as part of a panel discussion titled "Roads to Reconciliation: Peacebuilding in the Former Yugoslavia." Each panelist had a role in promoting peace and reconciliation in the war–torn region, and shared efforts and experiences as part of the discussion.

Finci, president of La Benevolencija, a Jewish humanitarian, and the director of the Soros Foundation for Bosnia and Herzegovina, spoke first about relationships between the people of the Balkan peoples, as well as the importance of reconciliation now and after the war.

"It's impossible to divide Bosnia," Finci said.

Comparing Bosnia to "baked bread," Finci said Bosnians, Serbs, and Croatians, are like flour, yeast and water.

"Once the bread is finished, it's impossible to separate the flour from the rest of the bread," Finci said.

Americans are unable to understand fully the relationship between the Balkan peoples as well as the situation in the region.

"As long as it doesn't knock on your own door, you can't know what it is," said Obad, a coordinator for the Center for Peace, Nonviolence and Human Rights in Osijek, Croatia. "People have empathy when they have experience."

She also warned war is not contained only in the Balkans, underlining the importance of working out problems before they reach the explosive level of war.

"War may knock on your door tomorrow," Obad said.

She explained people use a self–defense mechanism of hatred in order to survive the irrationality of war.

The psychology of war was also discussed by Kratina a field facilitator and psychologist for Save the Children in Zenica. She works towards improving the well–being of preschool children affected by the war in Bosnia and Herzegovina. She spoke about how humanitarian help was most important to the refugees because people were starving and dying and that the next priority was healing psychological wounds associated with the war.

Kratina, a teacher in Bosnia before the war, recalled how school was interrupted and the building was used as a collective center to house refugees from other parts of the country. She remembers 60 people living in one classroom. Kratina talked of the difficulties overcoming the experience of war.

"War trauma lasts a long, long time. A lot of people still haven't done anything about their trauma," Kratina said.

Each of the activists works to help people come to terms with the situation in the Balkans, but there is opposition to their work.

Popadic, a professor of psychology at the University of Belgrade and a founding member of the Center for Antiwar Action in Belgrade, Serbia, discussed the influence of the media in Belgrade.

The public media is censored to a point that the Serbians see what's going on only from the perspective of the Serbian government.

"It's hard to work in these conditions. The official media says you're a traitor," Popadic said.

Popadic pointed out the differences between Belgrade and Amherst.

"We live in a different world. It's impossible to organize meetings like this, especially about reconciliation," Popadic said.

"As long as it doesn't knock on your own door, you can't know what it is," said Obad, a coordinator for the Center for Peace, Nonviolence and Human Rights in Osijek, Croatia. "People have empathy when they have experience."

The audience discussed solutions to the crisis in Kosovo. Interacting with the audience, Popadic warned of punishing Serbia with sanctions. Obad called for more international community involvement, especially in areas of improving economic conditions. She pointed to unemployment as one of the reasons that people do not return to their homes before the war. She sees competition for jobs as a cause of hatred.

"The international role should be more than just spies," Obad said.

The "Roads to Reconciliation" series of forums is sponsored by the Office of Jewish Affairs. The second of two panels, "Roads to Reconciliation: Peacebuilding in the Middle East," will bring together two activists, Judith Green from Jerusalem and Zoughbi Zoughbi from Bethlehem. The panel discussion will be held Monday, Nov. 9 in the Campus Center, room 101 at 7:30 p.m.

Frustrating reporting in the former Soviet Union states

By Laura Forster
Collegian Staff

BRIAN MCDERMOTT | COLLEGIAN

Thomas Goltz, former rogue reporter, speaks to a group about the ethnic conflicts in the former Soviet Union.

Thomas Goltz describes himself as a rogue reporter, whose difficulty in reporting on the events in central Asia, the Caucasus and Russia came just as much from the dangerous situation he found himself in, as getting these areas in print.

Last Thursday, Goltz spoke to a small group of students and faculty at the University of Massachusetts, on the current situation in the former Soviet Union and his experience reporting during wartime.

Reporting from the small town of Azerbaijan in the former Soviet Union, Goltz found that he had no idea what he was getting into when he first visited the area.

"If you didn't get off and get dirty you had no business doing the news," said Goltz.

Brushing up on the culture and current affairs of the area, Goltz read books and learned the language to acclimate himself to the culture as best he could. However, when Glotz found himself being shot at and thousands dead and misplaced, he realized there was a lot to Azerbaijan that couldn't be learned from text.

Difficulties grew for Goltz when he found it hard to get his stories on small areas like Azerbaijan, accepted by mainstream sources such as The New York Times. One example of this was a story on elections in Azerbaijan in April 1993, which Goltz felt illustrated the people's desire for stability, but the New York Times waited five days and then printed a small blurb of Goltz's piece. Most mainstream newspapers have established foreign correspondents reporting from large cities. In this case, Goltz had to go to Moscow and go through the Associated Press to get his story printed.

"Frustration goes a long way in covering these types of things," Goltz said.

Goltz describes himself as a rogue reporter who moved around the splintered states of the Soviet Union, sending stories to various newspapers and wires.

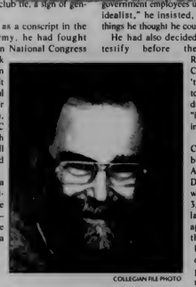
The break–up of states in the former Soviet Union has been the cause of much fighting among ethnic groups as each fights for independence. Goltz explained the conflict as "how to get the Smith's and Jones' to live next door to one another when one accuses the other of raping and killing their children."

Also reporting in Chechnyia and Georgia, Goltz found similar problems due to the break–up of states as due to "the self–determination of nations and the territorial integrity of existing states."

In comparing the states of the former Soviet Union to the United States Goltz said, "The only thing which keeps the U.S. together is economic prosperity."

Showing a 10 minute televised clip of his time in Azerbijan Goltz interviewed Azeri locals sharing their sentiments and the need for time to reconstruct their homes and families.

In another televised clip, Goltz was sent back to Checnyia by the BBC two years after the war had ended to do a follow up on the aftermath. What he found there was disheartening. A close friend of his, Hussein, had been accused a traitor for the Russians, possibly due to his associations with Goltz and was exiled from his village, where his family lived.



In addressing the current situation, Goltz pointed out that "the day of the militia is over" in Azerbijan as stability is sought after. Currently plans for getting oil from the Caspian Sea to the land via pipelines are being worked on since this could be the main source of gas and oil for Western Europe. Goltz says the amount of oil here is equal to about four times that in the North Seas.

Goltz has written a book about his experiences: Azerbaijan Diary: A Rogue Reporter's Adventures in an Oil–Rich, War– torn Post–Soviet Republic. He no longer reports on the area due to his frustration with trying to get the stories printed but plans on writing more books in the future.

Searching for truth both for the self and the wounded

Two years ago while on a flight to South Africa I had one of those all–night airplane conversations. My companion was an Afrikaans, a white South African. He was in his middle or late 30s, a civil servant, a deputy department head in the medium–sized city government. He had worked his way up from the ranks, and now wore a sports club tie, a sign of gentility.

Earlier, he said, as a conscript in the South African army, he had fought against the African National Congress (ANC), the black African liberation movement. His unit had staged an illegal raid into another country, Botswana, to attack an ANC "installation," which proved to be a small private home, and kill its inhabitants.

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

Howard Ziff

(Months later a Botswanan journalist told me what he knew of the raid — a political refugee from South Africa and members of his family, including children, had been murdered.)

My Afrikaans friend (companions become friends on an all–night flight) told me he was on his way to becoming chief of his department until apartheid ended and a black– majority government was elected.

"Today, there isn't a chance" he said — too much competition from newly eligible black candidates for the job and an elected black official was now the chief appointing officer.

At first he had told me his trip, with his wife, had been "on vacation" to Canada and Great Britain. Later he said he was primarily scouting for jobs on the hope of emigrating from a now black–ruled country.

And he had found a place to go.

"I'm not going," he said. He and his wife had spent almost a month away and found themselves longing for their home. They had talked it over ceaselessly and decided "We are Africans, too."

He had been going to law school at nights in a random sort of way. Now he had decided to take his law education seriously, specializing in labor law, and once he got his degree, find work with a government employees union. "I'm not an idealist," he insisted, these were just things he thought he could do.

He had also decided to volunteer to testify before the Truth and Reconciliation Commission about "the raid." He had to get it out of his dreams and fears "if I expect to stay in South Africa."

The Commission is the Archbishop Desmond Tutu, which issued a 3,500–page report last week on the apartheid era and the war against black Africa and democracy. It puts the nightmare on the table for all to read.

The report and the promise of amnesty for people like my airplane companion if they came forth and told their stories frankly is an extraordinary example of humanity and statesmanship.

I do not know if my friend testified or remained in South Africa. He did not return a couple of telephone calls and I dropped the effort. Perhaps I shouldn't have. If he had the courage not to bury the past, but to face it, and build a new future, I thought, he had more courage than I.

I plan to get a copy of the commission report and look for his name. I hope I find it.

Retired Professor Howard Ziff is the former head of the UMass Journalism department

Noble Talk: Three Nobel Laureates to speak in Mahar

By Danielle Fugazy
Collegian Correspondent

Editors note: The following are biographies on the three Nobel Laureates who are speaking tomorrow in Mahar Auditorium. This is part of the fourth annual Philp Gamble memorial lecture.

Kenneth J. Arrow won his Nobel Prize in 1972 at the age of 52. He was educated at the City College in New York and Columbia University. He was initially interested in mathematical statistics, and more or less drifted into economics under the influence of his teacher, Harold Hotelling.

Professor Arrow's work in economics was to develop the idea of social choice, a novel analysis of the meaning of cholce by collectivity such as governments. He has been on the Council of Economic Adviser for the U.S. Government and is currently a Professor Emeritus of Operations Research Emeritus at Stanford University.

Robert M. Solow is a Professor Emeritus at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he has been a professor of economics since 1949. Solow studied at Harvard and received the Nobel Prize in Economics in 1987 for his theory of growth. For a number of years he served as a member of the Board of Directors of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, and he was chairman for three years.

He is currently a member of the National Science Board. Some of his books he is most noted for include, Made in America Regaining the Productive Edge (1989, with M. Dertouzos, R. Lester, and the MIT Commission on Industrial Productivity,) and most recently, A Critical Essay on Modern Macroeconomic Theory (1995, with Frank Hahn.)

James Tobin is Sterling Professor of Economics Emeritus at Yale University. He has been on the Yale faculty since 1950. He graduated from Harvard College summa cum laude in economics in 1939, and went on to receive PhD in economics from Harvard in 1947.

Tobin served as a member of President Kennedy's Council of Economic Advisors in Washington. He has been a member of the National Academy of Sciences since 1972. In 1981 he received the Nobel Prize In Economic Science, which was established by the Bank of Sweden in memory of Alfrd Nobel.

The event is free and open to the public. It will begin at 4:15 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium.

Nuclear proliferation talk slated

By Rebecca Sablo
Collegian Correspondent

The Five College Program in Peace and World Securities Studies (PAWSS) is sponsoring a lecture entitled Nuclear Proliferation: A Global Scorecard by Zachary Davis of the United States State Department and the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency on Thursday, Nov. 5 at 7:30 p.m. in Merrill IV, Amherst College.

Davis, who is currently involved in the formation of the United States nuclear proliferation policy, is expected to focus on the state of nuclear proliferation in the aftermath of the Southeast Asian nuclear tests that took place In May. The 40 minute lecture will be followed by a 40 minute question and answer period.

The nuclear tests in Southeast Asia have sparked concern worldwide. Once a model of peace, India shattered its image when it tested a nuclear weapon near the Pakistani border on May 11, 1998. Pakistan responded with its own test. As a result, the United States has placed embargoes on both India and Pakistan. Resolving the situation Is imperative to the economic well–being of India and Pakistan as well as the environmental well–being of Southeast Asia.

Davis has written previously on the topic on nuclear proliferation including contributions to the PAWSS publications. In addition, he has worked for the Environmental and Natural Resource Agency for the Congressional Research Center of the Library of Congress.

For more information, please call the PAWSS office at 559–5519.

Truth in contradictory China

Just as I passed through the gates of my school In Xi'an, I heard the scraping of brakes, the squeal of an animal, and angry men's voices swearing at each other. A massive sky– blue utility truck was stopped in the narrow street. A mixed crowd of students, farmers and businessmen was forming around the truck and a donkey. The donkey had collapsed on the road. He was still hitched to his cart, and was bleeding from where his hoof had been. The truck driver and the peasant had both begun to argue about who was at fault and how much money the animal was worth.

This is my introduction to the contradiction and anachronism of life in modern China. Vestiges of pre–industrial farm life coexists with high–tech developments. The chauffeured black Sedans of party officials past mule– drawn carts that still plod down urban highways. Students chatting on cellphones and checking their beepers are everywhere, but so are peasants combing trash heaps for scraps to sell. Couples are too modest to hold hands in public, but most fancy restaurants double as brothels. The PRC is the world's largest communist country, but the newest fad is playing the stockmarket.

China's culture, economy, and politics are changing at breakneck pace that many Americans insist is too slow. Though only Tiananmen Square, the Dalai Lama and the same handful of dissidents make it to our TV sets, the average Chinese individual is more concerned about the huge changes in his/her daily life.

State owned enterprises have been losing money for years. Now that the government has been pruning them down, millions of workers are "xie gang" — a new euphemism for laid–off. Workers may be given a temporary stipend of $10 or $15 a month and they are encouraged to go find private position, but with so many out of work, job prospects are slim.

Most of my friends had at least one relative out of work. So while they agreed with arguments about freedom of speech and voting and press, those were not the most pressing matters In their lives. China's cultural and economic changes were what mattered most to them. Students could earn as much as their parents by working part time for a private company. Cab drivers made four or five times a professor's pay. The decline of communism has left cutthroat capitalism where Coke, Nike, Hollywood have replaced local products. Life is not the same as It was only five years ago.

All things considered, the human rights situation in China is okay. Not perfect, but okay. And China is a country that is remaking itself — there is an enterprising spirit and drive to improve that is palpable. Our media is stuck undergoing a new cultural revolution and we're missing the real story.

Will Thomson is a UMass student who studied in Xi'an, China.

COURTESY OF JOCELYN SHERMAN

Arturo Rodriguez, the United Farm Workers president is coming to the University of Massachusetts Campus Center on Nov. 7 at 7 p.m. to address the struggle of farm workers for justice and dignity.

Write for Diversity.

Make a difference.

Noho kicks off film festival

By Rob Roensch
Collegian Staff

Beginning today and running to Sunday, Northampton will host its fourth annual Film Festival. Every year, in the first weekend of November, the city becomes a haven for independent films and filmmakers, providing a showcase for some of the finest, most personal movies being made today. The festival is a great place to check out well-made films that are too unusual in style, length or subject matter to make it into wide-scale release.

The meat and potatoes of the festival are the films entered in competition, which will be playing at various times from Friday until Sunday. This year the festival also offers two "festivals within a festival," the Jewish Film and Special Event Series and the Out and About Gay/Lesbian Series.

The Jewish Film Series features films about the lives of Jews in the United States and elsewhere. One highlight should be the Massachusetts premiere of the award-winning documentary Blacks and Jews about the tension between the two groups and the possibilities for inter-group cooperation. Blacks and Jews is playing Wednesday night at 7:30 at the Academy of Music. Another highlight is the New England premiere of a new play Adam Baum and the Jew Movie set in 1946 about a movie mogul and his struggle to make a movie about Jews in America. The play stars "Taxi" alum Judd Hirsch and is slated for Saturday at 8:30 p.m. at the Academy of Music.

The Gay and Lesbian Series will also present several films, including a screening of Way Out West, a little seen western spoof from 1930 starring Billy Haines, Hollywood's first openly gay actor. The screening is set for Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the Academy of Music and will be introduced by William Mann, Haines' biographer.

The festival will close with a bang at 9:00 p.m. Sunday at the Academy of Music with a special screening of the much anticipated Gods and Monsters, a major release centering on the life of horror film director James Whale. As an added bonus, the film stars Hollywood golden boy Brendan Fraser and actor-of-the-moment Ian McKellan.

The festival promises something for everyone, with films playing Wednesday and Thursday evenings and all day Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

Festival passes and tickets for films and events are available at the door or at the Northampton Box Office in Thorne's Marketplace or by phone at 413-586-8686 or 800- THE-TICK. More information is available on the web at www.nohofilm.org.

COURTESY FRANK OCKENFELS

David Bowie adds vocals to Angelo Badalamenti's atmospheric orchestral arrangements of Gershwin's "A Foggy Day" on Red Hot & Rhapsody.

Black Sabbath, Gershwin Revisited

Trax On Trax Off

RED HOT + RHAPSODY
Various Artists
Antilles

The music and lyrics of George and Ira Gershwin are timeless as proved by the latest compilation from the Red Hot Organization in its effort to raise money for AIDS relief around the world.

The renditions of the classic material are as varied as the performers contributing tracks. Stars such as Natalie Merchant, David Bowie and Sinead O'Connor mingle with newcomers Smoke City, Majestic 12 and Davina.

The songs range from classic, jazz-tinged pieces such as Natalie Merchant's smooth delivery on "But Not For Me" to Money Mark's cut and paste style "Peter Sellars Sings George Gershwin." Spearhead and Ernest Ranglin's "I Got Plenty O' Nuthin'" updates the material with a rap.

The Gershwins would be pretty impressed at how vital their material sounds in the '90s. The collection itself is in honor of the centenary of George Gershwin's birth.

"Summertime" from Porgy and Bess is presented twice. While Morcheeba and Hubert Laws present a laid-back performance, Bobby Womack and The Roots rework the song as a funk anthem. David Bowie teams up with Angelo Badalamento for a beautifully orchestrated version of "A Foggy Day (In London Town)" to close out the album. Great music for a great cause. A (Matthew Nixon)

MY EARLY BURGLARY YEARS
Morrissey
Reprise

Morrissey fans are a devoted bunch. They are the kind that own all of his 12-foot single imports from where most of these songs originate. Okay, so the Morrissey fan's vinyl may be a little worn, but is this enough justification to get only some of the b-sides in crisp, digital sound? Maybe so.

A live version of T-Rex's "Cosmic Dancer," full of acoustic guitar and screaming fans is frightening and should have remained unreleased. Regardless, the bulk of this collection is irresistible. B-sides usually get labelled as second rate material. These songs are of album quality. They let even the most casual Morrissey fan make a trip down memory lane to a time when he was at a creative peak after the demise of The Smiths.

Songs that backed college radio hits: "Sister I'm A Poet" from 1988's "Everyday Is Like Sunday" and "Girl Least Likely To" from 1990's "November Spawned A Monster" are here. In all, 10 of the 16 tracks are b-sides. The remaining tracks, besides the T-Rex cover, are album tracks personally picked by Morrissey for inclusion. B+ (M.N.)

REUNION
Black Sabbath
Epic

"Monumental" was the word singer John "Ozzy" Osbourne used to describe the second night of Black Sabbath's two- show reunion, now offered as a double live CD digipak entitled Reunion. There is no doubt that their show was monumental for the fans in attendance — watching Black Sabbath play a full concert after all these years, hearing every fan sing every word of every song, seeing the band transform back into the heavy metal act that influenced countless numbers of bands after them. But at home, with the CD playing in your stereo, the best you can do is imagine the band on stage like you have been for all the years you have been listening to them. It's pretty much your basic live CD, with a few exceptions.

First, the packaging is excellent. A 28-page book filled with live pictures and history is nestled inside a jet-black digipak, which contains even more pictures and artwork. Also, the two new studio tracks, undoubtedly the biggest draw of the package, are great songs. The first single, "Psycho Man," gets off to an awkward start, but elevates into classic Sabb, and "Selling My Soul" is filled with trademark Tony Iommi guitar riffs. The live tracks are all great but are too few, totaling only sixteen — rather low for a double album. In addition, "The Wizard" are "Symptoms of the Universe" would have been suitable replacements for "Dirty Women." True fans will buy this album for the studio tracks, which will not disappoint, and use it as an appetizer for the upcoming tour with Pantera that will no doubt be unforgettable. B (Michael Delano)

THINK TANK
Henry Rollins
Dreamworks

Henry Rollins' latest collection of brain matter fails to capture the essence of his live performance. His schtick which can best be described as chaotic is more than just spoken word. It launches into the realm of stand-up comedy. Much of what Rollins attempts to accomplish is lost on the listener who has never see him perform live.

So, lets take the album for what it is. The two-disc compilation is peppered with some favorites from recent performances in Chicago and Australia. "Airport Hell" is a colorful account of the time trap that Rollins must endure to deliver his magnum opus to the masses. He even goes so far as to suggest improvements to what he says as a failed institution. The "idiot line" being the most notable brain child.

Is Mr Rollins offensive? Yes. Is he entertaining? Definitely. Although it fails to live up to the magic of a night of intimacy with Hank, Think Tank is a little piece of joy that you can take home to mom. B (Anna Feder)

TAKING MY PEE PANTS OFF
Drunk Stuntmen
Chunk Records

The Drunk Stuntmen's first release on Chunk Records entitled Taking My Pee Pants Off proves that this is one local band to keep your eyes on. Overall, the album provides an eclectic group of songs that are well deserving of attention.

The first cut off the album, "Jesse James Dean," demonstrates the vast musical abilities that the band can perform. The well-defined beat of the song is masterfully changed throughout, while the vocals remain impressive.

The addition of a female voice on "Retainer" and the relaxing band play that accompanies it makes it one of the most enjoyable tracks to listen to. Each instrument is well defined on the track and not one is overbearing, leaving the focus to be on the soothing vocals.

"But Pain" starts off as a very well-composed song. The tempo is quite consistent and the band sounds unified. However, the second half of the song seems as though it is missing a verse as the song drags into an acoustic set.

Parts of "All She Wrote" are revolutionary and destined for airplay, however, the beginning of the song fails to captivate an audience, and another section loses the audience as the beat becomes too slow. Fortunately, the remarkable refrain makes up for these deficiencies.

The Drunk Stuntmen bring their melodies to Fire and Water tonight at 10 p.m., or else you may watch them perform at the Valley's local music showcase, the Bay State, 10 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 7. B (Tom Sadkowski)

SPACE GHOST'S SURF AND TURF
Space Ghost (and Friends)
Rhino

For fans of the kinky cartoon show, the follow up to their debut Space Ghost's Musical Bar-B-Que leaves nothing to be desired. It is filled with 22 "tiki torched tunes," as well as several "Nuggets of Joy from Zorak" and "Brak's School Daze."

For those that are unfamiliar, Space Ghost, now a product of Cartoon Network was once a Hannah Barbara favorite in its original incarnation. The show can best be characterized as a sort of twisted talk show with guests the likes of Jim Carrey and Timothy Leary. Much of the humor may be lost on the little ones although it doesn't hinder the enjoyment by all.

With instant classics like "Scat Sandwich", "Front Door/Backside," and "Italian Lesson No. 3" this whacked- out cartoon anthem is an essential to any sophisticated music collection. A (A.F.)

(THE LAST SHALL BE FIRST)
Sunz of Man
Red Ant

I know this one is a little dated, but bear with me as I pay some dues. If you copped this CD back in June, when it dropped, then it is probably collecting more dust than a vacuum cleaner by now. If this is true, you may want to take it out, wipe it off and give it a little play. These grimy, gold-fronted poets are not only Wu-Tang's finest offspring, they have turned out some of hip-hop's most universal underground music. For years these cats have achieved international credibility from Paris to London, providing unreleased sensations like "We Can't Be (Tony) Touched" and "No Love Without Happiness." Led by Killah Priest, whose own solo album was a small gem, Sunz of Man attempt to establish themselves on their debut full length, as conscientious concept-creators with a versatile style. Unfortunately they fall slightly short.

Production-wise (The Last Shall Be First) is tighter than a pair of Levis 501s. Both True Master and 4th Disciple continue to establish themselves as two of hip-hops most talented producers. Their beats are electronic complexities that are comparable to only the RZA, who was their mentor for nearly four years. Tracks like

Turn to TRAX, page 7

Like music?
Like movies?
write for arts!!!

Tori Amos
special guest unbelievable truth
plugged '98
plugged '98
plugged '98
SUN • NOV 15
MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst
TICKETS AVAILABLE AT THE MULLINS CENTER BOX OFFICE AND ALL LOCATIONS INCLUDING MOVIES & MORE, FILENES, VIDEO PARADISE, WOOD BROS. MUSIC, MUSIC FORUM AND SELECT NRM MUSIC. TO CHARGE BY PHONE CALL (413) 733-2500 FOR INFO CALL (413) 545-0101. No service charge at box office open M-F 9am-5pm. Sat 10am-5pm. Tickets subject to convenience charge. Event date and time subject to change. www.livenight.com
PRODUCED BY DELSENERSLATER

Boat Neck
22 oz. Rolling Rock 2.99
ZAMA
downtown Amherst

Wednesday Night
Steve & Greg AsAdoorian
"UMass' Greatest Acoustic Duo Playing your Favorite Tunes From the 60's & 70's today"
Weekly Drink Specials
20oz. Miller Lite Drafts $1.
Corona bottles $2.
16oz. Miller Lite bottles $2
Bucket of Rocks 'Free T-Shirt' + four bottles of rocks $6.99
PRIZES 10-12PM
Over 40 Hand Crafted Beers
THE PUB
15 East Pleasant Street • Amherst

Notre Dame to go east; BC to play host to ND

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Maybe now Bob Davie will find out how good Notre Dame really is.

Despite a 6-1 record, there have been questions about how deserving the Irish are of the No. 13 ranking in the latest Associated Press poll and a shot at a Bowl Championship Series appearance, thanks to what's turned out to be a relatively easy schedule by Notre Dame standards.

What was supposed to be one of the 20 toughest schedules in the country turned into one with only one opponent ranked in the top 25, and Notre Dame's final four opponents are a combined 16-16. Only Southern California has a winning record of the four at 6-3. But three of those last four games are on the road, starting with Saturday's game at Boston College (3-5).

"I don't think that we've played the best game we're capable of playing," Davie said yesterday at his weekly news conference. "I think our team would agree we can and we will have to play better."

That starts Saturday against Boston College. Though they're two teams headed in opposite directions — the Eagles have lost five-in-a-row while the Irish have won their last five — Davie said Boston College could be the most potent offensive team Notre Dame has faced this season. The Eagles average more than 435 yards a game in offense, 20th in the country.

Not a pleasant thought when he thinks of the hostile Boston College crowd likely to greet Notre Dame in just the 10th meeting between the two schools.

"We're not a team that takes anyone or anything for granted," Davie said. "When you look at those tapes, and I mean this in all sincerity, you watch those tapes and you see what a good offensive team Boston College is."

One thing Davie knows for sure is the Irish have finally found the big play.

The Notre Dame defense has 19 tackles for loss in the last two games and given up only nine of what Davie considers "big plays" — runs of more than 12 yards and passes of more than 14 yards. The offense has finally found some explosiveness as well, with 22 "big plays" for 515 yards in the past two games and only seven plays that netted negative yardage.

"There's a couple things. One, I think we're hitting better on defense," Davie said. "We're by no means a dominant football team. We are still in the building stages on defense, but I do see light at the end of the tunnel on defense.

"The second thing, we do have some big play potential on offense, and you never know where the big play is coming from."

Against Baylor, it was tailback Autry Denson and quarterback Jarious Jackson sparking the offense to 462 yards, including 329 on the ground. Denson ripped off six runs of 10 yards or more, including scampers of 37, 32 and 24 yards, while Jackson ran for 43 yards on a quarterback sneak and threw touchdowns passes of 24 and 66 yards.

What's more, Davie said the big play can come from anyone at any time.

Flanker Bobby Brown, who led the team in receptions last season, had only two catches for 25 yards through the first five games.

But against Army and Baylor, he had five catches for 137 yards, including two catches that resulted in touchdowns.

"We all see the improvement we need to make as a team; that's obvious," Davie said. "But the most encouraging thing to me is really the unselfishness and the camaraderie and the chemistry of this team. I think we can continue to improve as long as we keep our eye on the target."

KARA STORES / COLLEGIAN

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

It's do or die time

While Kristi Robicheau (left) and the Massachusetts women's soccer team head off to Dayton to defend their Atlantic 10 crown, Kristen Schmidt (right) will be in Philadelphia with the UMass field hockey team looking to accomplish the same feat.

Texas HS running back comes up with new mark

DALLAS (AP) — Before every game, Irving running back Tyson Thompson sets a statistical goal, usually between 200 and 300 yards. But for his first game after being held to 27 yards on 23 carries, Thompson wanted to do something really special.

Did he ever. Thompson had 525 yards and seven touchdowns on 33 carries in a 45-29 victory over Hurst Bell last Friday night. The yardage broke the state's week-old Class 5A record and it's believed to be the eight-best performance in national high school history.

"It was something that you just don't see," Irving coach Jim Bennett said. "My girl's basketball coach said he sat down and figured that he's seen over 700 games and had never seen anything like it. It was just amazing to watch."

Thompson's performance is the third incredible outing by a Texan in two weekends. The previous Friday night, Houston Milby's Derick Arnold set the 5A record with 446 yards and Darryl Ellis of Class 2A Somerville gained either 602 yards on 48 carries or 552 on 47, depending on which team's stats are accurate.

But Thompson's outing may be the most impressive because he had fewer carries, played against better competition and was trying to avoid being eliminated from the playoffs against a team that would clinch a postseason berth with a victory.

Bennett, nonetheless, had high expectations going into the game. Redemption for the off-game the previous week was one reason; the new, fast turf at Beford's Pennington Field was another.

Irving opened the game with a sweep to Thompson and he took it 74 yards for a touchdown. He scored six more times, including touchdowns of 80 and 89 yards on consecutive carries. The 89-yarder was his longest, while the shortest covered "only" 50 yards. The rest of the touchdowns were from 52, 66 and 53 yards, giving Thompson 464 yards on scoring runs alone.

"We just did not tackle very well," Bell coach Jack Gibson said. "One play, we would stop him for no gain. Then, they would run the same play in the same situation and he would go 80 yards."

Lady Vols appear to be the top of the heap

KNOXVILLE (AP) — Here's all that's needed to get ready for the women's college basketball season:

-Think orange.

-Sing "Rocky Top."

That would be Tennessee orange, of course, and if you don't know the words to the Lady Vols' unofficial anthem, just watch one of their games. It's played ceaselessly while coach Pat Summitt's team dismantles an opponent.

Not since the UCLA men's dynasty of the 1960s and '70s has a basketball team dominated as much as Tennessee, which went 39-0 in winning its third straight national championship last season and returns all the key figures from that team, headed by national player of the year Chamique Holdsclaw.

In fact, there's a school of thought that Tennessee might be too dominant for the sport's good. If everyone knows who's going to win, why bother watching?

"When the men's collegiate game really took off is when all the Cinderella teams started to appear in the tournament," Southern Cal coach Chris Gobrecht said. "Schools began to realize anybody could do this. They could all share in this magic. It began to intrigue the general public so much.

"We need that same infusion of enthusiasm that comes from unpredictability," she said.

Unpredictability is not a factor when the Lady Vols play, though they did have to come from behind late to beat North Carolina in the regional finals. Their average victory margin was 30 points and they beat a strong Louisiana Tech team by 18 in the championship game.

There's no reason to expect anything different this season. Holdsclaw is the best player in the game, sophomores Tamika Catchings and Semeka Randall should be even better with a year of experience and Summitt beefed up the only area where help was needed by signing two promising post players.

"You could put all the rest of us together and not beat Tennessee," Louisiana Tech coach Leon Barmore said. "That doesn't mean we don't want to try. There have been upsets, you know."

But again, is it good for anyone to be that good?

"I think it's good for Tennessee and the state of Tennessee," Colorado coach Ceal Barry said. "From a competitive standpoint, I kind of think when you don't know who's going to win, it makes it more exciting.

"When you know who's going to win, you follow it, but not with the same enthusiasm."

Or as Gobrecht put it, "There's interest and there's commitment. Tennessee definitely creates interest. But commitment comes from people being involved emotionally and that doesn't happen unless you have a chance."

Still, somebody must be watching. Attendance at NCAA women's games rose for the 17th straight season to nearly 7.4 million, an increase of 9.7 percent. The NCAA tournament drew a record 285,428 fans and the championship game got a 3.7 rating on ESPN, slightly below the Tennessee-Old Dominion final in 1997 but still a healthy figure.

Tennessee led the nation in attendance, drawing an average of 14,369, and consistently drew large crowds on the road. What those fans saw was a running, pressing team that played with a combination of skill, athleticism and verve never before displayed in the women's college game.

"They've raised the bar for everyone to recruit players of that caliber — and a number of them," Barry said.

Connecticut, which beat Tennessee in the 1995 national championship game, responded by signing the nation's best recruiting class. Tamika Williams, Swin Cash, Asjha Jones, Sue Bird and Keirsten Walters are being compared with Tennessee's freshman class last season.

Tennessee begins the season with a 45-game winning streak, putting the Lady Vols within range of Louisiana Tech's record of 54. Interestingly, Tech could prevent Tennessee from reaching that mark because the Lady Vols' fourth game of the season is at Tech on Nov. 30.

"That will be mentioned," Barmore said, "I, for one, don't want to give it up."

Summitt, though, is concerned only with having a winning streak at the end of the season — one that will take her team to the Final Four in San Jose, Calif.

"In this program, what we have stressed every year is how we play in March," she said. "And what's important in March is six basketball games — and hopefully finishing with a W."

Even if Tennessee does walk off with another title, there's still room for intrigue. Arkansas made the Final Four last season as a No. 8 seed and North Carolina State made it for the first time.

trax

continued from page 6

"Illusions" and "The Plan" demonstrate the intricate rhythm and diverse melody in 4th Disciple's repertoire. True Master laces the albums anthems like "Collaboration '98" and "Next Up" which both feature Method Man, as well as "Intellectuals," that guest stars Rackwon and U-God. (U-God's verse is memorable). Even though the majority of the beats are melodic neck-nodders, lyrically we are left scratching our heads. The album is ridden with awkward word collages and ridiculous metaphors and I often found myself chuckling at their attempts to sound profound. While I cannot discredit their effort, the flow of the album is sticky. Wyclef makes an appearance to lay down the track for "Shining Star" which uniquely features Earth Wind & Fire and Ol' "Big Baby Jesus" Dirty Bastard. This songs sheer exuberance is one of the few where the lyrics are not a hindrance.

Overall, the efforts of True Master and 4th Disciple elevate Sunz to a low level of excellence that is still hard to come by these days. Consequently, I have yet to let the dust settle on this album. B haircuts ★ colors ★ highlights

REGENCY HAIRSTYLISTS
189 N. Pleasant St
253-9526
perms ★ tanning ★ facial waxing

CASTAWAY LOUNGE
Rte. 5 & 10
Whately, MA
413-665-8735
Adult Entertainment
proudly presents:
EVERY MONDAY NIGHT IS FOOTBALL NIGHT
FREE FOOD PRIZE GIVEAWAY!!!
5 Beautiful Exotic Dancers 5pm 1am
all this & Entertainment 1am-Tam
$$$ BEAUTIFUL GIRLS, need money? $$$
No experience? No transportation? We will provide everything!
Call (413) 665-8733 · Ask for Jim
Coming Soon
AMATEUR NIGHT
Ladies must apply in person

amc
Hampshire 6 · 584-7860
Hampshire Mall
Mt. Farms 4 · 584-9153
Mt. Farms Mall
WHAT DREAMS MAY COME (PG-13) Today at 5:30 @ 52 501
SOLDIER (R) Today at 5:50 @ 52 501 8:30
PRACTICAL MAGIC (PG-13) Today at 5:40 @ 52 501 8:10
BELOVED (R) Today at 4:00, @ 53 501 7:30
URBAN LEGEND (R) Today at 8:20
RUSH HOUR (PG-13) Today at 5:20 @ 52 501 8:20
"John Carpenter's VAMPIRES (R) Today at 5:40 @ 52 501 8:20
APT PUPIL (R) Today at 5:30 @ 52 501 8:10
PLEASANTVILLE (PG-13) Today at 5:20 @ 52 56 | 8:00
ANTZ (PG) Today at 6:00 @ 52 501 8:40
BRIDE OF CHUCKY (R) Today at 5:50 @ 52 503 8:30
$2.00 (Two Lifts) Winter Daily

"Reason №4 why you should take my MCAT course."
4 Our teachers deliver
Only the best instructors teach our courses. Not only are they experts in their specific field, (physics, biology, chemistry, verbal) but they have also passed our rigorous hiring and training process.
Call 1-800-2REVIEW or visit us at www.review.com
Courses held on the UMASS campus! Smith, Mt. Holyoke, and WNEC as well
THE PRINCETON REVIEW

The CollegeStudent.com Thanksgiveaway
We will deliver you a free turkey for Mom & Dad after you arrive home for Thanksgiving!
You will arrive with a free bouquet of flowers from the Boston City Florist (1-800-292-ROSE)
We'll even give you a free haircut from a Delleria Hair Salon so you look nice!
To enter to gobble up this great prize simply log on to www.collegestudent.com

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

CAMPUS WIDE STUDENT TRIP to the Holocaust Memorial Museum in Washington DC. Nov 8-9. $45/$30 with Hillel Activity Card. Transportation & Hotel included. Call 549-1710 to sign up.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take Over Lease 2 bedrooms of a 3 bedroom apartment. On Main St. Available Jan 1. 256-3062.

2 bedrooms for rent ASAP. Main St. Bus route. $375/month each. Utilities included. 256-1928.

Take My Lease Two bedrooms on bus line. Call 549-5318.

2 Bedroom Apartment Newly renovated. Very bright. Busline. $795, all inclusive. Stacey 549-6657.

AUTO FOR SALE

CARS $100-$500 Police Impounds. Hondas, Chevys, Jeeps, & Sport Utilities. MUST SELL! 1-800-522-2730 x4554.

COMPUTERS

486 Computer Great For Student Works Good $100. Color VGA $50. (413)584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Calzone Transport Technicians (Delivery People) and Calzone Production Engineers (Kitchen Help). Must be able to work 25 hours a week. Apply at D.P. Dough.

Waitress Part-Time Make $400 & work 2 or 3 nights. Flexible hours. Dancers For Upscale Gentleman's Club No experience necessary. Unlimited $$$ Potential. Bikini, Topless, or Nude! Call 413-536-0502

EMPLOYMENT

WHMP 99.3 FM is looking for positive, outgoing individuals to interact with the public at promotional events, concerts, and client remote broadcasts. Must be 18+, available nights and weekends, and have a valid driver's license. Send resumes to: WHMP, P.O. Box 268, Northampton, MA 01060. Atlantic Star Communications is an EOE.

Bell Ringers needed part-time for Christmas Kettle Campaign. Flexible hours, outdoors. Nov/Dec. $5.60/hr. 585-8729.

Disc Jockey needed for mobile DJ service. Willing to train but must have a dependable vehicle and knowledge of current dance music. Call 253-6355.

Best Part-Time Job In The Valley

You don't have to wash dishes or flip burgers for the extra money you need. Become a Clean Water Action organizer and earn $7.30-$9.00/hr fighting air and water pollution. Paid training, flexible schedule, evening and weekend hours. 584-9830.

PIZZA MAKERS NEEDED

Flexible Hours Now Hiring At Sbarros Hampshire Mall

Legal Assistants Wanted Spring 1999 Internships with Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary— training provided. Deadline to begin the application process is Nov 13, 1998— Contact The Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

ENTERTAINMENT

Lights and Sound: Rave to Dorm Party. Your DJ's or ours. Call BARR Productions (413)737-8561.

FOR SALE

GMAT Bargain! Princeton Review. Prep Class reg. $795 only $600. 259-1051.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy Birthday Sarah!! Wait till we're 35!! Love All Your Friends In Field!!

HEALTH & BEAUTY

We're here to pump... YOU UP! Creatina Monohydrate, Creatine Surge, DHEA, Whey Protein and more from Fitness Workshop delivered right to your door. 1-877-FIT-WORK www.fitnessworkshop.com

HOUSE FOR RENT

Summer Rentals Cape Cod Group Summer Rentals. Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Call Diamond Real Estate 1-508-477-1900.

LOST & FOUND

Lost Wallet- Franklin Dining Commons on Wednesday, 10/28. Reward $$$. Call 256-1928.

Missing cat- gray tigar with white feet and tummy. Call Emily 549-0471.

MISCELLANEOUS

Think Different $500-$1000 part-time per month. No experience needed. Will train. Free information packet. 413-788-9838. cleanair@javanet.com

PERSONALS

Tara: Come on, slide some oil to me, girl. Oooh, does that feel good! 143 - s.h/w

ROOM FOR RENT

Take over my lease in apartment in Northampton. Two nice roommatas, 5 min to bus, free laundry. $250 plus electricity. Call 585-8018.

SERVICES

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact The Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Rabbit Rescue has a lovely selection of bunnies. Many colors and types as well as a selection of cages and hutches. We can also help with any bunnies you can no longer care for. Call Ellen at 367-0105 after 9am please.

On-Line Roommate/Apt Search Service Free Ads. http://members.aol.com/pvroommata/

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst Area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TO SUBLET

Looking to sublet starting Jan 1st. 2 bedrooms in a 4 bedroom Mill Valley Estates Townhouse. Large living room, kitchen, 2 1/2 bathrooms. Call Adam 253-0181 or Jamie 253-0007.

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK '99 Cancun & Bahamas: Sign up now and get free meals/drinks! Florida, Jamaica, and South Padre available! Sell trips and travel free! Call for free brochure. 1(888)777-4642

TRAVEL

#1 Spring Break Operator! Check our web-site for the best deals! www.vagabondtours.com Cancun, Bahamas, Jamaica & Florida. Group organizers EARN FREE TRIPS & CASH...Call today! 800-700-0790

SPRING BREAK '99 Largest selection of Spring Break Destinations, including Cruises! Foam Parties, Drink Specials, and Club Admissions. Group Discounts. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-FUN

TYPING

Have your paper typed by an English Major! $1.50 1st 2 pages, $1 each additional. Proofreading & Typing $2 a page. Call Jen at 256-6351.

WANTED

Active Women Needed For Nutritional Study Graduate Research Study in Zinc Supplementation. 18 to 40 years old and exercising 3 times a week. Call Christy 532-2733.

Do you want to advertise something??

Would you like your advertisement reach the whole student body??

Call.. The Collegian Classsifieds today!!!

Your Ad could fill this space!!!!

Place an Ad in The Classifieds TODAY!!!

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, NOV 4

Community — There will be a blood drive at the Davis Center at Smith College from 11 a.m.-5 p.m.

Documentary — A three-part documentary that explores the history of feminist video makers will be held in Herter Auditorium room 231 from 4-6:30 p.m. Discussion and introduction will be done by Alexandra Juhasz.

Documentary — A documentary about the first control unit prison for women will be held in the Campus Center room 811 at 7 p.m.

Fair — The 2nd Annual Health Fair will be held in the Student Union Ballroom from 10 a.m.-3 p.m. Receive information on STDs, nutrition, alternative medicine, organ donation, and more.

Information — A drop information session on eating disorders will be held from 4-5:30 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services. Anyone is welcome.

Meeting — There will be a general Theatre Guild meeting at 7 p.m. All are welcome.

Speech — The Biological Sciences Student Association will host UMass alumni who will speak about their experiences at UMass Worcester Medical School. The event will be held at 7:30 p.m in the Campus Center room 917.

Talk — Hershel Shanks will give a talk entitled "Jerusalem: An Archaeological Biography." at 7:30 p.m. in Seelye Hall room 106 at Smith College. All are welcome.

Workshop — There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 7 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

THURSDAY, NOV. 5

Community — There will be a blood drive at the Davis Center at Smith College from 11 a.m.-5 p.m.

Film — Abigail Child will present her new film Bride about the urban homeless at 7:30 p.m. in the main lecture hall in the Film/Photo building at Hampshire College.

Forum — There will be a forum on the injustice system featuring former prisoners and families of prisoners in room 174 of the Campus Center at 7 p.m.

Gathering — There will be a gathering of graduate men and women, along with a buffet dinner, from 7-10 p.m. in the graduate lounge on the ground floor of the Campus Center.

Lecture — Philip Gamble will give a lecture featuring three Nobel laureate professors in Mahar Auditorium at 4:15 p.m.

Lecture — A lecture entitled "Visible/Invisible: Locating Queerness on American TV" will be held from 12:30 p.m.-2 p.m. in the Campus Center.

Meeting — The second meeting of the Student Affairs Review Committee will be held from 4-6 p.m. in room 917 of the Campus Center.

Movie — A movie about a 20-something black lesbian struggling to make a documentary and come to terms with her life will show at 7:30 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium.

Workshop — There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 3 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

Community — UMass seniors who have a 3.85 or higher and who plan to attend graduate school next year should contact Professor Nelson at 577-2611 to discuss Phi Kappa Phi scholarships.

Community — Golden Key National Honor Society nominees are reminded to return membership forms as soon as possible. Deadline is approaching.

Scholarships — UMass students interested in scholarship opportunities are encouraged to visit the Office of National Scholarship Advisement in room 416 of Goodell. Deadlines for scholarships are approaching fast.

Submissions — The UMass Poetry Society is taking submissions for its anthology. Call Joshua at 546-5823 for more details.

Workshop — A 5-week workshop entitled "Women, Food, and Body Image: Rewriting Our Stories; Restoring Ourselves" will be held Thursdays beginning Nov. 5 from 4:30-5:45 p.m. at the Smith College Health Services Conference Room. To register call 585-2940.

Workshop — A workshop for women survivors of childhood sexual abuse will take place on Nov. 7. The workshop include writing, drawing, and movement. In the evening, participants are also invited to perform dances, music, and monologues about healing from abuse. Call 586-7390 for more information and to sign up.

NOTICES

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Next time, try US first.

New University Store — Not like a mall... Closer.

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — NOVEMBER 4, 1998

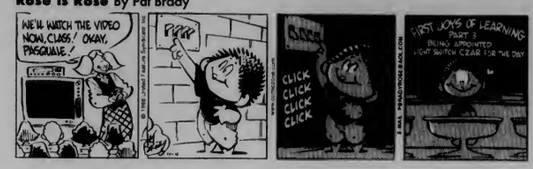
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Election Wrap-Up		Living Edens		Anatomy of a Homicide: Life on the Street (In Stereo)
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Nanny	Maggie	To Have & to Hold (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Nanny	Maggie	To Have & to Hold (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Dharma-Greg	Two Guys-Girl	Drew Carey	Secret Lives	20/20		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny	Friends	Dawson's Creek (In Stereo)		Charmed "Dream Sorcerer"		News		Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Dateline (In Stereo)		3rd Rock-Sun	Newsradio	Law & Order "Agony"		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	6	Home Imp.	Judge-Brown	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	7 Days "Doppelganger – Part I"		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		News	Newsradio	Newsradio	Married... With
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Dateline (In Stereo)		3rd Rock-Sun	Newsradio	Law & Order "Agony"		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Frasier	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Party of Five "The Baby"		News		Friends	Med Abt. You
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Dateline (In Stereo)		3rd Rock-Sun	Newsradio	Law & Order "Agony"		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Living Edens		Anatomy of a Homicide: Life on the Street (In Stereo)				Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGUB	49	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Dharma-Greg	Two Guys-Girl	Drew Carey	Secret Lives	20/20		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	7 Days "Doppelganger – Part I"		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Med Abt. You	Med Abt. You	Frasier	Cheers
WTBS	17	Family Matters	Family Matters	Roseanne	Roseanne	★★ "The Delta Force" (1986, Adventure) Chuck Norris, Lee Marvin.						★★★ "Bad Boys" (1992)
AAE	63	Northern Exposure		Law & Order "Seed"		Biography: Pamela Harriman		American Justice (R)		Sherlock Holmes Mysteries (R)		Law & Order "Destruct"
CNN	19	Wordview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand: Fortune		Sports	Moneyline
COM	28	Premium	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	Young Comedians (R)		Sinbad: Brain Damaged (R)		South Park (R)	Dgnight	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	64	New House	Flesh-Line	Gimme Shelter (R)		Wild Discovery: Hunters		Discover Magazine (R)		Would You Believe (R)		Justice Files	"Trackers"
ESPN	59	Up Close	Sportscenter		PBA Bowling: Indianapolis Open. (Live)			Wonderful World of Golf		NFL's Great...		Sportscenter
LIFE	62	Ellen	Ellen	Party of Five "Christmas"		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		"Betrayed: A Story of Three Women" (1974) Meredith Baxter.				New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	27	5:30 Jams Countdown		Belly Movie	Beavis But...	Eye Spy Video	Say What?	Adam Sandler's Last Laugh		True Life	Revive	Cat (In Stereo)	Loveline
NICK	60	Figure It Out	Secret of Alex	Doug	Rugrats	Hey Arnold!	Allen Strange	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Happy Days	Laverne	I Love Lucy	Bewitched
SCIFI	65	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Sightings		Star Trek: "A Piece of the Action"		★★½ "Comeback" (1995, Comedy) Dan Aykroyd, Jane Curtin.				Sightings	Star Trek
TLC	26	Home Again	Home Again	Trauma: Life	Trauma: Life	Extreme Machines (R)		Bigfoot (R)		Wallman-Myth and Science		Extreme Machines (R)
TNT	29	Babylon 5	The Long Dark	ER "Fire in the Belly" (In Stereo)		★★½ "The Shadow Riders" (1982, Western) Tom Selleck.				Babylon 5 "The Wheel of Fire"		"In the Company of Darkness"
USA	23	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Xena: Warrior Princess (R)		Walker, Texas Ranger				★★★ "Cape Fear" (1991, Suspense) Robert De Niro, Nick Nolte. (In Stereo)		Undercover
HBO	45	(5:00) ★★ "Space Jam" (1996) Michael Jordan. PG				"First Time Felon" (1997, Drama) Omar Epps. (In Stereo) R				Dr. "A Game of Checkers" (R)		Chris Rock	"Eve's Bayou"
MAX	46	(5:55) ★★★ "Selena" (1997, Biography) Jennifer Lopez. PG				★★ "Behind Enemy Lines" (1997, Adventure) R		"Contact		★★★ "The Terminator" (1984) Arnold Schwarzenegger. R
SHOW	47	★★★ "The Bad News Bears" (1976) PG		Movie News		★½ "Critical Care" (1997, Drama) James Spader. (In Stereo) R				★★ "Night Vision" (1998) Fred Williamson. R		Love Street

Cathy By Cathy Guisewite

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Non Sequitur By Wiley



Liberty Meadows By Frank Cho

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Spunk By Mike LaRiccia

Sven By Stephen Higgins

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — Your vulnerability is your own business today. You'll have the chance to present yourself in the light of a confident and capable competitor.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Now is no time to try too hard with something that cannot win you tangible rewards. Instead, focus on things directly related to making profits.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — You can enjoy a rare meeting of the minds today with a member of a conflicting sign. However, be warned, for a Cancerian may be difficult.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — You're in the mood for something that my not be the most suitable for you, but you'll have to learn it the hard way.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — Don't be so quick to find fault and look for flaws in others. Such a critical perspective will blind you from seeing a suitable partner coming your way.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — You and a friend are going to realize today that both of you have more in common that you had thought. As a result, you can raise the stakes.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — Analyzing every little situation can slow you down today. You're going to have to trust that certain things are just right for you.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You may be intimidated by the approach someone else is taking with you, but it won't last long. You'll realize that he or she is quite insecure.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — Optimism is a commodity that you cannot afford to waste, and a little will go a long way today. Keep your outlook bright and your spirits lifted.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — It's a good day to revaluate and revise the true value of your own personal goals. Few changes are required. Focus on a special deal.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — You'll have a great deal to talk about today, after all that occurs with and without your knowledge. For a few days you'll be in need of more information.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — You can be both analytical and instinctive today. Keeping your mind and spirit in balance will serve you well at this time and in the near future.

Quote of the Day

"Baby, everything I'm about to do to you I learned at Sea World."

–Olly

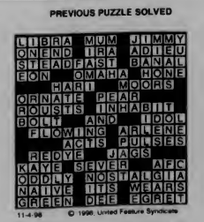
"The Sifl and Olly Show"

Close to Home By John McPherson

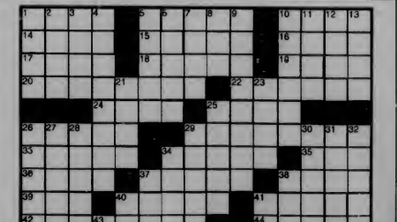
Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Sorry, no menu available today



ACROSS

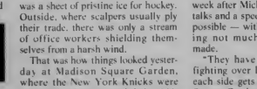


1 Asian ox
5 Breakfast roll
10 Type of song
14 Sacred picture
15 Pedro's pal
16 Shakespeare's river
17 Experts
18 Off-limits
19 Coffeehouse
20 Type of party
22 Slim
24 Acorn bearers
25 Steak or pork
26 Siberian dog
29 Church official
33 Man and Capri
34 Bridge expert
35 GI's addr.
36 Bankrupt
37 Dressed like Batman
38 Request
39 Before, to a poet
40 Pebble-Beach units
41 Store events
42 Hurt (an ankle)
44 Romantic appointment
45 Allows
46 Wild pig
48 Laud
51 First-rate
55 Helper
56 Deserve
58 "GWTW" home
59 Family group
60 VCR button
61 Jannings or Zalopek
62 Some woods
63 Cornered
64 Mortgage, e.g.

DOWN

1 Uses a metal fastener
2 Pantyhose color
3 Oaf
4 Not voiced
5 Dyeing technique
6 Accumulate
7 Taurus
8 Type of trip?
9 United
10 Sides
11 Racetrack shape
12 Artist's home, perhaps
13 Type of jerk?
21 Beanos
23 Carly Simon's "You're So —"
25 Slimy areas
26 Puts on the payroll
27 Seize (power)
28 More like a fox
29 Motorbike
30 Total
31 Dueling swords
32 Prepare chestnuts
34 Strong winds
37 — of court: legal term
38 Acted like Polly?
40 Scurries illegally
41 Getz or Musial
43 Nonresidents
46 Idaho capital
47 Chose
48 Walk the waiting room
49 Small stream
50 Eve's guy
51 Correct
52 Docile
53 Nursery item
54 "Stop!"
57 Attention

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED



Night Editor: Lormine Kennedy
Photo Technician: Stacy Cohen
Copy Editor: Joseph D. Savitch
Production Supervisor: Joylyn Lombard
Production Staff: Sakily Am, Clinton Racine

SPORTS

A trip around the wide world of pro sports

I was lost last week after I finished writing my final baseball column. I needed to keep going, so walked over to the editorial/opinion desk and asked the editor if I could write for him... but I knew in my heart that Ed/Op is no place for a sportswriter.

Now I'm back from the ashes, baby! They saw how sad I was, and gave me another column this fall and winter. In return, I'm supposed to write tid-bits about every sport, which is fine with me. I still get to do my two favorite things: make fun of the Yankees and share my drinking escapades with you. Here we go.

• Last Saturday was Halloween and my good friends brought me to a great bash at Puffton Village. I was dressed as a the great Mexican soccer goalie Jorge Campos (you see, there's my connection to sports), but my costume didn't hold a candle to the Village People from the fifth floor of Dickinson.

• Now think about this sports fans: Falcons back-up quarterback Steve DeBerg was out of high school for something like eight years when "Macho Man" was a hit single. The guy is older than my mother, yet Atlanta head coach Dan Reeves let him start against the Jets. He absolutely wet the bed... and 10 years from now, he'll be wetting his diaper.

• Speaking of old men, you've gotta love Doug Flutie. After beating out the often-injured Rob Johnson for the starting job, the former Boston College star terrorized Miami again with his come-back magic, edging Dan Marino in a battle of league geriatric candidates.

• On the other hand, Flutie's slumping alma mater will have to contend with No. 13 Notre Dame this weekend. Even a miracle from the man himself wouldn't be enough. This one won't be close.

• Speaking of stinky Eagles, Philadelphia head coach Ray Rhodes has to be scratching his head this season. In two years, he has taken his team from the NFC East summit to the stomping ground of football.

• Surprise, surprise! Another Kenyan runner won the New York City Marathon... and boy do I miss Uta Pippig.

• NASCAR great Jeff Gordon clinched his third straight Winston Cup Title with a win at the AC Delco 400 on Sunday. I have no clue what the hell that means, but you have to love auto racing fans. They sit around their trailer parks wearing foam fish-net caps, smoking Marlboros, and drinking Budweiser all day... hey, I bet you didn't know Bud has a 5.0 alcohol content percentage.

• It doesn't look like the NBA will start its season any earlier than mid-December. When the lock-out eventually ends, we may see Michael Jordan returning for a season or two. Even though Larry Bird will always be the man, I wouldn't mind seeing him come back and play for a another team. Why not Boston for Air Jordan?

• Speaking of Beantown, now that the Sox are all done [it's been almost a month, so I am able to talk about them now], we can turn our attention to the Bruins and Celtics. I won't pretend to know a bloody thing about the NHL, so for that stuff, you'll have to read the weekly hockey column [other side of this page].

As for the Celtics, well, let's just say I have a decent idea. If the 1998-99 ever starts, it could mark the C's first playoff appearance since 1995. We've got Paul Pierce, Antoine Walker, Kenny Anderson, Ron Mercer, and Travis Knight as our starting five. They were all winners in college. Now it's time for them to win at the next level.

• This wouldn't be a true Saykin column without a pinch of Yankee bashing, so I have to search for some way to poke fun at the organization. George Steinbrenner has opted to pursue free agent Albert Belle, who exercised an escape clause in his White Sox contract. And what a perfect fit he would be in New York. Belle's volatile personality would nicely complement the other crack heads, fatsoes, and sell-outs already wearing pinstripes.

Saykin's Sad Story of the Week: I am almost ashamed to say that WCW Monday Nitro was more entertaining than Monday Night Football. But what ever happened to the old glory days of the WWF? When I was a fat little boy growing up in Holyoke, I used to love watching Hulk Hogan start shaking at the end of the match when he was bloody and out of gas. You just knew when he shook his arms that he was in invincible mode (then he'd whip the guy off the ropes, give him the foot-to-the-face, and finish him with the atomic leg drop.) Who are these new people... and why is he a bad guy with a black beard? Sad, sad, sad!

Aaron Saykin is a Collegian columnist.

NBA lockout wages into openers

Arenas silent on what should have been Day 1

NEW YORK (AP) — Where Patrick Ewing usually suits up, boxes were piled high. Exercise cycles and empty ball racks were strewn about, mops were standing in the corner and three garbage buckets were stuffed into Terry Cummings' locker.

"Unfortunately, the Knicks' locker room has been turned into a storage room," a tour guide explained. "My best guess is it will stay this way until January."

Instead of a basketball court, there was a sheet of pristine ice for hockey. Outside, where scalpers usually ply their trade, there was only a stream of office workers shielding themselves from a harsh wind.

That was how things looked yesterday at Madison Square Garden, where the New York Knicks were supposed to have opened their 1998-99 season against the Boston Celtics in one of 10 games on the NBA schedule.

The Garden and nine other arenas were as dark as the prevailing mood.

It was Day 125 of the lockout, which meant no Shaq, no Michael, no Kobe — and no end in sight to the work stoppage that has forced the NBA to cancel games for the first time in its history.

"It doesn't look so good," commissioner David Stern said on MSNBC. "Obviously once we get into December without a deal, if that occurs, then I'd say the season is in jeopardy."

There were no words of encouragement coming from Stern on the day when all the talk of missed games finally became a reality. The league and the players will be back at the bargaining table today — one week after Michael Jordan joined the talks and a speedy agreement seemed possible — with both sides now saying not much progress is being made.

"They have a pie, and they are fighting over how much of the pie each side gets to eat," the Madison Square Garden guide explained to a group of 16 tourists from the United States, the Netherlands, Greece, Spain and Ireland.

"The owners and players are each getting this much," he said, holding his hands a few inches apart, "and the owners are trying to force the players to take this much," he said, moving his hands within an inch of each other.

"They should all be disgusted with themselves," said Sophia Boydasarian, a tourist from outside of Boston.

If her words reflected the feelings of basketball fans worldwide, the lockout moved into a new phase yesterday as the reality of canceled games hit home.

Instead of having an NBA double-header available on TNT, basketball fans could choose between hockey on ESPN, a movie on TNT, or a mind-numbing total of 12 sitcoms offered on the main broadcast networks.

"I guess I'll just do some laundry," Toronto Raptors general manager Glen Grunwald said.

In Salt Lake City, where the Jazz were supposed to have played the Vancouver Grizzlies, the Delta Center was dark and the team's two Western Conference championship banners were almost covered by shadows in the rafters. The actual court on which Jordan won his sixth championship less than five months ago was packed away in storage.

At the Georgia Dome, the sound of the empty, creaking outdoor escalator was the only break in the silence surrounding the locked stadium.

A few people showed up at the box office to buy Atlanta Falcons tickets, but otherwise the dome was remiss of the normal hoopla that takes place in preparation for a Hawks game.

"Not much is happening here," ticket manager Keith Ayers said.

America West Arena, where the Phoenix Suns were scheduled to play the Minnesota Timberwolves, was empty except for about 30 people having lunch in the food plaza.

Bill Hollis, an assistant manager at a sporting goods shop down the street, said demand for Suns apparel was down drastically.

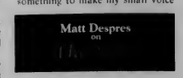
"People are asking about the new merchandise, and we really don't know who's on the team," he said.

The league may be banking on the belief that basketball fans are different from baseball fans and will be more likely to forgive and forget when this dispute is finally resolved.

But an ESPN poll conducted Oct. 31-Nov. 1 found that almost 63 percent of sports fans over the age of 18 did not care if the entire season was canceled, and more than 37 percent of people who consider themselves NBA fans don't care if the season is canceled.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO



Let the games begin

Both the Massachusetts men's and women's basketball teams will open up their seasons this weekend with exhibition games at the William D. Mullins Center.

The NHL All-Star game and my humble view

Now that the excitement of election season has swept through campus, I have decided to use this column to address my own "political" agenda. Whereas most politicians fabricate stories to gain public interest, I stand before you today, the sports loving public, with nothing but the facts.

When the voting for the 1999 NHL All-Star game in Tampa Bay got underway on Sunday, I knew that I must do something to make my small voice heard. Every year we see two teams assembled that seem to be comprised on the basis of popularity, and not talent.

Matt Despres
DN

I give you Paul Coffey, the human sieve, to prove this point. How can a defenseman that seems to struggle year after year with the concept of defense make the All-Star team so many times? Because he can score, which is what the fans of the NHL love to see. Sorry, Paul, but your job description goes a little further than just lighting the lamp.

Therefore, let's pretend for a moment that I have laughed in the face of democracy, tossed Commissioner Gary Bettman aside, and appointed myself the sole leader of "The Coolest Game on Earth."

Now I have the chance to make the right selections. Here is the way the All-Star starting line-ups should look like, according to me, when that first puck is dropped. I remind you that all of the following picks are extremely biased. But then again, it's now my league.

• Starting at defense for the North American squad will be Boston's Raymond Bourque. I mean, is there really a choice here? In the church of hockey, this man still reigns as the supreme being after 20 seasons. Joining Ray at the blue line will be recently signed New Jersey point man Scott Niedermayer. He plays consistent, heads-up hockey at both ends of the ice, and has a set of wheels that allow him to keep pace with the speediest of forwards. This tandem will prove to be the real deal.

• At center, I'll have to go with Eric Lindros. There are many worthy candidates for this spot, but in the end, Eric is younger, bigger and better. And besides, you have to love a guy who is not afraid to throw a few body checks during the game.

• Starting at right wing will be Brendan Shanahan. The Detroit forward brings a great combination of power and finesse to the table, and while he would be edged by Cam Neely if the former Bruin were still playing, is certainly deserving of the spot now.

• Ripping up the left wing boards will be the greatest of all Mighty Ducks, Paul Kariya. Kariya continues to dominate opponents with his speed and enormous talent. His small stature is of no concern now that he has established himself as a legitimate threat, and even if it was, would be off-set by the mammoth proportions of his fellow linemates.

As far as the goaltending goes, I submit for your approval New Jersey netminder Martin Brodeur. He's as solid as they come, and is not afraid to challenge the shooter.

• Now onto the World team. Europe has always been able to produce fine hockey players, and any lineup they devise has the potential of manhandling what we can throw at them.

• At defense, you can't go wrong with the tag team tandem of Sandis Ozolinsh and Nicklas Lidstrom. These two players really epitomize the position when at the top of their games, and are capable of both heading the rush and shutting down the North American attack.

• Taking the first face-off at center will be Avalanche forward Peter Forsberg. Forget Colorado's woes right now; this man can own the ice when he wants to.

• To his left I'll take Pittsburgh powerhouse Jaromir Jagr. Go ahead, make the jokes about his hair, but nowhere will you find a more powerful one on one player in the league. Besides, anybody that can re-arrange the letters in their name to spell "Mario Jr." is worthy of this spot.

• Over at right wing, I see nobody better for the job than Anaheim favorite Teemu Selanne. The "Finnish Flash" is an exciting player to watch, and is just loaded with offensive talent. His addition to the squad completes this deadly front line.

• And now, the goaltender. You kid yourself if you truly believe that someone other than Dominik Hasek should get the nod. His style cannot be labeled, and thinks nothing of throwing his head in the path of the puck to make the save. This man makes the art of goaltending truly breathtaking.

There you have it, a humble writer's view of how it should be.

Matthew Despres is a Collegian staff member.

Torre wins his second AP Manager of the Year award

NEW YORK (AP) — Joe Torre, whose patient style and calming influence helped guide the New York Yankees to a record 125 wins and their 24th World Series championship, won The Associated Press manager of the year award yesterday.

Torre, who won his second Series in three years with New York, received 85 votes from a national panel of writers and broadcasters.

San Diego's Bruce Bochy finished second with 48 1/2 votes, followed by the Cubs' Jim Riggleman (20 1/2), Houston's Larry Dierker (10) and Boston's Jimy Williams (8).

"It's nice to get recognition," said Torre, who won the AP NL manager of the year award in 1982 while with Atlanta. Since 1984, only one award has been given for both leagues.

"During the season we went through, you have one purpose in mind — to win the World Series," Torre said. "All of a sudden, the awards come along and it's like a cherry on top of a great season. I was just along for the ride."

But Torre did more than just ride his players to an AL-record 114 wins during the regular season and an 11-2 post-season mark, capped by a sweep of the San Diego Padres in the World Series.

In the media maelstrom of New York and with a meddlesome owner like George Steinbrenner, Torre didn't flinch when the team started 1-4. He exhibited remarkable patience and kept his team focused on each game even though the Yankees ran away from the rest of the American League by Memorial Day.

When you get to the All-Star break with 61 wins, you realize this has a chance to be a pretty damn good team," Torre said. "I was cautious because it's hard to hold the edge that long. It's a manager's job to always be concerned and cautious and never look too far forward.

"I don't care how good you are, to win as many games as we won is an incredible accomplishment."

Torre played a major role in that feat by juggling his deep lineup, letting players know their roles, and even calling a team meeting to admonish his team after a particularly lethargic performance at Tampa Bay in September.

Torre said his job was little more than writing out a lineup card, making pitching changes and patting guys on the back every once in a while. But his players know that baseball's best team didn't operate on autopilot.

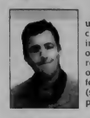
"For the most part, he lets us play," Bernie Williams said during the World Series. "He has a very good idea of what everyone in the room can do and he doesn't expect anything less from us. He doesn't expect anything more from us than to play to our capabilities, and if we're not, he's going to let us hear about it."

Because of Torre's leadership and an extremely talented team, the Yankees won more games — regular and post-season — than any other team in history.

Torre said winning more games than any other Yankees team was the ultimate achievement.

As for their rank in history, Torre said he hasn't seen a better team in his nearly 40 years in baseball.

"You look at the Oakland A's clubs that won a few world championships in a row and the Cincinnati club in '76 that was always a standard for me, I think we have better pitching than they have," he said. "We have to take a backseat to no one in my lifetime."



All of the top five vote-getters led their teams into the playoffs. Bochy won his second division title in four years as a manager, winning a team-record 98 games and leading the Padres to their first World Series in 14 years.

Riggleman's Cubs earned the NL wild-card berth and made the playoffs for the first time since 1989. Dierker, in his second year, won his second NL Central title for the Astros. Williams, in his second year in Boston, earned the AL wild-card berth.

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN

Volume CIV Issue 42 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Thursday, November 5, 1998

"Want to touch the heiny?"

Adam Sandler is up to his usual class clown ways in The Waterboy, opening tomorrow. Check out our talk with the former "SNL" star (see Arts & Living, page 5).

Getting going

Charlton Clarke and the Massachusetts men's basketball team will experience their first taste of competition when they face the Converse All-Stars tonight at the William D. Mullins Center (see Sports, page 16).

WORLD

Car explodes just outside Kremlin

MOSCOW (AP) — A car sped through Red Square knocking down fences yesterday evening before exploding just outside the main gate to the Kremlin, injuring three guards and the driver, authorities said.

Initial reports said one person was killed inside the car, but a spokesman for the presidential press service said no one had died. The car exploded a few yards outside the Spassky Gate, the main entrance to the Kremlin. The walled enclosure has been Russia's governmental and spiritual center for centuries.

Clouds of smoke could be seen drifting over St. Basil's Cathedral a short distance away. Officials inside the Kremlin said they could feel the concussion from the blast.

The Kremlin spokesman, speaking on condition of anonymity, said the car drove quickly toward Red Square, past the GUM department store. It sped across the square and approached the gate at the foot of Spassky Tower, a large red clock tower that is one of Russia's most distinctive symbols.

NATION

Glenn takes time for late night

SPACE CENTER, HOUSTON (AP) — John Glenn took a break from geriatric experiments and Mission Control yesterday, checking in with "The Tonight Show with Jay Leno" for a few jokes about Metamucil and those "young punks" flying with him.

In a welcome departure from the normally staid interviews conducted from the space shuttle Discovery, Glenn traded a few good-natured barbs with the late-night comedian. The 77-year-old senator said this time in orbit, he's got more food choices — he can mix his Tang with Geritol or Metamucil.

The 10-minute conversation was to be broadcast Wednesday night. While a video transmission will let viewers see Glenn, the Democratic senator could only hear Leno.

"Have you ever threatened to turn the space shuttle around and go home, Senator Glenn, if these kids don't behave themselves?" Leno asked, calling the other six astronauts "young punks." Glenn said there hadn't been any discipline problems aboard Discovery and besides, "I'm just a working stiff."

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 45 LOW: 26	HIGH: 48 LOW: 28	HIGH: 46 LOW: 26

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 14
Comics.....page 15
Crossword .....page 15
Editorial.....page 4
FYI.....page 14
News .....page 1
Sports .....page 16

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

SGA passes 3 motions, debates Saturday exams

By Julie Fialkow
Collegian Staff

Three major motions were passed at last night's University of Massachusetts Student Government Association (SGA) Senate meeting, after senators debated on various points for and against them.

Senator Vivian Onuoha (Central area), chairperson of the ways and means committee wrote a motion which asked the senate to allocate $1,000 to the Black Student Union for their event. The senate however, voted on a friendly ammendment stated by senator Paul Ferro (commuter area), to change the amount to $750.

"The BSU was supposed to get money from DVP (Distinguished Visitors Program), the arts council and the five colleges. The money didn't come through from any of them. DVP literally said they could only give them $15 and manpower," she said.

According to Onuoha and senator Malika Tafawa (Thatcher) who also spoke about the motion, the event which is being held November 15 is in desparate need of finance. Currently BSU has approximately $2,000 in its reserve, but has three more major events to hold this semester.

Ferro argued BSU originally asked for $750 during the joint finance and ways and means committee and felt asking for $1000 was somewhat exorbitant.

"Last year, we gave them [BSU] a budget increse. It's not like we're [SGA] paying for the event," said Ferro.

Senator Rahilya Napoli (Washington) said she was against Ferro's ammendment because the organization is in a state of emergency.

"They didn't know during [the ways and means/finance committee meeting] they could come to this meeting and ask for more money — they are asking us to give them $1,000," she said.

The senate passed the ammended motion and allocated $750 to BSU.

Senator Dan Friedman (commuter area) next presented the motion to get rid of Saturday final exams, out of respect for the Jewish Sabbath (Shabbat).

Friedman explained that as a representative of the Jewish community he felt that the rights of Jewish students and the holiness of Shabbat needed to be respected.

"We have to look out for everyone on campus and provide the easiest way for students to be accomodated," he said.

Senator Brandon Beane (commuter area) asked Friedman if he realized it's in the University's Rights of Responsibilities that students with religious conflicts can reschedule their exams.

Friedman said it is a big inconvenience for students to go to their professors and he feels it shouldn't be necessary.

Senator Phillip Blue (Orchard Hill, at-large) said as a jewish student he refuses to take tests on Shabbat and has been inconvenienced by it.

"I don't write on the Sabbath. It is very much against my religion to take finals on Sabbath," he said. "I have had to got to the Office of Jewish affairs and complain because my professors wouldn't let me change exam times."

The senate decided to pass the motion, and it will be passed on to the faculty senate, which is in charge of administrive affairs.

The last major motion passed involved offering voter registration in the University Housing contracts. Onuoha wrote the motion, but President Salwa Shamapande spoke on her behalf.

Shamapande explained that voter registration cost the students of the University $5,000 through the Student Government Association Registration Drive, and by putting it into the housing contract, there would be virtually no cost at all.

Ferro spoke against the motion, claiming it wasn't within the University's immediate responsibilities to actively solicit voters, but rather it is more important to educate.

5 local bars have not paid fines

By Elizabeth Johnson
Collegian Correspondent

The Nov. 2 deadline has come and gone, and still, several Amherst bars have not paid their fines imposed as a result of being found in violation of the smoking ban by the Board of Health.

This ban was put into effect July 1 of this year in Amherst.

At least five bars including Delano's on North Pleasant Street, Mike's Westview Cafe on Sunderland Road, The Old Amherst Ale House on West Street, Rafters on University Drive, and The Spoke on North Pleasant Street, are facing criminal charges for not having paid their fines.

"All are not complying because they feel the ban is unreasonable and unfair," said Steven L. Winniman, a Springfield attorney representing nine bars in Amherst.

"I find this action and conclusion to be quite questionable," said Winniman in response to his clients being found in violation of the ban.

Taking action against the town, Winniman requested a preliminary injunction from the Hampshire Superior Court.

"The idea of an injunction is to preserve the status quo, or existing state of affairs, until the final hearing," he said.

The injunction would mean the town of Amherst would have to refrain from any action such as suspending the bars' food licenses while the decision is still pending.

In addition, Winniman said the Board of Health has told the bars that without food service permits, serving alcohol will not be allowed.

However, he is not sure how legally accurate that is, or even if the Board will be able to carry out its threat.

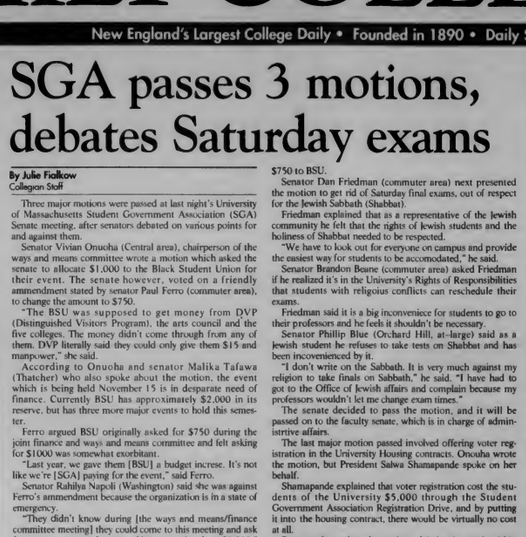
Certain surrounding towns have also passed various types of bans on their bars.

Winniman clarified that Northampton's ban is completely different from that of Amherst, while Hadley does not even have one.

He said that in Amherst it is difficult for the bars to enforce such a ban. Rather than fining customer's smoking, the bars themselves are held responsible for their patrons' smoking.

"I am not aware of any other town that has no penalty for the individual smoker," Winniman said.

Winniman compared this situation to one where a client snorts cocaine in a bar.



Since this is a crime, the bar would to call the police and have the matter resolved.

In the case of a smoker, however, the bars do not believe the police would be able to arrest the offender.

Winniman also said the whole scenario would lead to a "Mexican Standoff," because by the time the police arrived, the cigarette would have been put out.

The nine bars represented by Winniman include Barselotti's, McMurphy's Pub, Michael's Billiards, Mike's Westview Cafe, The Old Amherst Ale House, The Pub and The Spoke.

But he said the bars have different needs and are out there to protect themselves and their interests coincide. He considers them a "loose coalition."

ROBERTO DELGADO / COLLEGIAN

Another perspective

The W.E.B. Du Bois library stands tall against an array of clouds yesterday afternoon.

Just a little reading

ROBERTO DELGADO / COLLEGIAN

Senior sociology major Jenn Durkin takes a reading break in front of Stockbridge Hall yesterday afternoon.

Controversial scholar discusses City of David

By Stacey Shackford
Collegian Staff

Hershel Shanks, founding editor of the "Biblical Archaeology Review," and controversial figure in the Dead Sea Scrolls debate, spoke to a large audience in Seelye Hall at Smith College last night.

"So much of what we are... radiates from Jerusalem," Shanks said as he opened the lecture. "From the study of Jerusalem we can learn almost everything there is to learn about the Near East."

The topic of the lecture was "Jerusalem: An Archaeological Biography," but Shanks narrowed his focus to the "City of David," an attempt to answer archaeological questions concerning biblical accounts of David.

"In archaeology we can't know anything for sure, but we've got some very plausible cases," he said. "That's what I will present tonight."

Shanks showed slides of a site he believes to be the controversial site of the fortress of Zion mentioned in the Bible. According to the Bible, David managed to successfully conquer the fortress and the city of Jerusalem. Shanks offered a plausible archaeological explanation to the mystery of how David managed to conquer the city.

He talked about the Gihon Spring and the underground water system that may have enabled David to get into the city. As part of his presentation, Shanks revealed never before seen pictures of a site that was recently uncovered in the excavations of a Gihon Spring Visitors Center.

He also described the area in which he believes the tomb of David is located. The tomb exists among the remains of a Byzantine quarry, which has not been studied since its discovery in 1913.

In response to the discussion about the location of David's tomb, an audience member questioned Shanks about the location of the tomb of Jesus.

"There is no question about it. It [the tomb of Jesus] is in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre," Shanks said. "I have every reason to believe it is the authentic place of burial."

Other audience members questioned Shanks about upcoming projects of the "Biblical Archaeology Review" (BAR), the journal he began in 1974. A lawyer by profession, Shanks launched BAR as a hobby, writing the first issue himself.

The magazine gained visibility in the mid-1980s and early 1990s when he challenged the "painfully slow" publication of the Dead Sea Scrolls.

A self-described "maverick scholar," Shanks started a controversy when his publication contained more than 1,700 photographs of the then unpublished scrolls, obtained by Shanks from an anonymous source.

He is also the author of 12 books including "Jerusalem: An Archaeological Biography" (1995), the textbook of the First Year Seminar Program, one of the sponsors of last night's event.

Suspect in indecent exposure incident banned from campus

University of Massachusetts Police believe they have a suspect in the case of man who exposed himself to women in the W.E.B. Du Bois Library on Sunday night.

According to Chief of Police John Luippold, police are "issuing a no-trespass for a man — whose name police would not release — to appear in court for a hearing.

He was described as an elder-caucasian male with gray hair, around 50 years old.

The man was trespassed from campus, Luippold said, as a result of the incident that was reported to police shortly after 9 p.m. on Nov. 1.

If he visits University grounds in the future, Luippold said, he will be charged with a criminal complaint for trespassing.

Luippold said the camera in the lobby of the library aided in identifying the suspect.

The camera, he said, was installed "as a result of some past problems or individuals acting suspiciously" and has been "helpful to public safety."

— Lorraine Kennedy

Aftermath of Hurricane Mitch still being felt in Central America

By James Anderson
Associated Press

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras — Unable to provide Hondurans such basics as gasoline, food and water, a government overwhelmed by Hurricane Mitch's destruction made an urgent appeal for international aid yesterday.

Across Central America, Hurricane Mitch has killed an estimated 9,000 people and destroyed roads leading to areas where authorities say thousands were still missing.

A revived Mitch was expected to hit South Florida today as a fast-moving tropical storm, bringing 4 to 8 inches of rain before heading toward the Bahamas. Mitch had sustained winds of 45 mph yesterday when it was 250 miles west of Cuba, producing rain and winds to the island.

In Honduras, the largest cities have become virtual islands accessible only by air. The U.S. Air Force was helping Honduras deliver aid to remote towns. Communications Minister Tomas Lozano said.

Honduran officials estimated their country's death toll at 7,000 yesterday, though no one knows how many really died. Some 11,000 people officially were listed as missing. As many as 1 million are homeless, said Col. Rene Osorio of the national emergency committee.

"We really don't know what the numbers are. There are places we haven't reached yet," Osorio said.

Mitch hit the Honduran coast last week and parked itself there, dumping several feet of rain onto the poor nation before moving across the Yucatan Peninsula and into the Gulf of Mexico.

It left behind a stunning wake of death and devastation across Central America.

"How do we continue, without food, without sleep?" said Yolanda Marvella Arraya, 35, who has spent nights outside on a soggy mattress along the debris-strewn banks of the Choluteca River since flooding destroyed her family's home. "I don't know what to think. My mind needs help."

In neighboring Nicaragua, as many as 2,400 were believed dead. Rains there last week caused a crater lake atop the Casitas volcano to break open Friday and spill tons of mud onto villages along the slopes.

Nicaraguan military spokesman Capt. Milton Sandoval warned that mines planted by guerrillas in the 1980s could surface in flooded areas. An estimated 100,000 mines were left behind.

El Salvador declared three days of national mourning for the 239 dead there. In Guatemala, 194 were reported dead and at least 77,900 had evacuated their homes. At least six people were killed in southern Mexico and seven people died in Costa Rica.

There was also no sign yesterday of the 282-foot Windjammer Barefoot Cruises yacht Fantome, which disappeared off Honduras with a British captain and a Central American crew of 30 more than a week ago.

The Nicaraguan government pleaded yesterday for more helicopters to deliver food and medical supplies. Its air force has only six helicopters.

A U.S. Army base in Panama sent three helicopters to Nicaragua on Monday and the U.S. government pledged to send another seven. Mexico said it was sending 10, and Panama will send two more. Mexican President Ernesto Zedillo called President Clinton on Tuesday to urge that a large-scale international aid effort be made. Zedillo's office said Clinton was "highly sympathetic" to the Mexican leader's concerns.

At the Vatican, Pope John Paul II called on "all public and private institutions and all men of good will" to do all they can "in this grave moment of destruction and death."

Obstacles to relief are daunting: countless roads are out in Honduras, including main highways. Nearly all available aircraft are being used in the search for survivors and victims in isolated towns.

"There are medicines available, but the problem is the same: How do we transport it?" said a frustrated Andres Aguiriano Duarte, deputy commissioner of the emergency committee.

Citing food and other shortages, the U.S. Embassy in Tegucigalpa said families of staff could leave if they want.

"With the shortages we are facing... we decided it would be better for those who want to go home," embassy spokeswoman Marti Estell said.

The U.S. Peace Corps also was telling its 207 members in Honduras to leave the country. Peace Corps personnel, Estell said, "are in places where they really can't use them right now. "The Honduran government is coping with competing demands: to find and rescue survivors still isolated by flooding in remote towns, to establish a reliable information network to assess the disaster and the urgent need for drinking water and food in the capital of 800,000.

Dual repairs

ROBERTO DELGADO / COLLEGIAN

Construction workers repair the physical education building and Curry Hicks Cage yesterday afternoon.

Prosecution continues in Sicari trial

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — One of two men accused of killing 10-year-old Jeffrey Curley appeared calm and collected in a videotape taken as he was booked by police, but defense lawyers yesterday implied that officers erred by briefly turning off the camera.

At his booking on Oct. 3, 1997, Salvatore Sicari, 22, asked how many years in prison a murder conviction might carry, and told police officers he hoped his cooperation would lead to a lighter sentence.

"I should get a few years knocked off for showing you guys where the body is at," Sicari was heard saying on the tape, which was played for jurors at his first-degree murder trial at Middlesex Superior Court.

Sicari accompanied police on an excursion through New Hampshire and Maine after the fifth-grader disappeared, eventually leading them to the Great Works River in South Berwick, Maine, where Jeffrey's body was found inside a sealed Rubbermaid container.

Prosecutors contend Sicari and Charles Iaynes, 23, kidnapped and killed Jeffrey after luring him into their car in Cambridge by promising him a bicycle.

Iaynes will be tried after Sicari.

Defense lawyer Arthur Kelly pointed out in court that police turned off the video camera for about 1 1/2 minutes — which officers admitted was a mistake — and questioned what may have happened during that time.

UM grad launches successful business

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

If the word "computer wiz" ever comes to mind, some people may refer to CollegePro Computers as the leading cutting edge computer business in the Hadley area.

Owner Steve Marcell, a University of Massachusetts alumni, feels that he owes much of his success as a local business to the UMass community.

"We provide service to students at a low, cutting price that most interested buyers could not beat," Marcell said. "I think that's what sets us apart from other retail companies."

As a student at the University, Marcell grew tired of the long lines waiting in front of computer labs, and he finally decided to create and build his own computer system. In developing his system, he realized that his service would be of benefit to the many students.

Marcell started by setting up his own computer service directly from his dorm room.

"People used to be piling outside of my room waiting for their personal computer (PC) to be fixed," Marcell said. "The University grew so upset over the distress it was causing, and they asked me to take it somewhere else."

Moving his business to a Sunderland apartment was still not enough, and when Marcell established himself in Hadley in the space that is now known as CollegePro Computers, he began to realize his goals.

"The logo of our company is 'Power Through Education'," Marcell said. "We want to supply computers to the local community and also educate people on computer hardware values."

Marcell is focused on setting CollegePro Computers apart from larger corporate computer businesses. His company is already meeting its projected five-year business plan.

"We wrote a five-year business plan when we first opened this store," Marcell said. "We outgrew it in less than a year."

He feels that he owes his success rate to the low rates and costs of computers. Marcell has even provided the incentive to loan computers to students for a dollar a day.

"Nowhere else will you find a computer business that offers such great options and rates," Marcell said. "I want to take good care of your customers, and the customers know, they want good prices and value."

Recently, CollegePro Computers was awarded the Valley Advocate Award. The annual award is given out based on a reader's poll to honor companies that have been recognized in their field.

"To win the Advocate Award in our business' first year running is a great honor," Marcell said. "We have in effect, taken the international arena and brought it to the town of Hadley and not many companies have gone this extra mile."

The company has received an international demand for their products over the past year. An individual from the Canadian border once drove to Hadley to get a good offer on a computer system. Recently, a United Kingdom association asked for a company to deal out 60,000 computers and Marcell has decided to take up the demand.

"Our franchise shows that you don't need leading-edge software," Marcell said. "You can take used systems and do more with them."

Correction

In the Nov. 3 issue of the Daily Collegian, sponsors of Prison Awareness Week: the Radical Student Union; Student Activities Cultural Enrichment Fund; Asian Latino African Native American Caucus; Graduate Student Senate; Cannabis Reform Coalition; Amnesty International; and Boricuas Unidos were not listed.

The Collegian regrets the error.

In the Nov. 4 issue of the Daily Collegian the date of "The Struggle of Farm Workers for Justice and Dignity," was incorrect. The talk will be given Nov. 10.

The Collegian regrets the error.

Thank you for reading The Massachusetts Daily Collegian, the New England Newspaper Association Newspaper of the Year.

Shoplifting protection may affect pacemakers

A 72-year-old standing at a bookstore's magazine rack jerked again and again, as if an invisible baseball bat was slamming his chest. His face was pasty. He was about to faint.

A nurse saw him and realized that he was standing about a foot from the store's shoplifting gate. She pulled him a few steps away. He was fine.

The man's implanted defibrillator had taken the shoplifting gate's electronic pulse as a super-fast heartbeat. Wham! Wham! Wham! Wham! It kicked in with four shocks before the nurse pulled him away.

That case was described in today's New England Journal of Medicine and involved the Sensormatic Ultra Max brand and model, said Dr. Michael McIvor.

"Unfortunately, it's the most popular one. There are 91,000 out there," said McIvor, of The Heart Institute of St. Petersburg, in Florida, who described how the same model sent a pacemaker racing. The author of the study is Dr. Peter A. Santucci of Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center in Chicago.

— The Associated Press

Apple accuses Microsoft of attempted sabotage

By Ted Bridis
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Microsoft antitrust trial turned yesterday to software "bugs," those frustrating glitches that can crash a computer or interfere with existing programs.

A lawyer for Microsoft Corp. challenged claims by Avadis Tevanian, a senior executive with Apple Computer Inc., that Microsoft sought to "sabotage" Apple's popular QuickTime software, which lets people hear audio and watch video over the Internet.

The difficulty for the government is proving Microsoft's intent, especially as software programs become enormously complicated. When is an interfering bug a malevolent attempt to undermine a rival, and when is it simply a programmer's careless mistake?

Tevanian has testified that Microsoft, whose own Netshow and Media Player software competes with QuickTime, designed parts of Windows to bypass Apple's software and created misleading error messages for QuickTime customers.

"That appears to be the case," Tevanian said. "What other goal could there have been except to injure QuickTime in favor of Microsoft technologies?"

But under aggressive questioning by Microsoft lawyer Theodore Edelman, Tevanian acknowledged that he had no evidence that Microsoft intentionally introduced bugs to interfere with QuickTime.

"That's right," Tevanian said. "I do not know the individual motivations... I don't know if it was on purpose, or for some reason."

Under prodding by the defense, he added that "it's unfortunate but it's not unusual" for new software sometimes to be incompatible with existing programs.

Microsoft lawyers also read part of a pretrial interview with Tim Schaaff, a top software engineer at Apple. When Schaaff was asked whether Microsoft intentionally caused problems for QuickTime, he answered: "I don't know what I think."

The defense also confronted Tevanian about whether it failed to give Apple an early version of its new Media Player, which can play some of the same types of computer files as Apple's QuickTime. He had complained that Microsoft wasn't forthcoming with information about upcoming products.

ROBERTO DELGADO / COLLEGIAN

In and out

Students depart from the Student Union yesterday afternoon.

Roads to Reconciliation

Peacebuilding in the Middle East

Defying [illegible] the [illegible] and build[illegible] visionaries

Monday
November [illegible]
Campus Center Room 101
UMass/Amherst

Speakers
Judith Green:
[illegible]

Zoughbi Zoughbi:
[illegible]

Sponsored b[illegible]

November '98
ARTS ON CAMPUS . . .
A monthly calendar brought to you by the UMass Arts Council.

Events

Thursday, November 5
FILM: "Insider Choices" Film Series: Das Boot Directed by Wolfgang Petersen. 7:30 p.m. in Herter Hall, Room 227. 545-3670.
MUSIC: University Jazz Lab Ensemble with Chamber Jazz Ensemble Adam Kolker, director. 8 pm in Bezanson Hall. 545-2511.
THEATER: An Evening of One Acts Moorn in the Living Room and, For Whom the Southern Belle Tolls by Christopher Durang, and How Else Am I Supposed to Know I'm Alive by Eveleina Fernandez. 8 pm in Curtain Theater. Through Nov. 8, with a 2pm matinee on Nov. 7. $ 545-2511.
FILM: "Watermelon Woman" Talk following the film with producer Alexandra Juhasz. 7:30 pm in Mosher Auditorium. $ 545-4823.
THEATER: The Wiz presented by the UMass Theater Guild 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. Through Nov. 8, with a 2pm matinee Nov. 7. $ 545-2511.

Friday, November 6
DANCE: University Dancers Improvisation Group 3:15-3:50 pm in the Herter Art Gallery. 545-6063.

Saturday, November 7
MUSIC: Elaine Elias Brazilian jazz pianist performs at 8pm in Bowker Auditorium. $ 545-2511.
COMEDY: Mission Improvable Every Saturday at 6pm-11pm in Campus Center Room 917.
CULTURAL NIGHT: African Cultural Night Dance 8pm in the Student Union Ballroom. $ 545-3600.

Sunday, November 8
CONCERT: Nishat Khan, Sitar & Gregorian Voices: Meeting of Angels Blend of Indian classical music and Gregorian chant. 3pm in Bowker Auditorium. $ 545-2511.

Tuesday, November 10
MUSIC: American Treats, Faculty Recital Michelle LaCourse, viola & Nadine Shank, piano. 8 pm in Bezanson Recital Hall. $ 545-2511.

Thursday, November 12
MUSIC: Concert of Electronic Music in memory of Everett Hafner. 8 pm in Bezanson Recital Hall. 545-2511.
FILM: Insider Choices: The Killing Fields Directed by Roland Joffe. 7:30pm in Herter Hall 227. 545-3670.
DANCE: Stephan Petronio Company internationally known dance company performs at 8pm in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. $ 545-2511.

Friday, November 13
THEATER: Skirting the SurFACE by Maura Nguyen Donohue. 8pm in Bowker Auditorium $ 545-2511.
THEATER: Of Mice and Men A student production of Steinbeck's classic. 8 pm in Curtain Theatre; Through Nov. 15; Saturday and Sunday matinee at 2pm. $ 545-2511.
DANCE: The Fall Ball sponsored by the UMass Ballroom Dance Club. Lessons from 7-8:30, dance till midnight. Campus Center Auditorium. $ 549-3643.
WORKSHOP: The Graphic Novel 20th Anniversary Conference on an emerging literary and artistic medium. Nov. 13, 7-9pm, Nov 14, 10am-5pm, Nov. 15, 10am-1pm in the Campus Center. 256-2150.

Saturday, November 14
MUSIC: Piano Series Concert III The Son of George Sand: Music of Chopin & Liszt. Virginia Eskin, piano, & visiting artist, Paulina Stark, soprano. 8 pm in Bezanson Recital Hall. $ 545-2511.
CULTURAL NIGHT: Annual HASA/CASA Night 6pm in the Student Union Building. $ 545-0054.

Sunday, November 15
MUSIC: Guests From Boston: Coro Allegro David Hodgkins, artistic director & Ruth Cunningham, soprano. 4 pm in Bowker Auditorium. $ 545-2511.
MUSIC: Jazz Brunch 11am - 1pm in the Franklin Dining Commons. 545-2804.

Monday, November 16
AUDITIONS: Sanango by szande, a co-production with New World Theater. Nov 16 & 17, 7-11 pm. Callbacks November 18, 7-11 pm. Curtain Theater. 545-3490.
AUDITIONS: Romeo & Juliet sponsored by the UMass Theater Department. Nov 16 & 17, 7-11 pm Room 201Fine Arts Center. 545-3490.

Tuesday, November 17
MUSIC: Bare Bones & Bars Trombone Choir & UMass Mammas. David Spoerry & Peter Tanner, directors. 8pm in Bezanson Recital Hall. $ 545-2511.

Wednesday, November 18
MUSIC/DANCE AUDITIONS: Romeo & Juliet by the UMass Theater Department. 7-11pm Room 201Fine Arts Center. 545-3490.

Thursday, November 19
ARTS COUNCIL GRANT DEADLINE
MUSIC: 1st Night Jazz Concert Mark Vinchy, saxophone and conductor with UMass's jazz students & faculty. Jeffery Holmes, director. 8pm in Bezanson Recital Hall $ 545-2511.
FILM: Insider Choices: Kiss of the Spider Woman Directed by Hector Babenco. 7:30pm in Herter Hall 227. 545-3670.

Friday, November 20
MUSIC: St. Petersburg State Symphony Orchestra 8pm in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. $ 545-2511.
DANCE: University Dancers Improvisation Group 3:45-4:30pm in the Totman Building main lobby 545-6063.
CULTURAL NIGHT: Garbas-Raes/Bhangra Night 9pm - 1am in the Malcolm X Center. $ 548-0151.

Saturday, November 21
MUSIC: Schacht: Opera Workshop Elizabeth Parker & Steven Coombs, directors. 3pm in Bezanson Recital Hall. 545-2511.
CULTURAL NIGHT: Sponsored by the Cape Verdian Student Alliance 7pm - 2am in the Bluewall. $ 546-5575.

Sunday, November 22
MUSIC: Winds of Change Wind Ensemble and Symphony Band, Malcolm W. Rowell, Jr., conductor. 3pm in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. $ 545-2511.

Exhibits

Augusta Savage Gallery
101 New Africa House 545-5177
Notes from the Street by Anthony Lam Through Nov. 25

Hampden Gallery
Hampden Gallery is temporarily closed during November. Call 545-0680 for more information.

Herter Art Gallery
125 A Herter Hall 545-0976
Dale Schlimps: Monte Capreli Through Nov. 20
Icons, Myths, and Legends by Michael Cobbyn Nov 25- Dec 20 Opening Reception: Nov 25, 4-7pm

Student Union Visual & Performing Arts Space
Student Union Building 545-0792
Four Pittsburgh Sculptors by Craig Barron, Andy Mauary, Norman Ed and James Nestor Through Nov. 19

University Gallery
University Gallery is temporarily closed during the fall. Call 545-4197 for more information.

Wheeler Gallery
Central Residential Area 545-0680
Sacred Restiary by Marjory Lehan Through Nov. 20

5-College students can attend any Fine Arts Center event for only $5!
Funded in part by a grant from the UMass Arts Council

ARTS COUNCIL INFORMATION:
Plan Your Spring Events NOW!
The Arts Council awards grants to UMass organizations (such as RSO's) to sponsor art events on campus. Call 545-0202 for more information and application packet. Grant application deadlines are: November 15, February 1 and March 11.

UMass Arts Council, 101 Hasbrouck Hall, 545-0202

Different or Alike

"The Same Old Thing", Doesn't Apply Here.

How many times have you heard it? Or maybe you've said it yourself: "I don't want to be like everyone else. I want to be different." At CIGNA, we welcome that attitude, because people who have it aren't likely to settle for the same old careers. We are always looking for bright, creative graduates who see things differently, who just may have the insight to help us and our customers find new solutions.

You see, CIGNA is different. Sure we're a diversified financial services company with approximately 50,000 employees worldwide and $111 billion in assets. But beyond those numbers, we truly are committed to improving the lives of the people we serve every day. From health care and investment services to protecting lives, homes and businesses, we strive to live up to our reputation as a Business of Caring.

Working at CIGNA is different. We don't force you into a job that doesn't fit your abilities. What we do is find rewarding and challenging opportunities for tomorrow's business leaders. We also understand that you want to keep growing in your career. Our professional development and job rotation programs let you explore various options and areas of interest throughout the company. Which is probably why we continue to appear in several of America's "best places to work" surveys.

One CIGNA: Many Opportunities.

We're an equal opportunity employer. M/F/D/V. "CIGNA" refers to CIGNA Corporation and/or one or more of its subsidiaries. Most employees are employed by subsidiaries of CIGNA Corporation, which provide insurance and related products.

www.cigna.com

CIGNA
A Business of Caring.

A Tribe Called Quest with
SLUM VILLAGE
MON. NOV. 23
8:00 PM
On Sale Fri. @ 3 PM
MULLINS CENTER
Tickets available at the Mullins Center Box Office and all TicketMaster locations. To charge by phone call TicketMaster at (413) 733-2500. Purchase online at www.ticketmaster.com.
For information call the Mullins Center at 545-0505.

--- The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian ---

Gimme some credit

Someday all of us are going to have to face it. We're all going to face the realization that graduation is right around the corner. For me this feeling isn't imminent. I still have a year and a half to go. However, last week when I got my course audit in the mail it came to my attention that I was one credit behind where I need to be in order to graduate on time.

Since I definitely want to be a part of the first class to graduate in the next millennium I want to get that one credit out of the way as soon as possible. Immediately, I set out looking for some one credit joke class that I could take. In my searches I was astounded to find numerous "classes" which seemed ridiculous to even me. There are outrageous things that students can do here for between one and 15 credits. Once I tell you about them I'm sure that you will be just as surprised as I was.

The first class that caught my eye is called "Fat of the Floor." It is Food Science 900. This is a one–semester class that is worth three credits. What it entails is gaining all of the weight for everyone on your floor. So instead of everyone on your floor putting on a few pounds, the person who takes this class would just gain all of it.

There are definitely some positives and negatives to this class. The obvious negative is that you have no idea what your floor mates are going to eat or drink. However, there is a strict confidentiality clause that goes along with this course.

This course is recommended for people who live in the towers or in a dorm like Brooks where the halls are small. People who live in dorms like Van Meter with long halls should be hesitant to take this class because so many people live on those floors and too much body expansion in such a short amount of time could be fatal.

The next class that caught my eye is called "Black America." Although it seems that it would have something to do with African–American culture it does not. It is actually offered by the Art department. This is a one-credit course that tests your coloring skills.

This class meets once a week or until you color a map of the United States entirely within the lines with a black crayon. If you do it on your first try then you never have to go again, plus you get a one–credit "A". The flip side to this is that if you can't color a perfect map then you will receive a no–credit "F" even if you attend every class.

Dan Viens

Another class that I could not believe the University offered is called "Mowing 897." This class is part of the forestry department. This class is worth a whopping 15–credits because if someone takes this class then they won't have time to take any others. This class entails mowing every bit of lawn on the entire campus with a push mower. It is a nice push mower though. It's self propelled and has those nice big bicycle wheels so it can handle that high grass. The forestry department just put in for a grant so that they can buy a weed whacker for the upcoming semester.

The worst part of this course isn't even the lecture (the actual mowing) it is the discussion that meets once a week. During this discussion you don't actually talk to anyone, you just have to bag all of the grass that you mowed the week before so that you can mow again the following week. I only recommend this class to forestry majors.

This next class is one that I find quite interesting and relevant to life here on campus. It is "Communication 999." The students in this class act as interpreters between the students and the workers at the dining halls. Since the D.C.s never have anything the students want, the cooks must not understand what it is that kids our age like to eat. Therefore if we had some sort of liaison between the workers and the students we might end up with a menu that is enjoyable to cook and eat.

If you pass this class you will automatically receive a bachelor's degree in communications because you will have bridged one of the biggest communication gaps ever in history. So far nobody has gotten a final grade in this class because every student has withdrawn.

The last course that caught my eye is offered by the criminal justice program and is in association with the UMass police department. For one semester you can get six credits and be a full fledged detective on the UMass force. You don't get paid and you don't get benefits, but you get credits and they give you a gun.

The reason for having students do this is that they hired so many cops to bust kids for beer and weed that they forgot they would need detectives for attempted murder, rape and any mysterious deaths that occur. They figured that since they don't have anyone to solve legitimate crime maybe they could get us kids to help out for free. This way everybody wins, the students get credit and the cops can continue to pretend that they are making this school a safer place.

I've got to hand it to this University. They definitely do not want learning to be a boring thing. This place isn't interested in kids with one line of education in mind. I truly hope that by bringing these classes to your attention that I have had some positive effect on your future.

Dan Viens is a Collegian columnist.

Diggin' up bones

Like most people, I want to be proud of my country's heroes of past and present. I want to stay up late and watch the flag wave on TV as programming ends for the night, filled with a vague, warm patriotism. I want to trust in fundamental human goodness, but little of the old blind faith is left in our age of information.

We're "Diggin' up bones," as the country tune goes. "Every night I'm sittin' alone, diggin' up bones/Exhuming things that're better left alone..." Maybe some truths, albeit painful, are not better "left alone," because they challenge us to reconsider whether heroes are allowed to be less than perfect.

I would like to look up to our country's leaders, believing that their success somehow proves the worth of their characters. Once, dog–eared history textbooks gave us what we wanted to hear: sanitized, uplifting tales of our founding fathers — battles won and bills passed, charming anecdotes of Lincoln's maxims, trivial but entertaining bits about Washington's wooden teeth and such. Lauded achievements in science: the first words spoken over the telephone, the discovery of electricity.

Tanya Mannes

Now, in the name of truth and news, we are bombarded with the minutiae of private lives. We brace ourselves for the daily tide of information with ever–new discoveries. So, caught off–guard by the dirty or embarrassing secrets of public figures, we examine our expectations, deciding what is relevant. Much of it adds to our overall historical knowledge and clears up mysteries, which are basically good things. With some regret, our ignorance takes with it an idealistic view of American heroes.

It seems that every respected person today has a skeleton in his or her closet. Our urge to know drives technology to deliver proof. Just as taboos have been broken in the living room and at the dining room table, where we can now without reproach discuss such things as religion, politics and sex (money remains a taboo topic), so they have been broken in laboratories and courts.

Appropriately, for a public that has already endured a presidential scandal this year, a 196–year–old rumor has been confirmed by modern science, one that challenges our faith in America's leaders yet again. It's a victory for the revisionist school of historians, but a blow to one of our favorite icons of democracy. Apparently, in Thomas Jefferson's private life, he was at best a hypocrite, and at worst a rapist who abused his position of power.

In his public life, Jefferson opposed "race mixing" and believed blacks to be inferior, even as he declared in the Declaration of Independence that "all men are created equal." But Jefferson's wife died in 1782, and no doubt Jefferson noticed that his slave, Sally Hemings, was "mighty near white... very handsome, long, straight hair down her back," as she was described by another slave, Isaac Jefferson.

Genetic test results which will be published today in the scientific journal Nature confirm that Jefferson fathered at least one child, and likely as many as six, with Hemings. Tell–tale patterns on the Y–chromosome link present–day descendants of the Jefferson family with descendants of Thomas Woodson, Heming's child. Based on historical clues, Jefferson's sexual relationship with Hemings likely lasted at least 20 years.

The affair is said to have begun in 1787 when Jefferson, serving as ambassador to France, brought Hemings to Paris with him as a nanny to his daughter. Her son Madison specifically said that his mother became Jefferson's "concubine" at that time. In 1802, a former Jefferson ally publicized the affair in a newspaper article, but the report was dismissed as politically motivated.

And so the information age throws us truths and half– truths. We have pieces of the puzzle, circumstantial evidence. For example, nobody yet knows whether Jefferson's liaison with his slave was a "tale of lust and rape" or mutual affection or something in between.

After all, the children assumed to be his were named after people close to him — among them Dolly Madison, a cousin named Thomas Eston Randolph, and others. And while not freeing the bulk of his slaves, Jefferson freed the children of Hemings. But no matter what affection may be inferred, any liaison between two people in such an unbalanced power relationship is suspect.

All we know for now is that Jefferson's actions in a personal relationship contradicted his public ideas. That is more than we once knew, and it gives a more well–rounded view of his very private personality. He was something of a hypocrite; that is all we are entitled to judge. We cannot pretend to know what was in his heart; he never acknowledged the affair or apologized publicly. We must read between the lines, between what is said and done, and what is meant.

We may not have the complacent faith of former years, we may be a bit cynical. Ultimately, it lies within us whether we can look to our leaders, who after all are only human, as examples to be followed. We can choose to see and emulate the good they have done for society, or condemn them for their mundane sins and hypocrisies.

As we judge others, so we too can be judged. Whether we choose to hate the imperfection or the man himself tells something about ourselves, as we go on "diggin' up bones." Some of these "bones" may not be what we want to hear, but once they have been unearthed we must see them for what they are.

Tanya Mannes is a Collegian columnist.

The masks we wear

This past Saturday was one of everyone's favorite holidays. Halloween. A time for rotted teeth, egged cars, t.p.'d houses, poisoned candy, kids getting scared out of their wits, various assortments of violence, and of course the annual lethal injuries caused by razor blades. You know, good old–fashioned, wholesome American fun.

Aside from these memorable and amusing pastimes, the most obvious part of Halloween is the inevitable costume, or more specifically, the Halloween mask. People of all ages "dress to impress," as some simply dress up like witches, while others disguise themselves as the opposite sex.

As hilarious as these Sabrina and Ru Paul wannabes are, I have noticed something that I wish to share. I have noticed that on Halloween, people act much differently than they would on any other day. For some reason, masks let down our inhibitions and allow us to break through the safeguarding shells we have all grown to love.

"People who are normally quiet and reserved turn into "wild and crazy guys" because a piece of vinyl or rubber hides their faces."

Gary Mendese

People who are normally quiet and reserved turn into "wild and crazy guys" because a piece of vinyl or rubber hides the superficial facade they normally portray on the outside.

It's sad that we Americans are so concerned with other people's opinions that we need to put on a front in order to act in a way that is true to our inner personalities. It's really depressing, but I suppose it shouldn't come as much of a shock. I mean, what really excites us here in America?

The only real answers are sports, sex and violence, and you know it's true. Do people really care about gubernatorial debates or who won the Nobel Prize? Do they honestly care about the decreasing value of the Italian lira or the successful attempt at cloning sheep?

Of course not! We don't even have a culture in this country for people to believe in, and as the responses to my last article "The Other Side" demonstrated, there won't be one in the near future.

Europeans and citizens of other countries are deeply concerned about their government and people, and actively participate in their success. The only things that really grasp our attention in the U.S. are the Super Bowl, gigantic catastrophes and what new position "The Joy of Sex" has recently released.

While these drooling, sadomasochistic, Viagra–popping enthusiasts are busy indulging in their three–hour game listening to the ceaseless comments of John Madden, the rest of America is home discovering what new quilt Martha Stewart has sewn. And if you do anything against the "norm," you'll be scorned by your fellow countrymen and be seen as either a "freak" or a "square."

So, with all those fun and enlightening options available to Americans, it is no wonder why we "come out of our shells" when our faces are hidden. It's easier that way. All we have to do is get sweaty and sticky from a rubber mask that will probably give us cancer in 50 years, and we let our hair down and get jiggy.

A wise man once said, "Americans only care about violence, sex, sports and drugs." Well, I guess George Carlin was right, and I did in fact overlook one crucial component that gives strength to the very foundation of America: drugs. Surprised? Think about it.

When we're not going "gaga" over a tornado pummeling 50 cities to the ground, or dishing out thousands of dollars a year on Swedish–made penis enlarger pumps, we're doing something that eases the monotony and boredom associated with an egocentrically led nation: drinking (or doing some other "substance" in some cases).

I know not everyone indulges in these "sins." Some morally sound people that don't drink spend a lot of time alone, eventually get lonely and frustrated, and finally in some cases... well, as not to offend to much majority out there, I won't say it directly. Let's just say that they can "relate." The Nutty Professor said it best this way.

So, aside from masturbating, drinking, watching the news, having sex and losing $500 because they bet on the Patriots for the Super Bowl, people don't have much to do and therefore have their true feelings suppressed. They turn to a dull, self–scrutinizing life where the fear of individualism is just as smothering as the necessity for conformity.

It's sad that we can only let loose when we're "under the influence" or hiding behind the camouflage of a Batman mask, but I guess that's the way it is.

So until we find a way to wear our Halloween costumes all year–round, or until we learn to appreciate more things than money and its creations, we have to bite our lips, keep our true feelings inside, and watch the Home Shopping Network. Damn! I've got to get going. Jerry Springer's on in five.

Gary Mendese is a Collegian staff member.

Letters to the Editor

UMass concerned about shooting

To the University community:

On Oct. 30, a gun was fired in Cashin Residence Hall, and a student was severely wounded. Everyone is extremely concerned about this incident, the harm it caused and the worry that ensued.

We are confident that UMass–Amherst is a safe place to live, study and work. We nonetheless should use this incident as a reminder that all of us can be vulnerable in any environment where many thousands of people come and go each day.

The campus offers many programs designed to help provide an environment where all members of the community feel safe and free to live, work and study. Still, each of us must take responsibility for being an active participant in our own personal safety and in the safety of the campus in general.

Please be aware of what is going on around you and report unusual circumstances and events. If you have information about this incident, please call 577–TIPS to contact the police.

UMass–Amherst is a caring community. Each of us must help create and maintain an environment that is safe and secure for everyone. All of the University's policies and safety nets can be truly effective if each of us contributes to making them work.

F. Javier Cevallos
Interim Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545–3500 • Fax (413) 545–1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor–in–Chief Position Vacant Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
Steve Salerno Jr. Advertising Manager David Parmenter Advertising Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Laura Forster Developing Nations Editor
Mike Messaros Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Co-Jewish Affairs Editor

Morgan Tobor Co-Jewish Affairs Editor
Heather Lá Guzzetta Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jill Carroll News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylarski Sports Editor
Allana E. Todman Women's Issues Editor

Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager

Jaclyn F. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri–Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545–3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

There's no place like home

Guild opens curtains on The Wiz tonight

Ease on down the road to the University of Massachusetts Theatre Guild's fall production of The Wiz, beginning tonight at 8 p.m. and running though Saturday, Nov. 7. There will also be a matinee at 2 p.m. on Nov. 7. The Wiz will be presented in the Fine Arts Concert Hall at UMass Amherst.

The basic premise of the show is just like the film version of The Wizard of Oz, except much more "flashy and showy," said director Tara McRae. "It's jazzed up and the script is more comedic," explained McRae.

Instead of Kansas, in this show Dorothy (played by Fatima Elmi) lives in the Bronx with Auntie Em and Uncle Henry. She is swept out of her urban environment to the land of OZ. She meets up with Addapearl (Lindsey Bouvaird), the good witch, the Tin Man (Jaime Perez), the Lion (Time Flak) the Scarecrow (Richard James), Evillenne (Kim McDowell), Glinda (Lindsay McCarthy), and of course the Wizard (Boston University student Chris Casello).

"I've interpreted this show as a journey that happens within Dorothy. She needs to find herself, the journey helps her to do this. Each character is piece of Dorothy that she gains with each encounter," McRae said.

This show is a landmark production for the Guild. It has one of the largest casts ever, with about 43 actors, singers and dancers involved in this production. That show is a step up, said McRae.

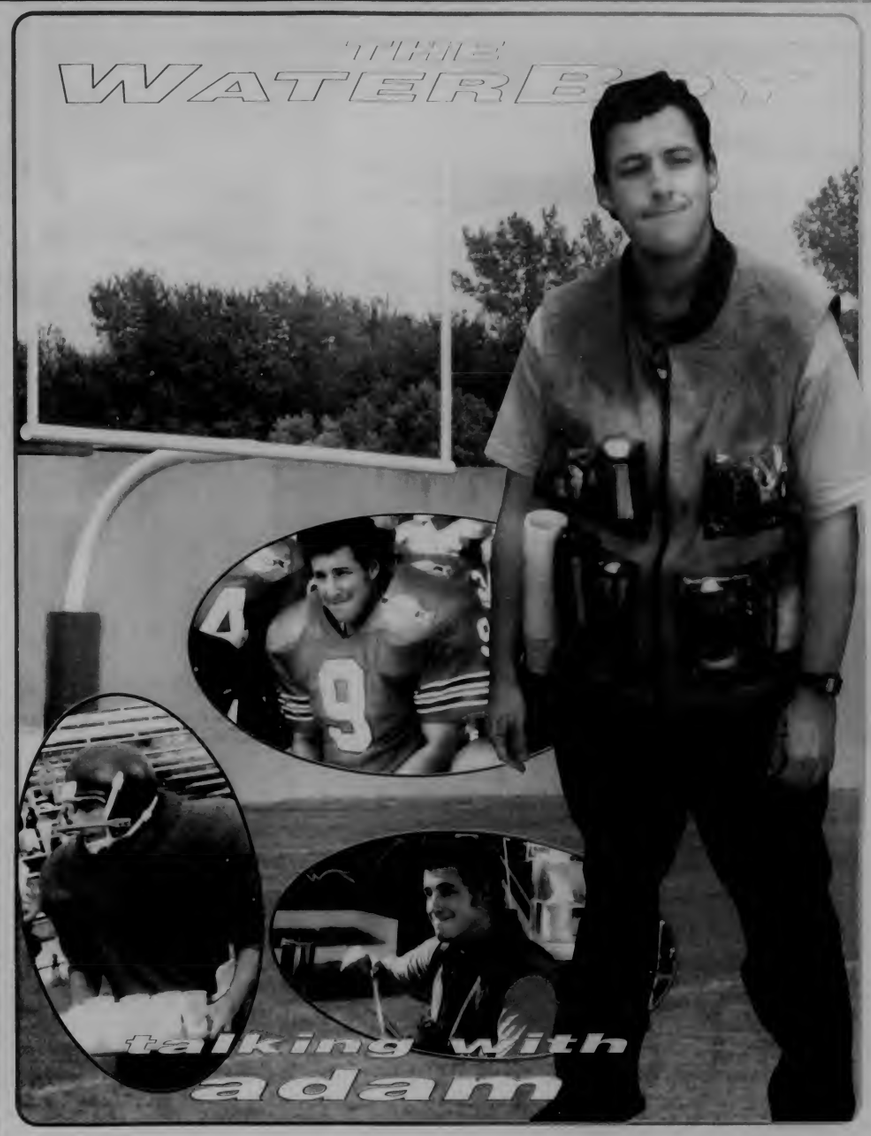
It is by far the most expensive production due to the cost of costumes, rights and lighting. The costumes are replicas of the original production.

"The costume designer, Kelly Kistanu, is amazing," said McRae. Kistanu plays the role of Auntie Em.

The light and set designer is Evan Hickok. "He is a brilliant man and a technical genius," said McRae. Because the show is being presented in the Fine Arts Concert Hall, the technical aspects of the show had to be modified from previous Guild productions.

"Although the space is different and we aren't used to it, Evan stepped up to the job," said McRae.

The dancing also reflects the large scale of this show. There is a 16–member dance troop, many of whom are dance majors. "It was great to get the dance department working with the Guild. There is a lot of dancing. It fits in perfectly with the show," said McRae. "The choreography is great. Denise Brown, the choreographer, is a great person and dancer. We worked very well together.



"This show is my life! All of my housemates are in the show. This is may last semester, here, McRae said. "I have been with the Guild for three and a half years. I have held every other position in the Guild; I wanted to do something I've never done before."

So she decided she wanted to direct.

"It has definitely been a good thing," said McRae.

The Production Manager is Ari Teplitz. The vocal director is Denise Brown.

Tickets are $10 for the general public, $5 for Five College students, Kids under 12 and groups of 20 or more $8/$4. For information call the Bowker Box Office at 413–545–2511 or the UMTG office at 413–545–0415.

Sandler's antics continue with The Waterboy

Adam Sandler knew he wanted to be an actor when he "used a Charleston Chew as a microphone and sang to his mama." Thank goodness for leftover Halloween candy and Mrs. Sandler; what would the world be without a Billy Madison, a Happy Gilmore, a Wedding Singer, or a Waterboy?

It'd be a dark, murky world with no giant, gay penguins.

During a teleconference with college journalists from around the country Tuesday, Sandler talked about his new upcoming film, The Waterboy, from Touchstone Pictures, and what it means to unofficially be the goofiest man in America.

Being the goofiest man in America might put a lot of pressure on a rising actor, but Sandler takes it all in stride. When asked if he plans to pursue any serious movie roles he answered, "I'm just happier when I don't wear a wig."

Sandler added that he likes what he's doing with his career, working with his old roommates from college (director Frank Coraci, co–writer Tim Herlihy and producer Jack Giarraputo) and just making people laugh.

In The Waterboy, Sandler plays Bobby Boucher, a socially maladjusted (hmm, a stretch from his usual "stuffy investment–banker types") mama's boy from the swamps of Louisiana. His only contact with society is his Waterboy job for a college team where the players and coach make poor Bobby's life a living hell.

But things look up when a new coach comes on board, Henry Winkler; yeah the Fonz — he can make all the dark clouds disappear behind the sun. Anyway, the Fonz tells Bobby to basically buck up and be a man.

Bobby lets loose his repressed anger and becomes a force to be reckoned with on the football field (he can tackle like anybody's business). Behind the back of his Mama (Kathy Bates), he learns how to play football and go to college. Plenty of bad polyester outfits, cajun accents and double entendres later, things get kind of jiggy, as they tend to do in Sandler's movies.

Sandler's boyish/manic personality and lonesome puppy looks have made him somewhat of an automatic sex symbol. But Sandler giggles at the notion.

"I don't know what to say. I'm just a buffoon. I look in the mirror and I see a buffoon," he said.

Sandler also commented on his various, random, array of co–stars including the Fonz and Jerry Reed (the snowman from "Smoky and the Bandit.")

"Jerry's a bad ass. He's a pretty damn good guitar player, he just lives down south and plays the guitar," he said.

And the Fonz...

"I watched Happy Days growing up. I got a bit of the inside scoop. Like, they didn't want Henry wearing that jacket. Henry fought the good fight though."

Sandler also commented on Lawrence "L.T." Taylor, a reporter for "ABC's Monday Night Football," and former New York Giants defense end, who appears in the movie and also was recently arrested for possession of crack.

"L.T., I hope he figures it out," he said.

Sandler has yet to become spoiled by Hollywood. He lives in his apartment in the Upper West Side of Manhattan and hangs out with former Saturday Night Live cohorts like Rob Schneider, David Spade and Tim Meadows.

"I'm a New England boy. There's a lot New Hampshire townie still in me. I spent a lot of time in New England, screwing around with my time," he said.

Two questions that Sandler probably gets asked more than requests for the Thanksgiving and Hannukah songs, are: how he is dealing with the death of Chris Farley; and what did it feel like to fight Bob "Have your pets spayed and neutered" Parker?

"Me and Farley used to talk about it [leaving SNL]. He didn't want to overstay his welcome. Chris decided, then I did," he said.

"Me and Spade talk about him all the time. Chris's brothers are in the movie. I talk to his family a lot. I talk about Chris as much as possible, ya know, he was a great guy."

And what about kicking some Barker Booty?

"It was fun knowing that in real life he could kick my butt."

A lot of people might call Sandler a one–trick pony, that his mildly–retarded school boy act is falling apart faster than wet toilet paper.

Sandler might not have many tricks up his sleeve, or seem willing to file a divorce from his SNL screwiness. But he's funny. Not pretentious funny or "poopy and pee–pee" funny, but an innocent, unassuming funny that is rare in movies today.

Julie Rialkow is a Collegian staff member.

Also Inside:

Garbage review • 6
Tube Notes • • • 6
Jazz/Blues • • • 7
Health Tip • • • 7
Film Clips • • • 8
Calendar • • • • 9
Art Galleries • 10

Layout and Design: Kelvin Torres and Bryan McAllister

Vixen Manson propels Garbage

By Kevin Monahan
Collegian Staff

GARBAGE
Chapin Auditorium — Mount Holyoke College
Oct. 3

SOUTH HADLEY — Garbage's sound has never been anything new or original. They are basically a rip-off of electronic/industrial rock pioneers Curve. But taking them on their own merits, Shirley Manson, Butch Vig and company know how to put on a fun show. The chickies busted a move and the boys drooled over the sexy Manson as Garbage tantalized Mount Holyoke Tuesday night.

Looking like the latest incarnation of Sporty Spice (a Spice Girls reference would be made later in their set), Manson and her four-piece band did not rely on such buggery as elaborate sets, backdrop, or special effects. Instead, just a few fancy lighting tricks, the instrumentation of the blokes onstage and the wee Scottish lass and her sultry voice.

Opening up with "Temptation Waits," Manson strutted and bounced around onstage as if she were doing step aerobics rather than dancing. "Not My Idea," from their self-titled debut album was also an early favorite, as was the current single from their latest release, Version 2.0. "I Think I'm Paranoid," a song based on Gene Hackman's character in Francis Ford Coppola's 1974 film The Conversation.

Going on to play some other songs from Version 2.0, including "Special" and "Hammering in My Head," Manson managed to keep all attention on her, displaying just the right amount of attitude and diverting our attention from the fact that we were in the same building with Vig.

A cover of Vic Chestnut's "Supernatural" was well received, as was Manson's dialogue with the audience in her adorable Scottish accent. The band moved on to their contribution to the 1996 Romeo and Juliet soundtrack. "#1 Crush," during which — through a clever lyric change — Manson promised to "Go down on you/If you asked me to," further proving herself one sexy bird.

During an up-tempo rendition of the hit single "Stupid Girl," instead of singing the final chorus, Manson broke into "So tell me what you want, what you really, really want," a blatant comment on her Mel C. look. The first single from their first album, and what is far and away their best song, "Vow" was next, followed by "Wicked Ways," and "a song which best describes our fans," "Queer."

Garbage's instrumentation, featuring Vig on Drums, Duke Fricson on guitar, a bass and keyboards, translated well to the live setting, as did all the loops and samples. Even Shirley strapped on a glittery guitar for a few songs.

Garbage titillated the audience by closing with their biggest hit "Only Happy When it Rains," and "Looks So Fine," before returning to the stage to play a three song encore, which included the obscure b-side "Kick My Ass."

An interesting set was also put on by New York City pop- punk outfit Girls Against Boys. Touring with Garbage has been "fantabulous" as keyboardist/bassist Eli Janney put it during a brief interview before the show. "We just did a U.S. tour... we have about 28 dates left, we're having a lot of fun.

"We're reaching a audience that is close to ours [while touring with Garbage]. It's not exactly ours, but close." GVSB is planning to take some time off for the holidays, then embark on a tour of Europe and Japan to promote their latest release Freak-On-Ica (a play on "electronica"). "We're going to be ex-U.S. for a while," says Janney.

COURTESY STEPHANIE STEPHENS

Shirley Manson and the Garbage clan ignited the crowd at Mount Holyoke Tuesday night.

Collegian Graphics gets it done!

November sweeps heat up plot lines of "Party," "90210"

Tube Notes with Ryan Benharris

The weather may be getting colder as we slide into the last two months of the year, but the tension on some of the biggest shows on television is getting hot. The first TV sweeps week has already occurred, and now there are many shows with some serious plot developments that are keeping viewers hooked every week.

The days of turning on a series, and being entertained for the half an hour you are watching, without knowing anything at all about the show's past are gone. All of the networks have slid into a trend that has television producers searching through Hollywood to find a writer that can develop a story line to keep things constant. This seems to be the common thread that television has had in the last part of this decade.

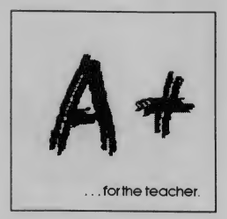
Obviously, this is not the first time this has happened. The most famous series that may have developed this type of television was "The Fugitive" back in the late '60s and early '70s. However, in general, television has typically been flooded with "no brain" sitcoms such as "The Cosby Show" and "Growing Pains" that really had no constant plot throughout the course of the series.

In the early part of this decade, there was a show that would revolutionize the course of television in "Beverly Hills, 90210." It seemed to start a flow of shows that focused more on sticking to a plot rather than just entertaining, and as of November, there are a lot of plots to remember, and a lot of sticky situations that are keeping the viewers hooked.

This month, FOX is bragging that it will have two moments in TV history that will be seen as historic, both on "90210." Jason Priesley, one of the show's only remaining characters from the beginning will be leaving this month, to pursue what will probably be a lousy movie career.

Returning from an extremely sad attempt at a movie career, that was highlighted by a co-starring role in Buffy the Vampire Slayer (which was awful, especially when compared to the TV show) is former cast member, Luke Perry. FOX hopes that the return of Perry will bring back all the viewers that it lost when WB decided to put "Dawson's Creek" up against "90210." The two major events are simply publicity stunts, and will probably accomplish nothing.

However, the show that FOX is so afraid of, "Dawson's Creek" is gaining more and more viewers every week. If you've ever watched the show, you'll know that it's no mystery why. The most important aspect of the show is that it is written by Kevin Williamson, the mastermind behind the films Scream, Scream 2 and I Know What You Did Last Summer. The series gained viewers by hyping the fact that one of its stars, Pacey (Joshua Jackson), was having an affair with his 35-year-old teacher. Last February, when word traveled about this, the show gained huge ratings from people who were simply curious to see what was actually happening.



The WB knew that this would be the effect, and ran numerous episodes that were so great that anyone who watched them would be immediately hooked. Since February, the teacher has long since left the show, and the premise has been based around the lead character, Dawson (James Van DerBeek), and his new found relationship with beautiful girl-next-door Joey (Katie Holmes).

Last week, the teacher returned to "Dawson's Creek" to pay Pacey a visit, and the best show of the

Turn to TUBE, page 7

NOMINATIONS ARE INVITED BY
THE COLLEGE OF FOOD AND NATURAL RESOURCES
FOR THE 1998-99 AWARDS

Outstanding Advisor OutstandingTeacher

Nomination forms are available in 113 Stockbridge Hall or departmental offices

Faculty in the following majors are eligible for nomination:

Animal Science • Apparel Marketing • Building Materials and Wood Technology • Entomology
Environmental Design • Environmental Sciences • Family and Consumer Sciences • Food Science
Forestry • Hotel, Restaurant and Travel Administration • Landscape Architecture
Microbiology • Natural Resource Studies • Plant and Soil Sciences
Resource Economics • Sport Management • Wildlife and Fisheries Conservation

Bluesmen show slide guitar magic

The blues is characterized by a number of unique tangibles and intangibles. One of the tangibles which has distinguished the music from the start and continues to be one of its trademarks is the slide guitar.

The concept is almost too simple, but the effect is otherworldly. In the old days, it was done by running a knife or a bottle over the strings; nowadays they use a round piece of metal fit around a finger for easy maneuverability. But the effect is the same — a bending of notes, creating a twanging or whining effect that sings to the depths of the soul.

Legacy has compiled some of the slide guitar's best moments on Slide Guitar: The Streamline Special as part of their Mojo Workin' series. The compilation features a who's who of country bluesmen showing how the slide guitar was meant to be played.

The slide guitar on every song says something different depending on what the artist is playing, but on some tracks, it also seems to be used as a novelty act or a sound effect to enhance the mood of the song.

The music on this disc is varied, as it opens with Taj Mahal's 1969 instrumental, "Country Blues #1," high on twanging that seems to caution the listener, but the sounds eventually work themselves back into the heart of the Delta during the '20s and '30s.

Leadbelly's slide on "Packin' Trunk Blues," attempts to calm Huddy's nervous yelling on this track, but the song races to an end before his guitar can comfort him.

"Preachin' Blues," one of Robert Johnson's classics, has the slide doing a different take, rambling on, quick and per[illegible] Johnson's how [illegible] inspired vocals. Though Leadbelly and might be expected to be the highlights of this album, they only scrape the surface.

Robert Johnson

One of the best tracks is seemingly unknown Casey Bill Weldon's "Two Timin' Woman," for its twang-tastic, emphatic use of the slide to make his guitar take on a simmering and slow anger about an unfaithful woman. In fact, Weldon made a career out of his slide guitar virtuosity.

The slide speaks to other emotions of depression on Blind Boy Fuller's "Homesick and Lonesome Blues," and to mourning on Charley Patton's "High Sheriff Blues," which Patton sings as if he could break down at any time.

In the way of the slide guitar sound effects, "Travelin' Blues" by Blind Willie McTell exemplifies the phenomenon. The Georgia native uses his guitar to indicate the ringing of a bell and a whistle blowing during different points of this narrative about movin' on.

Although all the tracks on this CD are well-done, and they feature some of the greatest bluesmen of all time, there is one track which stands above the rest, and it is a collaboration of two blues greats: Muddy Waters and Johnny Winter.

"I Feel Like Coming Home" has it all. Winter twangs away, buzzing like a honeybee relentlessly, and Waters delivers the most soulful vocals of the entire album, as Winter eggs him on with background shouts. If for nothing else, this compilation should at least be heard for the Waters/Winter three-and-a-half minute blues extravaganza at the end of it.

Joe Sullivan is a Collegian columnist.

Help for curing the common cold

The common cold, otherwise known as the flu, is caused by a virus. There is no simple cure for the flu, but there are some preventative measures you can take to boost your immune system and help your body fight off infection.

Helpful remedies include proper nutrition, adequate amount of sleep, exercise, getting the flu shot, wearing a hat when it's cold out, reducing stress and drinking warm liquids such as herbal tea.

These are just a few hints to strengthen your immune system and to help prevent you from getting the flu.

— compiled by The Student Nurses' Association

Collegian arts rocks!

Collegian arts rocks!

■ tube

continued from page 6

season, so far, proved that "Dawson's Creek" is living up the hype, and is absolutely serious about challenging "Beverly Hills, 90210" for the top spot Wednesday nights at 8 p.m.

Another popular FOX drama, "Party of Five," has its typical depressing plot in the making, as the eldest "partier," Charlie, is preparing for his stripper girlfriend, Daphne, to give birth to his child. FOX has been advertising that within the next month, Charlie will be confronted with the problem that Daphne has encountered difficulties during the labor, and that she and the baby will not both survive, and it will be Charlie's decision to pick who will live.

The series is great, and well worth a watch, but it seems like the next few episodes will be extremely emotional, and a box of tissues may be necessary.

Thursday continues to be NBC's "Must See TV" night, as it stocks its top three shows, "Friends," "Fraiser," and "ER" all together between the hours of 8 and 10 p.m. All three shows are have hot plots, and in the case of the "Friends" and "Frasier" prove that it's not only drama series' that can have a constant story line.

Anyone who has watched one episode of "Friends" over the past five years, knows that the show is entirely centered around the relationship between Ross (David Schwimmer) and Rachel (Jennifer Aniston).

Last season, it seemed like the relationship was completely over when Ross was about to marry his British fiancee. However, as he was about to state his wedding vows, Ross blurted out the name of the person that fellow friend, Phoebe (Lisa Kudrow) has referred to as "Ross' lobster."

Now, after a few weeks of subplots that involve the romance between Chandler (Matthew Perry) and Monica (Courtney Cox), Ross has stated that saving his marriage is more important that saving his friendship with Rachel, and has agreed to never speak to Rachel again if his new wife will take him back. Combined with the Chandler and Monica situation, it seems like "Friends" is set up to have its best season in years.

"ER" has a whole new twist as Carter (Noah Wiley) has taken a new med-student under his wing, who has been more trouble than she is worth. And she has gotten Carter into some serious hot water as well.

Since he is not only her mentor, but her resident assistant at school, she seems to be causing him problems no matter where he goes, and last week she was partly responsible for the near death of two of her fellow students. Carter was able to get to them in time and save them, but it has created more of a conflict between the two youngest members of the popular series.

All the drama, and hype, of these popular series may have you hooked, but what if you want to sit down and watch something that you don't have to follow each and every week just to understand what's going on? Regardless of all of the changes that TV has gone through, one thing has remained the same.

That one thing is that "The Simpsons," hands-down the best show on TV. "The Simpsons" is following up its best Halloween special ever, with a brand new episode this Sunday that guest stars Kim Basinger and Alec Baldwin.

No matter how hooked you are on "Dawson's Creek" or "Beverly Hills, 90210," there's nothing that could possibly compare to 30 minutes of letting your brain slide a bit and watching a piece of television greatness.

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian columnist.

COURTESY DARREN MICHAELS

Jennifer Love Hewitt, co-star of "Party of Five," one of the many teen soaps beefing up their story lines.

COURTESY PETER SORIEL

"90210's" Jason Priestley bid his final farewell to Beverly Hills last night.

Thanks for reading the Collegian!

99.3 ROCKS WHMP-FM

WHMP'S 3RD ANNUAL SNOW SHOW 98

ONLY $9.93

CANDLEBOX
SOUL COUGHING
HARVEY DANGER
LESS THAN JAKE
MARY'S FIRST

MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst

CALVIN

Theatre and Performing Arts Center

Thursday, November 5 • 8 pm
Paul Taylor Dance Company
Presented by the New England Foundation for the Arts and the Northampton Center for the Arts

Saturday, November 7 • 8 pm
Moe.
plus Moonboot Lovers

Widespread Panic
Tuesday November 17 8 pm

January 14 • 8 pm
PHILIP GLASS & ENSEMBLE
KOYAANISQATSI LIVE

11/5	Northampton Center for the Arts and the New England Foundation for the Arts Present: The Paul Taylor Dance Company	1/1/99	Cry, Cry, Cry: Bar Williams, Richard Shindell & Lucy Kaplansky plus Buddy & Julie Miller
11/6	Lyle Lovett	1/2	Noche Flamenca
11/7	moe. plus Moonboot Lover	1/13	The Kronos Quartet
11/12	David Sedaris WFCR benefit	1/14	Philip Glass & Ensemble
11/15	Mary Black St. Pat's Parade benefit	1/23	Charlotte's Web Presented by Theaterworks R.E.A.
11/17	Widespread Panic	2/6	Chick Corea & Gary Burton
11/20 & 11/22	Commonwealth Opera: "The Magic Flute"	2/7	The Northampton Arts Council's Silver Chord Bowl
12/4	Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra with Wynton Marsalis	2/11	Ladysmith Black Mambazo
12/6	Pilobolus Dance Theatre	3/6	Cirque Eloize
12/18	John McDermott: Christmas Memories	3/7	Arcadia Players: George Washington After Hours

Coming soon: James Galway, Nai-Ni Chen Dance Company, The Wizard of Oz, Bill T. Jones/Arnie Zane Dance Co., The Adventures of Courduroy, Laura Ingalls Wilder: Growing up on the Prarie, Cassandra Wilson, Sonny Rollins, Terry Gross

CALVIN THEATRE - 19 KING STREET, NORTHAMPTON, MA 413-584-0610
Tickets for the Calvin Theatre are available at the Northampton Box Office, Thornes Marketplace in Northampton.
To charge by phone call 586-8686 or 1-800-THE-TICK. Visit www.massilive.com for more information.

all shows all ages!
Pearl Street NightClub

Friday, November 6 • 8:30 pm • Ballroom
BEAUSOLEIL AVEC MICHAEL DOUCET
Saturday, November 7 • 8:30 pm • Clubroom
SKAVOOVIE & THE EPITONES plus Longshot and Take 5
Sunday, November 8 • 7 pm • Clubroom
SAM BLACK CHURCH plus Nothingface and Gargantua Soul
Tuesday, November 10 • 8:30 pm • Ballroom
JAZZ IS DEAD plus Living Daylights
Wednesday, November 11 • 8:30 pm • Ballroom
MONEY MARK AND BUFFALO DAUGHTER
Thursday, November 12 • 8:30 pm • Ballroom
CAKE plus Bloque
Thursday, November 12 • 8:30 pm • Clubroom
TRIBE 8 plus Tizzy
Friday, November 13 • 8:30 pm • Clubroom
BLACK OAK ARKANSAS plus Raging Slab
Saturday, November 14 • 8:30 pm • Ballroom
TRICKY plus Whale
Saturday, November 14 • 8:30 pm • Clubroom
THE ITALS plus Afroblue
Sunday, November 15 • 8:30 pm • Ballroom
SICK OF IT ALL plus Vision and Ensign
Sunday, November 15 • 8:30 pm • Clubroom
THE VOLUPTUOUS HORROR OF KAREN BLACK plus Clay People
Monday, November 16 • 8:30 pm • Ballroom
LITTLE FEAT
Wednesday, November 18 • 8:30 pm • Ballroom
SAW DOCTORS
Wednesday, November 18 • 8:30 pm • Clubroom
LET'S GO BOWLING plus Shoeless Joe and Dow Jones & the Industrials
COMING SOON: Spring Heeled Jack USA, Big D & the Kids Table, the Sellouts, Hot Tuna Electric, Entrain, Rippopotamus

all shows music alone shall live all ages!
IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL

Friday, November 6 • 7 & 10 pm
RICHIE HAVENS plus Tim Mason
Saturday, November 7 • 7 & 10 pm
BO DIDDLEY plus Trailer Park
Sunday, November 8 • 7 pm
JOHN GORKA plus Larry John McNally
Monday, November 9 • 8:30 pm
MOE TUCKER BAND plus Stone Coyotes
Tuesday, November 10 • 7 pm
The Cutting Edge of the Campfire:
ROSE POLENZANI, JESS KLEIN, BETH AMSEL & ERIN McKEOWN
Wednesday, November 11 • 7 & 9:30 pm
GREG BROWN plus Karen Savoca
Thursday, November 12 • 8:30 pm
ELECTRIC BLUE & THE KOZMIK TRUTH plus Gordon Stone
Friday, November 13 • 7 & 9:30 pm
SOLAS
Saturday, November 14 • 7 pm
JAVON JACKSON GROUP featuring Ron Carter
Saturday, November 14 • 10 pm
ZEN TRICKSTERS
Sunday, November 15 • 7 pm
GUY CLARK plus Chris Knight
Monday, November 16 • 7 pm
ROBERT FRIPP: FRIPP ALONE, AN EVENING OF SPACE MUSIC (SOLO SOUNDSCAPES)
Wednesday, November 18 • 7 pm
FRANCIS DUNNERY, IDINA MENZEL & BLOCK
Thursday, November 19 • 7 pm
BILLY JOE & EDDY SHAVER
Friday, November 20 • 7 & 10 pm
SALAMANDER CROSSING plus Ana Egge
COMING SOON: Ellis Paul, Pamela Means, Pat McGee Band, Mark Erelli, the House Jacks, Aztec Two-Step

PEARL STREET NIGHTCLUB, 10 PEARL ST., NORTHAMPTON, MA • THE IRON HORSE, 20 CENTER ST., NORTHAMPTON, MA
Tickets for all shows available at the Northampton Box Office, 2nd Floor, Thorne's Marketplace, Northampton 1-800-THE-TICK or 413-586-8686. Tickets for the Iron Horse are available at For The Record in Amherst. Tickets for Pearl St. are available at For The Record, About Music in Groonfield and Platterpus Records in Westfield. 24-Hour Concert Info: (413) 584-6618 or visit www.massilive.com

~ Film Clips ~

A selection of reviewed films playing in the local area:

ANTZ (Dir Eric Darnell, with the voices of Woody Allen, Sharon Stone, playing at Hampshire). From the very first scene, Antz captivates the audience with its small, fanciful world, creating an elaborate, visually deep microcosm of our own society. Worker ant Z (Allen) searches for princess Bala (Stone) while saving his colony from evil. Features a witty script and the voices of Sylvester Stallone and Gene Hackman. B (Adam Martignetti)

APT PUPIL (Dir Bryan Singer, with Brad Renfro, Ian McKellen, playing at Hampshire) Singer's follow-up to The Usual Suspects doesn't have the ending of that first film, but has all the elements of darkness and evil, along with some great acting by Brad Renfro and Ian McKellen. Singer masterfully puppeteers the characters in a story about a young boy searching for the secrets of an old Nazi war criminal. Based on the novella by Stephen King. B+ (A.M.)

BELOVED (Dir Johnathan Demme, with Oprah Winfrey, Danny Glover, playing at Mountain Farms). Beloved haunts us as we should be haunted, giving us a necessary, disturbing portrait of slavery in post Civil War Ohio. Imperfect but passionate, director Demme elicits strong performances from Winfrey, Glover and Kimberly Elise and transforms Toni Morrison's non-linear novel into something a bit more accessible, but still shocking. A- (Rob Roensch)

BUFFALO '66 (Dir Vincent Gallo, with Vincent Gallo, Christina Ricci, playing at Pleasant St.). With his directorial debut, model-actor Gallo manages to pull off some interesting tricks, but ends up crafting a film of less substance, more style. The story of drifter Billy Brown (Gallo), who begins the movie in a desperate search for a place to urinate and ends up kidnapping a busty blonde tap student (Ricci), is slightly marred by Ricci's underwritten part and a tendency to overuse artsy camera angles. B- (Kevin Monahan)

PLEASANTVILLE (Dir Gary Ross, with Tobey Mcguire, Joan Allen, playing at Hampshire) Simple fable of two 90's teenagers whisked into a 50's TV show turns into a slightly flawed but pleasing parable of anti-conformity and following your heart. In perfect "Pleasantville," Mom always cooks a hearty breakfast, Dad's in a bowling league, and the basketball team always has a perfect shooting percentage. But all is not well in happyland: along with the perfect life comes crushing conformity and emotional deadness, symbolized here with black and white film. Brilliant use of color and visual effects relieve this. B+ (R.R.)

PRACTICAL MAGIC (Dir Griffin Dunne, with Sandra Bullock, Nicole Kidman, playing at Mountain Farms) Practical Magic is nearly two hours of music, special effects and cute acting in search of a real movie. Sandra Bullock and Nicole Kidman do their best in hollow roles as two bewitched sisters dealing with the problems of life and love, but Practical Magic is much too cliched and empty. C- (A.M.)

RUSH HOUR (Dir Brett Ratner, with Jackie Chan, Chris Tucker, playing at Hampshire). The ballet-like stuntwork of Chan mixes with the rapid-fire insults of Tucker in this send-up of the Lethal Weapon buddy picture. L.A. cop Tucker is assigned to keep special agent Chan out of trouble; wackiness ensues. Great screenplay makes up for amateurish direction. B (Bryan McAllister)

URBAN LEGEND (Dir Jamie Blanks, with Rebecca Gayheart, Jared Leto, playing at Hampshire). Another Scream rip-off that makes the mistake of showing us too much, but still manages some nice scares from a nifty plot about urban legends that come true and haunt college students Gayheart and Leto. Typically self-reverential, with Paula Cole's "I Don't Want to Wait" coming on the radio when "Dawson's Creek" star Joshua Jackson turns on his car. B- (A.M.)

WHAT DREAMS MAY COME (Dir Vincent Ward, with Robin Williams, Cuba Gooding Jr., playing at Hampshire). What Dreams May Come begins with the form of a hero's journey into the underworld and then revises it through the lens of Hollywood schmaltz. The movie is tear jerking and occasionally beautiful, especially some eerie hypnotic editing and sharp special effects that turn a painting into a landscape. Williams plays a doctor whose death echoes that of his children years before, and journeys to heaven to find them, and soon after, his wife. But What Dreams May Come is a hollow exercise in American pop-spirituality, glossing over complicated ideas like religion, madness and family. C- (R.R.)

COURTESY KEN REGAN

Beloved, with stars Oprah Winfrey and Danny Glover, is one of the many movies playing in the Valley.

On Sale Now

FRIDAY NOVEMBER 6
MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst

TICKETS ON SALE TODAY AT NOON AT THE MULLINS CENTER BOX OFFICE THRU TICKETMASTER OUTLETS & CHARGE-BY-PHONE (413) 733-2500 (860) 525-4500. Event Date & Time Subject To Change

COURTESY PETER SOREL

Your ball

Edward Norton (left) takes to the court in the film American History X, released last Friday in the Boston area.

~ Calendar of Events ~

Nov. 8

The University of Massachusetts Asian Dance and Music Program will present Meeting of Angels: Nishat Khan, sitarist, and Gregorian Voices in Bowker Auditorium at 8 p.m. For information or tickets call the Fine Arts Center Box Office at 413-545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS.

Nov. 10

Sweet and Delicious treats will be offered by Michelle LaCourse, violist, and Nadine Shank, pianist, at 8 p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall. For information contact the FAC Box Office at 413-545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS.

Nov. 12

The Fine Arts Center Series presents Stephen Petronio Dance Company in Not Garden at 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. For information call the Fine Arts Center Box Office.

A concert of electronic music in memory of Everett M. Hafner featuring three world premieres by composers Charles Bestor, Gregory Snedeker and Abidh Waugh will take place at 8 p.m. in Bezanson Recital Hall.

The Insular Choices film series will present "The Killing Fields" at 7:30 p.m., in Herter 227.

Nov. 13

The second event of this year's Sage Hall Concert Series is Dinosaur Annex Music Ensemble of Boston, with baritone William Sharp as soloist.

The concert will be held in the Sweeney Concert Hall at Sage Hall, Smith College. Tickets are available through Northampton Box Office at 413-586-8686. General Admission, $15, Smith faculty and staff, $10; seniors and students with I.d., $5.

Smith College Alumna Maura Nguyen Donohue and "In Mixed Company" will present SKINning the *Sur*FACE at 8p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. Call 1-413-545-2511 for tickets and information.

Nov. 14

Visiting artist Virginia Eskin will present The Salon of George Sand: The Music of Chopin and Liszt in the Bezanson Recital Hall at 8 p.m.

Tickets are available at the FAC Box Office.

— compiled by Emily Trask

Collegian arts is da bomb!

amc
There is a Difference!
Silence to Soldiers. No child under 6 in any PG-13 or R rated film after 6pm.
Mt. Farms 4 • 584-9383
Mt. Farms Mall

WHAT DREAMS MAY COME (PG-13) Today at (5:30 @ $2.50)
SOLDIER (R) Today at (5:50 @ $2.50) 8:30
PRACTICAL MAGIC (PG-13) Today at (5:40 @ $2.50) 8:10
BELOVED (R) Today at (4:00 @ $2.50) 7:30
URBAN LEGEND (R) Today at 8:20

Hampshire 6 • 584-7550
Hampshire Mall

RUSH HOUR (PG-13) Today at (5:50 @ $2.50) 8:30
*John Carpenter's VAMPIRES (R) Today at (5:40 @ $2.50) 8:20
APT PUPIL (R) Today at (5:30 @ $2.50) 8:10
PLEASANTVILLE (PG-13) Today at (5:20 @ $2.50) 8:00
ANTZ (PG) Today at (4:00 @ $2.50) 8:40
BRIDE OF CHUCKY (R) Today at (5:50 @ $2.50) 8:30

* Special Engagement, no Passes or Coupons
$2.50 (Twi-Lite) Shows Daily

COMPLETE AUTO BODY REPAIRS
ALL MAKES AND MODELS
DANA AUTOMOTIVE
Chevrolet
"THE AFFORDABLE TRANSPORTATION PLACE"
COLLISION REPAIR • GLASS INSTALLATION
Authorized GM/VW Body Shop
Frame & Unibody Straightening
24 HR. HOTLINE 586-7250
FREE LOANERS
968 Bridge Road NORTHAMPTON

THE LEAVES AREN'T THE ONLY THINGS FALLING! OUR PRICES ARE TOO!
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive

Everyday Pricing
1/2 KEGS NATURAL LIGHT & ICE $34.99 + DEP.
1/2 KEGS ICEHOUSE, RED DOG, ROLLING ROCK $36.99 + DEP.
1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD LT., BUD ICE $40.99 + DEP.

LITE & LITE ICE CASE 30-12 OZ. CANS $15.49 + DEP.
COORS GOLD CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS $10.99 + DEP.
PABST BLUE RIBBON CASE OF 24-12 OZ. BAR BOTTLES $8.99 + DEP.
OTTER CREEK ALL FLAVORS 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.99 + DEP.
LABATTS BLUE, ICE, ALE 12 PK. BOTTLES $7.99 + DEP.
ROLLING ROCK CASE OF 2-12 PK. BOTTLES $13.49 + DEP.

WINE OF THE MONTH
Meridian CHARDONNAY & CABERNET SAUVIGNON $7.99
Beringer JOHANNISBERG RIESLING & GEWURTZTRAMINER 750ML $5.99
CARLO ROSSI 4L ALL FLAVORS $6.99
CONCHA Y'TORO ALL FLAVORS 1.5LT $6.99
JEKEL CHARDONNAY 750ML $8.49
SUTTER HOME CHARDONNAY, MERLOT, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5LT $8.99
SUTTER HOME WHITE ZINFANDEL 750ML $3.99

GORDONS VODKA 1.75L $11.49
JIM BEAM BOURBON 1.75L $16.49
BACARDI LIMON RUM 750ML $9.49
BLACK VELVET 1.75L $13.49
TANQUERAY GIN 1.75L $23.49
EMMETS IRISH CREAM 750ML $8.99

Discounts Available on Cases of Wine & Liquor. Ask For Details.
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 11/5/98 THRU WEDS. 11/11/98
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

(read between the lines)

	AT&T Student Advantage Card	Sprint FONCARD	AT&T Student Advantage Card	Sprint FONCARD
Service charge	0¢	90¢	0¢	90¢
Cost per minute	20¢	35¢	20¢	10¢
Total 8 minute call	$1.60	$3.70	$1.60	$1.70

Sprint Sense College Plan Standard

Use your AT&T Student Advantage Card
so you won't get blindsided with hidden [illegible]
on every calling card call — before you've even [illegible]

20¢ a minute. 24 hours a day.
And no per call service charge.
Why would you use anything else?

Smart move. You got the new AT&T Student Advantage Card. But why aren't you using it as your calling card? It's just 20¢ a minute whenever, wherever you call in the U.S. With no per call service charge. No monthly fee. And no gimmicks. Don't have one yet? Call 1 800 654-0471 [illegible] www.att.com/college/np.html

Use your AT&T Student Advantage Card as your AT&T Calling Card.

AT&T
It's all within your reach.®

*Refers to the AT&T One Rate® College Plan. Plan rates [illegible]. Other in-state calling card rates may vary per calling state tariff. [illegible] calling card calls you dial yourself (e.g., 1 800 CALL ATT, [illegible]) and [illegible] calling card calls placed from pay phones. Call for details. ©1998 AT&T

~ Art Galleries ~

Barnes Gallery — Water Music: The tiny brooks and waterfalls of Peter Atwood's ceramic fountains complement the paintings of Thomas Morton and Jozan Treston. Gallery show: Oct. 14–Nov. 7. Gallery hours are Tuesday–Saturday 1–5 p.m.

Hampshire College — Main Gallery. Gallery hours are Monday–Friday, 10:30 a.m.–4:30 p.m.; Sunday, 2–5 p.m. Call the gallery at 559–5544.

Hart Gallery (Northampton) — Hand–painted saws and handmade quilts by Mark Brown and Sue Boss will be on display from Nov. 19 through Dec. 6. Gallery hours are Monday through Wednesday, 9:30 a.m.–5:30 p.m., Thursday through Saturday 9:30 a.m.–8 p.m., and Sunday 12–5 p.m.

Hart Gallery — Deep Woods II - Sanctuary Revisited will exhibit the oil paintings of Ashfield artist Jaime Young in honor of Breast Cancer Awareness Month. The show will run till Nov. 15.

Mount Holyoke College — Arts Museum. Landscapes on paper: Works of Art from the Collection will run through Dec. 15. For info call 538–2245.

Mount Holyoke College — Art Museum. American Modernism, Roy R. Neuberger's collection, is now on display. Hours are Tuesday–Friday, 11 a.m. 5 p.m.; Saturday–Sunday, 1–5 p.m. Call 538–2245.

Mount Holyoke College — Art Museum. The exhibition On the Nature of Landscape is now on display. Hours are Tuesday–Friday, 11 a.m.–5 p.m., Saturday–Sunday, 1–5 p.m. Call 538–2245.

University of Massachusetts — Augusta Savage Gallery. Notes from the Street, black and white photographs by Anthony Lam. The exhibit will run from Oct. 28–Nov. 25. Gallery hours are Monday and Tuesday 1–7 p.m., Wednesday–Friday 1–5 p.m.

University of Massachusetts — Wheeler Gallery. Sacred Bestiary by Marjorie Lehan will be on display from Oct. 21–Nov. 20. Hours are Monday–Thursday 4–8 p.m., Sunday 2–5 p.m. For information call 545–0680.

University of Massachusetts — 125A Herter Hall. Monte Caprili will run from Oct. 23–Nov. 20. Hours are Monday–Friday, 11 a.m.–4 p.m. Saturday–Sunday 1–4 p.m. Call 545–0976.

University of Massachusetts — Hampden Gallery. An Exhibition of Cellblock Visions: Recent Art from American Prisons. Curated by Phyllis Kornfield. This exhibit will be on display from Oct. 22–Nov. 20. Hampden hours are Monday–Friday 5–7 p.m. and Sunday 2–5 p.m. Call 545–0680.

University of Massachusetts — Student Union Visual and Performing Arts Space. Four Pittsburgh Sculptors: Craig Barron, Norman Ed, Andy Mauery and James Nestor will run through Nov. 19. Gallery hours are Monday–Thursday 10 a.m.–5 p.m., Friday 10 a.m.–3 p.m., and Saturday & Sunday 1–4 p.m.

Worcester Art Museum — Blurring the boundaries: 25 Years of Installation Art. Running from Oct. 4 through Jan. 3. For information call 508 798–5646.

Williams College Museum of Art — Williamstown. Coming to America: Graphic Designer Emigrants and Exiles. To register call 413–597–2429.

— compiled by Emily Trask

Holly Hunter returns in Living Out Loud

By Bob Thomas
Associated Press

Every once in a while, Holly Hunter creates a stunning performance that reminds a forgetful Hollywood what a brilliant actress she is.

First came Broadcast News, which brought her an Academy Award nomination as best actress of 1987. The Piano in 1993 won her the big prize. Now there's Living Out Loud, a refreshingly original comedy that should find her once more in Oscar contention.

Richard LaGravenese, known as an adapter of well–known novels (Beloved, The Horse Whisperer, The Bridges of Madison County), directs his own script for the first time, and the result proves the value of ace writers interpreting their own material. The dialogue is crisp and funny. The plot turns are truly surprising.

Living Out Loud is a romantic comedy seen through a jaundiced eye. Before the main titles, Judith Nelson (Hunter) and her neurosurgeon husband (Martin Donovan) are arguing in a posh restaurant over his repeated philandering. He finally admits he is in love with another woman and wants to end the 16–year marriage.

Judith, who gave up her medical studies after their wedding, finds herself in an expensive Manhattan apartment without a clue as to her future. She works as a visiting nurse, dines out dismally alone. She drinks too much, goes to a nightclub and tries to be friendly with a blues singer (Queen Latifah), who rebuffs her and later becomes a friend and confidante.

Pat Francato (Danny DeVito) has his own set of concerns. His daughter has died, his wife has left him after 25 years, and the loan sharks are circling with demands for repayment. He is reduced to running the night elevator at Judith's apartment.

At first the pair ignore each other. Slowly they become acquainted, and they sympathize with each other's problems. Pat wants to carry the relationship a step farther, but Judith resists any commitment.

The conclusion is not what you'd expect, but that is true of most of Living Out Loud. Example: One of the loan sharks' agents calling on Pat for payment is not a "dees–and–dem" hood, but a well–spoken young man in a tuxedo.

The actors seem to be taking delight in such an inspired script. Hunter wins the audience from the start. DeVito, whose Jersey Films produced the film, shows what a versatile actor he is. Latifah, playing a character named Liz Bailey and displaying the warmth of the late Pearl Bailey, sings and acts equally well.

Toni Collette is a Velvet star

By Carol Deegan
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Amazing.

The word pops up about a dozen times during a 30–minute conversation with Toni Collette, one of the stars of the new film, Velvet Goldmine.

Velvet Goldmine is director Todd Haynes' fictional re–creation of the '70s British rock scene. It also stars Ewan McGregor, Jonathan Rhys Meyers and Christian Bale.

Talking about the director and working on the film, Collette says:

"He gave me the most amazing opportunity."

"I was desperate to do it, and amazing as the script was, and that's of course why I would want to do it, I couldn't really quite understand why I was just so determined to do it."

"I didn't want 'Velvet Goldmine' to end. It had the most amazing, palpable, brilliant energy. I had so many great mates, and I want to work with Todd forever."

Amazing is one of the words to describe Collette, 25, who got her start as a teen–ager playing opposite Anthony Hopkins in Mark Joffe's Spotswood.

Born in Sydney, Australia, in 1972 — "the more time I spend away from Australia, the more I realize how amazing it is" — she portrayed an awkward girl who turns into a beauty in the 1994 film, Muriel's Wedding.

"There are two films which have changed my life," she says. "Muriel's Wedding, but that was more about what occurred after the making of the film. The actual making of Velvet Goldmine made me grow so much and that's what I think life is about. So it really made me very aware, and I really didn't want the film to end."

Velvet Goldmine shows the underbelly of the glam–rock era.

"It was glamorous, but it was a total sham," Collette says. "The way the film is shot, it's so gritty and so ugly and so real.

And you see the running mascara, and you see the rips in their clothes, and you see that they've been dyeing their hair and that they're all cruddy from taking too many drugs."

Collette plays Mandy Slade, wife of pop star Brian Slade (Rhys Meyers), who set the singer on the road to stardom only to find herself cast aside in the wake of his ego and his infatuation with American rock star Curt Wild (McGregor).

In one of the film's best scenes, set in 1984, Mandy sits in a bar, telling a reporter (Bales) how her relationship with Slade ended after he faked his death at a London rock concert.

Mandy has been stripped bare, revealing the person beneath the artifice.

"We shot that scene at the very end of the film, so we had the potency of the entire shoot to be able to draw upon," Collette says.

"I find Mandy in the 1984 style, even though she appears to be a little sad and washed up, she's so strong and so accepting of herself, at such a comfortable place, and so truthful and so honest, more than any other character in the film," she says.

Collette reflects on the film and her character as she sits in a midtown hotel room. In the film, she is dressed in the threads of the glam rock era, wearing layers of makeup and wigs of varying styles and colors. She is strikingly different — if not unrecognizable — in her three–quarter length jacket and sneakers, with her minimal makeup and her '90s spiked reddish–gold hair.

There's not a feather, bead or sparkle of glitter in sight.

In just a few hours, she'll attend the New York premiere of Velvet Goldmine.

"Tonight is like waving goodbye to the film," she says. "I don't even think I'm going to watch it, because it's too hard to watch. It's really hard, it's really emotional. As important as that period was to Mandy, the making of this film was like that to me."

1. How did you feel about your role as Mandy Slade?

Collette: I was petrified to do it.

1 1/2. Why?

Collette: It's very sex, drugs and rock 'n' roll and I'm not like that. And I leapt into somewhere else and didn't come back for a few months (laughs).

2. What about director Todd Haynes?

Collette: I'll always appreciate that Todd cast me from the inside out in such an aesthetically based industry. He really went for a feeling and trusted me to kind of catch up with the physical transformation and I love him for that.

3. How would you describe Mandy?

Collette: She was the reigning queen, she was at the center of it for so long. She helped create the upsurgence of the glam rock era. She helped create Maxwell Demon.

4. Were you worried that the music and costumes would grab all the attention?

Collette: No. I think I have the most emotionally present and identifiable part, so I was always really aware of it. I can't watch the movie any more because my emotions are too entangled and intertwined in it. So I was very aware of the sadness of the tale and how unglamorous it was, with all of the shiny, camp, hedonistic, glitterized style of it, there is a very serious and very complex emotionally potent tale to be told.

5. What was it like to attend the VH1 Fashion Awards and see Iggy Pop perform in the glam–rock segment?

Collette: Wasn't Iggy amazing? You know what I love about him? He has the most beautiful energy. He's like a child. I think it's really important to keep a sense of innocence, you know, because we're all walking around thinking that we know what we're doing on the planet and we have absolutely no idea.

GOTTA HAVE MY COLLEGIAN!!!

The Collegian is New England's largest college daily!

(and don't you forget it!!!)

THE FINE ARTS CENTER SERIES

Three Americas

The Fine Arts Center and Jazz a la Mode present

Eliane Elias
JAZZ PIANO

This Grammy–nominated Brazilian pianist/singer and her band connect the music of North, Central, and South America to create an unforgettable night of jazz. "Elias understands how to make great music . . ." – JAZZTIMES

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 7
8PM, BOWKER AUDITORIUM

$5 $7 $9

No Fear of Flying

The Fine Arts Center and Hampshire College present

STEPHEN PETRONIO COMPANY
NOT GARDEN
AN EVENING IN MOVEMENT, MUSIC, AND IMAGE

Astonishing, athletic, in–your–face dance from one of America's most celebrated choreographers, Hampshire college–alum Stephen Petronio. The company takes flight in the New England premiere of "NOT GARDEN," its first evening–length work. Don't miss it.

THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 8PM CONCERT HALL

Saint be Praised

ST. PETERSBURG STATE SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA
RAVEL MARTYNOV, MUSIC DIRECTOR
MARGARITA ALAVERDIAN, SOPRANO

The world–renowned orchestra makes it regional premiere as part of a rare North American tour, with an all–Russian program including Rimsky–Korsakov and Tchaikovsky. Guest soprano Margarita Alaverdian, a soloist at the Kirov Opera, sings arias from Eugene Onegin, The Tsar's Bride and Ruslan and Ludmilla.

FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 20, 8PM, CONCERT HALL
PRESENTED WITH THE GENEROUS SUPPORT OF MERRILL LYNCH

WE'RE RAISING THE ROOF! While our new lobby is under construction, you may enter the Concert Hall via alternate entrances. On–site signs and guides will show you the way

The Fine Arts Center, University of Massachusetts Amherst

Call 545–2511 or 1–800–999–UMAS for tickets

TICKETS FOR FIVE COLLEGE STUDENTS

For you and 49 of your closest friends...

$1 OFF 50 MUNCHKINS

DUNKIN' DONUTS®

U–Mass locations only. One coupon per customer, per visit. Offers cannot be combined. Shop must retain copon. LIMIT 1 OFFER EXPIRES 11/11/98

MULLINS CENTER PRACTICE ICE RINK

EAST HEAVEN HOT TUBS

Best Place for a Hot Tub

30% STUDENT DISCOUNT
W/VALID I.D.
SUNDAYS -THURSDAYS
Holidays Excluded

413-586-6843 • 33 WEST ST. • NORTHAMPTON
www.eastheaven.com

DELIVERY HOTLINE
549-0077
Newly Rennovated Sushi Bar!

CHINESE &JAPANESE RESTAURANT

103 N. Pleasant Street
Amherst, MA 01002
(413)256-8923 • 256-8924

NOW ACCEPTING OCMP!

GIFTS from GLASS to GOLD

Find that ruby, sapphire, emerald or handmade diamond engagement ring... featuring Lazare® ideal cuts

Watch batteries, full in–house repair service, pearl re–stringing, appraisals and free ear piercing with purchase of studs. Great selection of earrings!

silverscape designs
GOLDSMITHS GEM GALLERY

One King St., Northampton 584-3324 • M-Wed 10-6, Th-Sat 10-9, Sun 12-5
264 N. Pleasant St., Amherst 253-3324 • M-Sat 10-6, Thurs 'til 8, Sun 12-5

Flutie in as Bills' QB

■ nfl

By Bill Porter
Associated Press

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Doug Flutie has the job — he is the starting quarterback of the Buffalo Bills.

"I know the question: the answer is Doug Flutie," Bills coach Wade Phillips said today.

He added that injured Rob Johnson is now the No. 2 quarterback. "Rob will be working his way back as the backup, and that's where we are," Phillips said.

Phillips said Flutie's performance coupled with Johnson's absence made the decision easy.

The Bills appointed Johnson the starter last winter even before he signed a $25 million, 5–year contract. Flutie earns around $250,000 a year, the NFL minimum.

Flutie, the top–rated passer in the AFC and second in the league to Minnesota's Randall Cunningham, has played since Johnson was injured against the Colts on Oct. 11. The Bills have won five games in a row, including a 26–21 victory over the 49ers engineered by Johnson on Oct. 4.

Phillips said he explained the situation to both quarterbacks and Johnson was handling it well.

"He has showed a lot of maturity that I wasn't sure he had," Phillips said.

Flutie, who led a fourth–quarter comeback against Miami last week, faces the New York Jets on Sunday.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Sneaking in

Cindy Garceau and the UM women's soccer team head to Dayton, Ohio this weekend — after sneaking into the A–10 tourney as the No. 4 seed — and will face No. 1 seed Dayton.

continued from page 16

Jason Elam of the undefeated Denver Broncos is perfect this year over 33 extra points and 10 field goals, including a record tying 63–yarder. Not that the rest of the Rocky Mountaineers are doing badly. Bruising runner Terrell Davis is on pace to break the once–impossible 2,000 yard mark, while wideout Rod Smith is fifth in the AFC in receptions.

John Elway? He's not exactly struggling, either. Hey, 1972 Dolphins, eat your heart out and watch your record.

Koenig's Bold Predictions of the Week:

I've done this twice, and I'm 5–4 overall. Two weeks ago, when the Redskins had a bye, I said that Washington would win its next game because of the "you can't go the entire season without winning" rule, and dag nabbit, the Redskins pulled it off! Otherwise, I'm .500. (Sing with me!) Hail to the Redskins, hail victory, hogs on the warpath, let's win for old D.C.!

Starting off with my homeboys, the New England Patriots, I'll take them to beat the Atlanta Falcons. I'll have to admit Chris Chandler and Jamal Anderson are having a good season, and the Pats' (–4 1/2) 5–3 record might not warrant being favored over the 6–2 Falcons, but I have faith.

With just about everybody tied at the top of the AFC East, somebody needs to fall, and it won't be the Dolphins, who are playing Indianapolis this weekend. Instead, the Jets (–3 1/2) will realize how tough the Buffalo Bills and the AFC's leading passer Doug Flutie really are, and will drop that spread. Who would have thought that the respective conference passing leaders would be two 36–year–old, back–from–NFL–retirement quarterbacks? Go figure.

Elsewhere in the league, the Chiefs aren't as terrible as they're starting to look, and their three–game slide has got to end at some point. That will happen this weekend, as Kansas City travels to play the surprising Seahawks (–3). Derrick Thomas just loves sacking Seattle QBs, so expect a big game out of him.

Finally, I have a little bird telling me to pick the Steelers to cover a field goal of a spread between themselves and the 6–2 Green Bay Packers. Have you ever known Pittsburgh to follow up a failing effort with a home loss on Monday night? Of course not. The Pack is suspect, despite their lofty record, as their running game is limping to catch up with Brett Favre, who's not going to win the league MVP honors again this year.

The problem with a three–point spread is that it's almost a toss–up. The Steelers will have to win this one for me to take out that pesky difference.

Seth Koenig is a Collegian columnist.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Top draw

Lindsay Abott and the UMass field hockey team have earned the No. 1 seed in the A–10 conference tourney and will begin the weekend tournament Saturday against St. Joesph's.

University of Massachusets Theatre Guild presents
November 5, 6 & 7 at 8pm
with November 7 matinee at 2pm
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall, UMASS Amherst

THE WIZ

Ticket Information
$10 General Public / $5 Five College Students, Kids under 12
Groups of 20 or more - $8/$4

Tickets Available at Bowker Box Office 413.545.2511
For more information call the UMTG office at 413.545.0415

Artistic Director: Tara M. McRae
Production Manager: Ari Teplitz
Produced in cooperation with Samuel French Inc. 45 West 25th Street New York, NY 10010
Choreographer: Denise Brown
Vocal Director: Dolores Brown

THE WIZ

This production is made possible in part by a grant from the UMASS Arts Council
co-sponsored by The Daily Collegian

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441

Featuring "ICE HOUSE" $12.99 30/pk.

CIDER JACK $4.99 6PK (EVERYDAY PRICE)

Heineken Regular & Dark $17.99 case bots $9.99 12pk

CONTINUING...
Sams Octoberfest also $4.70 6pk, $8.99 12pk $15.99 case

Kendall Jackson CHARDONNAY $8.99 750ml

Bacardi Limon $8.99 750ml

Belhaven Scotish Ale... $4.99 Pub Const
Your Choice!
BREWERY HILL, PALE ALE, RASPBERRY, LAGER, BLKATAN, HONEY AMBER, CARMEL PORTER
$3.99 6/PK BOTS

Kendall Jackson Sauvignon Blanc $6.99 375ml

• Delivery Available • OPEN 9:00AM to 11:00PM • Visa/Mastercard • All Beers Plus Deposit •

Spirit Haus

LIQUOR SPECIALS
SMIRNOFF VODKA 1.0 $10.99
KAHLUA 1.0 $19.99
Dr. McGILLICUDDY 750 ML MENTHOL MINT SCHNAPPS $11.99
CUERVO 1.0 WHITE/GOLD $14.99
CAPTAIN MORGAN 1.75 LT $18.99
BUCKSHOT 100° 750 ML $9.99

WINE SPECIALS
LAUREL GLEN'S REDS $8.99 EACH 2/$14.99
10% DISCOUNT ON REG. PRICE WINE WITH GRAD STUDENT ID

BEER SPECIALS
LABATT 12 PK BTLS (BLUE, CANADIAN ALE, ICE) $7.99 +DEP
MOOSEHEAD 12 PK BTLS $7.99 +DEP
HEINEKEN 20 PK LOOSE BTLS $18.99 +DEP
MILWAUKEES BEST 30 PK CANS $9.99 +DEP

Heineken "Fantastic Selection of Kegs"

MICRO BREW SPECIALS
MOONLIGHT 22 OZ BTL (ALL FLAVORS) $1.99 +DEP
TASTING Sat. Nov. 7th 7-9
BLUE MOON 6 PK BTLS (BELGIAN WHITE, HONEY BLONDE, RASP CREAM, PUMPKIN) $5.99 +DEP
LOON 6 PK BTLS (PALE ALE, SPECIAL ALE) $4.99 +DEP
WOODCHUCK DRAFT CIDER 6 PK BTLS (GRANNY SMITH, DARK AND DRY, AMBER) $4.99 +DEP
(COLD PLATES, CO2 TANKS, BULK ICE, GLASSES AVAILABLE)

SPIRIT HAUS ALSO FEATURES A FULL REDEMPTION CENTER !

OCTOBERFEST SPECIALS
SAM ADAMS OCTOBERFEST $4.99 +DEP 6 PK BTLS
PAULANER OCTOBERFEST $5.99 +DEP 6 PK BTLS

PRICES GOOD NOV. 5 - NOV. 11

MAJOR CREDIT CARDS ACCEPTED OPEN 9am to 11pm
338 COLLEGE ST (RTE 9) 1 MILE EAST OF AMHERST CENTER ON RTE 9
PHONE (413) 253-5384 • FAX 256-8433

January

Winter Session at UMass Boston

Please send me information about UMass Boston's January Winter session.

Name

Address

City, State, Zip

Return to:
Division of Continuing Education
UMass Boston
100 Morrissey Boulevard
Boston, MA 02125
Fax: 617.287.7922

Make the most of your January break by taking a course or two at UMass Boston. You can choose day or evening classes in a variety of disciplines. Courses meet January 4 through January 28. The undergraduate course fee is $140 per credit, and you can charge your fees to a MesterCard, VISA, or Discover account. To receive a copy of your Winter Session schedule, send in the coupon, email us at continuing.education@umb.edu, or call 617.287.7904.

UMASS Boston

Appears at no cost to the Commonwealth

BILLIARDS 10A BELCHERTOWN ROAD AMHERST, MA 01002 256-8284
Tables
8 9
Thursday Night 7:30
9 Ball Tournament
$10 per person
"Everyday from 3-7pm $4.00 hour pool"
Live Music Every Thurs. Fri & Sat
Thursday - 9:45
"24 Hour Band"

www.Shopping.com
TEXTBOOKS...
You've gotta have 'em, so why spend more than you have to? At Shopping.com you can buy your books online and save up to 45% on textbooks and up to 50% on best sellers....with no waiting in line!
...and with all that money you're going to save, you can pick up any of our Billboard TOP 40 CD's for only $8.97 each!
Then check out our huge selection of computers and over 250,000 computer accessories, supplies and software titles.
the latest video games for your Sony Playstation, Nintendo64, Sega Saturn, Gameboy or SNES
camcorders, stereos, VCR's, magazines, fragrances, sporting equipment, a complete line of furniture and accessories
and all of the other TWO MILLION things you're going to need to go to school!
www.Shopping.com
1-888-LOVE2SHOP
Aiwa CSD-ES226 CD Radio Cassette Recorder $69.95* YOU SAVE $10!
JVC Personal CD Player with HYPER BASS $79.95* YOU SAVE $20.00!
Creative Labs VooDoo 3D PCI 12MB Graphics Accelerator $179.99* YOU SAVE $100.00!
Canon BJC 250 Photo-Realistic Printer $108.99* YOU SAVE $70.01!
Diamond Multimedia SupraExpress 56K Internal Fax/Modem $83.77* YOU SAVE $16.18!
Creative Labs PC-DVD Encore with Dxr2 Technology $181.81* YOU SAVE $118.18!
www.Shopping.com
1-888-LOVE2SHOP
*Due to market fluctuations, prices may vary. Prices do not include shipping and handling.

UM tennis heads to N.J.

Minutemen look to finish fall season with win

By Matthew Frascella
Collegian Staff

As the fall portion of its season draws to close the Massachusetts men's tennis team has one final challenge left before its winter break. Today the Minutemen head to Princeton, N.J. to participate in the three-day Rolex Championships.

UMass has jumped out this season to a 4–3 record. The most impressive aspect of the Minutemen's standings after the fall is that they remain unbeaten in the Atlantic 10 with a 1-0 mark.

"We haven't had the fall that I wanted," said UMass coach Judy Dixon. "At the beginning of the year one of our goals was to get a sectional ranking."

That goal may have slipped away from the Minutemen following their disappointing 5-2 loss to St. John's. When the Red Storm came to Amherst last week UMass was looking to maintain a perfect home record and steal a win from a tennis team ranked in its section.

This three-day event will be the last action the team will see until the spring, when the second half of the season begins in mid-February. The spring lineup features the bulk of UMass' A-10 competition.

"This is the most talented men's team that I've seen since I've been here," said Dixon. "I think that one of the problems with being a young team with talent is that you can take things for granted. Taking things for granted is a big mistake."

Todd Cheney is the lone senior for the youthful Massachusetts squad, which has several transfer students and freshman playing at key positions in the lineup. Cheney has shown great leadership for the team, compiling an impressive record in both individual and double-play.

This season Cheney has stepped into the No. 2 seed and has notched key victories for UMass. Cheney has proven he can remain poised and focused on the road, something the younger players have struggled with.

"I think he is looser partly because he is not playing No. 1," said Dixon. "The burden of playing No. 1 has been lifted from his shoulders."

Last season, Cheney won nine games at No. 1 while dropping 13. In a disappointing loss earlier this season to rival Connecticut, Cheney was the only Minutemen to record a point for UMass.

"At No. 1 you cannot make any mistakes," said Cheney. "You will always be playing against the other team's best."

The second half of this season will test the Massachusetts mettle. With only two home matches, both of which fall at the end of the season, UMass must preform better away from the friendly confines of the Upper Boyden Courts.

A string of 11 straight road matches to open the spring season will force them to focus on the road if they hope to be successful.

Dixon admits that she is concerned about playing on the road. With a young team she finds it easier to pull them together and keep their sights set on achieving while at home.

Their record reflects this — the team is 3-1 in Amherst with its only loss coming to a powerful St. John's team. On the road, the Minutemen are 1-2 with their only win coming in a close contest against Boston University.

The upcoming Rolex Championships should prove beneficial to the Massachusetts team. UMass has taken advantage of these breaks from team play to refocus on winning matches. This strategy helped to prepare the team for two early season victories and their important conference match against Rhode Island.

The team hopes the three-day tournament will take the sour taste of the convincing loss to St. John's out of their mouths and allow them to concentrate on the rest of their season.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN
The Massachusetts men's tennis team travel to Princeton, N.J. where it will compete in its last tourney of the season, the Rolex Championships.

After shortest meeting, NBA situation still at impasse

By Chris Sheridan
Associated Press

NEW YORK — With the NBA season slowly wasting away, collective bargaining talks went nowhere quickly yesterday. The opposing sides in the labor dispute held their shortest bargaining session since the lockout began, meeting for less than two hours as commissioner David Stern seemed to be moving to a divide-and-conquer strategy.

"I believe the people we met with today would like to make a deal," Stern said of union director Billy Hunter, president Patrick Ewing and their attorneys.

"Whether they'll be allowed to or not is going to be another issue," Stern said, naming agents David Falk and Arn Tellem as the main forces trying to scuttle a settlement that would benefit low — and middle-income players at the expense of superstars.

The pointed comments by Stern represented one of his strongest offensives to date in the increasingly contentious dispute that has caused the league to cancel games for the first time in its history.

Another 11 games were supposed to have been played yesterday, and with each passing day the likelihood increases that the season will not start until late December or early January, if at all.

"We estimate that we will pay out over a billion dollars [in player] salaries. And the representatives that sat in the room with us on behalf of those 400 players seem intent to have that billion dollars, along with the sand in the hourglass, just drip away," Stern said.

"My focus is trying to make the deal, not trying to cancel the season. But we're just worlds apart, and NBA players are losing an average of $14 million per game," Stern said.

From early in the day, when Stern and Hunter arrived minutes apart on a chilly morning and immediately started sniping at each other, it was apparent that the mood was negative and the prospects for progress were remote.

Stern began his attack on agents before he even entered the building, while Hunter blamed deputy commissioner Russ Granik for the breakup of the previous round of talks Monday.

Less than two hours later, Hunter and his negotiating team were exiting the building.

"We're leaving quickly because we're not making any progress. We need to back away until at least Friday," Hunter said. "We're just not going to capitulate at this moment."

Stern, Granik and their attorneys then made their exit 30 minutes later.

Stern began his remarks by pointing out that the league had offered increased minimum salaries for veterans, including a $1 million minimum for 10-year veterans, and a gradual phase-in of the union's proposal for an average-salary exception to replace the old $1 million exception.

He also explained that owners want to establish a maximum salary equal to 25 and 35 percent of the salary cap.

"I believe, with good reason, that agents for the high-end players have now declared themselves, and they've declared that any deal that has a limitation that would affect perhaps 30-40 players, even though it would benefit the great mass of our 400 players, is a deal that doesn't deserve to get done. That to me is what seems to have changed the atmosphere of these talks since they ended last Wednesday," Stern said.

Hunter specifically named Falk and Tellem as the forces preventing an agreement.

"That statement is ludicrous," Tellem said. "The union is looking out for all the players."

Falk, whose clients include Ewing, Michael Jordan, Alonzo Mourning, Juwan Howard, Allen Iverson and Stephon Marbury, said he did not take Stern's comments personally.

"I'm flattered they think I'm running the union, but clearly what David Stern is trying to do is tactically divide us — the agents from the players, the high-salaried players from the middle class," Falk said. "This should be a wake-up call to the union to stay unified and not let them divide us."

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
We have over 30,000 pints of fresh ales & lagers.
WE SHARE!!
Thurs- Crash 22 (Boogie Rock)
Fri- Trailer Park (Sweaty Funky Horns)
Sat- Ed Vadas & Fabulous Heavyweights (Blues)
Sun- John Clark Quartet
• Fully Stocked Bar
• Late Night Menu Till Midnight
24-36 N. Pleasant St. Amherst 253-4400

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE
- DISCOUNT OIL -
NORTHAMPTON / HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888
• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

Valley Light Opera
presents
Gilbert & Sullivan's Comic Opera
PATIENCE
•A Show for the Whole Family•
Amherst Regional High School
5 Performances
Friday, Nov.6 & 13 8pm.
Saturday, Nov.7 & 14 8pm.
Sunday Matinee, Nov.8 2pm.
••••Tickets••••
Adults $12.00 • Students & Seniors $9.00
Student Night, November 6, $5.00 K-12, College
Cash • Check • Mastercard • Visa
Discover (Novus)
Tickets on sale at Amherst Leisure Services.
Call 256-4065 for information and phone sales.

OOPS!
• Free Estimates
• Lifetime Warranty
• Auto Glass Replacement
• Car & Truck Rental
North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center (On bus route - one mile from UMass)
78 Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA 549-2880

Steve Madden.
ZANNA
downtown Amherst

You are now in the sports section of the Daily Collegian.
Thanks for stopping by.

Men's and women's swimming and diving win big over UNH

By Paul Teves
Collegian Staff

Both the Massachusetts women's and men's swimming and diving teams came up victorious after their meetings against the University of New Hampshire.

The UMass men's swimming and diving team defeated UNH by a final score of 156–81. Senior Brian Wisniewski won the 200 freestyle in a time of 1:45.76, which helped lead UMass to the win in their recent home opener at Joseph R. Rogers Pool.

The Minutemen won nine of 13 events against the Wildcats in last weekend's season opener. Besides Wisniewski's win, there were several other victories including a win by the 400 medley relay team, which is made up of seniors David Koritkoski and Geoff Gear and sophomores Billy Brown and Matt Andrews. This relay race was won in a time 3:59.24.

The men's team also received win from Bryan Grimes in the 1000 freestyle (10:23.49), Henry Turner in the 50 freestyle (22.39) and Chris Arneault in the 200 individual medley, which included all four styles of racing, in a time of 1:58.77.

The women's team also came through with a win over UNH. The Minutewomen were able to score 143 points en route to beating the wildcats 143–100.

Junior swimmer Elizabeth Risotto set a UMass record in the 200 backstroke with a time of 2:06.43. Risotto broke a record that was seven years old and held by Kiri Binning.

The Minutewomen were also able to steal nine of 13 events. Lia Lamsky earned a win in the 200 butterfly (2:11.58) and Julie Dragon in the 50 freestyle (25.26).

The Minutewomen swept the diving events as Robin Velona won the one-meter competition, while Kim Schadt won the three meter event.

The Minutewomen received a solid effort from freshman star, Anne Dettloff. She earned wins in the 200 freestyle (1:56.94) and the 500 freestyle (5:13.03).

Both Dettloff and Risotto took home Atlantic 10 conference performers of the week. Dettloff also captured the A-10 Rookie of the Week honors. Besides winning the 200 and 500 freestyles, she was also a member of the first place 400 freestyle relay team.

Risotto also broke the UMass record in the 100 backstroke in a time of 59.20, breaking Barbara Banks four-year-old mark.

Both the men's and women's team return to action Saturday at 1 p.m., at Joseph R. Rogers Pool, located in Boyden Gym, against Central Connecticut.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN
Skating for gold
Junior forward, Jeff Blanchard will still be looking for his first goal of the season, when he leads UMass against Harvard this Sunday at the Mullins Center.

UMass men's soccer struggles in '98, Koch hopeful about '99

By Sanford Appell
Collegian Staff

When any team begins its season, it usually has a fairly reasonable idea of how it will fare during the upcoming year.

The Massachusetts men's soccer team was coming off four consecutive winning campaigns with a combined 49–24–5 record in those seasons entering the 1998 grid.

Therefore, it would have been nearly impossible to predict this year's 4–12–2 overall record, 4–6–1 in the Atlantic 10, despite the key losses of Mike Butler and Dave Siljanovski over the past two years.

"We would have figured to have finished 12–4 and not the other way around," Massachusetts coach Sam Koch said. "We just did not catch the breaks early on, but we were clearly a team that was better than its record."

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN
Adam Black led the UMass men's soccer team in scoring with six goals and one assist for 13 points.

Looking back, the season began with such promise, as the Minutemen played to a 0-0 standstill against perennial power Duke in an exhibition match in Chicopee.

However, while the defense remained solid, the offense that was absent in that exhibition never appeared until the last two weeks of the season.

These factors allowed UMass to play closely contested games throughout the season, but the Minutemen were unable to come up with the goals when they most needed them as evidenced by an 0–3–2 overtime record.

The play of goalkeeper Todd Fowler was stellar this season, one of the reasons UMass took so many games to the extra session.

Fowler earned three of the four UMass victories this season, and recorded three shutouts, including a 0–0 draw with Siena, in the process.

"This was a very frustrating season for all of us," Fowler said. "But I knew the guys were still playing hard in front of me, which is one of the reasons I never gave up."

Koch credits the entire team for remaining mentally secure despite the struggles the team encountered along the way.

"This team worked hard all year," Koch said. "And the fact that they put in so much effort despite some of our results says a lot about the character of this team."

The shining moments for the Minutemen did not occur until their final two weekends of play, as UMass captured three of its final four A-10 contests to boost its record.

In that span, the Minutemen defeated La Salle on the road by a count of 2–1, and then swept their final series at home with a 4–1 win over Duquesne and a 1–0 dropping of St. Bonaventure.

Much of the success was made possible by the offensive explosion of Adam Black, who notched five goals in the last four games.

Black, a junior transfer from Cal–State Fullerton made the move up front after Seth Lilburn went down with an injury, allowing him more freedom to attack.

"Moving up front made me relax a lot more on the field," Black said. "I'm glad I was given the chance to step up, and help the team out down the stretch."

With a total of six goals and one assist, Black led UMass with 13 points on the year.

There were other bright spots, such as freshman Fred Kinateder. The Wisconsin native also made a strong push at the end of the season, as he accumulated two goals and an assist for five points, good for second in team scoring.

While it is still puzzling why the team finished with such a poor record, one major factor was key injuries.

Lilburn, one of the major offensive threats on the squad, had been missing in action since Sept. 26 due to a foot injury sustained against Rhode Island.

Additionally, Jonathan Bibb, one of the key defensive components missed over a month of action due to shin splints.

Upon his return over the past weekend, Bibb helped the team to its two victories with an assist and superb defensive play.

Despite a terribly disappointing season, Koch remains optimistic that the program will rebound with a winning outfit in 1999.

"We have some very talented young players coming back," Koch said. "Players like J.R. Pouncey, Mike Ianusz and Kinateder played very well for us, and that is encouraging.

"Hopefully, Black will pick up where he left off, and our veterans such as James Redmond and Todd Baron will help ensure that we contend for the A-10 title."

While an A-10 title may appear unlikely right now, the winning attitude is already in place throughout the lineup and coaching staff.

If the team remains healthy next year, and the core players continue to improve, one may not be surprised to see UMass in the thick of the action next November.

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS always $10.
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256-0733
145 main st. northampton 586-0151

"Reason №4 why you should take my MCAT course."
Our teachers deliver
Only the best instructors teach our courses. Not only are they experts in their specific field, (physics, biology, chemistry, verbal) but they have also passed our rigorous hiring and training process.
Call 1-800-2REVIEW or visit us at www.review.com
Courses held on the UMASS campus! Smith, Mt. Holyoke, and WNEC as well.
THE PRINCETON REVIEW

Goten In Sunderland
Tuesday - Sunday
Tues. Weds. Thurs. Fri. & Sat. 5:00 til close
Sunday 2 till close
Complimentary Photos at Birthday Parties
OF JAPAN
COOKING AT YOUR TABLE
Two Dinners for $20*
Shrimp and Steak Combination includes salad, soup, vegetable noodle, rice, tea & ice cream
Two Dinners for $20*
Shrimp and Scallop Combination includes salad, soup, vegetable noodle, rice, tea & ice cream
Two Dinners for $17*
Steak and Chicken Combination includes salad, soup, vegetable noodle, rice, tea & ice cream
*SPECIALS ARE AVAILABLE TUES-FRI 5-8 PM, SUN 2-8 PM
SPECIALS ARE NOT AVAILABLE AT TAKEOUT
NOW Accepting Reservations for Christmas & New Year's Parties !
Rt. 116 • Sunderland (413) 665-3628
Casual Dress • Call for Reservations • Banquet Facilities for up to 50 People

THE FINE ARTS CENTER SERIES
No 1 Ever at Hyde!
STEPHEN PETRONIO COMPANY
NOT GARDEN
AN EVENING IN MOVEMENT, MUSIC, AND IMAGE
Astonishing athletic, in-your-face dance from one of America's most celebrated choreographers. Hampshire college alum Stephen Petronio. The company takes flight on the New England premiere of "NOT GARDEN," its first evening length work. Don't miss it.
THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 12
8PM, CONCERT HALL
"Petronio's table boasts everything that the [illegible] appetite appears to crave: risk, physical prowess, sensuality, excess, and kinky chic." – The Village Voice
Call 545-2511 or 1-800-999-UMAS for tickets
The Fine Arts Center University of Massachusetts Amherst

安城中国饭店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
we do not use "MSG"
253-7835 or 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst

SPRING BREAK HEADQUARTERS
Heller Travel
Student Travel Specialists, LOWEST student and faculty discount airfares.
HELLER TRAVEL
You just can't get it anywhere else!!
146 Massachusetts Avenue at Berklee Boston, MA 02115- (800) 643-1544 email: heller@berklee.edu

A WORLD OF OPPORTUNITIES
NORTHWESTERN COLLEGE OF CHIROPRACTIC can provide you with an education uniquely focused on the 21st century. Just ask our 3,000 alumni. They are practicing from America to Zimbabwe, as sole practitioners and in interdisciplinary settings. They know that our FOCUS ON EXCELLENCE has earned us an international reputation as a pioneer in chiropractic education, patient care and scientific research. Northwestern is a single-purpose, limited enrollment, private institution featuring a well-rounded, RIGOROUS EDUCATIONAL PROGRAM integrating the basic and clinical sciences, diagnosis, X-ray, chiropractic therapeutics, wellness care and practice management. Our pioneering clinical internship programs, interdisciplinary study opportunities and a state-of-the art student clinic provide our graduates with an UNPARALLELED CLINICAL FOUNDATION. Add our Career Services Center, where we assist our graduates in job placement, and you can understand why our graduates have such a high satisfaction level with their careers. For a personal visit or more detailed information, call a Northwestern admissions counselor at 1-800-888-4777...Or go virtual at www.nwchiro.edu
NORTHWESTERN College of Chiropractic

Mavi Jeans.
ZANNA
downtown Amherst

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ACTIVITIES

CAMPUS WIDE STUDENT TRIP to the Holocaust Memorial Museum in Washington DC. Nov 8-9. $45/$30 with Hillel Activity Card. Transportation & Hotel included. Call 549-1710 to sign up.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

UMass Women's Ice Hockey won again on Sunday beating U-Lowell 4-0. Come see the team play the Connecticut Clippers this Saturday, Nov 7th at 1pm in the practice rink. Guaranteed- Plenty of action and free admission.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

2 bedroom apt for rent. Sunny and beautiful. Right Downtown Amherst. 253-0546.

Take Over Lease 2 bedrooms of a 3 bedroom apartment. On Main St. Available Jan 1. 256-3062.

2 bedrooms for rent ASAP Main St. Bus route. $375/month each. Utilities included. 256-1928.

Take My Lease Two bedrooms on bus line. Call 549-5318.

2 Bedroom Apartment Newly renovated. Very bright. Busline. $795, all inclusive. Stacey 549-6657.

AUTO FOR SALE

86 Toyota Camry Runs great. $1500/BO. 546-4289.

CARS $100-$500 Police Impounds. Hondas, Chevys, Jeeps, & Sport Utilities. MUST SELL! 1-800-522-2730 x4554

COMPUTERS

486 Computer Great For Student Works Good $100. Color VGA $50. (413)584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

CRUISE SHIP EMPLOYMENT- Workers earn up to $2,000+/month (w/tips & benefits). World Travel! Land-Tour jobs up to $5,000-$7,000/summer. Ask us how! 517-336-4235 ext C50011.

Wanted 98 People We'll pay you to lose up to 29+ lbs. 1-703-817-1071.

Personal Care Attendant wanted for a woman in Amherst. 6-9 hrs per week. Call Helen 545-1908 (W), 253-9462 (H).

Earn Extra Cash Routes available in Amherst, Northampton/Florence, So. Hadley, Easthampton delivering The Union News Extra on Friday mornings. Can be delivered before class. Call 527-7125. No collections. Reliable vehicle. Must be 18 years or older.

Calzone Transport Technicians (Delivery People) and Calzone Production Engineers (Kitchen Help). Must be able to work 25 hours a week. Apply at D.P. Dough.

WHMP 99.3 FM is looking for positive, outgoing individuals to interact with the public at promotional events, concerts, and client remote broadcasts. Must be 18+, available nights and weekends, and have a valid driver's license. Send resumes to: WHMP, P.O. Box 268, Northampton, MA 01060. Atlantic Star Communications is an EOE.

Bell Ringers needed part-time for Christmas Kettle Campaign. Flexible hours, outdoors. Nov/Dec. $5.60/hr. 585-8729.

EMPLOYMENT

Disc Jockey needed for mobile DJ service. Willing to train but must have a dependable vehicle and knowledge of current dance music. Call 253-6355.

Best Part-Time Job In The Valley

You don't have to wash dishes or flip burgers for the extra money you need. Become a Clean Water Action organizer and earn $7.30-$9.00/hr fighting air and water pollution. Paid training, flexible schedule, evening and weekend hours. 584-9830.

PIZZA MAKERS NEEDED

Flexible Hours
Now Hiring At Sbarros
Hampshire Mall

Legal Assistants Wanted Spring 1999 Internships with Student Legal Services Office; get hands-on experience in the legal field—work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession necessary— training provided. Deadline to begin the application process is Nov 13, 1998— Contact The Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Waitress Part-Time Make $400 & work 2 or 3 nights. Flexible hours.

Dancers For Upscale Gentleman's Club No experience necessary. Unlimited $$$ Potential. Bikini, Topless, or Nude! Call 413-536-0502

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ For Hire: DJ FOOZ is now booking your next function or party. Call Tim 549-9127.

Lights and Sound: Rave to Dorm Party. Your DJ's or ours. Call BARR Productions (413)737-8561.

FOR SALE

Snowboards: Ride Kildy and Rossignol Race 163. $125 for either or $200 both. 246-6179.

GMAT Bargain! Princeton Review. Prep Class reg. $795 only $600. 259-1051.

FURNITURE

Bamboo Sofa and Chair $70 Kitchen Table with Chairs $50 Call 545-5547, 665-8076.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

We're here to pump... YOU UP! Creatine Monohydrate, Creatine Surge, DHEA, Whey Protein and more from Fitness Workshop delivered right to your door. 1-877-FIT-WORK. www.fitnessworkshop.com

HOUSE FOR RENT

Summer Rentals Cape Cod Group Summer Rentals. Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Call Diamond Real Estate 1-508-477-1900.

LOST & FOUND

Found- Brown leather wallet. Contains UMass basketball tickets. Call Wendy 546-5965.

Lost Wallet- Franklin Dining Commons on Wednesday, 10/28. Reward $$$. Call 256-1928.

Missing cat- grey tiger with white feet and tummy. Call Emily 549-0471.

MISCELLANEOUS

Think Different $500-$1000 part-time per month. No experience needed. Will train. Free information packet. 413-788-9838. cleanair@javanet.com

PERSONALS

Tara: Have you ever been kissed by lightening? 143 -s.h/w

PETS FOR SALE

Rabbit Rescue has a lovely selection of bunnies. Many colors and types as well as a selection of cages and hutches. We can also help with any bunnies you can no longer care for. Call Ellen at 367-0105.

ROOM FOR RENT

2 bedrooms available Jan 1 in a 4 bedroom apartment on Main St. $295 or $275 per month. Call Alison 253-1179 or Katie 253-6566.

Take over my lease in apartment in Northampton. Two nice roommates, 5 min to bus, free laundry. $250 plus electricity. Call 585-8018.

SERVICES

Legal Questions? The Student Legal Services Office offers free legal assistance to fee-paying students. Contact us at 922 Campus Center, 545-1995.

Keg Systems New installations, parts, C02 filled. Call Bryan 586-2452.

On-Line Roommate/Apt Search Service Free Ads. http://members.aol.com/pvroommate/

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst Area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TO SUBLET

Looking to sublet starting Jan 1st. 2 bedrooms in a 4 bedroom Mill Valley Estates Townhouse. Large living room, kitchen, 2 1/2 bathrooms. Call Adam 253-0181 or Jamie 253-0007.

THIS SPACE COULD BE FOR YOUR AD!!

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK 99! Cancun * Nassau * Jamaica * Mazatlan * Acapulco * Bahamas Cruise * Florida * South Padre

Travel Free and make lots of Cash! Top reps are offered full-time staff jobs. Lowest Price Guaranteed. Call now for details! www.classtravel.com 800-838-6411 930 Comm Ave South On BU's West Campus

SPRING BREAK '99 Cancun & Bahamas: Sign up now and get free meals/drinks! Florida, Jamaica, and South Padre available! Sell trips and travel free! Call for free brochure. 1(888)777-4642

SPRING BREAK '99 Largest selection of Spring Break Destinations, including Cruises! Foam Parties, Drink Specials, and Club Admissions. Group Discounts. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-FUN

WANTED

Active Women Needed For Nutritional Study Graduate Research Study in Zinc Supplementation. 18 to 40 years old and exercising 3 times a week. Call Christy 532-2733.

Are you tired of the cold already??

Looking forward to Spring Break?

Get away from the cold...plan a trip to a warm place!!

Check out The Classifieds today!!

PLACE AN AD IN THE CLASSIFIEDS TODAY!!!

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, NOV. 5

Community — There will be a blood drive at the Davis Center at Smith College. 11 a.m.-5 p.m.

Dinner — There will be a gathering of graduate men and women, along with a buffet dinner, from 7-10 p.m. in the graduate lounge on the ground floor of the Campus Center.

Film — Abigail Child will pre-cent her new film Bricole about the urban homeless at 7:30 p.m. in the main lecture hall in the Film/Photo building at Hampshire College.

Forum — There will be a forum on the injustice system featuring former prisoners and families of prisoners in room 174 of the Campus Center at 7 p.m.

Lecture — A Hare Krishna lecture and chanting entitled "How to Get Out of the Clutches of Birth and Death" will be held in the campus center, room 163C, at 6 p.m.

Lecture — Philip Gamble will give a lecture featuring three Nobel laureate professors in Mahar Auditorium at 4:15 p.m.

Lecture — A lecture entitled "Visible/Invisible: Locating Queerness on American TV" will be held from 12:30-2 p.m. in the Campus Center.

Meeting — The second meeting of the Student Affair- Review Committee will be held from 4-6 p.m. in room 417 of the Campus Center.

Movie — A movie about a 20 something black lesbian struggling to make a documentary and come to terms with her life will show at 7:30 p.m. in Mahar Auditorium.

Workshop — There will be a workshop on contraception and safer sex at 3 p.m. in room 302 of University Health Services.

FRIDAY, NOV. 6

Dance — The University Dansatia Improvisation Group will give a performance from 3:15-5:30 p.m. in Hertter Art Gallery.

Hypnotist — "The Amherst-hang Now!," a hypnotist will give a hypnotic performance at the Bluegwall Cafe in the campus center at 8 p.m. Event is sponsored by the Something Events Friday program, and will be followed by the movie "The Big One."

Lecture — As part of the geoscience lecture series, a lecture entitled "Complex Communities and Emergent Ecologies: A Kaleidoscopic Look at Humans and Other Beings In Relation, In Places\" will be held in Morrill II South, room 131 at 3:30 p.m.

Recital — There will be a faculty recital with piano, soprano and more, at 8 p.m. in Sweeny Concert Hall at Smith College.

Service — There will be a Shabbat service at 6 p.m. in the Hillel House. A free kosher Shabbat dinner will follow.

NOTICES

Community — MASSPIRG is announcing Hunger and Homelessness Week. Sign up for the On-Fam Hunger Banquet, the Necessities Drive, the Sleep Out Vigil and the benefit concert in the MASSPIRG office. Call 545-0199 for more details.

Community — UMass seniors who have a 3.85 or higher and who plan to attend graduate school next year should contact Professor Nelson at 577-2611 to discuss Phi Kappa Phi scholarships.

Community — Golden Key National Honor Society nominees are reminded to return membership forms as soon as possible. Deadline is approaching.

Scholarships — UMass students interested in scholarship opportunities are encouraged to visit the Office of National Scholarship Advisement in room 610 of Goodell. Deadlines for scholarships are approaching fast.

Submissions — The UMass Poetry Society is seeking submissions to its anthology. Call Joshua at 546-5823 for more details.

Workshop — A five-week workshop entitled "Women, Food, and Body Image: Rewriting Our Stories, Restoring Ourselves" will be held Thursdays beginning Nov. 5 from 4:30-5:45 p.m. at the Smith College Health Services Conference Room. To register call 585-2840.

Workshop — A workshop for women survivors of childhood sexual abuse will take place on Nov. 7. The workshop include writing, drawing, and movement. In the evening, participants are also invited to perform dances, music, and monologues about healing from abuse. Call 586- 7190 for more information and to sign up.

If you think that shopping a college store means having no choices... Think again. New University Store. Not like a mall... Better.

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	18	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	19	UVC-TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	21	Gavel to Gavel
6	PBS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	23	Sundance
8	UPN/20 Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	25	CTN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
16	WB/New Haven	33	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — NOVEMBER 5, 1998

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEOH	12	Wishbone	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		European Rail Journeys		Mystery! "Touching Evil"		Keeping Up Appearances	Wait for God	Chef!	This Old House
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Promised Land (In Stereo)		Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		48 Hours "Samantha's Choice"		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Promised Land (In Stereo)		Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		48 Hours "Samantha's Choice"		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	★½ "Mission: Impossible" (1996, Adventure)		Tom Cruise; Jon Voight. (In Stereo)		News		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny	Friends	Wayans Bros.	Jamie Foxx	Steve Harvey	For Your Love	News		Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Jesse	Fraser	Veronica's Cl.	ER "Stuck on You" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	6	Home Imp.	Judge-Brown	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	"Raider's Moon" (1998, Drama)	Kate McGrew, Corbin Bernsen	News		Newsradio		Newsradio	Married... With
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy	Friends	Jesse	Fraser	Veronica's Cl.	ER "Stuck on You" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Friends	Seinfeld	Fraser	World a Wildest Police Videos		Shocking Moments				Friends	Mad Abt. You
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Jesse	Fraser	Veronica's Cl.	ER "Stuck on You" (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	Creatures	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		This Old Hse.	Drs. on Call	Mystery! "Touching Evil"		Jewel in the Crown		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Fraser	★½ "Mission: Impossible" (1996, Adventure)		Tom Cruise; Jon Voight. (In Stereo)		News		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Fraser	"Raider's Moon" (1998, Drama)	Kate McGrew, Corbin Bernsen	Mad Abt. You	Mad Abt. You	Fraser		Fraser	Cheers
WTBS	72	Family Matters	Family Matters	Roseanne	Roseanne	WCW Thunder		WCW Thunder		★½ "Revenge of the Nerds III: The Next Generation" (1992)
A&E	69	Northern Exposure		Law & Order "Corpus Delicti"		Biography; Jon Kennedy Sr.		Unexplained "Voodoo Rituals"		Touch of Frost (Part 1 of 2)		Law & Order "Heaven"
CNN	23	Worldview	Moneyline	Newsnight		Crossfire		Larry King Live		Newsstand: Entertainment		Sports	Moneyline
COM	39	John Henton	Make Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★ "The Couch Trip" (1987, Comedy)		Dan Aykroyd;		Gallagher: The Messiest (R)		Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	49	New House	Fix-It-Line	Gimme Shelter (R)		Wild Discovery: Ice Age		Into Unknown	Strange-True	Reel ER (R)		Justice Files	"Why They Kill"
ESPN	46	Up Close	Sportscenter		GameNight	College Football: East Carolina at Cincinnati. (Live)						Sportscenter
LIFE	68	Ellen	Ellen	Party of Five "Life's Too Short"		Chicago Hope "Split Decisions"		★★ "Moment of Truth: Stalking Back" (1995)		Sharma Reed.		New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	70	(5:30) Jenna Coussdown		Fanatic (R)	Beavis-Butt.	Eye Spy Video	Celebrity	Celebrity	Celebrity	Sports		Cat (In Stereo)	Loveline
NICK	45	Figure It Out	Secret of Alex	Doug	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Cousin	Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Happy Days	Laverne	I Love Lucy	Bewitched
SCIFI	65	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Sightings	Star Trek "The Immunity Syndrome"			★★ "Hackers" (1995, Drama)	Jonny Lee Miller, Angelina Jolie				Star Trek
TLC	28	Home Again	Home Again	Trauma: Life	Trauma: Life	Medical Detect	Without Warn.	Rituals of the World (R)		Secrets of the Super Psychics		Medical Detect	Without Warn.
TNT	54	Babylon 5 (In Stereo)		ER "Fevers of Unknown Origin"		★★★ "Tracks" (1983, Comedy)	Eddie Murphy, Dan Aykroyd.			★★★ "Trading Places" (1983)	Eddie Murphy.
USA	29	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Xena: Warrior Princess (R)		Walker, Texas Ranger		★★★ "Red Rock West" (1993, Suspense)	Nicolas Cage.			New York Undercover
HBO	60	(5:00)		★★★ "Never Say Never Again" (1983, Adventure)		Sean Connery. (In Stereo) PG		"Legend of the Mummy" (1997)	Lou Diamond Jr.	Siege-Look		Inside the NFL (In Stereo)
MAX	62	★½ "Major League II" (1994, Comedy)	Charlie Sheen. PG			★ "Cobra" (1986, Drama)	Sylvester Stallone. R	"The Firm Element" (1997)		★★★ "The Firm" (1993)	Tom Cruise. PG-13
SHOW	61	★★½ "Desperately Seeking Susan" (1985)	Rosanna Arquette.			★★½ "Qiqhan" (1998, Comedy)	Woody Harrelson. PG-13			Line's (R)	Rude Awaken.	Red Shoe	Dead Man's

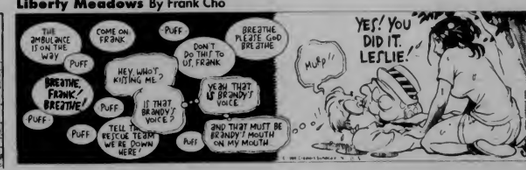
Cathy By Cathy Guisewite

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Non Sequitur By Wiley

Non-Cents By John Zaccone Jr.



Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Liberty Meadows By Frank Cho

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Fiendish Foglios By Brian D. Moses

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — You will find that the attraction between you and an Aquarius native is not likely to come to anything fruitful at this time. Wait your turn!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You may start more slowly today than expected. Take care that you don't let the competition out of your sight at this time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — This is a good day for sharing your feelings more openly than usual. Take the time to reflect on your thoughts and try to put them into words.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — You may have to do less to gain more today. Although the mental adjustment may take more time than expected, you'll have the idea by the end of the day.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — Indecision is a killer at this time. Avoid any kind of insecurity and mistrust as you begin to make a few key choices that could have a tremendous impact on your life.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — You may be in for some criticism today, but you can rise above anything in the way or "routine" naysaying. Evening brings a chance to shine.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — Take the opportunity to relax a little more than usual today. You can still get a great deal accomplished, but remember that "state of mind" is the key.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You'll have much to remember if you simply trust yourself and your own skills. Do the things that come naturally and success will follow.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — A routine endeavor is likely to be transformed today into something out of the ordinary. You'll have to be ready to make last minute adjustments.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — Someone is looking after you today, so you should feel comfortable and protected. You'll be able to try something you might otherwise avoid.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — An attraction is forming between you and someone who shares many of the same ideas. However, make sure you keep things on a rational level.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — You may not be prepared to do what is asked of you as the day opens, but with a little practice you'll be able to come through with flying colors.

Quote of the Day

"Will someone please tell me what an enema is?"

—Overheard

Close to Home By John McPherson

"I tell ya, Helen, I rue the day that I signed us up for those Riverdance lessons."

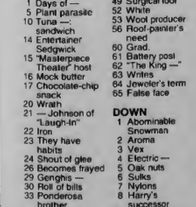
Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

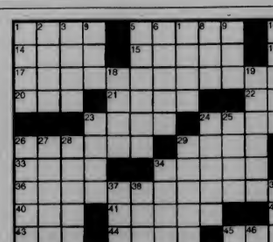
NOTHIN' DUN'

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Casey Kane
Photo Technician	Roberto Delgado
Copy Editor	Ken Mc Donald
Production Supervisor	Rob Snow
Production Staff	D.J. Carey, Bridget Dolezser



ACROSS



1 Days of —
5 Plant parasite
10 Tuna —; sandwich
14 Entertainer Sedgwick
15 "Masterpeace Theater" host
16 Mock butter
17 Chocolate-chip snack
20 Wrath
21 — Johnson of "Laugh-In"
22 Iron
23 They have habits
24 Shout of glee
26 Becomes frayed
29 Genghis —
30 Roll of bills
33 Ponderous brother
34 Licorice-like flavoring
35 Bar brew
36 U.S. Air Force Academy locale
40 Before, in poems
41 Rejoice
42 Sask.'s neighbor
43 Domicile: abbr.
44 Cash drawer
45 Ministers' homes
47 Sprinkle with powder
48 Overtake
49 Surgical tool
52 Write
53 Wool producer
56 Roof-painter's need
60 Grad.
61 Battery post
62 "The King —"
63 Writes
64 Jeweler's term
65 False face

DOWN

1 Abominable Snowman
2 Aroma
3 Vex
4 Electric —
5 Oak nuts
6 Sulks
7 Nylons
8 Harry's successor
9 Last mo.
10 Demi or Dudley
11 Sommer of films
12 Garlands
13 Sock parts
18 Drag forcibly
19 Ballpark event
23 Verne's captain
24 Forerunner of bridge
25 Padlock partner
26 Marathon participant
27 Worship
28 Hollows
29 Small hill
30 Fairies' sticks
31 Seaweeds
32 Writing tables
34 Mature
37 "— to sender"
38 Graph part
39 Bed-and-breakfast places
45 Croquet tool
46 On the Caspian
47 Judges
48 Bamboo eater
49 Vault
50 Wheel part
51 Amaze
52 Lacking money
53 Poet Millay
54 Gets hitched
55 Actor Estrada
57 Pouch
58 — nutshell: briefly
59 Hoover or Grand Coulee

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

SPORTS

Cowboys' gods are smiling down on state of NFL

When I was a little tyke, I wanted to play in the NFL. Sure, I was a 5-foot-6-inch, 100 pounder, but that didn't sway my drive to be one of the best. I ran every day and worked out with my dad in the basement on our rickety weight set.

Seth Koenig

I should've been drinking and driving to prepare myself. New Orleans quarterback Kerry Collins, of "I don't wanna play anymore in Carolina" fame, got arrested for driving after consuming insane amounts of alcohol.

Up-country, Pats' corner Chris Canty got pulled over with open containers in his vehicle.

Lawrence Taylor, one of the best linebackers in history, took his obsession with foreign substances a step further, letting cocaine drive him into bankruptcy, leaving him trying like hell to avoid having the bank foreclose on his $605,000 pad.

Now those are "real" men. Weights are for sissies; just ask the current Cowboys.

I've decided that from here on out, I'm going to devote a paragraph or two to the best defensive back in the league, Lawyer Milloy. Last time we saw our hero, he was putting the hurt on our old buddy Curtis Martin from the Jets and likewise a couple of the Dolphin receivers the next week.

This episode, Milloy showed his versatility in Indianapolis as he made Peyton Manning look stupid by picking off the Colt QB's last two chances to bridge the five-point difference in the game. Now that's clutch, my friends.

On offense, I'll never be convinced that the NFL has ever seen anything like Barry Sanders. The first time I saw the "Quiet Lion" take the field was in 1989 on Thanksgiving Day. Sanders, then a rookie, went nuts for his underdog Detroit team as they upset the Denver Broncos.

He ran for 147 yards on his way to a 1,470 yard, 14- touchdown season. With 872 yards so far this year, he is almost assured to get his record bolstering 10th consecutive 1,000-yard season (knock on wood). Statistically, he is the best ever. Talent-wise, he is the best ever.

Jim Brown was good, but the skinny weaklings he faced are a lot easier to run through than the bigger, better, faster, stronger defenders we have today.

Dom Capers and Norv Turner are now on cloud nine — or, maybe cloud two — as their respective Panthers and Redskins notched wins this past weekend. Nobody is left to joke about now, as everybody has bettered at least *some*body.

A Panther fan can respond to a brutal one-liner by saying, "Hey, not only did we beat New Orleans, but we got them to take the most spineless passer in the league, Kerry Collins, off of our roster. Joke about them." That fan has a decent point. The 'Skins? Yeah, you can still joke about them.

While you're placing Washington and the 'Aints at the butt of your humor, throw in the Eagles, who got clobbered by the Dallas Cowboys on Monday night by a humiliating score of 34-0. All the cocky Dallas players got in on the fun — Michael Irvin, pulled in a score from "sunshine boy" Troy Aikman, and "the mouth of the South," Deion Sanders, took a punt all the way in from 69 yards out. Somewhere out there, Barry Switzer is probably carrying an illegal firearm through an airport and Cowboys football is complete again.

Philly phenom Bobby Hoying pitched two interceptions to "America's Team" (or maybe, "San Quentin's Team" would be better) as part of his 39 attempt, 13 completion day. If Eagles' skipper Ray Rhodes wants to bench Hoying, he could go to tested veteran Randall Cunningham, who... oh, wait, Randall got chased away three and a half years ago. He's a 36-year-old man starting for the 7-1 Minnesota Vikings while leading the conference in passing, but no great loss for the City of Brotherly Love, because they have Rodney Peete on the bench, right? You've got to love sarcasm.

The New York Jets made an intelligent move this week by waiving punter Brian Hansen and signing John Kidd to take his place.

The verdict is coming in on New York's big off-season move: their signing of Curtis Martin. They gave the Patriots' half of next century's roster to get Martin, who has run for a pathetic 3.3 yards a pop and two scores this year. His longest sprint of the year has been 17 yards, which is a terribly impressive stat to justify coach Bill Parcells' personal vendetta with New England owner Bob Kraft.

Gone is perennial 1,000-yarder Adrian Murrell, along with any possibility to draft any talent in the next thousand years or so. Can you say, "Cut off your nose to spite your face," Tuna Boy?

Back to kickers around the league.

Turn to NFL page 11

UMass hoop takes the court once again

Flint emphasizes the importance of fan participation

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

Come one, come all, because this is what you've all been waiting for. Tonight, the Converse All-Stars will visit Amherst for the inaugural game of the 1998-99 men's basketball season.

When 8,000 Massachusetts basketball fans packed into the William D. Mullins Center for Midnight Madness on Oct. 16, UMass coach Bruiser Flint got excited. These people showed up screaming, just to see his squad jog around on the court for an informal workout.

He could only imagine the turnout for a game.

"The fans don't realize how a an intimidating arena can beat a team before they even play," Flint said.

Flint hopes that this year, the Mullins Center will be an arena that is intimidating. Aside from the Converse All- Stars, the UMass home court will be welcoming such highly-respected opponents as Connecticut, Kansas, Temple and Xavier.

First, though, Converse will test the Minutemen, as Flint looks to try out a new style of play in this pre-season contest.

"I think they'll come to see how we look," Flint said. "We play a little different, so people will be interested to see if we're really going to run the ball, or if we're going to play like we did last year.

"We're going to play a little bit quicker. I think it's more opened-up instead of playing fast. We'll press a little bit more, mostly because we have the bodies. We can wear a team down that way."

The Minutemen will use this matchup to determine which players are ready for season play, while making sure that no key players get hurt for any length of time.

"From a coaching standpoint, it gives you a chance to see how your guys play in a game situation," Flint said. "Sometimes you sacrifice the win for that.

"Everybody's going to get a chance to help us. If you're ready to play, you'll get in the game. We've got a lot of guys, but what it comes down to who's ready to play."

Going into the game, however, UMass will sit a number of players in an attempt to recuperate them before the campaign-opening Pre-season NIT begins on Nov. 16.

"Kit Rhymer won't play, he's hurt," Flint said. "Chris Kirkland's a little nicked, so I don't know how much I really want to play him. I want him to get healthy. Ross Burns is hurt. He suffered stress fractures in his legs, so he'll be out until December."

The coach also noted that starting shooting guard Monty Mack will be played sparingly because of a hand injury suffered roughly two weeks ago.

This game will also be a test for the area fans, to see if the support gathered for Midnight Madness would carry over into the regular season, as the intimidating roar of a packed arena can mess with the heads of any visitors, an upper-hand that will prove useful not only against UConn and Kansas, but against Fordham, Duquesne and the Converse All Stars as well.

One reason to attend the game at the Mullins Center tonight will be the presence of a healthy Lari Ketner, whose status was questionable not long ago. Ketner will be full strength as he begins his run for not only a national championship, but a job in the NBA as well.

Ketner is known as a possible top 10 draft choice after his career at UMass comes to a close, but for now, the he will be content to roam underneath the basket in Amherst.

After the long practice season winds down, Ketner and his large front-court mates, Ajmal Basit, Mike Babul, Adam Oates and Ronnell Blizzard will bone up their skills against their first intersquad competition since their NCAA tournament loss to Saint Louis last year.

"It's a good time to practice," Flint said. "After a while you get stale playing against yourself, and you need some other people to come so you can see what you're doing wrong and so on."

The deafening sound of a fired up Mullins Center will certainly add a realistic element to the game, and that is one important element that all of the Minutemen are looking forward to.

The time of year so many people have been anxiously anticipating is now here, and the squeak of clean sneakers on hardwood and the hollow thud of a bouncing ball will fill the ears of thousands of UMass students. That is, if the crowd isn't too loud.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Junior forward Ajmal Basit will lead the high-flying version of the Massachusetts basketball team into its first exhibition contest against the Converse All-Stars.

Meyers, Hogancamp bring experience, leadership to young UMass volleyball

By Paul Teves
Collegian Staff

The story long line is long and difficult, and the road has been difficult to haul for two juniors who have had to lead a team through thick and thin.

The two juniors are Kari Hogancamp and Jill Meyers and the team is the Massachusetts volleyball team, which Hogancamp and Meyers captain.

Meyers and Hogancamp last season were sophomores and played with fellow sophomore Sarah Watters, who was a great complement to the duo. But Watters injured her back last season after having a strong freshman campaign.

The two juniors also lost Leslie Nolan and Michelle Paciorek, who each were seniors. They also lost sophomore transfer Katie Gibbons, from Purdue, who quit earlier this season.

The two junior captains toughest task at the beginning of the year was to take this young team and put together a competitive season in which UMass could challenge for a spot in the Atlantic 10 conference tournament. They have had to keep four freshman focused through the good times and bad times.

"I've gotten a lot more out of Jill and Kari then I ever expected, especially Kari. She's a much better hitter and passer then I ever thought. I didn't expect her to carry the load like she has," Bonnie Kenny said. "Jill on the other hand doesn't care about anything other then helping this team win. She is the star. She hits so well. If Kari and Jill don't play well we don't win."

Meyers and Hogancamp have done all of this. Although the team's record is actually below .500 at 11-13, they have pushed the envelope of the post-season by notching a conference record of 8-6 thus far. Early in the season UMass started with a record of 2-7, and Meyers and Hogancamp became the glue that held this young team together.

"They [Meyers and Hogancamp] were the ones tell them [the other players] to get it done. They got them to play better, and trust in everything and do everything before they're juniors like they were. That's the kind of thing that Hogancamp and Meyers have said to the freshman."

The two have been, by far, the leaders of this UMass team, a team they can finally call their own. Despite the fact that Meyers was a co-captain with Nolan last year, this year she is the emotional leader, as well as a statistical leader, along with first year co-captain, Hogancamp.

Kari and I, our situation here has been unique. We both started as freshman and we expected the program to get better, but the program has always remained young. We've lost a lot of players, such as Katie Gibbons who quit, and others to injury, and sometimes it very disheartening," Meyers said.

Both Meyers and Hogancamp are the only two players on the team to have played in all 93 games of their careers.

"They have been here from the start. They are winners, strong desire and competitive, and you can't teach that," Kenny said.

They have also been a huge factor on offense. Meyers leads the team in kills thus far with 375, while Hogancamp is second on the team with 347.

They also rank one, two in attack percentage, both hitting over .250. Hogancamp has also compiled 30 assists, which puts her third on the team in this category.

Hogancamp is the most versatile player on the team, leading the team with 30 service aces and 395 digs.

Meyers has also tallied great numbers in those categories she is second on the team with 212 defensive digs. She has also recorded 72 blocks to lead the club.

Additionally, Meyers and Hogancamp have been a force as a positive influence in the freshman like Janeen DeMarte and Heather Holtsberg, who have been thrust into the playing situations every day.

"They're getting better and better with each game experience and we hope also that our way of dealing with the pressure on the court is rubbing off on the freshman and sophomores," Hogancamp said. "If the young players see me and Jill getting down on ourselves, they might get down on themselves, so we must stay positive."

"They needed to grow up fast. Heather is a great player, put she has a lot of responsibility as a setter, especially as a freshman setter, she just needs to relax and not put so much pressure on herself," Meyers said.

Both Hogancamp and Meyers are very excited about the potential of playing and practicing with this young team over the next year and half, and building up this program.

"We're not going to lose anyone and we'll have the whole spring to train with this team, all 10 not just five. It will be great," Hogancamp said.

Since the victory over Temple, UMass has been making a charge towards the A-10 conference tourney, in which Hogancamp and Meyers will play a huge role in what they consider one of their last opportunities.

"This year we're tied for fifth, but every team is getting stronger. We have to worry about our team first, and hopefully we'll get into the A-10s," Hogancamp said.

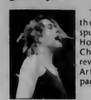
"It [the Temple win] was awesome. We needed a win like that. It was good to see [were not a bad team] and that gave us some confidence," said Meyers. "It isn't going to be easy, we need to maintain that intensity."

The junior co-captains have led the Minutewomen into a position where they control their own destiny. With four of the six games remaining for UMass, against A-10 opponents that are ahead of the Minutewomen in the standings. Meyers and Hogancamp will be pushing the young team to experience their first ever A-10 tourney.

"They [Meyers and Hogancamp] work very hard and they will hold their team accountable, I don't have to expect anymore than I do from them. They're great leaders," Kenny said.

LAUREN POSNY / COLLEGIAN

Junior co-captains Jill Meyers and Kari Hogancamp have led the UMass volleyball team to a current fifth place standing in the Atlantic 10.



Jill Meyers

Kari Hogancamp

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN
Volume CIV Issue 43 New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 Friday, November 6, 1998

Spin–ing a good yarn

The pop band the Spinanes spun into the Iron Horse last night. Check out our review inside (see Arts & Living, page 5).

It ain't easy being Green

First-team All-Atlantic 10 selection Kara Green and the Massachusetts women's soccer team will face Dayton this afternoon in the A-10 tourney (see Sports, page 10).

WORLD

Former Nazi on trial, suffers heart attack

VILNIUS, Lithuania (AP) — A former Lithuanian security chief, charged with sending scores of Jews to their deaths during the Nazi occupation, proclaimed his innocence in court yesterday from a wheelchair.

He was rushed from court minutes later in an ambulance. Doctors said Aleksandras Lileikis, 91, may have suffered a heart attack and the judge postponed the trial until Monday. Hospital officials refused to comment.

The trial, the first Nazi war crimes proceedings in the former Soviet Union, has been repeatedly delayed by Lileikis' health problems.

Lileikis, who has been stripped of his U.S. citizenship, faces genocide charges for allegedly turning over more than 200 Jews to a German execution squad.

"I was working for my nation and my country for all my life and now I am old and weak. But I can still say I did nothing wrong in my lifetime," Lileikis told the court.

Minutes later, his hands began trembling, he started reciting the Lord's Prayer and he asked for more air. His daughter rushed to his side, crying and handing pills to her father.

NATION

Racially charged trial ends with conviction

INDEPENDENCE, Va. (AP) — A white sawmill worker was convicted last night of first-degree murder in the burning death of a black man after a night of binge drinking. The man's corpse was beheaded.

Emmett Cressell, who turned 38 yesterday, had been charged with capital murder in the slaying of Garnett P. Johnson Jr. That charge carried a possible death sentence. The maximum penalty for first-degree murder is life in prison.

The all-white jury acquitted Cressell of a charge of robbing Johnson. Sentencing was set for this morning.

Cressell's racially charged trial ended with no direct evidence that he doused the slightly-built 40-year-old handyman with gasoline and set him ablaze.

Louis Ceparano, who pleaded guilty in the case in May, testified that he was too drunk to recall the slaying outside his isolated, mountainside home just before dawn on July 25, 1997.

Female friends of the two white men told the jury that Cressell and Ceparano planned Garnett P. Johnson from Ceparano's ramshackle trailer, but they never saw who set him on fire or who later beheaded his charred corpse. They offered conflicting testimony on other points.

Louise Anderson, Ceparano's friend, said Cressell took Johnson's watch and warned the 140-pound ex-Marine that they were going to take him outside and burn him on a white cross.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 44 LOW: 29	HIGH: 46 LOW: 27	HIGH: 47 LOW: 27

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 5
Classifieds .....page 8
Comics .....page 9
Crossword .....page 9
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 8
News.....page 1
Sports .....page 10

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Fac–senate hears teacher test report

By Stacey Shackford
Collegian Staff

Dean of the School of Education, Bailey W. Jackson, presented a report to the Faculty Senate yesterday about the implications of the Massachusetts Educator Certification Tests on the University of Massachusetts Amherst campus.

The University has been receiving a lot of negative press as a result of the scores of students who took the controversial "Teacher Test." Reports indicate that only 55 percent of University of Massachusetts students passed the test when it was first administered in April. This rate increased to 70 percent when it was administered three months later, in July.

"We've been charged by everyone ... to report what we're going to do about these scores," Jackson said.

As part of his presentation, Jackson responded to many issues raised as a result of the low scores, and submitted recommendations to secure better test scores in the future.

"First of all, we need to hold the test accountable," he said, expressing concerns about the National Evaluation Systems (NES), the company contracted by the state to create and administer the test.

The company refused to release any information or technical data pertaining to materials contained on the test. Educators were only recently allowed to look at the test for the first time for 45 minute intervals, after which time they were sworn to secrecy.

He questioned how the University can determine what to "fix" with its curriculum when it is "not being given a whole lot of access" to the material on the test.

"They've been telling us that they don't have to release [information] until the fourth test cycle," Jackson said, "which, as anyone knows, is totally ridiculous."

He also explained factors that contributed to the poor performance of students on the April test. Students were initially told the April examination was a trial test, and would not count for their teacher certification. Students were not informed that it would count until a week and a half before the test was administered, at which point it was only announced via the NES website.

Students were more prepared to take the July exam, however, as was the test service, which expended 10 times more resources in the training of those hired to grade the writing component of the test.

According to a study done by the School of Education, many of the students who failed the test were not poor students. In fact, most of them did well in their major field of study, graduating with a 3.1 grade point average. Jackson attributed this discrepancy to an inconsistency between the academic major requirements of the University and the state curriculum frameworks on which the test material is based. He said the University must determine the alignment of major requirements with the state curriculum framework to enhance future student preparation.

While Jackson devoted a great deal of his presentation to the implications of the teacher testing on the University of Massachusetts, he also emphasized the positive performance of UMass students.

Together with his colleague John Carey, associate dean of the School of Education, Jackson reviewed the performance of UMass students on all aspects of the test. The examination consists of a Communication and Literacy Skills test and a range of 45 subject tests. An overwhelming 92 percent of UMass students passed the writing section of the July test, and 88 percent passed the subject test.

Compared to the "pass rates" of students in higher education institutions across Massachusetts, UMass did comparatively well. The only other university comparable to UMass in size and programs that fared better was Boston University.

Student Trustee Elly Court, was impressed with the information provided in yesterday's presentation.

"It was really helpful because it went into individual components of the exam," she said. "What was most striking for me was that the state [curriculum] guidelines and frameworks are so disjointed with the academic guidelines [of the University.] Something needs to be done to address this [discrepancy] right away."

Student dead

University of Massachusetts student Paul Allen, 50, died Nov 4 from injuries suffered in a car accident in Leverett.

Leverett Police Sergeant Jeffrey Gilbert said that at 2 p.m. Wednesday, a vehicle traveling in the northbound lane of Route 63, just south of the Sunderland/Leverett town line, swerved into the southbound lane and struck Allen's car head-on, according to a preliminary investigation. Allen was pronounced dead at the scene.

The driver of the other vehicle was a 17-year-old UMass student from Conway whose name police withheld because of his age. He was treated and released from Cooley Dickinson Hospital.

Gilbert said police are investigating the cause of the accident. It was "unknown" if drugs or alcohol were a factor.

Chaplains and other resources are available to students, faculty and staff through the Dean of Students Office at 545-2684.

–Lorraine Kennedy and Stacey Shackford

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Light and shadow...
Amanda Lang, an junior anthropology major from Amherst college, studies near the Fine Arts Center yesterday afternoon.

Committee to look at several campus needs

By Christie Vincent
Collegian Staff

Members of The Committee to Review the Organization of Student Affairs explained to about 20 people from the campus community what it hopes to accomplish and took some suggestions yesterday.

The committee was formed by University of Massachusetts Chancellor David Scott over the summer based on the advice, he stated in a memorandum to the campus community, that he received after Vice Chancellor Tom Robinson's departure. The committee consists of faculty and administration members, as well as five undergraduate students and two graduate students.

Peg Jablonski, visiting assistant professor of education and chairperson of the committee, opened the meeting by first explaining the purpose of the committee. She said the committee will also look not only at how undergraduate students are affected.

"How [are any recommendations] going to affect graduate students as well," Jablonski said. "The most important question the committee has to consider is, at the senior level, where [authority wise] should the position of vice chancellor for student affairs be?"

In other words, "should the provost be considered at the same level as all other chancellors in the University, or should it be higher?" Vachel Miller, graduate student of education and support staff for the committee, asked after the meeting.

After a silence, Jablonski encouraged those at the meeting to voice any concerns, questions, or problems they had with student affairs. Brian Palmucci of Delta Epsilon and vice president of fraternity relations, said a main problem for fraternity and sorority members at UMass is with the meal plan.

"When new fraternity [or sorority] members are admitted [three weeks into the semester], they no longer need the dinning commons meal plan because they will be eating with other members of their fraternity [or sorority], and students can't get reimbursed for their meal plan. They used to be able to, but they can't now," Palmucci said.

Palmucci also said that Michael Wiseman, director of Greek Affairs, is trying to work the problem out, but is having difficulties.

Mary Anne Gallagher, director of University child care, asked if the committee would address the issue of meeting family needs.

"Not only are there student child care needs that need to be addressed, but family needs also," she said.

After the meeting, Academic Advisor Elaine Parmett of pre-major advising services, said that perhaps the reason why people weren't asking questions were that "because the review is so broad, people don't know what to ask."

"I do believe that any organization can improve, but this [review] has such a broad scope and process. How do you evaluate everything? Where's it going?" Parmett said. "I hope they speak to the community again before they put out the final report."

Miller said that the committee intends to "bring the process of community involvement along," during the review.

Date rape reported

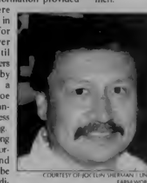
University of Massachusetts Police received a report of a past acquaintance rape early Tuesday.

A female UMass student from the Southwest Residential Area reported to police that she had been raped on Oct. 21.

–Lorraine Kennedy

UFW president speaks

Rodriguez will detail farm workers' lives



By Vamsee Juluri
Collegian Correspondent

Arturo Rodriguez, president of United Farm Workers (UFW), will be giving a speech about the exploitation of farm workers in California, Tuesday at 7 p.m.

Rodriguez's speech is entitled "Stopping the brutal exploitation of farm workers" at the University of Massachusetts Campus Center Auditorium.

Rodriguez will address issues pertaining to strawberry pickers in California, who are required to pick the fruit under harsh conditions and scrutinizing watch of overseers.

According to information provided by the UFW, there have been changes in work conditions for farm workers over several years. Until recently, farm workers were required by growers to use a short-handled hoe whereas a long handled hoe would be less physically demanding.

COURTESY OF JOE ELAN, SHERMAN / UNITED FARM WORKERS

This practice, along with other rules favoring growers and agri-business, will be spoken about in addition to ways the rules have been successfully challenged by farm workers in their struggle for self-representation through UFW. Rodriguez has been involved with the struggle since 1966.

Arturo Rodriguez will speak on Nov. 10 in the Campus Center at 7 p.m.

Inspired by the work of Cesar Chavez, Rodriguez joined the struggle and organized support for the grape boycott. Rodriguez worked extensively in many parts of the country, helping Chavez in his goals of building the UFW as a non-violent social movement.

Rodriguez was elected President of UFW in 1993 has been working for the values that Cesar upheld: non-vicience, volunteerism, public action, "Si, se puede [yes, you can!]", egalitarianism, solidarity and unity, and respect for all cultures, religions and lifestyles.

UFW has improved working conditions for farm workers by advocating for the first collective bargaining agreement between farm workers and growers in the U.S. in 1966, the first union contracts requiring rest periods, clean drinking water and hand washing facilities for workers, and safety measures against exposure to pesticides.

However, UFW is continuing to work towards better working conditions at a time when wages for farm workers remain low and unstable.

In terms of real wages, the average farm worker actually makes less than what he did in the 1960s. Sexual harassment declined greatly due to the efforts of the UFW, but sexual discrimination continues to be widespread as growers prefer to hire only able-bodied young men.

A farm worker, working 10-12 hours a day, earns no more than $8,500 for the whole season, which he must use to support a family. Workers live in sub-standard housing with two or three other families. In addition, farm workers frequently develop chronic back problems and are unable to work after the age of 50.

While these issues concern many, it is the case of the 20,000 farm workers in California that is particularly urgent. Rodriguez addresses the problem because strawberry production has tripled since the 1970s and strawberries continue to be one of the highest income source for U.S. growers.

But Rodriguez's work does not go unopposed. Workers face serious opposition from growers who have created a rival grower-controlled union and used threats, intimidation and physical violence against UFW supporters that were reported in the California press and across the country.

Arturo Rodriguez arrives as part of a tour of the country to build awareness of these issues and to raise support crucial for farm workers.

UMass scientist Simon ensures truth is out there

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

When the new season of the X-Files airs this Sunday on televisions nationwide, the "truth is out there" will be closer to home than most students at the University of Massachusetts believe.

Plant virologist and biochemistry professor Anne Simon has been working as a consultant for accuracy of the scientific aspects in the science fiction series. She has conferred on numerous occasions with the director of the television series, Chris Carter. Up to this point, she has worked on about nine episodes, including the feature length summer box office hit X-Files: Fight the Future.

"I don't write the script; I look to see that the science behind the show is as accurate as possible," Simon said. "Chris sends me the script, and then I comment on how to make the science real."

So, how did Simon end up with a role in the development of the show? One of her high school friends, the present wife of Chris Carter, introduced her to Carter well before the show was even conceived.

"When I first knew him, he was a drop-dead gorgeous blond surfer," Simon said. "Nothing's changed besides the fact he's married now."

When the show first started, Simon was unaware of the fact that her friend's fiancee was the director. Soon she discovered that Carter was doing the series and was looking for help on the scientific accuracy. Simon was ecstatic. She saw it as an opportunity to get the reality and tangibility of science across to viewers.

"I was thrilled to find out it was Chris who was doing the show," Simon said. "I saw it as an opportunity to put some

Turn to X-FILES, page xx

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Professor Ann Simon sits in her office yesterday afternoon.

New Democratic forces seek health care reform

By Terence Hunt
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With Republicans quarreling about election setbacks, President Clinton sought to seize the political agenda with a health-care initiative yesterday as the impeachment momentum slowed in Congress.

Clinton said Americans are "tired of seeing Washington focused on politics and personalities."

Upbeat after the Democrats' surprising victories, Clinton held an Oval Office strategy session with Vice President Al Gore and the top Democrats in Congress, House Minority Leader Dick Gephardt of Missouri and Senate Minority Leader Tom Daschle of South Dakota.

Clinton said Congress' first order of business should be passing the patients bill of rights, a Democratic formula to give people more clout to challenge decisions by health maintenance organizations. The measure was a Democratic battle cry during the campaign, along with higher education spending and shoring up the

Turn to HEALTH CARE, page 2

Acclaimed author, filmmaker Moore to speak at FAC

By Julie Fialkow
Collegian Staff

Filmmaker, author and social commentator Michael Moore will speak at the University of Massachusetts Fine Arts Center on Monday, Nov. 9 at 8 p.m.

Moore's lecture, sponsored by the Distinguished Visitors Program, will focus on current trends in American business.

Known for pushing the envelope on the working class into the mainstream media, Moore has been touring for his latest documentary series, TV Nation.

Most notable Moore directed and wrote the acclaimed documentary Roger and Me. The film was based on his quest to confront General Motors chairman Roger B. Smith as most Flint, Mich. residents firsthand, the devastating aftermath left on General Motors' plant shutdown.

The profits from Roger and Me enabled Moore to establish the Center for Alternative Media, a foundation dedicated to supporting independent filmmakers and social justice groups. The foundation has given out more than $400,000 in grants.

He has traveled to over 50 cities for his promotional tour for his book Downsize This: Random Threats from an Unarmed American.

Moore's other film, The Big One, follows Moore on a three month tour sharing his travels. Moore tries to bring corporate CEO's who are responsible for cuts at Wall Street's expense, paper profits, thus causing layoffs, to the streets to answer to the people.

Moore follows the company that is outsourcing the country, and they would not let 50 percent of the film's profits go to charities in Flint, Mich.

Tickets are available at the Fine Arts Center box office. Admission is free for the UMass community (undergrad faculty, staff), $3 for the Five College community, and $5 for the general public.

The Big One will be shown in the Campus Center Auditorium at 8 PM on Sunday, Nov. 8.

■ health care

continued from page 1

Social Security system.

The health-reform bill failed in the House this year by five votes. Clinton pointed out that Democrats picked up five seats in Tuesday's elections.

While Republicans bickered about the election results and pointed fingers of blame at each other, White House officials were careful not to gloat.

But the elections produced a noticeable change of tune in Washington and strengthened Clinton's lease on the White House. Suddenly, there was more talk about ousting House Speaker Newt Gingrich than in impeaching Clinton. Gingrich (R-Ga.) warded off threats to his position.

Clinton was asked at a photo opportunity if he still felt an jeopardy of impeachment. "That's out of my hands," he replied. "That's up to the American people and the Congress. All I know is I've got a day here and I want to make the most of it."

Reacting to Election Day surveys, Republican leaders hurriedly began scaling back impeachment hearings to bring them to a quick end. House Judiciary Committee Chairman Henry Hyde, R-Ill., said prosecutor Kenneth Starr would be his only major witness.

Clinton declined to talk about the impeachment process except to say that any hearings should be "constitutional, fair and expeditious."

"I think the most important thing is that we've got to go back to doing the people's business," the president said. "The American people sent us a message that would break the cardinal of anyone who was listening. They want their business tended to."

"They are tired of seeing Washington focused on politics and personalities," Clinton said.

Doug Sosnik, the president's new senior adviser, said Republicans' attack on Clinton backfired. "In this day and age, you're not your own party if you run for office and simply tell people what you're against and not what you're for," he said. 1998 showed that "message is far more important than money and that the divisive politics of the '80s are over."

With elections over, the White House is switching from campaign mode to planning budget priorities and the shape of Clinton's State of the Union address in January.

Using that formula last year, Clinton emerged last January with a handful of politically popular proposals that shook off talk of being a lame duck and set the congressional agenda. But he lost that momentum when the Monica Lewinsky scandal erupted later in the month.

Practice makes perfect...

Freshman undeclared major Lauren Ingrem plays the marimba in the Fine Arts center yesterday afternoon.

SHAN MCCORMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Man admits four murders

EUREKA, Calif. (AP) — A trucker walked into the sheriff's department carrying a severed breast and admitted his role in the slayings of four women, authorities said.

Wayne Adam Ford, 36, of Arcata was to be arraigned yesterday on murder charges. He was jailed on $1 million bail.

Details on how the women were killed were not released. One of the slayings dates to 1997, when the torso of a woman 18 to 25 was found floating in a channel near Eureka, investigators said.

The breast was from another victim, who was killed recently and was a stranger to Ford, Sheriff Dennis Lewis said.

Collegian News:
where it's at!!!!

BUB'S BAR-B-Q
'Pig Out In Style'
RIBS
FOR THE PAST 14 CONSECUTIVE YEARS
BY THE ADVOCATE - (413) 548-9630

WALL, BARRIER,
BARICADE.....
HELANEN
UMass
VS. HARVARD
Sunday 5 P.M.
@ The Mullins Center
Tickets Still Available
NCAA
Hockey

University of Massachusets
Theatre Guild presents
November 5, 6 & 7 at 8pm
with November 7 matinee at 2pm
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall, UMASS Amherst
THE WIZ
Ticket Information
$10 General Public / $5 Five College Students, Kids under 12
Groups of 20 or more - $8/$4
Tickets Available at Bowker Box Office 413.545.2511
For more information call the UMTG office at 413.545.0415
Artistic Director: Tara M. McRae
Production Manager: Ari Teplitz
Choreographer: Denise Brown
Vocal Director: Dolores Brown
Produced in cooperation with Samuel French Inc.
45 West 25th Street
New York, NY 10010
THE WIZ
This production is made possible in part by a grant from the UMASS Arts Council
co-sponsored by The Daily Collegian

school's in session EVERY FRIDAY NIGHT @ THE PUB
HOUSE 101
school's in session EVERY FRIDAY NIGHT @ THE PUB
the best in underground house music provided by growroom dj's:
HUSH & BON BONS
21+ info lines:
the pub 549.1200
growroom 549.9296

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Mike Messaros • Photos by Brian McDermott

What are your plans for this coming Wednesday?

"Homework, study. I have to — I have exams coming up."

Leona Vong
Northeast
Education

"Just another day... I'll probably just show up for classes. I'll be the resident idiot of campus. Oh, whatever... it's the truth."

Ross Swofford
Webster
Pre–Communication

"Sleeping. Then I have to go to work."

Shandra Richardson
Coolidge
Apparel Marketing

"I'll probably just come here. My dad's a professor."

Ethan Callan
Easthampton
5th Grader

"I don't know... Just hang out with my friends. Might go hiking; I've been staring at Mt Tom for a couple of weeks."

Dave Wyckoff
Easthampton
Mechanical Engineering

"A day off... that's right. I'll be sleeping late, watching 'The Price Is Right...' We have to honor this country's veterans. Maybe I'll see one on TV, say 'Hey, I have a day off because of you.'"

Angela Tassinari
Dickinson
Chemical Engineering

Nike, others sign sweatshop deal

By Verena Dobnik
Associated Press

NEW YORK — A White House task force that grew out of the Kathie Lee Gifford sweatshop scandal has signed a pact with employers like Nike and Reebok to protect workers at overseas factories.

Human rights groups and a union sharply criticized the agreement — which would still allow employees as young as 14 to work 60-hour weeks, often for less than $1 a day.

President Clinton praised the deal, calling it a "historic step toward reducing sweatshop labor around the world."

Under the accord, American manufacturers pledge not to do business with companies that use forced labor or require employees to work more than 60 hours a week.

Companies will prohibit hiring children younger than 15 except in countries where 14-year-olds can work legally. Contractors will be required to pay the minimum wage mandated by local law or the prevailing industry standard, whichever is higher.

A watchdog group, the Fair Labor Association, will oversee compliance and certify outside monitors to investigate factories. Gifford did not return several messages yesterday seeking comment. The White House Apparel Industry Partnership was created in 1996 after it was discovered that Gifford's clothing line was made in Honduran sweatshops.

Michael Posner, executive director of the Lawyers Committee for Human Rights, called the monitoring "a first step in establishing accountability that will change how the industry operates. The reality is, minimum wages are generally not high enough."

The agreement follows "recognized worldwide standards, not American standards," said Roberta Karp, co-chairwoman of the task force and general counsel for Liz Claiborne, whose apparel is made in 30 countries.

■ x-files

continued from page 1

real science in front of people."

Simon has done everything from trying to concoct possible alien life forms, to thinking about how forms of viruses can be transmitted from plants to humans.

As to the science of the series, Simon feels that the show still has the element of real-life understanding of the mysteries of science.

"Even though the basis of what they're studying is not real, the procedures they go through are exact," Simon said.

"It'll [the season premire] explain where the reptilian creature and aliens came from," Simon said. "Dana Scully will also find out how she's been infected by the alien organisms."

Dr. Simon is working on writing a book on "the real science behind the X-Files," which she hopes will be out the fall of next year. Also, she plans on trying to get Carter to visit UMass.

Glenn's wife is relaxed, but anxious for his return

By Pauline Arrillaga
Associated Press

SPACE CENTER, Houston — John Glenn's wife has the chewing gum ready for his return, and he said today from space that he knows she appreciates that he and his crewmates are doing "a lot of good work up here."

Annie Glenn and their two children met with reporters this morning for the first time since the flight began a week ago today. They said he looked great — happier than they had ever seen him and younger looking, too.

"All I can tell you is I feel 100 percent better than I did one week ago at this time," said Mrs. Glenn. "I was scared. I was really excited for John, but now I can say day after tomorrow I'm going to be able to touch him. That's very, very special to me."

Mrs. Glenn held up a pack of chewing gum — the last thing her husband gave her before rocketing away. She said the whole family will chew the pieces once he's back. The gum is a Glenn tradition; before he blasted off back in 1962, Glenn told his wife he was "just going down to the corner to get chewing gum."

Discovery is scheduled to return to Earth at midday Saturday. In a news conference this afternoon, his first with the entire crew, Glenn said he misses his wife of 55 years and the rest of the family, but wouldn't mind another week in orbit.

"It's a long time there on the ground for them to wait. But we're doing a lot of good work up here," he told reporters. His wife "knows that... and appreciates the purpose of what we're doing here. So we'll be home shortly, just a couple more days.

Also on tap for later today is a conversation with Vice President Al Gore.

On Wednesday, the 77-year-old astronaut traded a few good-natured barbs with late-night comedian Jay Leno.

"Have you ever threatened to turn the space shuttle around and go home, Senator Glenn, if these kids don't behave themselves?" Leno asked, referring to Glenn's much-younger crewmates.

FOR the EDUCATION and RESEARCH COMMUNITY

OVER ONE MILLION OF THE BEST MINDS IN AMERICA HAVE ALREADY CHOSEN THE BEST RETIREMENT SYSTEM.

TIAA-CREF.

When it comes to planning a comfortable future, America's best and brightest turn to the expert: TIAA-CREF. With over $230 billion in assets under management, we're the world's largest retirement system, the nation's leader in customer satisfaction,* and the overwhelming choice of people in education, research, and related fields.

Expertise You Can Count On

For 80 years, TIAA-CREF has introduced intelligent solutions to America's long-term planning needs. We pioneered the portable pension, invented the variable annuity, and popularized the very concept of stock investing for retirement. In fact, we manage the largest stock account in the world (based on assets under management).

Today, TIAA-CREF can help you achieve even more of your financial goals. From tax-deferred annuities and IRAs to mutual funds, you'll find the flexibility and choice you need, backed by a proven history of performance, remarkably low expenses, and peerless commitment to personal service.

Find Out For Yourself

To learn more about the world's premier retirement organization, talk to one of our retirement planning experts at 1 800 842-2776. Or better still, speak to one of your colleagues. Find out why, when it comes to planning for tomorrow, great minds think alike.

Visit us on the Internet at www.tiaa-cref.org

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.

*DALBAR, Inc., 1997 DeGoot Contributor Excellence Ratings. Past performance is no guarantee of future results. CREF certificates and investments in the TIAA Real Estate Account are distributed by TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800 842-2733, extension 5509, for the prospectuses. Read them carefully before you invest or send money. 8/98

© 1998 TIAA-CREF 730 Third Avenue, New York, NY

The Distinguished Visitors Program
Proudly Presents:

MICHAEL MOORE

"Downsize This: Random Threats from an Unarmed American"

Monday, November 9th, 1998 at 8:00 pm Fine Arts Center
University of Massachusetts- Amherst
Free for UMass Community, $3 for Five College, $5 For General Public

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Magic or not?

Okay fine, I'll admit it: I was one of the masses who watched "Magic Secrets Revealed" the other night. In fact I was also one of the bone-heads who watched the other three specials that the same masked magician performed. It continues to amaze me how crappy the content of television is, yet I am entertained by shows like "Cops" and "The Sally Jesse Raphael Show."

I sat from 9 p.m. to 10 p.m. on a Thursday night and watched a guy show me how to perform large scale illusions. After all, there may be times in my life where I need to escape from an old car that is going to be crushed by a huge block of concrete, while I am in a body bag in the back seat with my hands and legs shackled. One never knows.

The main draw to Thursday's show was that this masked magician was going to reveal his true identity to the world. Basically, I was looking to see the world's biggest jerk, because that guy has quite possibly ruined the lives of crappy magicians everywhere. David Copperfield may actually have to change his act for the first time ever.

Wait! David Copperfield may actually have to get a haircut for the first time ever because he bears a striking resemblance to the masked magician, Valentino, who revealed his identity that night.

Not only was the show a waste of an hour, but who the hell is Valentino, besides a dead man? My guess is that Valentino was enraged after being rejected for a network magic special so he trotted over to Fox and said, "I am a complete sellout who specializes in back stabbing. Can I have a show?"

I have to give Fox credit because if I were one of those network executives I would have been afraid that some pissed off magician would make the building disappear. Then again, Valentino probably showed them how to do it during his job interview.

So as I sat and watched the masked magician do his tricks I came to a stunning revelation. After spending a total of four hours of my life watching this idiot, I discovered that he doesn't do anything. The man did absolutely nothing for an hour last Thursday night.

All sorts of trap doors and dummies were used, and the one trick... sorry, illusion, he performed that could have actually caused bodily harm, his assistant was the one in danger! I think Valentino's name should be changed to "Valentino, master of the domain of all things crappy." The trouble is, the show went down from there.

In typical fashion, there was a really super cheesy host who also doubled as the commentator. Plus there were the "assistants" who looked like they were removed from the set of "Night Nurses 7." Surprisingly they were more talented than Valentino himself, mainly because they set stuff up. I think the show should be renamed "Underpaid Stage Hands Save Magician's Ass Part 4."

The one thing that Valentino seems to be good at is hiding. He hid in, on or around literally dozens of things one would never expect him to hide in like tool chests, little rolling carts, and even a secret room. Every time there was an illusion our hero would do pretty much the same thing. He was put into an inescapable situation, and then suddenly he would escape.

The funny thing is that he never actually did anything, he slipped out the side, or the bottom, or the top of every trick. All these tricks are brutally easy to perform, and maybe that is why the magicians were so mad when the illusions were revealed.

> "Not only was the show a waste of an hour, but who the hell is Valentino, besides a dead man?"
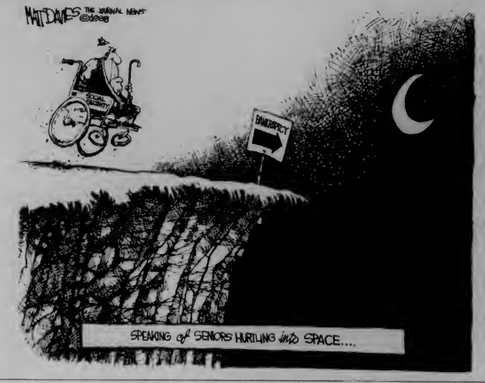
>
> Brian Lohnes

Unfortunately, I now know that David Copperfield, Lance Burton and Penn and Teller are all a bunch of frauds. I'll admit it: I once believed in magic, and it's a lot more fun that way. If I knew the way this stuff worked it wouldn't be any fun, and that's what has happened. For me, magic is now a simple chain of logical events, and in my opinion that really sucks.



If there is one thing that magicians are good at, it is using fog, cheesy music and weird lighting to create a really odd and strangely frightening setting for their illusions. In addition, every trick involves some kind of caressing and touching. What's up with that? I can deal with the fog thing, but the sex thing I just can't handle.

I don't really know what the weird lights, music, and touching have to do with it all, but I can only assume it is for entertainment. If this is true, I would rather be entertained at Billy Bob's Rabid Dog Petting Zoo and Gift Shop. It would be more interesting and a hell of a lot more entertaining than watching some cloaked weirdo run around in the fog.

Still, there are some entertaining things one can only hear during a magic show. For example, you will hear things like: "Now he will suspend from this 30-foot steel tower above the flaming spikes." Did you hear that? Flaming spikes! That is the reason I watch these shows.

Guys, in general, watch these shows because there are flaming spikes, cars getting demolished, people getting their heads chopped off and beautiful women running around. If there is one thing about magic that won't change it is most likely that there are going to be more idiots like Valentino spilling the secrets of magic. Always remember though, there are other ways to make people disappear besides magic. Just kidding, of course.

Brian Lohnes is a UMass student.

Hell on Earth

Well, much to the chagrin of the UMass community, he's back: the cross-wielding, foul-mouthed savior with the funny signs. It's strange that I was moved to actually write about this because just yesterday, I was asked what I wanted to write about.

I had hoped to pick from a list of topics such as "The Elderly and Their Use of the Possessive Tense," or "Fall Sorority Fashion," and I was poised to write extensively about why elderly folks insist on using the possessive tense when referring to businesses (for example, the KMart's or the Media Play's). I didn't want to be cliched and write about that fella with the cross who was here a few weeks back. But as he returns to campus this blustery day, so begins my tale of hypocrisy...

This issue was obviously quite inflammatory, yet I didn't want to be sucked into writing about the apparent idiocy of The Savior and His holy band of cohorts. I do believe in a higher power, and this power tells me to ignore the fella and the fact that he has nothing interesting to say.

> "I will scream into his ear the name of a fun, new alcoholic beverage: "Hot sex! I had 10 shots of hot sex!"
>
> Scott Metheis

I am not advocating ignorance in general, yet I still feel that my initial assessment of the situation was correct since I believe that filtering out his foolish words will bring no physical harm to anyone. My aversion to being cliched and ignoring the topic caught up with me and bit me in the rear when a boy about eleven years old handed me a pamphlet while chanting, "You are all going to hell."

How can I ignore this? How can anyone? Remember the many "Superfriends" episodes when our crew at the Hall of Justice would be brainwashed and turned to the other side?

Well, here he was, a subject in one of Bizarro's experiments, and I wanted to grab him and whisk him away to a magical place where children climb trees and ride bikes, a place where children can enjoy being children. Unfortunately, however, I was disturbed to find that I agreed with him.

I believe that hell exists: it is my hell. And if this fella can have a hell, why can't I have a hell? My hell consists of one big frat party where everyone pukes on each other and gets flat tires on their fathers' BMWs — and there's no spares in town. They just sit there, honking their horns and doing funnels.

My hell is where you encounter someone from a class of yours and ask him or her how their weekend was, and they begin to list the brands and quantity of all the liquor they consumed. Example: "Oh, man it was $!!#! awesome, I had like ten shots, I started on Goldschlager, and then had about three or four lager shots, and some apple pies, I was cocked!" Great. Nice job.

In my hell, books will be judged by their covers, and a panel of judges from the hippest sorority will judge you by the clothes you wear. In my hell, you will be required to reason with pretentious fools on a daily basis, who firmly believe in their miraculous ability to constantly speak the truth.

Yes, my hell is here on Earth. It's right here at UMass. My hell has the same entrance criteria as The Savior with the blue sweatsuit's hell: be a college student. I believe now that I was, in fact, quick to judge. My hypocrisy knows no limits, for I passed judgement on Our Savior's blue comfy sweatsuit (in a sly and passive way) as well as his intentions. For he shall save us, this Man in the blue suit... he shall show us the promised land.

That's another thing that happens in my hell, you are outfitted with a comfy blue sweatsuit. As the vestment of Christ was nothing but a white robe and sandals, the vestment of our new Savior will function similarly as a futile shield from the elements on this cold November day. And our azure vestments in my hell will trap the heat and exacerbate our suffering.

But how shall I diagram my plan for hell on earth? I will begin as today began, walking to class on a cold day. But on this day, I will be the anti-savior! I will prove to the man in the blue comfy sweatsuit that I am more worthy to wear his blue uniform of damnation than he is.

However, before the day begins, on the eve of this wicked day, I will attend a raging frat party, yet I will not puke! I will save the juices of my bowels for the day of atonement. I will awake hungover and quickly eat two peanut butter and rotten banana sandwiches, followed by warm, rancid orange juice (the contents of my broken fridge). I will then seek him out and throw up on him. I will slash the tires of his 72 Malibu and steal his spare.

While he is writhing around in my bile, I will tell him, with the same loud voice in which I proclaim my word from the mountaintops, the list of liquor that I consumed on the eve of the day. I will scream into his ear the name of a fun, new alcoholic beverage: "Hot sex! I had 10 shots of hot sex!"

I will then berate his clothing of choice, while letting him know that my word is the truth! As a final way to finish him off and secure my place as Satan's steal his child prodigy and take him to a playground.

This new day will be marked by evil celebration and vomit everywhere. It will be known as the Day of Reckoning. Beware fellow UMass students we are going to hell... my hell.

Scott Metheis a UMass student.

God's open mind

There are people in today's society who have no idea what true love is. Now, I'm not talking about the love between man and woman, but the love we should have for mankind, sometimes referred to as "brotherly love."

Unfortunately, I have heard opinions on campus which did not express any belief or understanding about the love of God, the issue of God's love to us and how true Christians should continue to practice the same love toward all of God's children.

> "Nowhere in the Bible can you find a passage stating that God hates people."
>
> Reggie Price

The murder that happened to the gay man in Wyoming was unfortunate and sad. What was even worse for me was reading that a minister said that God hates gays. There were and still are other radical Christians who continue to publicly humiliate and embarrass those people who have chosen to live a lifestyle different from theirs.

How embarrassed I felt to not only be a born-again Christian, but also a minister! How and why would someone distort the Holy Word of God for the sake of exploiting other people's wrongdoings?

If we all know our Bible, (I feel like preaching), we all know the story of Sodom and Gomorrah. As wicked as the city was, God did not deal with that city till He felt it was time. Even when He was ready, there were still some souls who needed to be rescued first.

Jesus reminds us that in the last days of the world, things would be just like Sodom and Gomorrah: men are going to love themselves more than they love God; men and women will turn from their natural affection for each other and turn towards each other. Given the Bible, it should be no surprise that God hates the gay and lesbian lifestyle. However, God only hates things that go against the Word of God, not people.

Children of God, let's wake up!! We are living in the last days, and the things we are seeing and experiencing have been prophesied over and over in the Bible. This is no time to focus on individual sins as opposed to trying to lend others to Christ. How can the others see the light, if there are those whose lights are dim or completely off?

Nowhere in the Bible can you find a passage stating that God hates people, especially those that have turned their backs on Him. God only hates the sins of the people He created. Remember Job? Remember when the sons of God presented themselves? Who else came? That's right! Satan was there also.

Now if God had a reason to hate anyone, I'm sure Satan is His No. 1 choice. God allowed him back into heaven for a short time. Even though God had put him out of Heaven, he still allowed Satan in His presence, and even had some conversations with him!

It's time we take our focus off of certain sins, and realize that all of our bad choices are sins in God's eyes. So it doesn't matter if you steal, murder, or rape; or if you are a gay or a lesbian; or if you cheat on your married spouse; or if you have hatred in your heart, it's all sin. None of us are perfect. While we tend to point fingers at others, we ourselves are covering up our own faults, hoping no one ever finds out. Let's not forget the place where God has brought us.

For the second time this semester, there were people outside the Student Union with signs telling us that we are destined for hell, that's what college is preparing us for, and so on. The last time I checked, college prepares you for life in the real world, not heaven or hell, which are life in the spiritual world. We should know the difference and be able to teach people better or not say anything at all. There's enough confusion in the world; let's not add Biblical principles to it.

Here are just some of the Christian principles. For one to love one another, just as Christ loved you. If it wasn't for someone praying for us and God's grace, we would be in the same situation, or worse, than others are in today. If at all possible, let's try to live in peace with all humanity. All of God's people say: Amen!

Reggie Price is a UMass student.

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor. But please remember:

- Letters must be typed and signed.
- No more* than 400 words long
- They must include name, address, and phone number for confirmation purposes.
- The Collegian reserves the right to edit letters for length, clarity, and style.

They can be submitted by mail to Ed/Op Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst MA 01003; by email to our new account at: letters@oitunix.oit.umass.edu; or by fax to (413) 545—1592.

In the words of Voltaire: "I do not agree with what you have to say, but I will defend to the death your right to say it, so write for Ed/Op."

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor-in-Chief Position Vacant Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
Steve Salerno Jr. Advertising Manager David Parmenter Advertising Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Laura Forster Developing Nations Editor
Mike Messaros Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Co-Jewish Affairs Editor
Morgan Tobor Co-Jewish Affairs Editor
Heather Lei Guzzetta Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jill Carroll News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylanski Sports Editor
Aliana E. Todman Women's Issues Editor
Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager
Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Mojerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

The Spinanes rock gently at the Iron Horse

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Pop-rockers the Spinanes enchanted the crowd at the Iron Horse Wednesday night.

By Mike Messaros
Collegian Staff

The Spinanes
Iron Horse
Nov. 4

The moment of truth came halfway through the set, when Spinane Rebecca Gates dismissed the rest of the band for what she called the intermission section of the program. As the band slipped off without even trying to be clever or smooth about it, Gates fumbled behind the equipment for a new guitar, chatted with the audience and asked for requests. There was nothing showy about it, she made no pretenses about how clumsy the transition was. It typified the intimate atmosphere of the concert.

She then launched into "Hawaiian Baby," and the song had a gentle, fragile quality that the audience loved, and they sat in stoned silence, waiting on every word. They sat on the floor, on chairs in groups at tables, keeping quiet as she sang alone about Hawaii, postcards and finding a mailbox nearby.

There was something about the live setting, and the solo version of "Hawaiian Baby," that amplified the songwriting skill that Gates possesses. Songs like excellent "Lines and Lines" and "Kid in Candy" were blessed with a certain urgency and energy that could have been lost in the translation to stage.

On the albums, these songs, as chock full of poppy goodness as they are, rely on tensions and subtle details that could be lost in the live setting. But the Spinanes preserved these things by simply injecting live-setting energy into the songs. Songs like "Noel, Jonah and Me" and "72-74" had an infectious bounce to them.

Gates was in command of the stage, wearing dark pants and a black tank top. Her voice was beautifully showcased during the beginning of "Leisure Run" towards the end of the set. "When are you coming 'round?/ Even for a day of leisure," she sang, almost a cappella at the start of the song.

And the band kept things fun. One of the worst things about concerts is when the band refuses to acknowledge the audience and refuses to throw any surprises into the mix. The Spinanes, during "Kid in Candy," deftly inserted a piece of a Monica song into the middle, drawing applause from the audience.

Between songs, she regularly entertained the crowd with stories, like about getting a prank marriage proposal from the Supersuckers in Germany, and about her various dreams about talking to rock stars ("And just to let you know, Keith Richards is not leaving the Rolling Stones").

Joined by her band, which included ex-Chisel leader Ted Leo on guitar, she played through their catalogue, drawing on all three albums, but focusing on their newest album, Arches and Aisles.

The band played tight, even though Gates messed up at the beginning of "Kid in Candy," just like everything else that night; she laughed it off, admitted "I messed that up," and started the song at the next measure.

In the end, Gates was left alone again with her guitar and voice, searching to find the words to "Sunday," a song off of the Spinane's first album, Manos. Struggling with the words and the lyrics, she took a moment to collect herself, rifling through chords and mumbling words, grinning at the ceiling in disbelief. "Yeah, I'm a real professional," she said, smiling at the audience, before picking up the song where she left off.

The thing is, it wasn't very professional. It's nothing that the Rolling Stones would allow to have happen on their mega-tours. But that's not what the night called for. To see an artist so talented, yet so fragile and human, was something that made seeing them in concert so worthwhile.

Angkor Dance Troupe mesmerizes at the Augusta Savage Gallery

By Shay Sullivan
Collegian Correspondent

ANGKOR DANCE TROUPE
Augusta Savage Gallery
Nov. 4

There's no reason why the cozy little gallery in the New Africa House should bear the word savage in its title. Its activities are quite to the contrary.

Take for example last Wednesday's Angkor Dance Troop performance. Adjectives like beautiful, graceful and colorful all come to mind. In fact almost any word ending in "ful" would suffice (except of course awful!).

Dressed in intricate costumes of every color and texture imaginable; the dancers were a feast for the eye, and that was before they even started dancing!

For those of you behind on your Cambodian history studies, Angkor is Sanskrit for Capital. The troupe has assumed the title to pay respect to the roots of their dance tradition, as the style of dance was performed solely for the Cambodian royalty for hundreds of years.

Although a long way from home — the group was founded in Lowell — the distance is bridged by this proud people's skill. To envision the dancing itself, conjure up a wonderfully garbed contortionist moving to a pseudo-Indian tempo.

The dancers hyperextend joints, accomplish extraordinary feats of balance, and make more hand gestures than an Italian politician fresh from three cups of cappucino. The resulting ambience in the audience is an aura of relaxation and mesmerization.

Although sufficient in their own right, the dances also tell stories, ranging in theme from timeless struggles to humorous skits representing Cambodian culture.

In one such story, the Coconut dance, three girls and three boys with coconut shells in hand whirl around, playing a complicated version of Pattycake. The goal is for the male to touch his piece of shell to the female's shell rhythmically and repeatedly. One can't help but wish courting were that easy.

The most startling aspect of this particular performance was the age of those involved. Out of maybe a dozen dancers only two were adults, yet the troupe members carried themselves with the air of professionals.

All in all, a very un-savage performance. Maybe the gallery is named on the Greenland principle. Rumor has it that when explorers discovered a new and beautiful island, they named it Iceland to deter future settlers, and the barren lands were called Green.

Aptly named or no, the Augusta Savage gallery in Central is a great place to go to help push you over that Wednesday hump.

"Law & Order's" Noth returns

By Frazier Moore
Associated Press

Reprising the role he played for five years on "Law & Order," Chris Noth is back as Detective Mike Logan. Less surprisingly, Logan is investigating a murder. Least surprising of all, his investigation has brought him to a strip bar.

Sure as cops drink coffee from little paper cups, all TV detective work leads to a strip joint. Or should. So Logan's probe into the death of a prostitute named Jasmine has led him to just such a place.

The scene, shot at a chrome-and-mirrors "gentleman's club" on East 21st Street, is part of "Exiled," Noth's TV film that airs Sunday at 9 p.m. on NBC. Billed as "a 'Law & Order' movie," "Exiled" focuses on Logan, the cocky but caring detective who was abruptly written out of the series upon Noth's abrupt departure in 1995.

More specifically, Righteous, hot-headed Logan punched out a scofflaw city councilman. After that, the department socked Logan with a transfer across the harbor to Staten Island. There, in law enforcement exile handling domestics and petty thefts, he harbors a dream of returning to big-time crime.

That dead hooker could be his ticket back, he reasons when he lucks into the case. But before he's done, Logan will violate a police crackdown on a major mafioso; uncover a dirty cop at his old haunt, the 27th Precinct; even fall in love.

That's the premise for "Exiled," a humdinger of a TV flick that will entertain everyone, not just the "Law & Order" faithful. (But watch out, "L & O" devotees: One wicked plot twist will rock your world!)

Differences from the series? No heavy issues. Unlike the splendid but message-laden "Law & Order" (which airs on NBC Wednesdays at 10 p.m., and daily in reruns on cable's A&E), this film just wants to have fun with the cop-drama genre. Plus, there are no courtroom scenes. And none of those interstitial "ba-bum" sound effects.

"I want 'Exiled' to have some resonance of 'Law & Order,'" says

Turn to RETURNS, page 6

Have A Great Weekend!

The Collegian is New Englands largest college daily! (and don't forget it!!!)

Boat Neck

ZANNA
downtown Amherst

Human Resource Director Job Description

Supervisor: Business Manager (Styve Ogando)

Some of the job responsibilities may include but are not limited to:

- Recruiting
- New Hire Orientation
- Employee File Management
- Payroll Management
- Policy Structuring

The Human Resource Department at The Collegian is a newly created position and therefor maybe modified as needed to fit the needs of the organization. He/she will work closely with the managers at the collegian to accomplish organizational tasks.

Some qualifications for the position are:

- Creativity
- Independance
- Self-Motivation
- Strong Interpersonal
- Desire for learning

Computer skill requirements:

- Microsoft word, willingness to learn new programs

PHOTO BY ALAN MARSHFIELD

Run away!

Jonathan Taylor Thomas's latest movie I'll Be Home for Christmas hits theaters this holiday season.

■ returns

continued from page 5

Noth, "but I don't want to mimic it, or be a slave to its style or history."

A freestanding yarn, "Exiled" nonetheless makes effective use of "Law & Order" characters from its eight-and-counting seasons, featuring cast members Benjamin Bratt, S. Epatha Merkerson, Jerry Orbach, Sam Waterston, alumnus Dann Florek and John Fiore, a favorite with the show's fans for his enduring mini-role as Detective Profaci.

Other "Exiled" stars include Dabney Coleman, Ice-T, Costas Mandylor and Tony Musante.

"But I'm in every... single... scene," breathes Noth between takes at the strip bar. He's near the end of a breakneck, 20-day shooting schedule. "I'm a little punch-drunk," he confesses. "But it's like the old saying: If you're going to drown, don't torture yourself with shallow water."

A moment later, he's back to work. A gadget pumps out imitation cigarette smoke while bikini-clad extras grind to a beat they can only imagine; music will be dubbed in later. Logan enters with his partner, played by Dana Eskelson.

"So, you narcs? Vice?" a dancer asks Logan. "Cops love this place."

"Yeah, we're cops," he says, "and we LOVE this place."

Noth (rhymes with "both") not only stars in "Exiled," but also cooked up the project with collaborator Charles Kipps.

"My fingerprints are pretty much all over it," Noth says with undisguised pride. "Charlie wrote it, but we mapped out the story in a restaurant called DaMarino's up on 49th Street. That's been the official 'Exiled' hangout."

Despite conflicting reports at the time, Noth says he left "Law & Order" voluntarily and doesn't regret it.

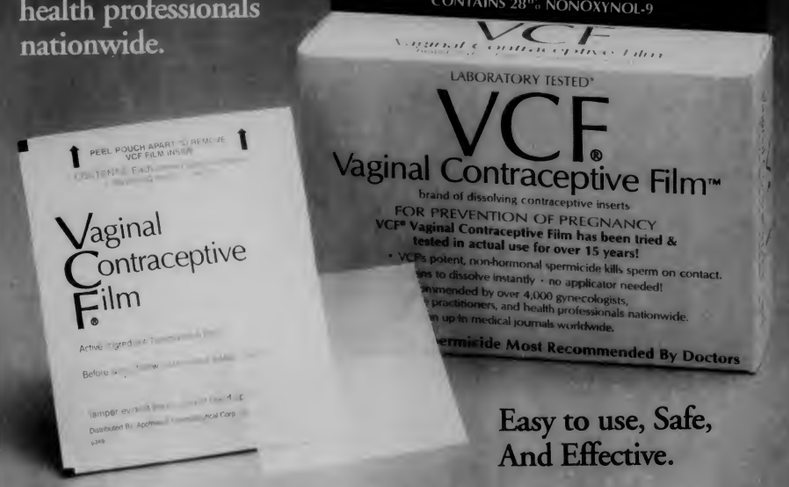
"After five years with the show, I was getting stale, frankly. I'm definitely finished with 'Law & Order.' But I thought the way I went out afforded an opportunity to make a great movie. They never really dealt with my leaving."

Now, weaving a sort of parallel course to "Law & Order," Noth's film ties up some loose ends and leaves others satisfyingly snarled.

"I'm not revisiting a role," Noth insists. "It's more like I'm going forward with the role."

COURTESY JAY GELLERSON

Tickling the Ivories



Brazilian jazz pianist/vocalist/composer Elaine Elias brings her genre-busting style to Bowker Auditorium this Saturday, Nov. 7 at 8 p.m.

At last...
A contraceptive you both can't feel!

America's Fastest Growing Non-Hormonal Contraceptive!

Recommended by over 4,000 gynecologists, nurse practitioners and health professionals nationwide.

The dissolving contraceptive you can't feel!™
CONTAINS 28% NONOXYNOL-9

Easy to use, Safe, And Effective.

Available at drug counters everywhere, without a prescription.

Visit our website:
www.VCF-Film.com

©1998 Apotheus Pharmaceutical Corp. • VCF and Vaginal Contraceptive Film are registered trademarks of Apotheus Pharmaceutical Corp.

Pass the word, read the Collegian
www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

LOWEST FARES
★ GUARANTEED ★
FULL SERVICE TRAVEL
SPRING BREAK 1998
BOOK NOW AND SAVE!
OPEN SEVEN DAYS
256-8228
TRAVEL MAKERS, INC
THE TRAVEL EXPERTS
321 Main St. (Cor of Dickinson)
AMHERST

amc
There is a Difference!
Silence in Seldom
No child under 6 in any PG-13 or R rated film after 6PM.

Mt. Farms 4 · Mt. Farms Mall
584-9153

WIZARD OF OZ (G)
Today at (4:50 @ 52.50) 7:45, 10:10
Sat at (1:40 (4:50 @ 52.50) 7:45, 10:10
Sun at 1:40 (4:50 @ 52.50) 7:40
Mon-Tues at (5:30 @ 52.50) 8:20

LIVING OUT LOUD (R)
Today at (5:10 @ 52.50) 7:55, 10:20
Sat at 1:50 (5:10 @ 52.50) 7:55, 10:20
Sun at 1:50 (5:20 @ 52.50) 7:50
Mon-Tues at (5:40 @ 52.50) 8:30

PRACTICAL MAGIC (PG-13)
Today at 7:30, 9:45 at (1:30) 7:30
Sun at 1:30, 7:30, Mon-Tues at 8:10

BELOVED (R)
Today at (1:00 @ 52.50) 8:30
Sat at 1:00 (5:00 @ 52.50) 8:30
Sun at 1:00 (5:00 @ 52.50) 8:00
Mon-Tues at (4:30 @ 52.50) 8:00

RUSH HOUR (PG-13)
Today at (5:20 @ 52.50) 10:30
Sat at (5:20 @ 52.50) 10:30
Sun at (5:10 @ 52.50)
Mon-Tues at (5:30 @ 52.50)

Hampshire 6 · Hampshire Mall
584-7550

WATERBOY (PG-13)
Today at (1:20 @ 52.50) 8:00, 10:30
Sat at 1:50 (5:20 @ 52.50) 8:00, 10:50
Sun at 1:50 (5:20 @ 52.50) 8:00
Mon-Tues (5:50 @ 52.50) 8:00

John Carpenter's VAMPIRES (R)
Today at (1:10 @ 52.50) 7:50, 10:10
Sat at 1:40 (5:10 @ 52.50) 7:50, 10:10
Sun at 1:40 (5:10 @ 52.50) 7:50
Mon-Tues (5:40 @ 52.50) 8:20

APT PUPIL (R)
Today at (4:50 @ 52.50)
Sat at (4:50 @ 52.50)
Mon-Tues at (5:30 @ 52.50) 8:10

PLEASANTVILLE (PG-13)
Today at (4:50 @ 52.50) 7:30, 10:20
Sat at 1:20 (4:50 @ 52.50) 7:30, 10:20
Sun at 1:20 (4:50 @ 52.50) 7:30
Mon-Tues at (5:20 @ 52.50) 8:00

ANTZ (PG)
Today at (1:30 @ 52.50) 5:10, 10:20
Sat at 2:00 (1:30 @ 52.50) 5:10, 10:20
Sun at 2:00 (1:30 @ 52.50) 8:10
Mon-Tues at (6:00 @ 52.50) 8:40

THE SIEGE (R)
Today at (3:00 @ 52.50) 7:40, 10:30
Sat at 1:30 (3:00 @ 52.50) 7:40, 10:30
Sun at 1:30 (3:00 @ 52.50) 7:40
Mon-Tues at (5:30 @ 52.50) 8:10

$2.50 'Twi-lite' Show Daily!
Special Engagement
No Passes or Coupons

UMass, Harvard set to battle on Sunday

By Paul Teves
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts hockey team (1–3, 1–2 in the Hockey East) looks to take a huge step forward this season as it takes on Harvard University, Sunday at 5 p.m. at the William D. Mullins Center.

The UMass hockey team has had a tough early part of the season. The Minutemen started by losing to No. 4 Michigan State, 5-1. They are now in the midst of a eight-game home stand. They thus far have lost to UMass–Lowell 4-3 in overtime, which was a game they had a 3–2 lead in with 1:53 to play in regulation.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Chris Brannen

They then proceeded to win not only their first game, but also their first Hockey East game in comeback fashion over Merrimack 3–2. UMass then played 55 minutes of solid hockey against the No. 8 team in the nation, New Hampshire. But it also played five bad minutes, and All– American and Hobie Baker Candidate Jason Krog made them pay with two quick goals to put the game out of reach, 4–1.

"This is our goal. It's to put the best available competition on our schedule to bring this program back to national recognition," UMass coach Joe Mallen said.

The Minutemen need to take a step in the right direction against out–of–conference foe Harvard. The Crimson have always been a top notch program.

For Harvard their first game is on Friday night, before taking to the ice against the Minutemen on Sunday.

The Minutemen have several things they will need to do, such as tighten up on defense. The young defense hasn't been bad, but they haven't necessarily been good. UMass is giving up over 30 shots per game.

The UMass defense has been steady, with captain Dean Stork leading the defensive charge, whether it's penalty kills or aggressive hitting. Others to contribute defensively include Toni Soderholm and Hockey East Rookie of the week Chris Brannen. He had a goal and an assist in UMass' only win.

UMass is also going to need left Blanchard as well as players like Nathan Sell, Nick Stephens and Kris Wallis to break out in the scoring column in order to win games.

UMass experienced this problem last year. The Minutemen were unable to score. When they need key goals to win games they would come up short, by not getting that last goal.

"We're getting scoring from a lot of different players this year, which is good but it will be interesting to see who will break out for us in the scoring column," Mallen said.

For the Crimson, they finished last season with a record of 14–17–2, and finished with losing records both at home and on the road. The advantage would seem to lie with the much improved Minutemen.

The Crimson lost several key players to the National Hockey League last year. They lost forwards Chris Bala to Ottawa and Steve Moore to Colorado. They also lost defenseman Ben Storey to Colorado, as well as goalie J.R. Prestifilippo to the New York Islanders organization.

This game is renewing a rivalry that has been dormant since 1921. This will bring a bit of history to the game at the Mullins Center. The series is 4–0 in favor of Harvard, but UMass will look to make one up on Sunday afternoon.

Minutemen Notes: UMass will dig back into the heart and soul of its Hockey East slate when Maine visits the Mullins Center this weekend. The Minutemen dropped two in Orono, Maine last year, but tied the Black Bears 5-5 in the season finale.

The two teams will face off on Friday night at 7 p.m. and again on Saturday night at the same time. Friday's game will be broadcast live on 91.1 WMUA.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Nathan Sell (left), Kevin Tucker (right) and the Massachusetts hockey team are hoping to get back in the win column on Sunday against Harvard.

Wheeler's back in Amherst

By Aaron Saykin
Collegian Staff

Although he may have already played his final regular– season game at the collegiate level, former Rhode Island guard Tyson Wheeler wasn't quite ready to pass the proverbial torch to one of the up–and–coming back–court prospects in the Atlantic 10.

After lighting up the Minutemen for a game–high 21 points in defeat for Team Fokus last night, Wheeler reminded UMass reserve guard Rafael Cruz just why he was a second–round NBA pick. While Cruz shone in relief for injured guard Monty Mack, Wheeler stole the show in his farewell to Amherst.

As the former Ram jogged onto the floor for warm–ups, Massachusetts head coach Bruiser Flint, as well as some of his older players, couldn't help but notice him — which came much to the delight of Wheeler.

"We were just talking about past games, talking about the refs — about how they weren't going to give me any calls because I'm at UMass again," Wheeler said jokingly of his conversation with Flint before the game. "It was fun playing against UMass again. It's good playing against those guys one more time. They know how I play, and I know how they play, so we just went out there and had fun... to show them that I can still play."

Perhaps the only reason for his reunion with A–10 basketball is the current NBA lockout. Hoping to earn a roster spot on the Toronto Raptors; the team which drafted him in June; Wheeler joined Team Fokus to stay sharp and fit, hoping that the season will soon resume.

"I need to stay in shape because Toronto is going to be tough [especially] if I try to go in there not playing any organized basketball," he said.

"I've been practicing with URI, but I wanted to get some game experience against these players. I'm going to go out there and work hard, and try to make the team."

While the teacher desperately tried to single–handedly lead his team to victory, the students, Cruz and fellow UMass guards Johnathon DePina and Charlton Clarke, utilized a team effort to earn the nailbiting 84–82 win. Having enjoyed only limited playing time in the 1997–98 campaign, Cruz rose to the occasion and powered the back court with 14 points after a 6–11 shooting performance from the field.

"I learned a lot. Last year was a learning experience for me," said Cruz, who was among the many UMass players to whom Flint suggested that a gain in muscle weight during the off–season would be beneficial. "I definately wasn't ready at the beginning of last year, but this year, I worked out over the summer and I felt a little more confidence to go in there and do what I had to do."

Wheeler also has made a weight adjustment for the NBA, hoping that an increase in body mass will help compensate for his lack of height. Hoping to make a serious impression on some of his taller but younger foes, he utilized wide frame and left them watching him from the ground.

"Tyson said he wasn't going to miss this one for the world," said Flint, who couldn't help but enjoy watching the former nemesis of his players help them learn a valuable pre–season lesson about size. "He's got 15 more pounds on him. Last year, we could bump him off the ball, but it's a little different this year. Every time Rafael bumped him a little bit, he just bumped back."

Not a bad night at all for a couple guards who were once tagged as undersized.

A–10 honors awarded; Lecot - Player of the Year

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

When the Atlantic 10 conference announced its All-Conference teams yesterday in men's and women's soccer, both squads from UMass found themselves well represented.

Highlighting the accomplishments, however, was the selection of Minutewoman Sophie Lecot as A–10 Player of the Year. Also a first–team selection, the Gatineau, Quebec product leads UMass with 35 points this season. The award is the second conference Player of the Year honor for Lecot, who also was the America East Player of the Year in 1996, when she was at Maine.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Sophie Lecot

The Minutewomen also sported three other first–team picks on this year's squad. Senior co–captain Amanda Thompson, the commander of the UMass defensive unit, also earned top honors.

Junior midfielder Emma Kurowski and sophomore forward Kara Green were also first–team selections. Kurowski is third on the team with 28 points this season, while Green has been hot as of late, and is right on Lecot's heels with 34 points.

This was the second first–team selection for both Lecot and Kurowski, while Green and Thompson had both been previous picks to the second team. Kurowski was also the A-10 Rookie of the Year back in 1996.

The Minutemen have three representatives on this year's second team. Junior forward Adam Black and senior co–captains Carmelo Garcia and Brad Kurowski were all honored for their play this season.

Black, a transfer from Cal–State Fullerton, came on strong during the season's second half to lead the Minutemen with 13 points. Garcia and Kurowski were defensive standouts for UMass, while offensively, Kurowski also chipped in two goals on the season.

While it was the first career post season honor for both Black and Kurowski, Garcia was a second–team selection last season as well.

Although the team success of the men's and women's teams were on the opposite ends of the spectrum this year, the obvious individual efforts of these players did not go unnoticed by the rest of the coaches in the A-10.

Fordham, GW volleyball look for revenge

By Paul Teves
Collegian Staff

Although homecoming weekend has already officially past, the Massachusetts volleyball team will be receiving a homecoming of sorts for the next two weeks.

The Minutewomen will face George Washington (15–8, 9– 5 in the Atlantic 10) and Fordham (8–15, 3–11 in the A–10) this weekend. The Colonials and the Rams were victims to the Minutewomen the first time they met both teams on the road.

"Looking back I think we were really fortunate to get two wins, both in five games," UMass coach Bonnie Kenny said.

The Minutewomen now will battle the two teams, which they beat in five games the first time, at the friendly confines of Curry Hicks Cage.

The Colonials have just finished disposing of Fordham. And they are one game up on the Minutewomen in conference play.

"When GW is playing at their best, it's tough to find a team in our conference who can beat them," Kenny said.

The Rams enter tonight's game with UMass struggling through what has been a tough conference season. But don't let the 3–11 record fool you, the Rams are much better than their record shows. The Rams pushed the Minutewomen to five games in the Bronx.

When the Rams enter Curry Hicks on Friday, the Minutewomen will have prepared for the star of the Rams, junior Cindy Vojtech, who has recorded 203 kills and 240 digs, while collecting 52 blocks.

"Fordham has a huge international outside hitter we're going to have to watch in Vojtech," Kenny said.

The Minutewomen will bring the usual suspects, including Kari Hogancamp, who brings with her 347 kills and her A– 10 conference leading 395 defensive digs, when UMass faces Fordham and GW.

Jill Meyers will be a factor as usual as she contributes with her big swing. She is the UMass kills leader and the best terminator on the team.

The new influences include players like Janeen DeMarte who has filled the role of the other outside hitter. Ismarie Llovet has done a great job terminating kills as of late. Heather Holtsberg has also been a key component for the UMass team.

"We played good offense the last time we played these teams. This time we need a combination of offense and defense. We need ball control, and we can't allow GW or Fordham to take our good younger players out of the match mentally," Kenny said.

■ start

continued from page 10

"Our number one thing is for us to get our first game jitters out," O'Brien said. "And then to see how well the things that we have been working on in practice will work in a game. We'll also be able to see how well they'll [the Minutewomen] will be able to perform under the lights and in uniform."

Tomorrow's game will also mark the important return of players Kelly Van Huisen and Jaywana Bradley. Van Huisen missed all but five games of last season due to a knee injury, and Bradley missed the entire season due to surgery. Both are pivotal players, and their return has been much anticipated.

"Both Kelly and Jaywana have missed competition a lot," O'Brien said.

Missing from tomorrow's action will be junior transfer Tory Grant, who was dismissed from the team for violating team rules.

■ field

continued from page 10

and toughness earned during such games pays tremendous dividends during tournament play.

"I think we've had the benefit of playing a lot of back–to– back games this year," she said. "We're prepared, and because we've played some tough teams. We know what our potential is, and we know how well we can play when we focus on what we need to do."

As hosts of the 1997 tournament, the Minutewomen enjoyed a home–field advantage last season. Although St. Joseph's is located in the host city, Shea feels the road trip may do her team some good.

"When they're on the road, there are less distractions than there are at home, believe it or not," she said. "They're all together at one time, instead of coming from all over the place. There are no outside influences. We're used to it, and I think traveling as much as we did this year made it a benefit to us."

U-SAVE AUTO & TRUCK RENTAL
Weekend Special
Noon Friday to Monday AM - Starting at $59.95
North Amherst Motors
A Collision Repair Center
78 Sunderland Rd.
North Amherst, MA
549-RENT
• Cars • Mini Vans
• Trucks
• Cargo Vans
• 15 Passenger Vans
• Low Daily/Weekly/ Weekend Rates
• We Rent to Qualified Drivers 21 years or Older
• Direct Billing To Insurance Co.
(On bus route - one mile from UMass)

DONATELLO
Italian Pastry Shop
362 College St 256-8110
"An assortment of Italian pastries, cakes, wedding cakes, cookies, and more!"

"Reason No4 why you should take my MCAT course."
Our teachers deliver
Only the best instructors teach our courses. Not only are they experts in their specific field, (physics, biology, chemistry, verbal) but they have also passed our rigorous hiring and training process.
Call 1-800-2REVIEW
or visit us at www.review.com
Courses held on the UMASS campus! Smith, Mt. Holyoke, and WNEC as well!
THE PRINCETON REVIEW

Mia.
ZANNA
downtown Amherst

Tori Amos
special guest unbelievable truth
plugged '98
plugged '98
plugged '98
SUN • NOV 15
MULLINS CENTER
University of Massachusetts Amherst
TICKETS AVAILABLE AT THE MULLINS CENTER BOX OFFICE AND ALL (LOCATIONS INCLUDING MOVIES & MORE, FILENE'S, VIDEO PARADISE, WOOD BROS. MUSIC, MUSIC FORUM AND SELECT NFAM MUSIC. TO CHARGE-BY-PHONE CALL (413) 733-2500. FOR INFO CALL (413) 545-0101. No service charge at box office open M-F 9am-5pm, Sat 10am-5pm. Tickets subject to convenience charges. Event date and time subject to change. www.bsbright.com
PRODUCED BY DELSENER/SLATER

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Take over my lease as of Jan 1. 1 bedroom in Puffton Village. Call Adam 549-6488.

2 bedroom apt for rent. Sunny and beautiful. Right Downtown Amherst. 253-0546.

Take Over Lease 2 bedrooms of a 3 bedroom apartment. On Main St. Available Jan 1. 256-3062.

AUTO FOR SALE

FOR SALE 1990 Ford Escort. $1000 or B/O. Lots of new parts. 106,000 miles. Runs great. Call 549-4903.

86 Toyota Camry Runs great. $1500/B.O. 546-4289.

CARS $100-$500 Police Impounds. Hondas, Chevys, Jeeps, & Sport Utilities. MUST SELL! 1-800-522-2730 x4554

COMPUTERS

486 Computer Great For Student Works Good $100. Color VGA $50. (413)584-8857

EMPLOYMENT

Last Chance Legal Assistants Nov 13, 1998 is the last day to apply to the Student Legal Services Office about a Spring 1999 Internship! Get hands-on experience in the legal field. Work directly with attorneys and clients. Earn up to 15 undergraduate credits. No experience in the legal profession required— training is provided. Contact Student Legal Services today! 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

CRUISE SHIP EMPLOYMENT- Workers earn up to $2,000+/month (w/tips & benefits). World Travel! Land-Tour jobs up to $5,000-$7,000/summer. Ask us how! 517-336-4235 ext C50011.

EMPLOYMENT

Wanted 98 People We'll pay you to lose up to 29+ lbs. 1-703-817-1071.

Earn Extra Cash Routes available in Amherst, Northampton/Florence, So. Hadley, Easthampton delivering The Union News Extra on Friday mornings. Can be delivered before class. Call 527-7125. No collections. Reliable vehicle. Must be 18 years or older.

Calzone Transport Technicians (Delivery People) and Calzone Production Engineers (Kitchen Help). Must be able to work 25 hours a week. Apply at D.P. Dough.

WHMP 99.3 FM is looking for positive, outgoing individuals to interact with the public at promotional events, concerts, and client remote broadcasts. Must be 18+, available nights and weekends, and have a valid driver's license. Send resumes to: WHMP, P.O. Box 268, Northampton, MA 01060. Atlantic Star Communications is an EOE.

Disc Jockey needed for mobile DJ service. Willing to train but must have a dependable vehicle and knowledge of current dance music. Call 253-6355.

Best Part-Time Job In The Valley You don't have to wash dishes or flip burgers for the extra money you need. Become a Clean Water Action organizer and earn $7.30-$9.00/hr fighting air and water pollution. Paid training, flexible schedule, evening and weekend hours. 584-9830.

EMPLOYMENT

PIZZA MAKERS NEEDED Flexible Hours Now Hiring At Sbarros Hampshire Mall

Waitress Part-Time Make $400 & work 2 or 3 nights. Flexible hours. Dancers For Upscale Gentleman's Club No experience necessary. Unlimited $$$ Potential. Bikini, Topless, or Nude! Call 413-536-0502

ENTERTAINMENT

Lights and Sound: Rave to Dorm Party. Your DJ's or ours. Call BARR Productions (413)737-8561.

HEALTH & BEAUTY

We're here to pump... YOU UP! Creatine Monohydrate, Creatine Surge, DHEA, Whey Protein and more from Fitness Workshop delivered right to your door. 1-877-FIT-WORK. www.fitnessworkshop.com

HOUSE FOR RENT

Summer Rentals Cape Cod Group Summer Rentals. Some waterfront houses, some with swimming pools. Falmouth area. Call Diamond Real Estate 1-508-477-1900.

LOST & FOUND

I found your glasses at F.A.C. Call Sean at 6-5445 to get them back.

MISCELLANEOUS

Think Different $500-$1000 part-time per month. No experience needed. Will train. Free information packet. 413-788-9838. cleanair@javanet.com

MISCELLANEOUS

Rabbit Rescue has a lovely selection of bunnies. Many colors and types as well as a selection of cages and hutches. We can also help with any bunnies you can no longer care for. Call Ellen at 367-0105.

ROOM FOR RENT

2 bedrooms available Jan 1 in a 4 bedroom apartment on Main St. $295 or $275 per month. Call Alison 253-1179 or Katie 253-6566.

SERVICES

On-Line Roommate/Apt Search Service Free Ads. http://members.aol.com/pvroommate/

Pregnant? Need help? Call Birthright of Amherst Area for free testing and assistance. 549-1906

TO SUBLET

Looking to sublet starting Jan 1st. 2 bedrooms in a 4 bedroom Mill Valley Estates Townhouse. Large living room, kitchen, 2 1/2 bathrooms. Call Adam 253-0181 or Jamie 253-0007.

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK Florida, Texas, Cancun, Mexico, Jamaica, etc. Browse www.icpt.com and call 800-327-6013. Best hotels, prices, and parties. Reps, organizations, and promoters wanted. Inter-Campus Programs.

SPRING BREAK '99 Largest selection of Spring Break Destinations, including Cruises! Foam Parties, Drink Specials, and Club Admissions. Group Discounts. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-FUN

WANTED

Active Women Needed For Nutritional Study Graduate Research Study in Zinc Supplementation. 18 to 40 years old and exercising 3 times a week. Call Christy 532-2733.

WANTED TO RENT

Looking for a 2 or 3 bedroom apartment in Downtown Amherst area. ASAP. Please call 253-0345.

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, NOV. 6

Dance — The Universities Dancers Improvisation Group will give a performance from 5:15-5:50 p.m. in Herter Art Gallery.

Hypnotist — "The Astonishing Neal," a hypnotist, will give a hypnotic performance at the Blackwell Cafe in the Campus Center at 8 p.m. Event is sponsored by the Something Every Friday program, and will be followed by the movie "The Big One."

Lecture — As part of the Geoscience lecture series, a lecture entitled "Complex Communities and Emergent Ecologies: A Kaleidoscopic Look at Human- and Other Beings In-Relation-In-Places" will be held in Morrill II South, room 131 at 3:30 p.m.

Recital — There will be a faculty recital with piano, soprano and more, at 8 p.m. in Sweeny Concert Hall at Smith College.

Service — There will be a Shabbat service at 6 p.m. in the Hillel House. A free kosher Shabbat dinner will follow.

SATURDAY, NOV. 7

Comedy — MISSION IMPROVable, the UMass improvisational troupe, will perform in the Campus Center, room 163 at 8 p.m.

Exhibit — The Hampshire College Film and Photography Gallery will exhibit photographs by Matthew Swarts starting tonight and running until Dec. 6. The exhibit will be held in the Film/Photography building in the Longsworth Arts Village and is open from 10 a.m.-10 p.m.

NOTICES

Auditions — Auditions for singers, dancers and actors will be held for Romeo and Juliet from Nov. 16-18 from 7-11 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center, room 201. For more information call 545-3490.

Community — MASSPIRG is announcing Hunger and Homelessness Week. Sign up for the Oct. 31 Hunger Banquet, the Necessities Drive, the Sleep Out Vigil, and the benefit concert in the MASSPIRG office. Call 545-0190 for more details.

Community — UMass seniors who have a 3.85 G.P.A. or higher and who plan to attend graduate school next year should contact Professor Nelson at 577-2611 to discuss Phi Kappa Phi scholarships.

Community — Golden Key National Honor Society nominees are reminded to return membership forms as soon as possible. Deadline is approaching.

Scholarships — UMass students interested in scholarship opportunities are encouraged to visit the Office of National Scholarship Advisement in room 810 of Goodell. Deadlines for scholarships are approaching fast.

Submissions — The UMass Poetry Society is seeking submissions to its anthology. Call Joshua at 546-5823 for more details.

Workshop — A five-week workshop entitled "Women, Food, and Body Image: Recovering Our Stories, Restoring Ourselves" will be held Thursdays beginning Nov. 5 from 4:30-5:45 p.m. at the Smith College Health Services Conference Room. To register call 585-2840.

Workshop — A workshop for women survivors of childhood sexual abuse will take place on Nov. 7. The workshop include writing, drawing, and movement. In the evening, participants are also invited to perform dances, music, and monologues about healing from abuse. Call 586-7340 for more information and to sign up.

PSAs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Save 10% or more on nearly every book.* Every day!

*Other non-sale items: Textbooks, Reference, Test Guides, Special Orders, or Sale Priced Books

Bookworks™

Conveniently located in University Store "Your Place to Unwind... Northampton" 413-545-2619 M-F 9 to 5 Sat. 11 to 4

HSCN 4 Hearing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	18	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	19	UVC-TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	21	Gavel to Gavel
6	PBS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	23	Sundance
8	UPN/20 Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	25	CTN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WCCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
16	WB/New Haven	33	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — NOVEMBER 6, 1998

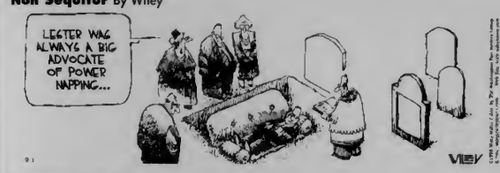
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEQH	2	12	Wishbone (R)	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (R)		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Connecticut Journal		Antiques Roadshow (R) (Stereo)	Nova (R) (Stereo)
WYSB	3	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Kids-Darndest	Candid C.	Buddy Faro (R) (Stereo)		Nash Bridges "Swingers" (R)	News	Late Show (R)
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Kids-Darndest	Candid C.	Buddy Faro (R) (Stereo)		Nash Bridges "Swingers" (R)	News	Late Show (R)
WCVB	5	5	News (R)	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle (R)	Two of a Kind	Boy World	Sabrina-Witch	Brother's Kpr	20/20 (R)	News	Nightline (R)
WLVI	6		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Nanny (R)	Friends (R)	★★ "Mikado for Death" (1996, Drama) Sirwan Seigart.		News			Friends (R)	Nanny (R)
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	Dateline (In Stereo) (R)		Trinity "In Loco Parentis" (R)		Homicide: Life on the Street (R)	News	Tonight Show
WTXX		8	Home Imp.	Judge-Brown	Judge Judy (R)	Judge Judy (R)	Legacy "Emma" (In Stereo) (R)		Love Boat: The Next Wave (R)		News	Newsradio (R)	Newsradio (R) Married...With
WVIT		10	News	NBC News	Ent. Tonight	Hard Copy (R)	Dateline (In Stereo) (R)		Trinity "In Loco Parentis" (R)		Homicide: Life on the Street (R)	News	Tonight Show
WTIC	8	11	Simpsons (R)	News (R)	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	Brimstone "Encore" (In Stereo)		Millennium "Skull & Bones" (R)		News	Friends (R)	Med Abt. You
WWLP	9	22	News (R)	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (R)	Dateline (In Stereo) (R)		Trinity "In Loco Parentis" (R)		Homicide: Life on the Street (R)	News (R)	Tonight Show
WGBY	10	6	Great Vacation Auction						Great Vacation Auction Continues
WGGB	11	40	News (R)	ABC News	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	Two of a Kind	Boy World	Sabrina-Witch	Brother's Kpr	20/20 (R)	News (R)	Nightline (R)
WSBK	12		Judge Judy (R)	Judge Judy (R)	Seinfeld (R)	Frasier (R)	Legacy "Emma" (In Stereo) (R)		Love Boat: The Next Wave (R)		Med Abt. You	Med Abt. You	Frasier (R) Cheers (R)
WTBS	13		Family Matters	Family Matters	Roseanne (R)	Roseanne (R)	★★ "Wildcats" (1986, Comedy) Goldie Hawn, James Keach.					★★ "Dances With Wolves" (1990, Comedy) Kort Russell.
A&E	14		Northern Exposure (R)		Law & Order "Aria" (R)		Biography: Molly Brown.		L.A. Detectives (R)		Dateline (In Stereo)	Dateline (Part 1 of 2)	Law & Order "Family Business"
CNN	15	23	Worldview (R)	Moneyline Newshour (R)		Crossfire (R)	World Today (R)		Larry King Live (R)		Cold War "Reds" (R) (R)	Sports	Moneyline (R)
COM	16	28	Drew Carey	Make-Laugh	Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	Gallagher: The Messiest (R)		★★★ "Something Wild" (1986, Comedy) Jeff Daniels.			Upright	Drew Carey
DISC	17		New House	Fix-It-Line	Gimme Shelter (R)		Tales of the Tiger Shark (R)		News	Storm		Geysers of Yellowstone (R)	Justice Flies "Against Her Will"
ESPN	18		Up Close	Sportscenter		Sportslight	NHL Hockey: Detroit Red Wings at Phoenix Coyotes. (Live) (R)						Sportscenter (R)
LIFE	19		Ellen (R)	Ellen (R)	Party of Five (In Stereo) (R)		Chicago Hope "Verdicts" (R)		"A Perfect Stranger" (1994, Drama) Robert Urich, Stacy Haiduk.			New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	20		(5:30) Jams Countdown		Fanatic (R)	News	Eye Spy Video Say What?		Family Values Tour (In Stereo)		Adam Sandler's Last Laugh (In Stereo)	Loveline
NICK	21		Figure It Out	Secret-ol Alex	Doug (R)	Rugrats (R)	Kablam! Animorphs (R)		Brady Bunch	Wonder Years	Happy Days	Laverne	I Love Lucy (R) Bewitched
SCIFI	22		Monsters	Sci-Fi Entert.	Sightings (R)	Star Trek "A Private Little War" (R)			★★★ "Dead Again" (1991, Suspense) Kenneth Branagh. (R)			Sightings (R)	Star Trek (R)
TLC	23	24	Home Again	Home Again	Trauma: Life	Trauma: Life	Tales From the Tower (R)		Tales From the Tower (R)			Tales From the Tower (R)
TNT	24		Babylon 5 "Soul Mates" (R)		ER "Take Three Brown Wings"		★★½ "Kill Him" (1982, Comedy-Drama) Nick Nolte, Eddie Murphy.		★★★ "48 Hrs." (1982, Comedy-Drama) Nick Nolte, Eddie Murphy.
USA	25		Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Xena: Warrior Princess (R) (R)		Walker, Texas Ranger (R)		★★★½ "Four Weddings and a Funeral" (1994, Comedy) Hugh Grant. (In Stereo) (R)			★★★½ "Renaissance"
HBO	26		(5:15) "My Fellow Americans" (R)		Inside the NFL (R) (In Stereo) (R)		★★½ "In & Out" (1997) Kevin Kline. PG-13 (R)		"The Second Arrival" (1996, Science Fiction) Patrick Muldoon. (R)			Chris Rock: Bigger & Blacker (R)
MAX	27		(5:45) ★½ "Batman & Robin" (1997) Arnold Schwarzenegger. (R)				★★½ "Mojave Moon" (1996) Jenny Agutter. (R) (R)		★★½ "Air America" (1990, Adventure) Mel Gibson. (In Stereo) (R)		Stargate SG-1 Dead Men's Gun		Emmanuelle in Space 6: The Ultimate Fantasy (R)
SHOW	28		★★½ "Sci / Manuel on Xxx Murders" (1993) Mira Myers. PG-13				★★½ "Air America" (1990, Adventure) Mel Gibson. (In Stereo) (R)		Stargate SG-1 Dead Men's Gun				Outer Limits

Cathy By Cathy Guisewite



Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Non Sequitur By Wiley

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Liberty Meadows By Frank Cho

Sven By Stephen Higgins

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — Your enthusiasm in on the rise, but you must take care that you don't look at things in a manner that is too simplistic. You may overlook something.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — You can expect to receive something special from someone who has maintained a close relationship with you through thick and thin.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — Take care that something which begins as a friendly game is not allowed to develop into anything more serious. What may seem harmless could actually be a huge threat.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — Someone is sure to be protective of you today, but this doesn't mean you are free to take excessive risks. Do your part and play it safe.

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — Your easy-going ways will surely be appreciated by someone who is going through some difficulty at this time. You can provide timely assistance.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — Your own personal magnetism may actually make things more difficult for you today. The truth is, you're in the mood for a little solitude.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — You'll have to make things clear from the start if you expect those around you to follow your instructions correctly today. Be encouraging.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — You may not be performing quite up to par at this time, but today you'll strike a creative compromise with a teammate that will pay off.

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — What seems to be perfect for you today may actually be deceiving. Take care that you're not walking into some sort of trap. Use caution.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — Your positive energy is appreciated by those around you. You've been flirting with a bad mood, but you should be able to keep it at bay.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — You'll come to a greater understanding of the way things are, and of the way things work. Your ability to adjust will surely pay off.

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — You won't be able to read anyone's mind today, but with a little luck you may be able to "second-guess" the competition and gain the advantage.

Quote of the Day

"...Whatever I do could end up on the front page of the New York Times tomorrow."

–Prof. D. Nico Spanelli

Close to Home By John McPherson

"Barbara, I warned you not to go in there while you were still dizzy from the Scrambler."

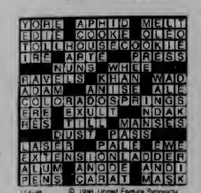
Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

COLLEGIAN APOLOGIZES that there's no menu in today's paper.

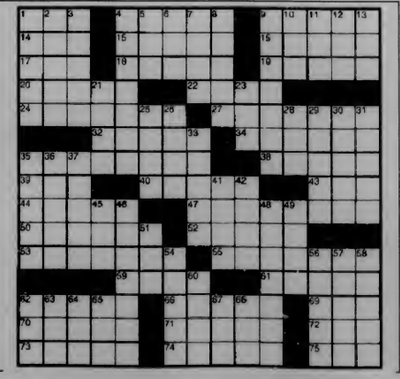
Collegian Staff

Night Editor — Dinnce Jimenez
Photo Technician — Brian McDermott
Copy Editor — Laura Sansoucy
Production Supervisor — Matt Wolaver
Production Staff — Allen Mackey, Stephen Mackey



ACROSS

1 Fuss
4 Brilliant moves
9 Dense
14 Do a lawn job
15 Very very
16 Musical show
17 Sick
18 Perfect
19 One-celled animal
20 Has to have
22 Skirt length
24 Big bird
27 Student's paper
32 Laborers' group
34 Actress Sanford
35 Start
38 Put forth energetically
39 Ms. Gardner
40 — out: making do with
43 In the past
44 Italian port
47 Rain shoes
50 Actor Bonnanne
52 Laughing scavenger
53 Harshly
55 Shore bird
59 Got an A+ on the test
61 Twangy
62 Baseball's Hank
66 Fasten (shoes)
69 Turkish title
70 Merit —
71 Greek philosopher
72 Precious stone
73 Birchbark craft
74 Family car
75 Period of time



DOWN

1 — acid
2 Washington power couple
3 Young bird of prey
4 Style of cooking
5 Ancient
6 Rocky Mountain native
7 Hyde Park buggy
8 Polish —
9 Ramble about
10 Skirt bottom
11 — Lived Before"
12 Chicago player
13 Large parrot
21 Ringo's instrument
23 Twelve, for Caesar
25 Motion picture
26 Pawn
28 Lenient
29 West Indies sorority
30 Highway sign
31 Choir voices
33 Whinny
35 Canary homes
36 Manifest
37 Divinely-inspired food
41 Anti votes
42 Type of club
45 Above, to a poet
46 With disapproval
48 At great length
49 It's long!
51 RN's specialty
54 Squeals
56 Custom
57 Beer
58 Peruvian animal
60 Wide valley
62 Alphabet starters
63 Chicken — king
64 Blvd. as a color
65 Singer Yoko
67 Scoundrel
68 O'Hare info

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

© 1998 United Feature Syndicate

Michigan back on track; UW looks for 9-0

In a year when Michigan basketball might be hanging in the cellar for a while in the Big Ten, Michigan football was expected to challenge for a second straight national title.

Not anymore they won't. That was established when bikinis and t-shirts were still in season.

Brett Mauser
COLUMN

An 0–2 record to start the 1998 campaign extinguished all dreams of a repeat performance. The question arose following its 38–28 loss to Syracuse in Ann Arbor, would the Wolverines show up to the ball at all?

But Michigan likes to dance. Give 'em that much.

In response, the Wolverines stand on top of the conference, and they are back in the polls at 22nd in the nation, a far cry from last year's glory, but still, a respectful mark. A home win over No. 9 Penn State helps pollsters in finding what Michigan is made of, and, well, I'm sure coach Lloyd Carr is interested in finding out also.

The Nittany Lions have not quite reached that upper tier. Quietly, State U. has climbed to ninth in the nation, losing only one game, that to Ohio State, 28–9, and have waited for tomorrow's bash with the Wolverines to prove themselves to everyone.

Michigan has won six straight with a strong defense, the one that was supposed to show up before giving up 74 points in its two losses. Penn State, other than the lapse versus the Buckeyes, have steadily found the way through a balance on both sides of the ball.

Ohio State did not exactly manhandle the Nitts either. The final score made it look like John Cooper and his boys waltzed, but they got two scores without moving the ball, instead, by recovering two loose balls in the end zone. Take those away and it's a brand new ballgame.

And Carr certainly checked out the box score, noticing that Michael Wiley only went for 62 yards. And Michigan doesn't even have that much.

Moral of the story: do your thing, Tom Brady.

Awaiting behind the front seven of Penn State are three experienced defensive backs. Brady threw for 282 yards and a touchdown in beating Minnesota. He and wide receiver Tai Streets hooked up six times for 192 yards in the win. Carr needs that and more.

While State wide receiver Joe Nastasi is rumored to return to the lineup from injury, so is Michigan's strong safety Marcus Ray. His suspension is over, and the one-time odds– on favorite All–American's role won't be as important as it will be next week against the Bucks. PSU's Kevin Thompson is not nearly the threat Joe Germaine is.

Michigan's joyride is over. It would be great to take on the Buckeyes still undefeated in the conference, but Carr's boss are lucky to be where they are. Penn State will show class in not running it up late. Michigan gets three, but they can have it. It won't mean much.

Penn State 31, Michigan 17.

Mauser's Toilet Bowl Picks of the Week:

Last week: 0-3 (ouch)

Season: 10-11

So much for egos, eh? Don't worry, little one, the Noise'll be back. Still a little while before we start talking the Mendoza line.

There might be a reason why Brady had his big day. Minnesota's secondary brings the term "cottage cheese" to a new level. Purdue's Drew Brees needed only 31 completions to throw for 522 yards and six touchdowns in blowing out the Gophers, 56–21. Brady exploited the same weakness.

Wisconsin, though, does not have that luxury in quarterback Mike Samuel. Running back Ron Dayne usually carries the load for the Badgers, but not this week. Not against the nation's seventh best rush defense. It's about time for the senior quarterback to do his part. After all, Wisconsin is 8–0 for the first time since 1901.

Yeah, we think it's about time.

Wisconsin sees Michigan down the road and Madison could be swept by upset fever from the west. Either way, that 20 1/2 point spread is too much for Barry Alvarez to handle. But they'll take a victory any way they can get it, as long as that donut is still there in the loss column for Alvarez to devour. I'll take the Gophs.

• Undercard, hmmmm, such pressure after the adversity presents itself. But the big ones respond, right? Uh huh.

Kentucky, giving 7 1/2, over Mississippi State. Mizzou, giving 6 1/2, against Colorado. Money, money, money, money, money.

Brett Mauser is a Collegian columnist.

UM basketball finds rhythm, wins 84–82

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

It probably wasn't intentional, but when the Massachusetts Hoop Band punctuated a 15–foot Ajmal Basit jump shot with its rendition of Metallica's "The Thing That Should Not Be," it was ironic.

Massachusetts	84
Team Fukus	82

With about seven minutes remaining in the basketball game between UMass and Team Fokus, Basit and his frontcourt comrades, Winston Smith and Ronnell Blizzard, began letting the ball fly from around the perimeter, and completely out of the character that the Minutemen built for themselves last season, the shots went in. Their dead–on shots helped Massachusetts leave the William D. Mullins Center with an 84–82 victory.

The girthy forwards, who were respected in most preseason publications only because of their immense size, proved that they could be threats from the top of the key as well.

This outside shooting finally designated the real beginning of basketball season for Massachusetts. Until this point, things didn't seem quite right. The sparce crowd seemed quiet, the passes seemed off the mark, and the shots didn't seem to fall.

"I think we were just a little nervous for our first game," Basit said. "We tried to get into the flow of the game, but we hadn't settled down. When we settled down, things got going."

Then, with a few crisp, baseline swishes, roundball came back to UMass. After two quick jumpers from the right side of the rim by Smith and Rafael Cruz, the latter for three, everything got better again. The stands were a little more full, the noise was loud, and the Minutemen were crashing the boards. Soon after, the long–trailing Massachusetts squad was in the lead for good, up 67–66.

Basit led the UMass charge under the basket, as well, when he wasn't hitting outside shots, by pulling down seven rebounds and blocking a shot to add to his team–high 16 points. All–American candidate center Lari Ketner did his part as well, dropping 11 points and eight rebounds.

"I just tried to post a lot in this game, and tried to do the best I could," Basit said. "I could score when I had the opportunity."

In the back court, Cruz had a standout game as he and Jonathan DePina stepped in for injured guard Monty Mack. Cruz led the new, high–paced Minuteman offense and made a serious rouge for more playing time during the upcoming season by making key passes and smart choices when shooting the ball. Cruz contributed with 14 points and four rebounds, while DePina made his presence felt with seven points, six assists, and four steals in covering old UMass nemesis, Rhode Island graduate Tyson Wheeler.

Wheeler was the sparkplug for Team Fokus, scoring an electric 21 points and tossing nine assists. Pete Philo and P.G. Greene followed up with 18 and 17 points, respectively.

Blizzard, who only saw playing time in the preseason last year, put a crisp nine on the scoreboard and swatted away a game–high two balls. Blizzard showed his versatility by complimenting his four rebounds with a perfect three– pointer.

Flint noted the success of his players, but realized that the regular season was still to come.

"We played up–tempo, but you guys have to realize that it won't be break–neck frantic like it was tonight [in the future]," Flint said. "There was a couple times where we probably would've slowed up and ran some [in the regular season], but we didn't. We just pushed the ball up the court."

UMass football heads east to face URI Rams

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

In 1997, when the Massachusetts football team went 2–9 and ended the season miles out of playoff contention, one of the two teams it defeated was Rhode Island.

Tomorrow, the Rams will play host to the Minutemen and will try to avenge that humiliating loss. This time, though, Rhode Island will enter the game as the underdog against a vastly improved UMass team and the Atlantic 10's second leading rusher, Marcel Shipp, despite having the conference's top–ranked run defense.

"They've got Miguel Viera, the leading tackler in our league, and Frank Ferrara up front," Massachusetts coach Mark Whipple said, noting two of the Rams' standouts. "I think [our success running] will depend on our line. I think Marcel will be ready. He's run well the last six games, and he ran well in practice."

When the Minutemen were on the bottom looking up, they were encouraged by key injuries suffered by Rhode Island. During their matchup in '97, Ram quarterback Billy Jack Haskins and linebacker Ryan Carstens sat out with respective ailments, helping the healthy Massachusetts squad slide by the visitors by a score of 18–14.

This 3–5 URI team won't have those advantages on the high–powered Minutemen this year. However, even at full– strength, UMass has shown certain weaknesses.

"We've had a lot of good quarters, but unfortunately, we've had a couple bad quarters as well," Whipple said. "It seems like we play three good quarters a game and one bad one a game. We just need to be more consistent."

The Rams will most likely look to strike late in the game to try and end up on top come the final gun. Other opponents, such as New Hampshire and James Madison, came into their respective matchups against UMass with significantly worse records, but came within a few points of a victory, regardless.

"I think the guys know we didn't play great last week," said Whipple about last week's 27–26 win over New Hampshire. "A couple of our toughest games were against JMU, who didn't have a great record, and UNH, who didn't have a great record, and we had to go down to the wire with them."

FOOTBALL
UMASS @ URI
SATURDAY, 12:30
81.1 FM- WMUA
MIKE COREY- PLAY
MARK WOODALL- COLOR
WEEKEND PREVIEW

"We've got some guys making big plays, but we're inconsistent. On defense we're giving up some big plays and on offense, we've kind of fumbled around a little bit. I think we know what our problems are, and we work on them every week. We've certainly gotten better, but hopefully we've improved from last week."

Even without improving, the Minutemen are a formidable opponent. Ranked No. 13 in the nation, UMass enters the game with the top–ranked offense in the A–10.

While Massachusetts signal–caller Todd Bankhead has thrown for 2,200 yards and 22 touchdowns, Rhode Island's field–general, Rudy Bulgar, has only put forth 1,031 yards and three scores.

Still, any A–10 opponent must be respected.

"This conference is very, very tough, and it's very, very even," Whipple said. "There are no bad teams. We just have to get more consistent and as long as we win the fourth quarter, we ought to be in good shape."

JAY PREMACK / COLLEGIAN

Marcel Shipp and the Massachusetts football team will look to stay atop the Atlantic 10 this weekend when they head to Kingston to face URI.

A–10's open up tonight; UMass set to face Flyers

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

It's almost hard to believe that the Massachusetts women's soccer team is only two wins away from a 16th trip to the NCAA tournament.

Between season–ending injuries to four key players, Robin Smith, Brooke Bartlett, Kate Webb and Martha Conover, a 1–5 start, and an improved Atlantic 10 conference, things looked shaky for a while. The question of whether or not UMass would even make the A–10 tourney was without an answer up until the final day of the regular season, as the Minutewomen downed St. Bonaventure, 3–1, to earn the No. 4 seed in this weekend's conference tournament.

WOMEN'S SOCCER
BELL ATLANTIC / ATLANTIC 10 TOURNAMENT
BAUJAN FIELD @ UNIVERSITY OF DAYTON
DAYTON, OHIO
SEMIFINALS - TODAY
No. 4 UMass vs. No. 1 Dayton - 5:30 p.m.
No. 2 George Washington vs. No. 3 Xavier - 8 p.m.
FINALS - SUNDAY
Semifinal winners - 12 p.m.
PREVIEW

Although the path to get to Dayton this weekend may have resembled Homer's "Odyssey" more than the smooth sailing that it has been in year's past, the story line still remains the same: UMass is in the post–season.

"This is what you build for. I'm just pleased that we made it," Massachusetts coach Jim Rudy said. "At times it [making post–season play] was seriously in doubt, but I thought we showed a lot of character by coming back."

UMass [10–10, 7–4 in the A–10] will need to win the tournament this weekend in order to get the automatic bid to the NCAA tournament that goes along with the trophy. The Minutewomen will open up their title defense of last year's crown tonight at 5:30 p.m. when they will play host Dayton, the No. 1 seed.

UMass was the only team to beat Dayton in the A–10 this season, a 2–1 win at Baujan Field on Oct. 18. Add the fact that the Flyers struggled down the stretch in squeaking out wins over La Salle and Fordham, and Rudy knows Dayton is going to come out with a full arsenal in hopes of shooting down the Minutewomen.

"Knowing their coach [Mike Tucker] and their last three results, I know that they're going to be totally fired up," he said. "Plus we're the only team to beat them in the conference, so I know they're not happy about that."

The Minutewomen will also find themselves in a role that they aren't accustomed to this weekend: the underdog. Usually it's UMass which is the top seed, but this time it will be Dayton that is in that position.

However, what could be the most important factor in a weekend tournament like this is that anything can happen, no matter what the seedings say.

"Anyone can win the tournament," said Rudy in regards to this weekend's field that also includes George Washington and Xavier. "The A–10 is really improved, and those are three teams that we played tooth and nail tight."

Offensively, the Flyers will be led by Renee Harmeyer, Jen Lucas and Bridget Bushman, but the depth of the host team will be a key. Dayton is a squad that will use as many as 18 players in their rotation.

The other semifinal game will pit No. 2 George Washington [11–9, 9–2 in the A–10] against No. 3 Xavier [10–6–2, 8–2–1 in the A–10] tonight at 8 p.m. Both teams came away with nailbiting victories over the Minutewomen this season. GW beat UMass 1–0 on Oct. 9 in Amherst, while the Musketeers pulled out a 3–2 overtime victory in Cincinnati on Oct. 16.

The finals will be Sunday at noon.

Minutewomen Notes: The Atlantic 10 announced their All–Conference teams last night. UMass placed four players on the first team, including Sophie Lecot, Amanda Thompson, Emma Kurowski and Kara Green (See related story, page 7).

UMass set to open A–10s vs. SJU

By Aaron Saykin
Collegian Staff

Forget about the 11 wins during the regular season. Forget about the 4–1 Atlantic 10 record and conference title. The post–season has begun for the Massachusetts field hockey team, and according to coach Patty Shea, it's time to forget everything.

When her squad travels to Temple University this weekend for the A–10 conference tournament, its regular season resume will mean nothing during its first–round meeting with fourth–seeded St. Joseph's on Saturday at noon. The winner will advance to the conference title game, and the loser — asking itself the proverbial 'what if?' question — will earn an early trip home.

"It's tournament time, so anything can happen. Anything's possible," said Shea, who feels that her team's No. 1 seeding will hardly matter against the Hawks. "It's a brand new season for every team. You have to give everything for the first game because there is no tomorrow. You have to throw the records away because it's a one–game season now."

As the two–time defending champion and top–seed, the Minutewomen enter the conference post–season with expectations for a third consecutive title. Despite the difficulty which accompanies the fulfillment of such billing, Shea is attempting to keep her players focused and on the same course which led them to a 10–4 mark over their last 14 games.

Although St. Joe's is the lowest seed in the tournament, the second–year UMass coach feels the Hawks will be a more than formidable opponent.

"There really is no pressure. You don't think about the No. 1 seed, you think about the job you have to do," she said. "We need to come out with emotion, and we need to come ready to play hard against St. Joseph's. They're a very good team. They've had some great goalkeeping, they're scrappy, and they're a physical team."

The winner of the UMass–St. Joe's contest will advance to meet the West Chester–Rhode Island victor in Sunday's championship game, which Temple will again host at noon.

Although the winner of the tournament received an automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament in 1997, that won't be the case this year. Instead, the champion must win a play–in game against the Patriot League victor for the opportunity to go to the big dance.

One of the leading factors continuing to the post–season success of the Minutewomen over the past two seasons has been their aggressive non–conference schedule, which has sent them on back–to–back days to play at national powerhouses such as North Carolina, Wake Forest, Maryland, Syracuse and Virginia. Although most of the contests have not resulted in a UMass victory, Shea feels that the experience

Turn to FIELD, page 7

FIELD HOCKEY
ECAC USA/ATLANTIC 10 TOURNAMENT
BEASLEY FIELD @ TEMPLE UNIVERSITY
PHILADELPHIA, PA.
SEMIFINALS - SATURDAY
No. 1 UMass vs. No. 4 St. Joseph's - 12 p.m.
No. 2 West Chester vs. No. 3 Rhode Island - 3 p.m.
FINALS - SUNDAY
Semifinal winners - 12 p.m.
PREVIEW

UM women to start play

By Jackie Leroux
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's basketball team will kick off its season tomorrow with a 5 p.m. exhibition game in the William D. Mullins Center. The Minutewomen will be playing host to the Russia Select team, a team of Russian All–Stars from Rossiyanka, Russia.

The Russian team is comprised of women ranging in ages from 19 to 29, and in height from 5–foot, 7 inches, to an imposing 6–foot–9. Since they are a foreign team, the Select may bring a style of play that differs somewhat from American college ball.

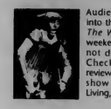
"If they play the regular style that most foreign teams play, they'll play with a lot of range," Massachusetts women's basketball coach Joanie O'Brien said. "A lot of the foreign teams play a lot of zone defense, which is something you don't see a lot of in college basketball."

O'Brien, however, is not overly concerned about the Select team, and feels that the Minutewomen can handle anything that comes their way.

"There won't be a lot that they'll do that we won't be able to defend against," O'Brien said. "I'm not really worried about them."

Part of the reason why O'Brien is not worried is because this game holds a significance that rises above the final score. The importance of tomorrow's game has a lot more to do with experience than with a W or an L in the stat book.

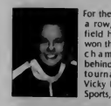
WOMEN'S B-BALL
UMASS @ TEAM RUSSIA
SATURDAY, 5 P.M.
91.1 FM- WMUA
JON PLACE- PLAY
BETH LUTY- COLOR
WEEKEND PREVIEW



The game will allow the team, and especially the rookies, to work out any nervousness they may have. It will also allow the rookies to feel for the first time what it is like to play in a college basketball game, and what it's like to play at the Mullins Center. The team will have their first opportunity to see how well the first few weeks of practice have paid off.

Turn to START, page 7

The Massachusetts
DAILY COLLEGIAN



Volume CIV Issue 44 — New England's Largest College Daily • Founded in 1890 • Daily Since 1967 — Monday, November 9, 1998

Easing on down the road

Audiences packed into the FAC to see The Wiz over the weekend and were not disappointed. Check out our review of the Guild show (see Arts & Living, page 6).

Third time's the charm

For the third year in a row, the UMass field hockey team won the Atlantic 10 championship behind the play of tournament MVP Vicky Browne (see Sports, page 14).

WORLD

Incarcerated Pinochet loses faith in Britain

LONDON (AP) — In his first public statement since his arrest in London last month, former Chilean dictator Gen. Augusto Pinochet says he feels betrayed by Britain, a newspaper reported.

"I am saddened that the experience of my arrest has shaken my belief in Britain... I did not believe that I would be the subject of spurious attempts by foreign prosecutors to convict me on unproven charges," early editions of The Sunday Times quoted Pinochet as saying in a four–page statement.

The newspaper said it received the statement Saturday from a public relations company acting as an intermediary for the general. A copy of the statement was sent to The Associated Press.

British police arrested the 82–year–old Pinochet on Oct. 16 at the instigation of a Spanish magistrate seeking to extradite him on charges of genocide, terrorism and torture.

NATION

Glenn shaky, satisfied after second space trip

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — After a shaky reintroduction to gravity, John Glenn was "95 or 98 percent back to normal" yesterday, walking briskly, telling jokes and urging old folks to follow their dreams.

"I feel very elated that things went well. We got a lot of the data we were looking to get and worked very hard up there," NASA's 77–year–old geriatric test subject said his first morning back on Earth.

"Obviously, we'd like to... go right back up again, but that's not to be. And so, a sense of accomplishment I guess I feel and a little bit of letdown that the whole thing is over, maybe, but nothing serious."

In his first post–flight news conference, Glenn admitted he "didn't feel too hot" when he stood and walked out of space shuttle Discovery on Saturday.

He was determined, though, to join his six crewmates for the traditional walk around the shuttle.

"If I would have been on my hands and knees I was going to do it," said Glenn, who beat the oldest–spaceman record by 16 years. "I wasn't quite to that point, but obviously I was not doing my best quit out there. I was not disoriented, that would be too strong a word for it."

Even after a good night's sleep, Glenn still was being careful yesterday not to turn his head, which after nine days of weightlessness would have made him dizzy. He described it as being "alligator headed."

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tues	Wed
HIGH:49 LOW: 30	HIGH: 51 LOW: 30	HIGH: 67 LOW: 48

INSIDE

Arts & Living.....page 6
Classifieds .....page 12
Comics.....page 13
Crossword .....page 13
Editorial .....page 4
FYI.....page 12
News.....page 1
Sports .....page 14

ON THE INTERNET

www.umass.edu/rso/colegian

Partnership lacks student voices, ineffeciency blamed

By Julie Fialkow
Collegian Staff

No students representing the University of Massachusetts were present at last week's U Mass–Amherst partnership committee meeting.

Jodi Bailey, associate speaker of the Student Government Association Senate, who has been attending the meeting since the partnership's inception, said students do not feel that the meetings are productive.

"The meetings have never gone well. Students don't want to go to meetings where nothing is accomplished. If we felt like anything productive would happen, we'd go," she said.

The UMass–Amherst partnership committee meeting was created in the fall of 1997. According to a pamphlet, the mission statement adopted by the problem solving partnership includes the following introduction:

"The mission of the Partnership is to develop a comprehensive community–wide series of recommended solutions to problems of criminal behavior, particularly noise, vandalism, violent crimes and other dangerous behavior which has a substantial adverse impact on residents of the town and their quality of life."

Bailey said right now the meetings aren't conducive to meeting these goals.

"Right now it is a waste of time to go to the meetings and sit and argue," she said.

"The overall opinion of students needs to change. Some people in the meetings are good at talking to students, others talk down to students while they're in the room. It doesn't encourage or foster good will in the meetings."

Bailey added that last year there were about ten students who used to attend the meetings. They found it discouraging, she said, and had other things to do during the week that took precedence over the meetings.

Hill Boss, a member of the partnership, said it is a shame students are not attending the meetings.

"Their frustration level is greater than their commitment to working with others toward alcohol issues. They are frustrated, but at the same time they have made major contributions to the meetings," said Boss.

Boss added that the students have been getting things accomplished but, "feel they are working too hard for it."

"Anything worth changing is worth fighting for," he said, "that is a lesson you have to learn."

KARA STORER/ COLLEGIAN

A Sunday excursion

MassPirg members Marlene Naanes, Hillary Milens, and Jennifer Schorvisky test the water quality of the campus pond early Sunday morning.

UMass Police seek new contract, accuse school of unfair labor practices

By Lorraine Kennedy
Collegian Staff

After months of unsuccessful contract negotiations, the University of Massachusetts Police Department filed an unfair labor practices suit against the University on Oct. 29, alleging that they have bargained in bad faith.

The police department has been negotiating since January for a three–year contract that would offer them comparable benefits to police departments in other towns and cities, according to Officer Brian Narkewicz, president of the Local 432A unit of the International Brotherhood of Police, the police department's union.

The department is currently operating under their old contract, which expired in December of 1997.

Narkewicz said that on Oct. 13 the University "alluded to an offer" similar in numbers to the contract offered to the American Federation for State County and Municipal Employees (AFSCME), another union on campus; however, the University did not commit to the offer in writing at that time.

"[AFSCME's] three–year contract included a 3 percent raise in the first year, a 2 percent raise in the first six months of the second year... a 3 percent raise in the final year and an increased step system in pay to, in effect, provide for another 4 percent in raises," Narkewicz said.

As a result of the offer, the police department did not picket the Oct. 14 debate at the Mullins Center as they had planned.

"Out of respect for the offer put out on the table, we declined to picket the gubernatorial debate," Narkewicz said.

On Oct. 19, Narkewicz said the department was told that everyone in the UMass President's Office had approved the police department's proposed contract. The proposal was then sent to the Office of Employee Relations (OER), so the figures could be calculated.

Three days later, Narkewicz said, OER rejected the contract, even though the University had told the department that OER had pre–approved it.

"We were told the state office rejected the deal because the University had overstepped their bounds," he said. UMass Employee/Labor Relations administrator Nick Marshall felt it was "not appropriate" to comment on the status of police contract negotiations; nor would he comment on whether an amended contract would be offered to the department.

The police department responded by putting up signs advertising their cause during Homecoming weekend and by hiring an airplane to fly over the dedication of the School of Management ceremony and the football game, Narkewicz said.

In addition, they filed the unfair labor practices suit, on the grounds that the University practiced "regressive bargaining," Narkewicz said.

"UMass has fiscal autonomy. They should be able to do their own negotiating," he said, criticizing how OER, who is unrelated to the University, was able to void the agreement.

Narkewicz said that the department is awaiting the unfair labor practices hearing, which would determine "whether a violation of labor law has been committed" by the University.

If so, he said, the University will be told to either "honor its commitment" to the proposed contract, or "sit down again to bargain."

Marshall said last Thursday that the University and the police department are still in mediation, and are waiting for the mediator to set a date for another session.

Nobel Laureates discuss future of economics

By Rebecca Sablo
Collegian Correspondent

At the Philip Gamble Memorial Lecture sponsored by the University of Massachusetts Department of Economics on Nov. 5, three Nobel Prize Laureates spoke on the topic of world economy.

The lecture, fourth in the series, entitled "The World Economy: The Triumph of Free Markets or the Age of Inequality and Instability," was addressed by Professor Kenneth J. Arrow of Stanford University, Professor Robert M. Solow of MIT, and Professor James Tobin of Yale.

The speakers focused on economics in developing nations, but also on the current state of economics in the developed nations.

Arrow said that free markets have shown success overall, but they are always accompanied by bouts of instability and fluctuation caused by unstable social systems. These changes promote economic growth and development, he said.

"Economics is future oriented. Commitments today are made without certainty of what will happen in the future. Behavior today is driven by expectations," Arrow said.

The Russian economy, said Arrow, is in shambles because it made an immediate switch from a centrally planned economy to an economy based on free markets.

Arrow explained that institutions were never developed to support free markets, and privatization took place too rapidly in Russia. "Institutions weren't developed in competitive markets," he said, and others were sold off as monopolies.

He also stated that the undeveloped banking system prevented small businesses from emerging, which decreased any competition within the market.

"The entire process should have taken much longer," Arrow said.

Tobin agreed that developed institutions are essential to establishing a successful free market.

"Countries rushed into the facade of capitalism without the foundation for capitalism," Tobin said.

He believed that it was a mistake for the United States to claim victory for free markets at the end of the Cold War. Instead, he believed there was a mixing of regulations and free markets. He further criticized the United States for pushing countries to convert immediately to capitalism.

Solow also recognized the importance of mixing economic systems.

"No one believes in a centrally planned economy anymore, but the question is how much state intervention do you need. As we continue to privatize and deregulate... it is important to insure that competition remains intense," in order for free markets to succeed, he said.

Solow supported his statement by citing the fact that industries do worse if they are protected from foreign firms and corporations.

Arrow also thought that government involvement could be used to promote free markets.

Turn to NOBEL, page 2

Construction of garage to begin in spring 2000

By Mary Grein
Collegian Correspondent

Final plans for the parking garage to be built on Boltwood Walk in Amherst will be looked at this week but details still have to be decided.

Construction on the parking garage, which will have approximately 202 spaces, is planned to begin in the spring of 2000, according to Building Commissioner and staff support for the project, William Stark.

The timetable for the construction is not final. The work will either be completed all in one year or be broken up, starting next summer, then stopping for the fall and winter and finishing the garage again in spring.

Jonathan Tucker, a support efforts worker for the project, said the problem with the latter of the two options is that to stop and restart the construction would cost additional money.

The project will already cost over the original $4 million estimate, although the latest amount is not yet available from the architect.

Tucker believes there will be no problem getting the additional money, because the project has been given a $3 million grant from the state.

At the next meeting, being held Nov. 10, the final plans will be looked over for the project, which has been in the works for over two years.

"The project is in the design development phase and is moving toward the final stages before construction," Tucker said.

Some issues that still need to be discussed include the first resurfacing of the deck. Once it has been decided if the new ideas are accepted, the final costs can be calculated.

The centrally located position of the parking garage will affect the entire community, and despite the fact that some spaces may turn into leased ones, the lot will be available to everyone.

The Amherst Redevelopment Authority, who decides the major factors of the project, is a committee which is not affiliated with local Amherst government.

They were not available for comment on their most recent opinions of the project.

GLBT's and allies encouraged to address issues on moral ground

By Will Thomson
Collegian Correspondent

A speaker called for gay activists and academics to look at the bigger picture, and to find broader meaning in their work during a conference at Smith College last weekend.

Urvashi Vaid, director of the policy institute of the National Gay and Lesbian Task Force, spoke as one of more than a dozen guest speakers who gathered for the conference entitled "Queer Activism, Queer Studies."

Topics addressed at the three–day conference ranged from the scientific findings on the so–called gay gene, to the emergence of gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender (GLBT) characters on television, to how GLBT in lividuals can combine their activism with their art.

Vaid mentioned the Human Rights Campaign's endorsement of U.S. Senate candidate Al D'Amato as an example of narrowness of view. She said they defended their decision to endorse the anti–choice candidate by saying they were a "gay and lesbian organization, not a pro–choice or feminist organization."

Allan Berube, another speaker at the conference and author of the award–winning book, "Coming Out Under Fire: The History of Gay Men and Women in World War Two," said that gays are being pitted against one another.

He described how Borders Books busted a nascent union by telling their gay workers that unions were anti–gay, and telling workers that gays were anti–union.

The ploy was successful and the union never got off the ground, he told the audience. He cited this situation as an example of how single–issue myopia can harm the movement.

"If we can't have unity, we need solidarity. Solidarity is something built, something that you work towards. It doesn't mean liking or agreeing with everybody, but standing together for specific common goals," Berube said.

Vaid argued that you can't be for gay rights and opposed to rights for gay African Americans or working class gays. "I want to be able to say that we are a movement for social justice," Vaid said.

"Who defines the 'gay and lesbian' issue?" Vaid asked. "Why is health care not more urgent than marriage? Why is fighting poverty not the most pressing issue? We have worked on HIV measures, but haven't tackled the larger problem of universal health care... What we need are systematic changes, not quick fixes."

Vaid called into question the very existence of a "Queer Movement," and warned that it is quickly becoming a "single issue coalition working toward specific civil rights legislation," losing sight of the big picture.

"If we really call ourselves progressive, we need to take principled stands... We need real confrontation with authority in a strong, sensible, thoughtful and moral way," Vaid said. "We need relationships between progressive activists."

She called for constructive ties with others groups working on issues of racial equality and helping the poor.

"We need to reach out. Ranking oppression is so eighties," Vaid said.

If progressives of all types could come together and find common ground, then Vaid believes, "the queer future would be wonderful and optimistic."

Chai Feldblum, a lawyer who works in Washington for gay and lesbian civil rights, spoke at the conference on Saturday. Feldblum was instrumental in drafting and negotiating the Employment Non–Discrimination Act and in work on AIDS and HIV legislation.

"I want to talk with you about why gay sex is good, and why I never say that when I testify before Congress." She defined the different strategies that pro–gay and anti–gay activists use when fighting for legislation.

The initial arguments of both camps are identical, she said, in that both agree gays don't make an "affirmative choice" of their orientation.

"No one wakes up one day at they age of 11 and decides to be attracted to members of the same sex," Feldblum said. "Opponents of civil rights for gays have all sorts of explanations for what makes people gay. Some opponents argue that it is God–given, others that it is due to bad parenting, biology, child abuse, even hand–eye coordination — that gays can't throw a ball."

She said opponents of GLBT rights believe sexual orientation is very hard to change and that is why they believe it is crucial the government invest money to do so.

Where advocates and opponents really differ, she said, is on the implications of acting on sexual orientation. Feldblum said that opponents of GLBT rights think that although one's orientation is not a conscious choice, having relations with members of the same sex is "Opponents of gay rights fill up space with discussion of morality, but advocates of gay rights run from the issue. Opponents want to talk about the moral implications of us having sex," Feldblum said.

Advocates on the other hand, portray being GLBT as an intrinsic quality, based on immutable factors thus deserving the same protection as other groups based on skin color

Turn to GLBT, page 2

News Briefs

Award-winning historian Ronald Takaki will speak tonight at 8 p.m. in Johnson Chapel at Amherst College. A Distinguished Professor of Ethnic Studies at the University of California- at Berkeley, Takaki has written many notable books, including Iron Cages: Race and Culture in 19th Century America, From Different Shores: Perspectives on Race and Ethnicity in America, and Hiroshima: Why America Dropped the Atom Bomb. Tonight's lecture, titled "The Coming Multicultural Millennium," is part of Amherst College's "Dialogue on Race" series.

Information taken from Amherst College Press Release.
— Stacey Shackford

The show-cause hearing for an assault reported to University of Massachusetts Police Nov. 1 naming basketball player Monty Mack will be Nov. 20 in Hampshire District Court in Northampton.

President Bulger honored at Athenaeum's gala affair

By Michael Gauthier
Collegian Correspondent

History was made Oct. 22, when University of Massachusetts President William M. Bulger was named an honorary member of the Library of the Boston Athenaeum.

Bulger was the guest of honor at the Athenaeum's first- ever gala dinner where he addressed 500 people gathered to mark the historic event.

"Education is an active process, a personal and individual process, and it is directed, first and foremost, to a personal and individual product: the development of a peculiarly human trait, the intellect," Bulger said. "Nothing we do meets this standard for learning as simply, yet powerfully, as reading; reading actively, reading deeply, reading critically, reading in a way that allows us to assert that formative power of our minds."

It has been a while since the Athenaeum has named a person to be an honorary member.

The last person to have that honor was painter Gilbert Stuart in 1823.

The title of honorary member is given to a person who is an outstanding supporter of literature and humanities, as well as an upstanding member of society. As the 24th President of the University of Massachusetts, Bulger has been a supporter of public libraries.

Bulger's involvement with public libraries includes being past President of the Boston Public Library Board of Trustees. He remains an active member of the Board.

The Athenaeum is a 10-story private library, the first two floors of which are open to the public, and is one of the oldest and most distinguished libraries in the United States.

When it was founded in 1807, the purpose of such an establishment was to create a library similar to the Athenaeum and Lyceum of Liverpool in Great Britain by bringing together the advantages of a public library, and the great works of learning and science, in all languages.

The Art Gallery, which was established in 1827, grew rapidly and currently contains works by John Singer Sargent, Gilbert Stuart and other artists. It forms the nucleus for the museum of Fine Arts.

The library also contains 750,000 books, including George Washington's personal library and one of the world's largest collections of Confederate documents.

Its reading rooms display copies of Greco-Roman statues, and busts of prominent Bostonians.

KARA STORTI/ COLLEGIAN

Umass in the Five College spotlight

Continuing education senior Kim Mitton, center, starred in the Amherst College production of The Murder Room Saturday night.

■ Nobel

continued from page 1

He believes that more people are willing to support free markets because governments are offering protection against insecurities through unemployment assistance, Medicare, and insurance.

Tobin was not as optimistic about the state of developing nations. He said that there has been a decrease in the stability of the developing countries, partly because of the crisis in exchange rates.

"Developing countries are having a hard enough time maintaining their own country without being flooded with outside short-term investments. It is desirable to have a flow of capital funds... from developed nations to smaller and developing economies," he said.

Solow forewarned about the future based on the past.

"The most important economic event in the last quarter century... is the production slowdown that took place in the U.S. and everywhere else after 1973," Solow said. According to Solow, output per hour work rate of production decreased from a 2½ rise per year to a 1% rise. "It gives a general tone of what economic life will be like in the future," Solow said.

The decrease is especially alarming because "the degree of inequality has widened everywhere," Solow said. "Top earners earn more than bottom earners now than they used to do."

He warned that the two could interact to make the economic outcome even worse.

Tobin also thought there should be concern with the increase in inequality and the fact that it is increasingly occurring in the United States.

"We need to be concerned with equality of opportunity, not the equality of outcome," he said.

In addition, Arrow touched on the issue of inequality. He said that Chief Executive Officer salaries are dramatically rising in proportion to workers' salaries.

The lecture received mixed reviews. Rohit Kaul, a senior economics major at UMass, was impressed by the speakers.

"I found the lecture really interesting, and I couldn't believe that UMass was able to get Nobel Prize winners to speak," Kaul said.

Aishe Gobluk, a 1997 political science graduate from Mount Holyoke College, thought that there was something missing from the lecture.

"I felt that they didn't focus on the problems in the Third World countries with the seriousness or the urgency that is needed," Gobluk said.

Economic Department Chairperson Gerald Epstein called the Nobel Laureates "three of the most outstanding economists in the world."

Arrow, who won the Nobel Prize in 1972, specializes in the economy of uncertainty and knowledge accumulation. Solow, who received the Prize in 1987, focuses on economic theory of unemployment and economic growth. Tobin is a leading macroeconomist and studies the budget deficit along with the theory of monetary and economic growth. According to him, he won the Nobel Prize from popularizing the notion, "don't put all of your eggs in one basket."

The Philip Gamble Lecture is in memory of former Economics Professor Philip Gamble and was created by his wife and former student. "The World Economy Today" was the fourth lecture.

■ GLBT

continued from page 1

or gender, she said.

In fact, the religious right does not refer to "gays" but instead prefer the term PAPOSS, People Attracted to Persons of the Same Sex, Feldblum said, because they don't want people to think of gays as a group, but rather as a population defined by their actions, as when Trent Lott compared GLBT individuals to "alcoholics or kleptomaniacs."

"In the United States, you can't base legislation on religious belief, so when you take God out of the picture, the religious right's moral objections are shallow and self- referential that sex between a man and a women is innately good and between members of the same sex is innately bad," Feldblum said.

She encouraged GLBT individuals to address the arguments of the religious right, and said that the question of morality is a battle that can be won.

"What are the costs of retreating?" Feldblum asked. "We are being pushed to a battlefield where the war is not being fought."

She said that GLBT individuals have to make a strong argument that "love is a universal good and sex is how love is actualized in a positive way."

Collegian News.

You never know exactly what you're going to find...

The Collegian Graphics Department is currently taking applications for next semester. Please come down and speak to Dave Voldan if you are interested.

Timberland
FOLLOW YOUR OWN PATH

COLORADO
The Ultimate Outdoor Adventure Store
featuring Apparel, Footwear and Accessories for Men and Women

Come in now and take an additional 10% off purchase of $50 or more with your college ID

Cambridgeside Galleria Mall, Cambridge
South Shore Plaza, Braintree • Holyoke Mall, Holyoke
Burlington Mall, Burlington

PRINCIPLES of SOUND RETIREMENT INVESTING

RECENTLY, MORNINGSTAR CALLED US CHEAP.

IT'S NOT EVERY DAY YOU GET A COMPLIMENT LIKE THAT.

All financial companies charge operating fees and expenses — some more than others. Of course, the lower the expenses you pay, the better. That way, more of your money goes where it should — towards building a comfortable future.

We make low expenses a top priority.

As the largest retirement system in the world[1] — a nonprofit company focused exclusively on the financial needs of the educational and research communities — our expenses are among the lowest in the insurance and mutual fund industries.[2]

In fact, TIAA-CREF's 0.31% average fund expenses are less than half of the expense charges of comparable funds.[3] It's why Morningstar — one of the nation's leading sources of annuity and mutual fund information — says, "At that level [TIAA-CREF] is cheaper than any other [variable annuity] policy, and is even competitive with the cheapest mutual fund complexes, though it offers far more benefits."[4]

"TIAA-CREF sets the standard in the financial services industry."

Of course, expenses are only one factor to consider when you make an investment decision. Morningstar also noted our commitment to "consumer education, service" and "solid investment performance." Because that can make a difference in the long run, too.

At TIAA-CREF, we believe people would like to spend more in retirement, not on their retirement company. Today, over two million people count on that approach to help them build a comfortable and secure future. So can you. To find out more, call us at 1 800 842-2776. We'd consider it a compliment.

Visit us on the Internet at www.tiaa-cref.org

TIAA CREF Ensuring the future for those who shape it.

1. Based on $236 billion in assets under management. 2. Standard & Poor's Insurance Rating Analysis, 1998; Lipper Analytical Services, Inc., Lipper Directors' Analytical Data 1998 (Quarterly). 3. Of the 4,829 variable annuities tracked by Morningstar, the average fund had total fees combining annual expenses of 0.82% plus an insurance expense of 1.27%. Source: Morningstar, Inc., for periods ending 7/31/98. 4. Source: Morningstar Principia Variable Annuities/Life 6/30/98.

TIAA-CREF expenses are subject to change and are not guaranteed for the future. Past performance is no guarantee of future results. TIAA-CREF Individual and Institutional Services distributes CREF certificates and interests in the TIAA Real Estate Account. For more complete information, including charges and expenses, call 1 800 842-2776, extension 5509, for the prospectuses. Read them carefully before you invest or send money.

©1998 TIAA-CREF, 730 Third Avenue, New York, NY

Israeli–Palestinian peace activists to speak

By Elana Premack
Collegian Staff

With the echo of the Friday bombing of a Jerusalem marketplace still in the air, peace activists from Palestine and Israel will visit the Five College area this week.

Building the "arms of dialogue rather than the dialogue of arms," Zoughbi Zoughbi, of Bethlehem, and Judith Green, of Jerusalem, will present a panel discussion, "Roads to Reconciliation: Peacebuilding in the Middle East," tonight at 7:30 in the Campus Center Room 101.

Over the past year and a half, the Oslo peace agreement signed in 1993 by Yasser Arafat and Yitzhak Rubin has been "eroded." The recent signing by Yasser Arafat and Benjamin Netanyahu of the Wye River peace accord offers another chance for a peaceful resolution of the continuing Palestinian–Israeli conflict, according to Larry Goldbaum, Director of the Office of Jewish Affairs.

However, last week's bombing by the Islamic Jihad, which had the intent of blocking the peace accord, seems to contradict hopes for peace.

"There will never be peace," Marni Thompson, a junior spending this semester studying abroad in Israel said. "There are too many people with too many conflicting opinions."

Zoughbi, on the other hand, believes that a "warm" peace between Palestinians and Israelis will guarantee an enduring peace.

The combination of the peace accord, the bombing, and conflicting opinions provides a timely backdrop for tonight's program.

"Zoughbi and Judith's visit will provide an opportunity for members of the UMass community to hear from two of the courageous individuals who are helping to lay the foundation for a peaceful settlement to this conflict," Goldbaum said.

Zoughbi is the director of the Wi'am Palestinian Conflict Resolution Center.

The Center works to build relationships and bridges across communities which are often in strife. Zoughbi has also been active in workshops which aim to promote peace between Palestinian and Israeli communities.

Green immigrated from the United States to Israel in 1973. She is one of the founders of the Rapproachment Dialogue Center, and founded the Nablus–West Jerusalem Dialogue for Peace, and the Abu Tor Neighborhood Dialogue Group. The Rapproachment Dialogue Center has grown from a small group of Israelis and Palestinians who met with an interest in creating dialogue and gaining mutual understanding.

During the week, Zoughbi and Green will also meet with local Palestinians, Israelis and American Jews and visit classes at the Five Colleges.

"Roads to Reconciliation: Peacebuilding in the Middle East" is the second part of a two-part program sponsored by the Office of Jewish Affairs, Karuna Center for Peacebuilding and Friends of Bosnia.

KELLY FITZPATRICK/ COLLEGIAN

All eyes on engineering

Troop 471 gets a lesson in engineering from the Society of Women Engineers on Saturday afternoon.

It's Never Too Early To Start Thinking About Writing For The Collegian Next Semester.
Come Down and Speak To News Editor Jill Carroll Todoy!!!

"Club Solitude" begins on campus; members can be alone together

COURTESY CLUB RECLUSE

The Baron Otto Von Tu conducts first general meeting of Club Recluse.

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

Imagine a club organized exclusively for people who want to be excluded. Sounds like an oxymoron, right? Maybe, but a club that does just that is looking to come to the University of Massachusetts.

As a part of the organization "Don't Miss This! Limited," Club Recluse was formed for people who do not like people and crowds. It is a club for people who enjoy being disconnected from society.

The members of Club Recluse never see each other, but are united by the desire to be left alone and enjoy the virtues of solitude. In becoming a member, they receive a handbook with cybertips for ways a recluse can communicate.

"Solitude works," said Club Recluse founder and loner Baron Otto Von Tu, whose name is pronounced "I don't want to." "Club Recluse members receive a certificate which entitles them to spend time alone and not feel guilty about it."

For those students uncertain of their affinity for solitude, Club Recluse offers ways people can live a life of reclusiveness.

Nobody answers the phones at Club Recluse. In keeping with their preference for solitude, members only respond to voice mail messages.

Jim Moore, the Club Company Spokesperson, feels that many people don't realize the benefits of leading a reclusive life.

"We're advocating that people spend more time alone and get to know themselves," Moore said. "The bombardment of the media and Internet lead people into thinking that they need to be constantly keeping up with the age, but they really need to disconnect themselves from all this and reflect on their goals and dreams in life."

Moore explained that people who do not detach from the digital fast pace of the 90's become lost and more focused on how other people want them to be.

In fact, to advocate the growing interest in the club, there are stickers that members and non-members can receive. The stickers read, "Leave Me Alone," and can be sent away for.

Members will receive a free shirt and cap, but Otto Von Tu asks that the wearer of those articles, "abide by the spirit of Club Recluse and agree not to wear the clothing in public."

Roads to Reconciliation

Peacebuilding in the Middle East

Monday
November 9, 7:30 p.m
Campus Center Room 101
UMass/Amherst

Speakers
Judith Green:
Co-dir. Jer...
Bridges C...

Zoughbi Zoughbi:
Co-dir. Ka...
Jerusalem C...

Sponsored by:
...
...
...

Human Resource Director Job Description

Supervisor: Business Manager (Styvo Ogando)

Some of the job responsibilities may include but are not limited to:

- Recruiting
- New Hire Orientation
- Employee File Management
- Payroll Management
- Policy Structuring

The Human Resource Department at The Collegian is a newly created position and therefor maybe modified as needed to fit the needs of the organization. He/she will work closely with the managers at the collegian to accomplish organizational tasks.

Some qualifications for the position are:

- Creativity
- Independance
- Self-Motivation
- Strong Interpersonal
- Desire for learning

Computer skill requirements:

- Microsoft word, willingness to learn new programs

Rock the vote

Election Day has come and gone again. That glorious day on which we Americans exercise our right to govern ourselves, or at least hand the job over to some poor elected official who we'll vilify at some later point anyway. I haven't voted on anything since 1988, when DC Comics conducted a call-in poll to determine whether or not they should kill off Robin. The children of America voted "Yes, have the Joker kill the brat," which I guess is a little disturbing. But at least they showed initiative.

I know. I'm taking my democratic privileges for granted. I also know this makes me a bad person because there were flyers and posters all over campus telling me just how important it is to vote and some of these posters had a picture of Hitler on them. Hitler was a Really Bad Guy, so I guess the implication is that if I don't vote, America will end up with a dictator like Hitler. But then again, the German people really dug the guy and they were the ones who voted the Nazis into power in 1932. Which proves: a) People are stupid and will vote for the candidate with the slickest packaging; and b) Democratic elections are therefore pretty dangerous things.

> "America's about always being the good guy and military-industrial complexes and quality family programming and not having to pay a lot for your muffler."
>
> Boomer Pinches

Personally, I say we do away with elections altogether and let the candidates duel it out American Gladiators style but with real weapons. Last one standing wins. What I wouldn't give to see Gingrich and Gore decked out in blue spandex and going at each other with a machete in one hand and a meathook in the other.

I'm writing this on Election Day. When I'm done here, I have to make a choice: go vote or play wiffleball. No contest there. Wiffleball wins out, hands down. I could conceivably vote and then go play wiffleball, but I've really got to work on my slider (I keep throwing it too low). I figure abstinence is usually the more patriotic choice anyway, because I haven't seen anyone worth voting for in this gubernatorial race, and why should I vote for someone I'm not 100 percent sure about? Besides, I don't like their names. Cellucci has too many "C"s. Harshbarger... well jeez, just look at it. I refuse to vote for anyone with a dumb name. Don't think I'm alone in this. This is why Ronald Reagan was so popular. Alliterative name, fun to say.

National and state elections don't even bother me so much. At least the people who get elected might do something fun, like get mired down in a sordid sex affair or maybe start World War III. What really gets tedious is the small stuff, like the Student Government Association (SGA) elections back in September. Maybe because it's so tragic to see young people throwing their lives away to politics.

Or maybe it's the fact that the entire process is like a little exercise in Kafkaesque bureaucracy, where lots of people work very hard to accomplish nothing at all or at least accomplish nothing very important. It's like a slightly glorified version of Make-Believe for people who never learned how to have fun. Instead of Cowboys and Indians, they pretend they're politicians, except without those scandals that make politics so much fun. And a politician without an entertaining scandal serves no useful purpose at all.

Example of SGA members with too much free time: I got this flyer from the SGA elections hanging proudly on my wall. It was written by some Serious Important People. "Last year, we gained control of the Student Senate," it says. I picture a crack squad of crew-cut commandos in fatigues and combat boots storming the Senate SWAT team style, swinging in through windows and kicking down doors. With this image in mind, I would've voted for these guys in a second, but, in a brilliant P.R. move, after urging "If you can't join us, vote for us," they neglect to mention who they are. Makes it tough to recognize them on a ballot, which is too bad because they made some good points, like "This campus has gone from the rugged old cross and merit-based education to affirmative action and lesbian-pagans." Right on. It's about time somebody addressed this school's growing lesbian-pagan problem. Seems like everywhere I go, they're harassing me with their lesbian-pagan ways.

What really won me over was the picture of some Charlton Heston look-alike in the upper right hand corner. He's carrying an American flag, except that in the blue square where the stars should be there's a big white cross instead. I'm pretty sure this counts as a deliberate defacement of the Ol' Stars and Stripes, but I don't really care because the cross is a lot simpler and easier to draw than all those annoying little stars anyway. Try it.

And since we're back on the subject of America, I'm tired of hearing people say it's un-American to not vote. Hogwash. America's not about voting. America's about rebelling against an oppressive government so that you can establish your own oppressive government (cue patriotic music). America's about buying slaves for your plantation and slaughtering native peoples who won't roll over and surrender the land they live on to white folk. America's about always being the good guy and military-industrial complexes and quality family programming and not having to pay a lot for your muffler. Most of all, being American means finding better and more elaborate ways to be lazy, and devising long-winded rationales for why you don't vote.

Okay, sarcasm aside, I'll say it: it's probably the best country in the world, compared to the other ones out there, but that's like saying Donnie Wahlberg is the best New Kid On The Block: sure he's the cutest, but he still sucks. (And lest you try and argue with me, Donnie really was the cutest New Kid). America's right there in the dictionary under "hypocrisy." So don't expect me to get all excited because I've been granted the power to choose one petty intellectual bureaucrat for another. Should this column happen to move any of you to write letters about the sad apathetic state of young America, be sure to mention stuff like my middle class complacency and my failure to appreciate just how important the S.G.A. is to campus life. I just got done with midterms and I could use the laugh.

Boomer Pinches is a UMass student.

That Mesmerizing Glow...

I have been told that our generation is all about technology, and that we seem to have it all through computers. Recently, my best friend was displaying a set of posters that he had purchased online, along with a printer and a mini-disk player. At first I was appalled — why would he want to purchase items through such risky transactions?

He then proceeded to show me the web pages of the various merchants who had lots of space for happy customers to place their compliments. He then showed me an online auction that apparently went on for a few days until it closed, and the "winners" officially bought their items. He assured me that he spent a considerable amount of time checking out these sites and felt very safe ordering from them, and, he said, "it couldn't be more convenient." I guess he had a point. After all, he didn't even need to leave his room. He didn't have to spend any gas money, or any time going from store to store. He didn't even have to deal with any sales people; all he had to do was sit in his swivel chair and click. So why did this bother me so much?

Lindsay McCarthy

Okay, so there's a newer, faster, more efficient way to spend money. Go capitalism!... but it still makes me very nervous. Computers make me very nervous. They seem to have the capacity to take little bits of humanity out of our lives. As a species humans are pretty social creatures, meaning we all co-exist in communities. From my perspective, computers and what they represent seem to be chipping away at the foundation of humanity.

A strong accusation, I know, but think for a minute — how much time do you spend on your computer in a given day checking and writing emails, going online, browsing a chat room, or just writing a paper? I'm not saying that computers are innately evil, but that they create a wonderful opportunity to curtail, if not completely extinguish, our interactions. I never have to see or speak to anyone so long as I have email. It's not as though I'm doing it on purpose because I don't want to speak with someone, but phone rates are high and I don't have the time to write a letter. It's too much of a pain, so I opt for the fastest choice, email.

> "How much time do you spend on your computer in a given day checking and writing emails, going online, browsing a chat room, or just writing a paper?"

Will this efficient way of living continue to permeate my life? Will there come a point when I'll stop shopping because I don't have enough time, like my friend? Will there come a time in my life when I'll never need to leave my home, when I'll do all of my transactions and encounters through the glowing screen of my monitor? Will I just type, point, and click my days away?

I'm not being all that cynical here. Take a look at the computer science industry — it's enormous! If I was any good at computers (and, of course, didn't despise them, I would be a computer science major in a heartbeat. Talk about job security! It seems to me that if you can program web sites, you'd never be out of work. I certainly don't have that kind of a safety net in any of the professional fields that I'm considering for myself.

Again, just as computers aren't innately evil, neither are the people who create them and their programs. However, it's nearly impossible to deny the ever-growing infiltration of our personal lives by computers. How many people do you know who honestly enjoy chat rooms? How many people do you know who have begun relationships via their computers? Does this possibility (or rather this imminent reality) of cyberspace power scare anyone else?

I'm sure there are some wonderful aspects to computers, like word processing. Seriously, I'm not knocking the importance of computers in my life. I mean, where would I be if I didn't have the luxury of registering for classes, using credit cards, and paying bills, etc. with computers? The problem is that they possess the undeniable ability to take over my entire life.

My biggest fear is that someday I'll end up with a job in which I work in a cubicle in front of a computer, mindlessly going through files and working with clients for some company. I could become one of those people who is unsatisfied with my life, devoid of communication and interaction skills. Will the glow of computer screens eventually command our lives, if they don't already? Will we somehow be conned into accepting this anonymous and emotionless way of existence? My guess is that we probably will, but until that point, I will do my best to keep my participation in our computer-dependent generation to a minimum. Call me old fashioned, but I value human interaction. What do you value?

Lindsay McCarthy is UMass student.

Inventing Idaho

The other day, I was thinking about all the things I take on faith. I'm not talking about things usually associated with faith, such as religious practices, or belief in an afterlife, or anything like that. I'm talking about a more mundane, everyday kind of faith. I realized that I believe in a whole bunch of ordinary things which I have no evidence of.

Take Idaho, for example.

I have never been to Idaho. I have never met anyone from Idaho. I don't even think I've ever even seen a picture of Idaho. The fact that I've seen maps which include Idaho, and the fact that I buy a lot of bags of potatoes which have "Idaho" written on them are actually the only basis for my belief in the state. I may have seen an Idaho license plate once, but I can't really remember.

This is fairly flimsy reason to believe in something. I've heard more eyewitness accounts of UFO abductions than I have of Boise, the capital of this alleged state. In all honesty, what do I have: maps which could easily be faked, potatoes which could have come from anywhere, and an unconfirmed license plate sighting? If I took this evidence to a scientist and told him that I had proved the existence of Idaho, he would laugh me out of his laboratory.

> "If I took this evidence to a scientist and told him that I had proved the existence of Idaho, he would laugh me out of his laboratory."
>
> Mark Shea

I realize how ridiculous this sounds. There is probably very little doubt in your mind that all fifty states do, in fact, exist. You yourself may in fact be from Idaho, and so be free from the crisis of faith which has afflicted me. But I do have a point (of sorts) to all this rambling.

From the time we are born, we are constantly gathering information. Most of this information is practical, and we use it on a daily basis. Reading, mathematics, and the fact that fire burns are all part of our daily life. There is no question that "cat" is spelled "c-a-t," two plus two is four, and you shouldn't put you hand on the stove burner.

But what about all that information you pick up and never have the opportunity to use? Whether it's the report you did on gila monsters in the second grade, or the latest political poll on the evening news, we are constantly given facts that we have no way of verifying. How do I know what the encyclopedia says is true? How do I know that the news station really went out and asked a bunch of people what they thought about the latest election or scandal?

I don't, I'm certainly not going to go ask two thousand people if they think that the president should be impeached or who they're going to vote for, just like I'm not going to travel to every location I learned about in fifth grade geography to confirm its existence. I have to take it on faith that all these facts I'm given are true in order to function in my daily life.

I'm not sure I like that. I don't plan to do anything about it, of course. I'll just rely on the scientific and media communities to police themselves. Still, I don't like the idea that there is a whole bunch of information knocking around in my brain that's there because a guy was writing a textbook and needed to make some stuff up to add pages. I don't like the idea that I get information from the news that could have been made up to further one political agenda or another. I'm not saying that I think these things happen (at least not often), but if they ever did, I would have no way of knowing.

Besides, is there is anyone out there who has never taken some creative liberties with a term paper because they had to get it done? Those people can there running the world used to be just like us. I would certainly make up a place like Idaho if the geography text I was writing needed another fifty pages or so.

I'm not sure that this article has much of a point. I suppose everyone knows that the news could be made up. I'm sure everyone has had a teacher whom they knew was just making it up as he went along. I guess all I'm saying is, before you go to Idaho, make sure it exists.

Mark Shea is a UMass student.

Descartes said: "I think therefore I am, but I wish I could write for Ed/Op."

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

We encourage our readers to respond to the contents of the Collegian through letters to the editor. But please remember:

* Letters must be typed and signed.
* No more than 400 words long
* They must include name, address, and phone number for confirmation purposes.
* The Collegian reserves the right to edit letters for length, clarity, and style.

They can be submitted by mail to Ed/Op Editor, Daily Collegian, 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst MA 01003; by email to our new account at: letter=@olumix.oit.umass.edu; or by fax to (413) 545-1592.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.umass.edu/rso/collegian

Casey Kane Editor-in-Chief Position Vacant Managing Editor Styve Ogando Business Manager David Voldan Production Manager
Steve Salerno Jr. Advertising Manager David Parmenter Advertising Production Manager Edgar Barros Senior Diversity Editor

Bryan McAllister Arts & Living Editor
Edgar Barros Black Affairs Editor
Laura Forster Developing Nations Editor
Mike Messaros Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Elana Premack Co-Jewish Affairs Editor

Morgan Tobor Co-Jewish Affairs Editor
Heather Lei Guzzetta Multicultural Affairs Editor
Jill Carroll News Editor
Brian McDermott Photography Editor
Michael Kobylinski Sports Editor
Allana E. Todman Women's Issues Editor

Joseph D. Savitch Editorial Production Manager
Position Vacant Artistic Production Manager
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Daniel Hahn Finance Manager
Mark Prestes Distribution Manager
Feisal Ahmad Marketing Manager

Jaclyn E. Alberti Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Operations Manager
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappar Classified Advertising
Thomas F. Sweeney, Jr. Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Black Affairs

Monday, November 9, 1998

Watch where you pledge

Picture a wide-eyed, excited transfer student who was psyched about his first semester at the University of Massachusetts. Picture this same student who wanted to get involved at his new school, and wanted nothing more than to participate in student organizations and join a fraternity. Picture this same Cape Verdean/African-American student who ignored the warnings and went against societal expectations and, instead of pledging a traditionally African-American fraternity, he decided to go with the Alpha Epsilon Pi fraternity. "Sellout," "naive," "wannabe," and "misguided?" Take your pick. Regardless, this student was I, and my experience at AEPi has made it my duty to warn all of my peers to watch where you pledge.

> "The lesson I want to pass on is simple: keep your eyes open and NEVER lose yourself."
>
> Lenny Holston

I really cannot say why I decided on AEPi. Perhaps it was because of the familiarity of it (having a few white friends in other AEPi chapters), the fact that they have a house, or some illusions of being a kind of Jackie Robinson of Greek life (though almost half of the brothers of this traditionally Jewish frat are Christian and there was once a black brother long ago). I went to the rushes hoping not to be "alone;" I was. I accepted this frat's bid at the expense of my soul.

It was quite a ride. The AEPi parties have all the alcohol you can drink. Misogyny and conformity are taught as Gospel. You can hook up with any drunken, underage girl you like. Even the pledge events are blatant forms of hazing, but it was cool because it made us feel like men. I was even elected pledge class president. I quickly became good friends with most of the brothers, so I thought. The whole time I was trying to be a brother, I stopped being a BROTHER. I also ignored some warning signs that told me that I was not wanted by at AEPi.

The first was my pledge name, Carlton, an el Carlton Banks from the sitcom "The Fresh Prince of Bel Air." Most of my friends and family said that I should be insulted since many equate that character with being of questionable "Blackness." It was only fitting for the "me" I was becoming. I wore the name like a badge of honor. Another warning was the reluctance or refusals of some AEPi's to grant me the interviews I needed (this is crucial to getting initiated). The most egregious sign was at a pledge event, in which we were forced to chug down beers (prune juice if you were on medication), I heard the word "nigger" a few times from some of the AEPi's. Was this an alcohol-induced confession of true feelings?

AEPi made numerous attempts to apologize. They assured me that I was accepted by all. I was told that I was "the backbone of this pledge class." AEPi "really, really wants me to be a part of this fraternity." The "N" word "would not be tolerated here at AEPi and heads would roll." I sincerely believed their act until five days later when I was, out of nowhere, this frat had a meeting to oust me.

I received the "bad" news the day after the frat had a special meeting and upon returning from getting my wisdom teeth removed during Columbus Day weekend. This frat gave us the holiday weekend off. After a mere three weeks of pledging, the official reason was that a few of the AEPi's felt that they did not have a close enough relationship with me. Instead of getting to know me or making themselves more available for me to have that opportunity, I just had to be let go. I guess I had become such a horrible pledge in the five days I was incapacitated from painkillers that it was imperative that AEPi bypass their own three-strike blackball system and pledge me. This wasn't the real reason, but it sounded good. Even more suspect, after telling me the news, they counted the number of merits and interviews I had and stated, surprise-surprise, it was not enough (even though in very recent dealings with some of the pledges, there are a few who have only slightly more NOW, a month later, as I had way back then). This is a moot point anyway, since AEPi had their meeting to oust me BEFORE knowing how many merits I had (plus, I thought the reason was that some AEPi's did not have a close enough relationship with me?). At this, my final meeting, it was more than implied that it was not my character, most of them thought I was cool, it was my inactivity.

The most disgusting development of all came a week or so later. An inside source close to AEPi informed me that it was never intended, by some of the brothers, for me to ever be initiated. It was setup for me to be a token pledge, but have it look like I was a failure. All of the pieces started to fit. I did make it easy for AEPi to achieve their goal by having a hectic schedule and wisdom teeth surgery (though there are other pledges who missed actual pledge events due to schedule and/or medical reasons, some missed the entire first three weeks). By some brothers refusing me the interviews I needed, it was never AEPi's intention to allow me the "privilege" of being in their frat. They were probably afraid that would invite my "N" friends to join.

The lesson I want to pass on is simple: keep your eyes open and NEVER lose yourself. Though the main purpose of most fraternities/sororities is to make instant friends, you should never abandon the individual you are and the beliefs and heritage that make you relevant as a person. Watch ya step kid, protect ya neck. AEPi said that I could not join and be a brother, quite the opposite. By joining them I would have ceased being a BROTHER. They have no tolerance and all of us, blacks and whites, should not tolerate AEPi!

Lenny Holston is a U.Mass student.

Free from slavery?

We live in a world where the one's skin color is the only thing that meets the qualifications for a high-paying position. No matter what type of education or skills you may have, you will never have the tools needed to compete with your white counterparts (reality is that in no way are we seen to be equal). Your abilities will not be downplayed because of stereotypes attached to your group. Instead, decisions made against you holding position in a company will be based around your inability to be part of the ruling race. For self gain, those of the ruling class will put out on the street anyone not belonging to the same class, before he or she allows them to reach any success.

> "Money is power, not to say that one is powerless without money, but that those with money more readily have access to power. Those with power control our thoughts, and through their use of mass media, television, and advertisements, they tell us what is acceptable. Those regnant in society dictate what we can watch and what current fads we should follow, on what we should spend our money, when we should be educated, who can be educated, and how we are to be educated.
>
> Tanisha Goute'

Worship of their only true gods — money and power — are prevalent in their sacrifices, as is destruction of the culture of others in order to get ahead. We live in a nation where dehumanization has become a regular 24 hours per day, 7 days a week job. The dominating forces still contest the presence of inequality.

It makes one wonder if we will ever be free from slavery. The reason why we are still inslaved is because we are used to picking cotton while our masters gain the wealth from our production. In today's society we are forced to take positions in companies with low pay, little or no benefits, and no future rewards. If there are people from our group in a high position, tokens as we would call them, it is only to suggest a fair game when questioned about unequal treatment. No matter how much we may strive to acquire competitive knowledge , we will never be given the chance to be a part of the ruling class. The reason for this is that we are needed on the lower level of the social structure in order for there to be a ruling class at the top. They have enslaved us to be nothing but servants of their capitalist economy.

Through our losses they continue to gain money and power. In return we are blamed for the current conditions of a society in which the ruling class alone possesses the power to mold it in any way they see fit. Our roles in society are considered burdensome and a nuisance. Solutions to end this current state of oppression are not quite attainable due to the fact that, as everyone knows the old saying, "Money Rules The World."

Money is power, not to say that one is powerless without money, but that those with money more readily have access to power. Those with power control our thoughts, and through their use of mass media, television, and advertisements, they tell us what is acceptable. Those regnant in society dictate what we can watch and what current fads we should follow, on what we should spend our money, when we should be educated, who can be educated, and how we are to be educated.

Knowledge is the key to success, but without power it is useless. We can try as hard as we are able to better educate ourselves, to make ourselves more of an asset to society. However, what can we do with a great deal of knowledge and no outlet to put it to good use? Have you ever wondered why it takes some of us so long to find a well-paying job when we graduate? Why are there not enough resources available to us? There are too many questions lacking answers.

We need to use our college experience as a starting point for what we expect to get in the "real world". Our goals should be to become self-starters and independent. To strive for CEO, and don't settle for entry level or we will remain at the bottom of the social class. Learn the fundamentals of what it takes to run your own business in whatever major you are now pursuing. Learn how to invest in your future, and stop thinking about immediate material gain. We need to be the ones making jobs available because others are not trying to make them available to us. It's never easy and there are never right answers.

Who knows when slavery will end. As long as we strive to achieve higher goals, and learn how to bring ourselves up, we will never fail.

Tanisha Goute' is a UMass student.

Cape Verde: A West African hidden jewel finally revealed

This is part two of a two-part series.

Picking up where we left off last Monday...

Ana Gomes de Pina, UMass senior, said there were things that she liked and disliked about her culture.

"The things that I like the most are those that emphasize the need to keep the Cape Verdean culture alive through the language (Crioulo), the foods, and family events, such as weddings and funerals. One popular tradition is called Bishita (be-sheeta).

> Reggie Price

When someone dies in the community, everyone in the community goes to the funeral, whether you knew the person that passed or not. Most women cry like it were their own relative that died. After the service, people bring cooked foods to the bereaved house, because the family is not supposed to cook. One month later, there is a mass, and afterward you must go visit the family, as well as one year later. However, those who don't go to the funeral are looked down upon and considered disrespectful."

Things that she didn't like included,

"... Many people seem very closed minded, especially about other religions. If you are not Catholic, many look down on you and it causes problems with family and friends. There are also the daily struggles to maintain the purity of the language because English is the dominant language in America. Even as friends from the same culture pass by each other, the tendency to speak English overrides the reality of speaking their native Cape Verdean language."

There are many others who can speak on behalf of the Cape Verdean culture, but I was introduced to someone who took my curiosity to a new level. Her name is Alexandra Barros, UMass senior. My wish to learn more about the Cape Verdeans was about to be fulfilled in a different way.

Alexandra was born in Cape Verde, and lived there for about 15 years. Most of the other persons I talked to were either born in America, or left Cape Verde before they were five. Her knowledge and personal experiences bring an interesting twist to the culture.

"Growing up in Cape Verde was very hard. Cape Verde is a very poor country. Many older adults don't know how to read or write, while others may have up to a fifth-grade education. Many did not have the opportunities to go to school like here in America. In some towns, there are no paved roads, neither is there any type of transportation. Many were forced to work on farms or other family businesses there. Cape Verde also has no natural resources; everything needed has to be imported, mostly from Portugal and other European countries. There is not ONE college or university in the whole country! Anyone who wants to pursue a higher education, must do so in another country, and usually do not return home because of the low job market."

I asked her whether or not there were any racial problems there. I wasn't surprised.

"Unfortunately racism is alive and well. The sad thing is that it is Black vs. Black. All of it evolves on the color of your skin, whether you are light skinned or dark skinned. There are even names made up for people! One name, Manjaku, means very dark Africans who go to Cape Verde for business. Badio(badyu), usually means dark-skined people from the island of Santiago. Then there are those who are not from Santiago, usually a lighter complexion, that are called sanpajudu. These names were, and still are, used to humiliate people and even start arguments. Many times it is the cause of sibling rivalry. For example, if a parent is angry with a child, that parent would refer to that child's color in a negative way, causing emotional stress. There are also divisions based on the length of a woman's hair and texture, whether it be straight or curly, for example. These stresses, over a period of time, if unstopped, could lead to physical illness, even to the point of hospitalization."

Alexandria also said that dating and marriage are many times focused on the complexion of an individual.

"Marriage is very different in Cape Verde. Men and women have almost two different vows. While the woman must remain faithful to her husband, he on the other hand, can go around and cheat on her without any danger of her leaving. If she, on the other hand, tried that, she could be killed. If a man gets a woman pregnant, and he leaves her, it is the woman's responsibility to fund and raise the child, sometimes by herself. Almost as if men were expected to go out and cheat! There are no laws against domestic violence, and at times, women have been beaten severely."

I asked what was a typical meal in Cape Verde. She replied, "There are no 'special meals' that are eaten at any particular time of day. All meals can be interchanged. Every island will do things a little different, but you usually can find these foods around the table: Breakfast- Cous Cous(kuoskoous) — Tortilla shaped cornflower, possibly with salt or sugar, is steamed in a special utensil called a bindim (bendi) for about 25 minutes, then taken out and eaten hot with butter/margarine and/or milk.

*Lunch — Katchupa

*Dinner — Beans and rice, fish, and vegetable soup."

Besides Ana, Liz and, and Marlene, there are many other Cape Verdeans here at UMass. Perhaps more popular names would include Jonathan de Pina — one of UMASS's star basketball players, and Sid Ferreira — Manager of the University Store.

Those who have received national recognition include Dana Barros (Boston Celtics) and "Daddy Grace," a preacher.

These are just a few of the people and many wonders of the Cape Verdean culture. For more information, please get involved with the Cape Verdean Students Association (CVSA). CVSA will be holding their bi-annual Cape Verdean Cultural Night on November 21, 1998. Watch and/or listen to your favorite media source for more details.

Reggie Price is a Collegian Correspondent.

Gettin' that slice

I've got that feeling again. It's the same feeling that's been haunting me every day for the past two months; ever since I first set foot back on UMass soil.

The feeling that I have is that of being wrapped in a blanket of emotions that includes joy and sorrow, but worst of all, fear.

A year from now, I'll be in SomeCity, USA; swinging from the steel tree tops of a concrete jungle, just trying to survive. There'll be thousands like me. We'll all be young, idealistic, ready for the world and fresh out of school.

Some of us will already have something lined up. Others will be glued to the classifieds, praying to find the job that already has our nameplates on the office door.

> Humphrey Brown

That part, I'm not worried about. What has me worried, is that I'll one day look in the mirror and see someone I don't recognize.

I'll look and I'll see another black face, caught in that same old rat race.

I've seen it happen over and over. Black people, in order to get that slice of the devil's pie, will sacrifice who they are inside. We change our hair, our names, even how we interact with our own people, because we've gotten caught up in the game. It's one of those things that every young black man or woman, looking to make some long dough, has to deal with at one point or another. We hust our chops in college to get our degrees (the most necessary ingredient for good pie) and then get thrown into a job market that will forever have more demand than supply. Life takes a whole new turn when you're black and trying to get paid. There's so much that you're expected to sacrifice, it's enough to make you go mad, but what can you do?

You can't quit school and throw everything away, because you know you've got to eat. If you ain't 6'10" and got a crazy jumper, you pretty much have no choice but to get into the race, but that doesn't mean you've resigned to lose.

What profits a man, to gain the world and lose his soul?

It's an all too familiar proverb that is my saving grace at this point in my life. For me, the plan is not to become another mindless drone, pushing along the freeway in my metal coffin, relying on my next paycheck to bring me happiness. I can not become another one of the too many blacks in that middle-class tax bracket, who have become complacent and docile.

What I want for my life in the future is balance. Sure, I want to make money and have a nice job, but I don't want to lose my connection with my people, nor myself in the process. I don't ever want the powers that be to not fear me. When you're young, black, and hungry, you're still a threat. When you've gotten comfortable, it saps your venom and they know they have nothing to fear. After a while, you lose the link you used to have with your people and culture. You become a spectator instead of a participator. Once that happens, they've got you right where they want you. They've taken you out of the loop.

Money is something that most blacks in America aren't used to having abundantly. We want it so bad that we'll do whatever it takes to get it. One thing that we have to recognize is that money itself isn't necessarily the enemy. It's the weight and importance that we put on money that kills. Our need for money can't outweigh our needs for peace, wisdom and spiritual oneness. Making money doesn't mean you have to lose your identity. Or does it?

Lord knows I want to get paid and in less than a year, I'll be scraping for crumbs like everyone else. I just pray I can hold on to what's truly important.

If you see me in ten years and I walk right by you without so much as a head nod, don't get mad.

If my radio is tuned to easy listening stations and I don't know how to give dap anymore, don't be discouraged.

If I've gotten everything I have by giving up my soul, be not dismayed. Just shoot me, because I've crossed over and I ain't never comin' back.

Humphrey Brown III is a Collegian staff member.

Write for Black Affairs Don't let them "Shut You Up!"

Black Quote of the Week

"Men who are in earnest are not afraid of consequences."

-Marcus Garvey

Performances make Wiz magical

KARA STORES/COLLEGIAN

Dorothy (Fatima Elmi), The Tin Man (Jaime Perez) and The Scarecrow (Richard James) ease on down the road in The Wiz.

By Jonathan Shea
Collegian Correspondent

THE WIZ
Fine Arts Center Concert Hall
Nov. 5

High energy and fast-paced movements monopolized the Theater Guild's production of The Wiz. From the opening musical montage to the closing last remarks of Dorothy's new friends, I never took my eyes off the stage. As a whole, this cast and crew put on a fabulous show for all to enjoy.

It was the acting performances, mainly, that captured the heart of the show, and it wouldn't be right if I didn't mention a few roles right off that were incredible.

Richard James' role as the Scarecrow was fascinating. I loved his interpretation thereof, but from James' youthful, breathy voice. The the energy he put into the character, thing that struck me the most about him Girard's facial expressions are what was his singing style. The vocal range pulled me into his character; I started blew me away from his first song, all the squinting just so I could see what his was to his last. He threw his whole body face was doing. Accentuated by the into character, not just his arms — a quick body movements he continual- characteristic that often plagues the col- ly threw out. Brian's smaller role lege drama world. His mannerisms and stood out more than some of the facial gestures all flowed within the cen- larger characters.
tral character as well. He never stepped I would also like to mention some- out of his character portrayal while on thing about the chemistry on stage stage.

The performance that stood out most The Scarecrow and the Tin Man was Kimberly McDowell's portrayal of (Jaime Perez) had a great bond the Wicked Witch Evillene. Wow. This together. They worked off each other woman has such powerful stage pres- beautifully. The other mention is of ence that I worried she would overshad- Dorothy (Fatima Elmi) and the Lion ow and upstage the other characters. (Tim Fiske). I saw an almost romantic How could she not? McDowell has such side between both of these characters a strong and vibrant voice that it It really looked as if they were seemed impossible. She did, however, sweet on each other. I enjoyed know when to hold back with other watching how each of them reacted characters and when to let her voice to one another's mannerisms. steal the scene.

And let's not forget about another Everyone forgets the little people who terrific part of this show — the cross the stage, but one character did dancing. The routines themselves not simply just walk on and off. He lit had a classic backing, but their main up the stage with so much humor and style was contemporary dance. These energy. I'm talking about the male very sexy and adult dancers were munchkin (and Lord High Underling), wonderful. They used the music well Brian Girard. in their routines, and never did I see

Small roles tend to be lost in the mix one step that seemed misplaced. of such a large play, but Brian was did However, some of the dancers' not disappear into the background. His costumes were a bit too much. In humor came not just from the lines and certain scenes little or nothing was were a lot of fun. left to the imagination. In fact, one

There were some aspects of the girl had on what appeared to be just show that really disturbed me, how- a pair of underwear. Most of the ever, mainly in the realm of the tech- males I spoke with after the show nical and backstage crews. Of said they loved the costumes (obvi- course, opening night does have its ously), but the female dance crowd problems (I can certainly relate from in the audience agreed with me. my theater experience), but some Despite this, though, the numbers things just flat-out bewildered me. were a little low. After the spotlight crew was finished making sure the guy in the third row was totally enveloped in light, my friend leaned over and said, "they needed a blue spot on that guy in section R, it would have gone better with his costume." The spot kids spent most of the beginning of the show in the audience, rather than on the stage.

Though this may not be too noticeable to a person who has never done any lighting or tech work on a play, but what I saw next astounded me. The fly-deck crew dropped a background that was not supposed to be in the scene during the changeover. They did not leave it there, however. They waited for the dialogue to begin and then raised it out. I didn't know what to think, and neither did my friend who sat with his mouth wide open. Although the backdrops were beautiful, we needed to see them at the right times and not halfway down during a different scene.

But all in all, this production of The Wiz was quite unique. The characters, music, and dancing all made me smile. The ensemble numbers gave me goosebumps at points, which influenced the power of the show more and more. Great job cast, crew and pit orchestra.

Mullins serves Korn

By Michael Delano
Collegian Correspondent

KORN/INCUBUS/ORGY
Mullins Center
Nov. 6

California's premier heavy metal act, Korn, stopped by the Mullins Center Friday night for a show on their "Follow the Leader" tour. Hot off the heels of the wildly successful "Family Values" tour, where Korn was joined by Rammstein, Ice Cube, Limp Bizkit and Orgy, Korn set out on its own this time, retaining only openers Orgy and adding the recently-popular group Incubus.

The stage set was familiar to anyone who was present at the "Family Values" tour. The stage was covered by a huge red and white striped curtain between sets, and featured small walkways on both the right and left sides of the stage, so the performers could get closer to the fans not lucky enough to be on the floor. Missing from this set was the large, flashing "Family Values" sign, the disco ball and, much to my relief, DJ Punk Rock, who provided the worst tunes and scratches I have ever heard. I could not tell if the rotating stage was used this time around, since the audience never got to see it rotate, but the change-up time between bands was minimal and painless.

Also returning to the stage was the "Korn Kage," where contest winners were able to stand in the cage behind the band on stage. The fans were a little less crowded in the "Kage" this time around, which was good because some of the fans at "Family Values" looked as if they couldn't move at all. The fans inside the "Kage" also became, not surprisingly, much more animated when the large, semi- transparent curtain in front of them was dropped after two or three songs.

Korn's set Friday was plagued by the same curse as it was at "Family Values": the length. A little over an hour of playtime (including encores) just seemed way too short. But whatever the length, their set was exceptional. The crowd was mushing, headbanging and dancing through every note of opener "It's On," and didn't stop until the lights went on after the second encore "Faget".

All of the songs were played flawlessly. Munky and Head were at their best on guitars, Fieldy laid out his trademark pounding bass lines and Jonathan Davis had all of his legendary energy in his vocals and stage presence. "Blind" whipped the crowd into a chaotic frenzy. "Twist" and "Chi" pleased the headbangers in the audience and everyone was dancing to "Got the Life" and "A.D.I.D.A.S." Selections off their new album Follow the Leader sounded great and were plentiful. The crowd was treated to "Freak on a Leash," "Dead Bodies Everywhere," "B.B.K." and the insane energy of "Reclaim My Place."

Incubus, still promoting their sophomore effort S.C.I.E.N.C.E., put on a solid performance. Off the new album, they got the crowd going early with "Idiot Box" and also played "Nebula", "Redefine", and "A Certain Shade of Green." The crowd was lively throughout their set, and really got into the stellar closing song "New Skin."

Concert openers Orgy are (for no other reason I can imagine) only touring with a heavyweight such as Korn because they are the only band signed to the Elementree record label, a label started by members of Korn. Without this connection, I can't see this self-proclaimed "death pop" group touring with anyone. Their negative energy level had the crowd looking like a morgue, and the band really made no effort to inspire anything to the contrary. Both guitarists and the bassists couldn't have moved more than an inch during their entire set, and the lead singers occasional chaotic arm movements somehow proved insufficient for a wild crowd reaction. Thankfully, better things were yet to come.

COURTESY JOSEPH CULTICE

The members of Korn invaded the Mullins Center Friday night.

CALL THE REST THEN CALL THE BEST!
USA SPRING BREAK
CANCUN
BAHAMAS
JAMAICA FLORIDA
CALL FOR OUR BEST PRICE GUARANTEE!
JOIN US FOR THE WILDEST PARTIES ON THE PLANET!
EAT & DRINK FOR FREE!*
ALL TRIPS INCLUDE
ROUND-TRIP AIR* · 7 NIGHTS HOTEL
ROUND-TRIP TRANSFERS* · HOTEL TAXES
STAFF ASSISTANCE · USA PARTY PACKAGE
Caribbean packages only. Call for details
1-888-SPRING-BREAK
www.usaspringbreak.com

安城中國飯店
AMHERST
CHINESE FOOD
we do not use MSG
253-7835 or 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst

Amherst Barbers
The Right Place to Be!
- 5 Barbers Every day -
Tel. 253-1722
40 Main St. Amherst, MA
(Next to Newbury Cmics)
Guys & Gals • Razor Cuts • Fades
• Clipper Cuts • Kids Cuts • Layer Cuts
$9 & up. Hrs: Mon.-Fri., 8-5:15 p.m. • Sat. 8-2:45
Servicing the Amherst/Belchertown Area

Munchie Madness 3-6PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Potato Skins Supreme 7.75 3.88
Nachos 6.25 3.13
Gorgonzola Buffalo Potatoes 7.50 3.75
1/2 PRICE!
Judie's
UCMP Welcome Here
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

OOPS!
• Free Estimates
• Lifetime Warranty
• Auto Glass Replacement
• Car & Truck Rental
North Amherst Motors
Collision Repair Center (On bus route - one mile from UMass)
78 Sunderland Road, North Amherst, MA 549-2880

PIZZA RAMA
356 College Street
253-3808
"25th Anniversary"
(Next to Spirit Haus Liquors)
Call Delivery Express → 599-0077
BYOB

Advice and information from faculty
Please come to BioSci's
Faculty Panel on Pre-registration
Monday, November 9
4:30 - 5:30 P.M. Morrill 203
Need info about a course for next semester?
Need some good contacts for getting into a lab to do independent research?
BioSci wants to help.
We'll assemble a panel of faculty members to answer all your questions. Each panelist will make a brief presentation, after which the panelists will be available for questions and consultation. This is your chance to talk to the faculty who will be teaching next semester's courses and who run the labs you might want to work in.
All pre-reg questions answered!

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE
- DISCOUNT OIL -
NORTHAMPTON / HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888
• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

BEEN THERE. DONE THAT? Take Credit!
Earn college credit for what you already know! The College-Level Examination Program (CLEP®) lets you earn between 3 and 6 college credits for each satisfactory test score. Study and review can help you prepare. Then show what you know at $44 per exam. Do the math. You'll come out ahead at both graduation and the bank.
To find out about your college's CLEP policy, contact your admission officer.
To register for a CLEP exam, contact your campus testing center. To learn more about CLEP, visit us on-line at www.collegeboard.org
Building confidence. Building careers.
clep

Big Y® WORLD CLASS MARKET™
175 University Drive
LOOK HERE
FOR EVERYTHING YOU NEED!
16 oz Bearitos Yellow Corn Tortilla Chips 2.39
Roberts Grateful Puffs 4.5 oz 1.69
Newman's Salted Pretzels 8 oz 1.39
Made From Scratch! World Class Donuts All Varieties 4 $1
Ellio's 9 Slice Cheese Pizza 24 oz 1.98 ON UP TO 3¢
McCain Ellio's 9 CHEESE PIZZA
FREE ON UP TO 25
LARGE FOUNTAIN SODA WITH PURCHASE OF LARGE WORLD CLASS GRINDER
IN OUR PRODUCE DEPT.
CERTIFIED 100% ORGANIC Tofu
SAVE $1.50 ON UP TO 5
BUY 1 GET 1 FREE
14 oz, Soft, Firm or Regular
WE GOT PHONE CARDS!
PART TIME
HELP WANTED
COME JOIN Big Y®
COMPETITIVE WAGES
EXCELLENT TRAINING
FLEXIBLE SCHEDULES
Apply in person at the Customer Service Desk at any Big Y Store.
As a family of quality minded people, we are a committed equal opportunity employer.
PRICES EFFECTIVE NOV. 9 THROUGH NOV. 15, 1998 IN OUR AMHERST AND NORTHAMPTON STORES ONLY

A Member Of

PENNZOIL Stop. Go. Pennzoil.™

A Customer Assistance Program of the Better Business Bureau ®

FREE
Shuttle To Home, Work Or Campus

FREE CREDIT
90 DAYS
SAME AS CASH!
Instant Credit Available

BRAKE KING
Discount
Autoservice Supercenter

Free Towing With Repair

10% STUDENT & FACULTY DISCOUNT ON PARTS

AMERICA'S FAVORITE TUNE-UP SUPERCENTERS Avoid Dealer's High Costs!

FREE Brake Inspection & Tire Rotation No Appointment Necessary

WE DO IT ALL

- Tune-Ups
- Oil Leaks
- Starters
- Alternators
- Batteries
- Tires
- A.B.S. Brakes
- Power Steering
- Alignments
- Timing Belts
- Water Pumps
- Air Conditioning
- Computers
- Emissions
- Radiators
- Front End
- Belts & Hoses
- Ignition
- Transmissions
- Shocks & Struts
- Coil Springs
- CV Joints & Axles
- Gas Tanks
- Ball Joints
- Mufflers
- Oil Changes
- Coolant Service
- Electrical
- Fuel Injection
- Rack & Pinions
- Fuel Pumps
- Clutches
- Overheating
- & More

Foreign & Domestic Auto Supercenters • 4x4 Light Trucks

FREE Winter Safety Inspection
Complete Check of Cooling/Antifreeze System, Charging System, Brakes, Tires, Belts/Hoses, Battery, Exhaust, Shocks/Struts and Car Performance.

TIME TO WINTERIZE YOUR CAR

FREE SNOW TIRE CHANGE-OVER
Bring in your snow tires and we will install them on the vehicle at no charge. Balancing Extra.

WINTER SPECIAL
RADIATOR FLUSH & FILL & LUBE, OIL & FILTER
- Drain & Fill Radiator up to 2 Gallons Antifreeze
- Lube, Oil & Filter • Tire Rotation
- Check Belts, Hoses, Shocks & Tires
- Inspect Water Pump, Thermostat & Gasket

MOST CARS & LIGHT TRUCKS $39.95

Winterize Your Radiator Before It Freezes
ANTI-FREEZE FLUSH & FILL
Up To 2 Gallons Antifreeze
Pressure Test Cooling System, Inspect Belts & Hoses, Check Heating System.
MOST CARS & LIGHT TRUCKS $29.95

WINTERIZE NOW!!!
- Lube, Oil & Filter
- Anti-Freeze Flush & Fill
- New Wiper Blades
- Check Heating System
- Check Belts & Hoses
- Rotate 4 Tires

$59.95 MOST CARS & LIGHT TRUCKS

ENGINE TUNE-UP SPECIAL
In most electronic ignition cars we'll install new spark plugs, set timing & adjust idle speed (if applicable). Computer engine analysis, check fuel and emission systems $35 4 cyl. $45 6 cyl. $55 8 cyl.
Transverse V-6 engines and A/C interference extra.

BRAKE SPECIAL
Includes Free Alignment • Lifetime Warranty
2 Front Disc or 2 Rear Drums
- Install Pads or Shoes
- Machine Drums or Rotors
- Test Drive
- Inspect Brake System
- Semi-Metallic Pads Extra

$49.95 MOST CARS & LIGHT TRUCKS

SHOCKS & STRUTS
Lifetime Warranty • Free Alignment
50% OFF
Your Second Shock or Strut • Buy One Shock Or Strut At Regular Price And Receive The Second One At Half Price, Plus FREE Four Wheel Alignment.

BRAKE KING MUFFLERS
30% OFF
LIFETIME WARRANTY
We Will Beat Any COMPETITOR'S Best Written Estimate by 10% - Guaranteed!

LUBE, OIL & FILTER
FREE Tire Rotation & Brake Inspection
- Up to 5 Quarts of Oil
- Chassis Lube
- Install New Oil Filter
- Includes Oil Disposal Fee

$12.95 Add $3.00 For Foreign Cars, Light Trucks & Vans

MANAGER'S CAR CARE SERVICE PACKAGE
1. OIL CHANGE & FILTER
• Install new filter • refill up to 5 qts. Pennzoil 10W30 oil • Lubricate chassis
2. FOUR TIRE ROTATION
3. ENGINE TUNE-UP
Install new spark plugs • set timing • adjust idle (if applicable)
4. RADIATOR FLUSH & FILL
Up to 2 gallons of Antifreeze
5. BATTERY SERVICE
Load-test battery, clean terminals & battery box
6. COMPLETE VISUAL INSPECTION
In-depth visual analysis of major systems
6 Services • 1 Low Price
$59.95 4 cyl.
6 cyl. - $69.95
8 CYL - $79.95
Most Cars & Light Trucks
Transverse V-6 engine & AC interference extra

Nationwide Battery
5 YEAR WARRANTY
$49.95
1 Year Free Replacement
Most Cars & Light Trucks

COMBO TUNE-UP
Spark Plugs, Oil Change & Filter, Fuel Injection Service
- Set Timing
- Adjust Idle
- Check Fuel & Emission System
- Computer Engine Analysis
- Clean Injectors

4 Cyl. $69.95
6 Cyl. $79.95
8 Cyl. $89.95
Most Cars & Light Trucks

BELTS & HOSES
Don't Press Your Luck!!
90% of roadside breakdowns are due to belt or hose failures
- V-Belts • Fan Belts
- Radiator Hoses
- Heater Hoses
- Bypass Hose

10% OFF Most Cars

TIMING BELT REPLACED
ONLY $149.95 Installed
Includes Inspection Every 60,000 Miles to Avoid Costly Breakdowns. Good for most vehicles.

CV JOINT BOOTS
(Outer) Includes inspection of front end, motor mounts & brakes
$59.95 EACH INSTALLED
Most Cars & Light Trucks

COMPLETE AUTO SERVICE
- Idler Arms
- Ball Joints
- Pitman Arms
- Tie Rod Ends
- CV Joints

FLEET ACCOUNTS WELCOME

SUPER SERVICE PACKAGE
MANUFACTURER'S RECOMMENDED 30,000 MILE SERVICE
- Engine Tune-Up, Spark Plugs, Air Filter, Fuel Filter and PCV Valve
- Complete Transmission Service
- Fuel Injection Service
- Oil Change, Lube & Filter
- Complete Antifreeze Flush & Fill • Rotate 4 Tires

$189.95 MOST CARS & LIGHT TRUCKS

FUEL INJECTION SERVICE
- Clean fuel injector deposits & residue build-up
- Restore injector flow pattern
- Clean carbon deposits from upper combustion chamber
- You'll enjoy improved performance, increased gas mileage, and reduced emissions

$39.95 Most Cars
SAVE GAS!

SPIN BALANCE & ROTATE
INCREASE THE LIFE OF YOUR TIRES!
$19.95
Complete Spin Balance & Rotation of 4 Tires

COMPUTERIZED ALIGNMENT
Thrust Angle $29.95
4-Wheel Alignment $39.95
Most Cars & Light Trucks

DRIVE AXLE SHAFT
INCLUDES FREE ALIGNMENT
$159.95
INSTALLED FRONT WHEEL
Most Cars & Trucks

TRANSMISSION SERVICE
$49.95 Rear Wheel Drive & $59.95 Front Wheel Drive
Includes filter, fluid, gasket & labor. Applies to most vehicles.

RACK & PINION
INCLUDES FREE ALIGNMENT
$269.95
INSTALLED
Most Cars & Light Trucks

Before You Purchase A Major Brake Job, Shocks And Struts, Mufflers And Exhaust Work, Front End Work, Tune-Ups Or Any Automotive Service, Just Bring Us Our Competition's Best Written Estimates And We'll Beat It By At Least 10% GUARANTEED And Still Give You The Best Warranty In The USA!

Nobody In New England Beats Brake King ... N-O-B-O-D-Y!
5 CONVENIENT FULL-SERVICE LOCATIONS

VISA MasterCard DISCOVER

Find us in the Bell Atlantic Yellow Pages

HOURS: Mon., Tues., Wed. & Fri. 7 a.m.- 6 p.m. • Thurs. 7 p.m.-8 p.m. • Sat. 7 a.m.-4 p.m.

We Employ MACS ASE Certified Technicians

NORTHAMPTON	WESTFIELD	SPRINGFIELD	SPRINGFIELD	ENFIELD
346 King St.	234 E. Main St., Rte. 20	1107 E. Columbus Ave.	867 Boston Rd.	809 Enfield St., Rte. 5
413-584-4988	413-572-1735	413-747-7133	413-783-3727	860-253-9017

Cathy By Cathy Guisewite

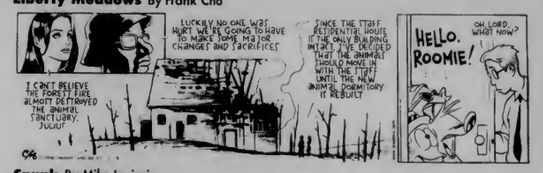
Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Sven By Stephen Higgins

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Robotman By Jim Meddick



Dilbert By Scott Adams

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Liberty Meadows By Frank Cho

Spunk By Mike Lariccia

Horoscopes

SCORPIO (Oct. 23–Nov. 21) — Being a good listener can win you remarkable results today. You can bet that an Aquarius or Aries native will be ready to return a favor very soon.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22–Dec. 21) — There's no reason to think today that you can't complete an important project ahead of schedule. This will give you more time to dream.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22–Jan. 19) — Take care that you're not unintentionally giving others the wrong impression today. What you say is less important than how you say it!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20–Feb. 18) — You can do much to increase someone else's self-esteem today. Be encouraging and nurturing as often as you can. Why don't you suggest a joint venture?

PISCES (Feb. 19–March 20) — It's important that you are exactly where you say you'll be when you say you'll be there. Today is not the time to miss any appointments.

ARIES (March 21–April 19) — A financial deal comes your way which demands a good deal of care today. It will pay off handsomely if you give it the time it deserves.

TAURUS (April 20–May 20) — Take care that you're not so eager and enthusiastic that you come off as a rank beginner. It's important for others to think you're a real veteran.

GEMINI (May 21–June 20) — Someone may not be taking you seriously today, and why should he? Lately, you've been making light of too much, too often. Get serious!

CANCER (June 21–July 22) — You must tread cautiously today when entering unfamiliar territory. You won't want to be the cause of a personal crisis at any time.

LEO (July 23–Aug. 22) — Your inhibitions are on the rise today. If you don't take the bull by the horns, you're likely to find yourself falling very far behind.

VIRGO (Aug. 23–Sept. 22) — You can turn a losing proposition into something that provides you with many rewards no matter how you perform. Congratulations!

LIBRA (Sept. 23–Oct. 22) — There's no place for indecision today. Look back and assess just how you've gotten from where you were to where you are.

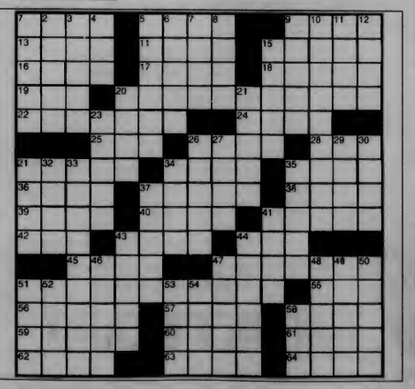
Quote of the Day

"I would have made a good Pope."

–Richard M. Nixon

Close to Home By John McPherson

Though it was only his second day on the job, employees were already getting bad vibes about the new division chief.



ACROSS
1 Bossy and kin
5 Take a — at: try
9 — and proper
13 Pitcher Hershiser
14 Gdansk resident
15 Attack on a castle
16 Toe the line
17 Vicinity
18 Citrus fruit
19 Youngster
20 List of past performances
22 Fashionable
24 Mimicked
25 "Babies in Stang" author
26 Smallest of the litter
28 Superlative suffix
31 Dessert pancake
34 Fair
35 Kill
36 Express disapproval
37 Al and Tipper
38 Actress Deborah —
39 Church part
40 Peruse a book
41 Part of A-V
42 "Gidget" actress
43 Window part
44 Wis. neighbor
45 Scruff of the neck
47 Moving in a sinuous way
51 Little Richard song
55 Lady
56 Teary veggie
57 Fencing sword
58 To boot
59 Boot-shaped country
60 First garden
61 Fly high
62 Laze (about)
63 Crease
64 Sacred

DOWN
1 Chefs
2 Planet's path
3 Like an unkempt lawn
4 Stallone nickname
5 Not thickly grown
6 Temple item
7 Actor Guinness
8 Bird feature
9 — of the action
10 Modernized
11 Composer Stravinsky
12 Repair
15 Snoozed
20 Ocean movement
21 Talks wildly
23 Expire
26 Rustic
27 Ulsterd
29 Hindu garment
30 Novice
31 Actor Everett
32 Not green
33 Vital
34 "Piano Man" singer
35 Move about stealthily
37 Deep anguish
41 Jai —
43 Like a porcupine
44 Mean
46 Bikini, e.g.
47 Word used before "drum" or "wool"
48 Arctic hut
49 Twangy
50 Fame
51 Work
52 "Do — others"
53 Coral —
54 Elegant coiffure
58 Type of tray

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

ADO COUPS THICK
MOW ENTER REVUE
TIN IDEAL AMEBA
NEEDS MANI
OSTRICH DIPLOMA
UNION ISABEL
COMMENCE EXART
AVA EKING AGO
GENOA GALOSHES
ERNEST HYENA
STARRY SEAGULL
AGED NASAL
AARON LACED AGA
BLANC PLATO GEM
CANOE SEDAN ERA

11-9-98 © 1998 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Grilled Steak Sandwich
Turkey Tettrazini
DINNER
Chicken Breast with Rice Stuffing
Spaghetti/Italian Sweet Sausage
Italian Tofu Balls & Sauce
Quarter Pound Burger

Worcester
LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
American Chop Suey
Macaroni Lentil & Tomatoes
Grilled Cheese on Branola
DINNER
Chicken Breast with Rice Stuffing
Black-Eyed Peas
Pastabilities
Ravioli Alfredo

Hampshire
LUNCH
Grilled cheese Sandwich
Turkey Tettrazini
Hamburger on a Roll
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
DINNER
Chicken Breast with Rice Stuffing
Spaghetti/Italian Sweet Sausage
Tomato Sauce

Berkshire
LUNCH
Turkey Tettrazini
Hamburger on a Roll
Lentil Chili
DINNER
Chicken Breast with Rice Stuffing
Shrimp & Sausage Jambalaya
Penne with Tomatoes & Spinach
Pastabilities

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Dinice Jimenez
Photo Technician — Kara Stokes
Copy Editor — Nicole Racicot
Production Supervisor — Jeremy Brothers
Production Staff — Stephen Mackey, Lisa Meadow

Spartans shock top–ranked OSU

By Rusty Miller
Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio — For the third time in four years, an undefeated Ohio State team was stunned by a team from Michigan. The top-ranked Buckeyes, who had perfect records spoiled by the Michigan Wolverines in 1995 and 1996, were shocked by four-touchdown underdog Michigan State 28-24 Saturday.

"We came in here with the attitude we were the squirts in the neighborhood who had to pick a fight with the bully," Spartans coach Nick Saban said.

Julian Peterson forced three fumbles and Renaldo Hill made a goal-line interception with 1:12 left to seal the victory for Michigan State, which overcame a 24-9 deficit in the second half. Ohio State (8-1, 5-1 Big Ten), which was No. 1 in both major polls and the Bowl Championship Series standings, had beaten every opponent by at least 17 points before running into the Spartans. "This hurts, no question about it," Ohio State coach John Cooper said. "It seems like anything that could happen to us did happen to us."

The Spartans (5-4, 3-2) trailed 24-9 early in the third quarter after Ohio State's Damon Moore picked off Bill Burke's pass and returned it 73 yards for a touchdown.

But the Spartans rallied and took a 25-24 lead on Sedrick Ervin's 3-yard TD run early in the fourth quarter, then padded the margin on Paul Edinger's fifth field goal of the game with 9:26 left.

"This hurts the most," Miller said. "We had everything lined up. We just didn't get it done."

It was Michigan State's first victory over a No. 1 team since the Spartans upset Michigan 28-27 in 1990. That also was the last time an unranked team beat a No. 1 squad.

"We've been an inconsistent team this year," Saban said. "We're young. For us to grow up and make the plays at the end of the game like we did is a positive step for our program." Ohio State not only lost its No. 1 ranking, but fell to third in the Big Ten behind Michigan and Wisconsin, both unbeaten in conference play.

Burke, an Ohio native, completed only 18 of 46 passes, but frequently hit the big pass on long-yardage downs.

"It's the kind of thing you'll never forget," he said. "It was a game you like to play in, that you dream about as a kid."

A Blizzard is coming...

Ronnell Blizzard looked good in the Minutemen's first preseason game against Team Fokus, and is now preparing for game two against Marathon Oil on Wednesday.

All good things must come to an end

Despite another solid season, the UMass women's soccer team came short of its sixth consecutive Atlantic 10 title. See tomorrow's Collegian for more.

Anniversary Sale Week
November 9th to 14th

Win a $1,000 Zanna Shopping Spree

ZANNA
downtown Amherst

Some People Want to Change the World
We Just Want to Change Your Oil!
Lube
10% Off Full Service Oil Ch and Employees (not valid
Coupon from Ad &
Phone Call
Victory Motor

IN CHARGE

Information drives our economy and enriches our lives.

With a graduate degree from the University of Michigan's School of Information, you can expect to shape the future of information systems and services in corporations, universities, communities, government, and nonprofit organizations. You can expect to make a difference.

Recent SI graduates consult for Fortune 500 companies, manage a movie studio's creative assets, launch successful information start-ups, and develop new digital library collections and services. From archivist to webmaster, from community information specialist to information entrepreneur, SI provides the training you'll need to take a leading role in the age of knowledge.

In our dynamic two-year master's program, students from diverse academic backgrounds — humanities, computers, math and social sciences — gain direct access to our world-class faculty and facilities. Our innovative doctoral program prepares you for a research career at the leading edge of this emerging discipline.

There's a whole new world of information out there. Someone's got to take charge of it.

School of Information
University of Michigan
734.763.2285

Graduate Studies in Information
www.si.umich.edu

INFORMATION

CHECK OUT A GREAT CLASS!

Peer Health Educators...
...learn about sex, drugs, booze, etc.
...teach workshops in the residence halls and Greek area.
...give out condoms and other goodies at the Campus Center and special events.
...make new friends.
...MAKE A DIFFERENCE!

"APPLY NOW"

COMMUNITY HEALTH/EDUCATION 213/214
6 Credits - 2 Semester Commitment Required
For permission of the instructor call the Division of Health Education 577-5181.
Class will meet on Wednesdays from 1:25-3:55pm
Priority is given to those who meet with the instructor before November 19.

football

continued from page 14

rushing touchdown of the year, on a 15-yarder, knotted the score at 13 with 14:15 remaining in the game. It was set up by a 4th-and-1 conversion at the URI 32 when Shipp ran off tackle to the right for 12 yards.

After a three–and–out for the Rams, UMass marched 43 yards to set up a Jason Cherry 26–yard field goal that would prove to be the deciding score.

The Minutemen's playoff hopes remain alive as the win, paired with UConn's 59–17 loss to Delaware, vaults UMass into sole possession of first place in the conference's New England Division.

The season will conclude at McGuirk Stadium, as the Minutemen are set to take on Maine next weekend before rematching the Huskies, this time in Amherst.

"No team takes a day off in this league," Whipple said. "[Maine] is going to come in with their 'A' game."

SPORTS NO KIDDING

hockey

continued from page 14

Minutemen have given up only 17 goals in that span is evidence to that statement.

Offense, however, continues to be a concern for UMass. Although the Minutemen have seen a plethora of players chip in and score points, UMass (1–4, 1–1 in Hockey East) has only scored nine goals as a team this season. And, since the bottom line in hockey is to score goals, it's been a slow start to the young season for the Minutemen.

Such was the case yesterday at the Mullins Center. Although an early goal by Nick Stephens seemed to be just what the doctor ordered, the Harvard Crimson stormed back for three unanswered tallies in a 3–1 win over the Minutemen.

"To limit a team like Harvard to only 13 shots and two goals shows that we're playing good defensively," Massachusetts hockey coach Joe Mallen said.

"We're a young team, and I think that there's nothing to be discouraged about," added Mallen. "I saw a lot of good things tonight. We were in position to win, and that's where we have to continue to put ourselves."

Stephens netted his second goal of the season at the 14:04 mark of the opening period. The Roseville, Minn. native circled the Crimson goal before walking out uncontested into the slot and firing a shot past the Harvard netminder for a 1–0 UMass lead.

Early in the second period, the visitors got a pair of goals in a span of a little over four minutes to take momentum from the Minutemen.

Senior captain Craig Adams got the equalizer 4:25 into the middle stanza while Harvard was shorthanded, blistering a slap shot past Helanen to knot the game at 1–1. Crimson defenseman Ben Storey then put his team up for good on another slap shot at the 8:40 mark to give Harvard a 2–1 lead.

Both teams had chances in the second and third periods to score, but UMass had its best opportunity to even the game late in the third. Freshman Darcy King hit the crossbar while trying to go top shelf over a fallen Prestifilippo.

"That was something that we've seen with some of our freshmen. They need to get their timing down," Mallen said. "I think he just held it a second too long. If he pulls the trigger a second sooner, it's in the net."

